Carl Laemmle had about two minutes out of two busy days to spare when he visited Chicago Monday and Tuesday, September 23 and 24. It was ample time, however, to discover that he was full of important plans, some of which didn't particularly concern the production of pictures. For instance, he expects to do a great deal of deep-sea swimming and a little golf during his eighteen days in California, whither he was bound. That, with four hours a day spent in executive sessions, he felt would keep him sufficiently occupied. Universal production is to follow no new policy except that of consistent improvement next year, he said. Mr. Laemmle expects to be back in New York an exact month from the time he left.

Mann with Red Cross.

Luman C. Mann came in last week to say he has been appointed official photographer for the Red Cross in Chicago and vicinity. The appointment was made from headquarters on Tuesday, September 21. Mr. Mann's services will be given free of charge, and his work will consist of covering the Red Cross activities, of which a pictorial record is being made in every large city in the United States.

The American Film Company is expecting to stage its pictures in the air before very long, and is already looking about with a speculative eye for the best type of airplanes for studio use. Trial flights in planes which Manager Crone was trying out last week were made by Mrs. S. S. Hutchinson, Mary Miles Minter, Margarita Fisher and William Russell.

Theda Bara a Chicago Visitor.

Theda Bara and her sister called at the Fox exchange between trains last Wednesday. Miss Bara was on a long deferred trip to New York. She is quite recovered from the illness which prevented earlier traveling.

Pantheon a Beautiful House.

Perhaps the distinctively American contribution to the arts is going to be movie theatres instead of "new" poetry. Anyhow we have a significant start in that direction in the new Pantheon, which Lubliner and Trinz opened a few days ago up on Sheridan road, near Wilson avenue.

It isn't that the new Pantheon is so much larger or more elaborate than most of its immediate predecessors. The superlative in the matter of lavishness was reached long ago. The emphasis here, however, is on the beauty and appropriateness, a very satisfactory improvement over the old days of gilt and high-powered lights.

To begin with the only ornament on the front of the house is a frieze of carved Roman figures, lighted from beneath by invisible lamps. They stand out attractively in the soft glow, and below them in the same light is the name of the theatre.

The principal note in the color scheme is a deep, vivid peacock blue, struck in interesting panels and the dark Italian marble of the lobby and carried in a fine fabric to the walls of the lounges. The effect of brilliant crimson velvet drapery at the doors and of the pure cream-colored fireplace at the rear against the blue background is extremely pleasant. A grand piano stands open in the corner of the lower lounge and there is plenty of tastefully upholstered furniture. In fact, one might be guilty of losing interest in the prospective picture for the corner of the davenport, providing the orchestra inside were playing. It is a good orchestra, by the way. It was playing the Schubert symphony when I arrived the first time.

The auditorium proper is spacious, with a slightly arched ceiling. The chairs are comfortable and the picture projection remarkably good. That is all one perceives until the lights go up. It's a soft red glow then that emanates first from unseen lamps where the ceiling and side walls meet. It reveals a stage, hung simply with a soft, luminous curtain imprinted with delicate, faintly discernible patterns in panels—reminiscent of the patterns on Oriental pottery. When the red glow melts into blue it draws strange eerie lights from the drapery, which becomes a drift of blossomy color as the lights vary.

It is a bit of fantastic pageantry in light and color and music, too. The orchestra provides a charming accompaniment, which would do credit to Urban himself and delight the souls of the imagists. It is likewise a revelation in the possibilities of theatre building for the pictures.

The managers are free-lancing at present in the matter of picture programs. Mitchell Lewis in "Nine-tenths of the Law" was the feature for the night I visited the Pantheon, with an amusing Montgomery Flagg comedy and a Liberty Loan appeal by Dorothy Dalton to round out the program.

Shorty Hamilton Negatives Arrive.

Frederick Post brought in four Shorty Hamilton negatives last week to be finished by the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company. They are five-reel comedy dramas, produced by the W. H. Clifford Film Company in Los Angeles. A fifth picture is expected to arrive at the Rothacker plant next week. It is Shorty Hamilton's contribution to film propaganda for the fourth Liberty Loan, called "The Prisoner of War."

Chicago Backing Smileage Books.

Nearly all moving picture houses in Chicago, with the exception of those managed by Lubliner and Trinz and the Ascher Brothers, have subscribed to the plan by which 10 per cent. of the gross of one day in each month will be turned over to the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities to be used in supplying Smileage books to soldiers.

The scheme originated with Leonard Meyberg, of the Clifford Film Company, who secured War Department approval several weeks ago and was in Chicago last week to further it. General Film has taken up the campaign and reported 100 subscriptions from Illinois and Indiana theatres in this section to the plan. Each theatre signing the pledge is permitted to select its own Smileage day. The arrangement is to continue for the duration of the war.

Notes Around the Town.

The "patriotic" version of "War Brides," recently prepared from Nazimova's first screen appearance in the Marion Craig Wentworth play, is still under question by the Chicago board of censors. The picture has been made strongly anti-German.

Harry Weiss of the Central Film Company reported large amounts of mud and the best business of his experience on his recent trip south. Mr. Weiss returned to Chicago Thursday from St. Louis.

Frank Delo was graduated last week from booker to assistant manager of the Metro exchange in Milwaukee.

Dougherty Is with L-KO.

Charles Dougherty, the clever Sunshine comedian, is now at work with the L-KO. His line of humor is decidedly original and different from the usual movie comedian's. The L-KO also has secured Merta Sterling to play opposite. Miss Sterling is well known in the comedy field, having been featured with L-KO before.

Fred Bond Is the Name.

The name Fred Boulk, which appears in a review of "Me Und Gott" on Page 1463 of the Moving Picture World, issue of September 7, 1918, should read Fred Bond.

Motion Picture Engineers to Hear Interesting Papers

THE Society of Motion Picture Engineers will convene in regular semi-annual meeting in Cleveland on October 21, and will remain in session two days.

The session promises to be more than ordinarily interesting. It is said Cleveland proposes to show the visiting engineers a really good time. There will be officers to elect, and a most interesting program has been arranged as follows:

President's address, C. Francis Jenkins; The Carbon Arc for Alternating and Direct Current Motion Picture Projection, W. C. Kunzmann; Incandescent Lamps for Motion Picture Work, R. P. Burrows; Standardization of the Motion Picture Industry and the Ideal Studio, J. W. Allison; Natural Color Cinematography, W. V. D. Kelley; Making of Motion Picture Films, George A. Blair; Sprocket Teeth and Film Perforations and Their Relation to Better Projection, A. C. Roebuck; Function of the Condenser in Projection Apparatus, Dr. H. Kellner; The Projection Room and Its Requirements, F. H. Richardson; Advantages in Use of the New Standard Narrow Width Film for Portable Projectors, Willard B. Cook.

With this program in view, and the fact that each member will have a printed copy of each paper to study before it is read before the body, the meeting is sure to be both interesting and highly instructive. It is, therefore, to be hoped the attendance will be 100 per cent.

"Bridge of Ships" Prints in Demand.

The General Film Company announces continued success for the bookings of "Our Bridge of Ships," the two-reel picture issued by the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information.

Despite the claims made upon exhibitors and the public by the larger war pictures, "Our Bridge of Ships" has been steadily going ahead. Within the past week requests have been received from four exchanges, asking for additional prints of this release. One of these requests is from the Denver district, where the print in use is booked up solid for many weeks. The film tells the story of the creation of the bridge of ships, which, by spanning the ocean for the crossing of American soldiers, is bringing the end of the world war appreciably nearer.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

EXHIBITORS USING COAL SUBSTITUTES

Canadian Theatre Men Will Burn Oil and Wood to Save Black Diamonds for Private Consumer

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario, Inc., received thanks all around at a meeting of the association's executives held on Tuesday, Sept. 24, at the headquarters of the organization, 143 Young street, Toronto. Letters of appreciation and thanks were received from Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance at Ottawa, for the manner in which the exhibitors have taken hold of the plan to present Victory Loan pictures in the theatres, and from C. A. Magrath, of Ottawa, the Dominion Fuel Controller, for the showing of "Buy Coal Now" slides in the theatres. Frank Yeigh, manager of the Canadian Lecture Bureau, was also present to thank the exhibitors for the courtesies extended to the Four-Minute speakers.

Secretary Thomas Scott was authorized to send out a circular letter to all Ontario exhibitors, urging them to make use of the Victory Loan pictures. Inclosed in these letters is a postcard on which the theatre manager will designate what special picture has been shown at his theatre, and when. These cards will be sent to the authorities at Ottawa to show what the exhibitors are doing. The association is spending a considerable sum in postage and printed matter to co-operate with the Government in preparing for the Victory Loan Campaign. Announcement was made at the meeting that the Canadian prints of the loan pictures had been received from Washington and were being prepared for release.

Another important question discussed at the meeting was that regarding the fuel situation. Announcement was made that quite a number of exhibitors had arranged to burn oil, soft coal and wood in their theatres in order to save hard coal for private consumers. Manager Crang, of the Oakwood Theatre, Toronto, announced that his theatre had been equipped to burn oil for heating purposes this winter. Manager Sexton of the Family Theatre, Toronto, also announced that he was installing equipment for the same purpose. Dr. Richardson, of the Crown Theatre, Toronto, announced that wood would be burned in his theatre as long as possible.

It was decided to ask exhibitors to show slides at their theatres to announce that they were burning material other than hard coal, if such were the case. Every possible means will be taken by exhibitors, it was declared, to conserve hard coal, and the Government can count on the theatres to do their share in helping out the situation.

With regard to the agitation against the granting of a Provincial license for the proposed new theatre on Danforth avenue, Toronto, the executive went on record to the effect that the association and its members did not fear new competition, but that they were opposed to the policy of exchanges building or leasing new theatres because such houses enjoyed advantages which were denied the independent exhibitor.

Empire State Exhibitors Get Together in Albany

AT the Ten Eyck Hotel, Albany, Thursday, September 26, the following exhibitors met in conference: Sydney Cohn, president of the New York Exhibitors' State League; Sam Berman, Rudolph Saunders, of Brooklyn; Charles O'Reilly, Sam Scheer, Henry Haring and John Manheimer, of New York City; George Cohen, Poughkeepsie; Fred Elliot, Albany; Fred Buettner, Cohoes; Sam Sucknow and Harry Lazarus, Albany; W. P. Donlon, Utica; W. H. Didsbury, Waldon; Charles McCarty, Hoosic Falls; W. Sullivan, Watervliet; Dave Cohen, Binghamton; Ben Apple, Troy; J. M. Shine, Gloversville; Frank Barhyt, Troy; J. Gardner, Albany; Walter Zeiser and Frank Shea, Schenectady; George Roberts, Albany; G. Shirley, Schenectady, and Ben Young, Ilion.

The exhibitors present were considered representative, and the earnest endeavor put forth by them will go a great way toward the getting together of a real exhibitors' organization—the nucleus of an active body of business men who will do something worth while.

The up-state exhibitors expressed themselves as being encouraged by the favorable attitude displayed by the legislators in their disposition toward Sunday opening and a desire to give the people local option on the question.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, Under the able, efficient and courageous leadership of William A. Brady the motion picture industry, co-operating with our Government in carrying on its war activities, has proven itself an essential industry; and

Whereas, We, the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the State of New York, feel grateful to William A. Brady for his many efforts in our behalf; therefore, be it Resolved, That in conference assembled on this 26th day of September, 1918, at the Capital City, Albany, N. Y., we unanimously tender our thanks and appreciation to William A. Brady, our friend and our champion.

To Supply an Ambulance.

That the Motion Picture League of the State of New York fully equip and furnish an ambulance to be shipped to the firing line in France in the name of this association and that all exhibitors in the State of New York be and are hereby requested to make donation to the fund necessary for such purpose, and the trade papers aro hereby requested to publish such list of all contributors to such fund, and that a committee consisting of the state president and presidents of the various branch leagues of the state and such others as may from time to time be designated hereby are appointed a committee to carry this motion into effect.

Indorse Suffrage Request.

Whereas, At the coming state election, being the first time at which the women of the State of New York are privileged to use the voting franchise; and

Whereas, The majority of our women of New York State are patrons of the moving picture theatres; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the State of New York, in conference assembled, have indorsed a request of the women's party of our state that we show on our screens slides announcing dates of registration for the coming state election, calling the attention of our women patrons to the necessity of their registering in order that they may be qualified to vote.

Will Back Up Loan.

Whereas, The Honorable William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, has called upon the people of the State of New York to invest to their utmost in the purchase of victory bonds of the fourth Liberty Loan; and

Whereas, The quota of the State of New York is over two billions of dollars a very intensive campaign of advertising must be carried on to acquaint every man, woman and child in the State of New York with the tremendous issues involved in order that the results attained may be even greater than the amount alloted to us by the Treasury Department; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the exhibitors of the State of New York, in conference assembled, pledge their hearty co-operation and promise to exert every effort through their screens, their theatres and in their communities so that same will be productive of results even beyond the expectations of our Government.

Resolved, That the exhibitors of the State of New York, in conference assembled, urge that all exhibitors of the State of New York attend the Motion Picture Exposition at Madison Square Garden during the week of October 5 to 13, and we urge the other branches of the industry to co-operate in making this exposition, with its many wonderful war exhibits, a huge success.

Caruso to Open Exposition with Star Spangled Banner

ENRICO CARUSO, the greatest tenor in the world, will officially open the National Motion Picture Exposition, to be held at Madison Square Garden, Oct. 5-13, with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

In accepting the invitation of William A. Brady, President of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, to officially open this war service exposition, the only stipulation made by Mr. Caruso was that half of the net proceeds for the opening day to be turned over to the Italian Red Cross. Mr. Brady immediately accepted these conditions and Mr. Caruso then sent his formal acceptance as follows:

"Dear Mr. Brady.—I received your letter of the 24th instant. It is with great pleasure that I inform you that I will be very glad to open the National Motion Picture Exposition at the Madison Square Garden on the night of

Oct. 5, at 8 o'clock, by singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

With best personal regards, I am, very truly yours,

ENRICO CARUSO."

Caruso will sing from the grand box directly over the Madison avenue entrance to the Garden. He will be accompanied by the orchestra of the Strand Theatre, which has been kindly loaned for this occasion by Harold Edel.

This is one of the very few times on record which Caruso has sung outside of his regular engagement at the Metropolitan Opera House and the concert stage, and his singing for this occasion was only obtained when the patriotic nature of this exposition was brought to his attention. The check for half of the net proceeds for that day will be turned over to Mr. Caruso, who in turn will transmit it by cable to the president of the Italian Red Cross at Rome, with a message to the effect that it is the contribution of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry obtained as a result for his singing.

Universal Produces Five Specials to Aid in Drive

SPARKS are flying from the Universal's activity in behalf of the Fourth Liberty Loan. That company has produced five star pictures and has packed its news pictorials with knockout propaganda on the subject. The special films, featuring Monroe Salisbury and Rupert Julian, Harry Carey, Mae Murray, Ruth Clifford and Dorothy Phillips were shipped a few days ago from the coast, and will be distributed according to plans devised by the committee in charge of the Loan pictures.

The Universal believes it has established a record for fast and high class production in its efforts for the loan.

Brief statements of the stories employed in several of the pictures have been issued by the company. They suggest mighty good things.

The picture featuring Salisbury and Julian is entitled "The American Dentist." Salisbury is the dentist and Julian plays the role of the Kaiser, a part he has previously played with distinction.

The other loan pictures give Universal's stars similar opportunities and drive home effectively the message of the loan.

Chester to Make Ship Picture.

C. L. Chester has left New York on a trip that will carry him as far westward as the Pacific Coast in the interests of a multiple reel shipbuilding picture which he is to make under the supervision of the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information.

A very thorough exposition of America's great ship undertaking is contemplated, and the scenario calls for scenes showing how the materials from which the victory fleet is being constructed are obtained. Mr. Chester goes first to the iron fields of Minnesota to get in touch with the extraction of the iron ore, and will then follow it down the lakes and through the locks to the smelters and on through steel mill and fabricating shop to the shipyard.

In unfolding the story of the wooden ships the producer will invade the primeval pineries of the state of Washington, and show how the almost countless crews of expert woodsmen are felling whole forests in order that the logs may go skidding down to the new rails and thence swiftly to the yards at tidewater.

Hart Has Unusual Makeup in World Film's "Allies"

SINCE the organization of the World Film Corporation, over 400 productions have been made. But in none of them has there been such a fine example of the art of makeup been disclosed as is seen in the work of Albert Hart in Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley's production of "Allies."

Mr. Hart was cast for the role of an allegorical character, "The Huge, Black, One-Eyed Man." Although this character is seen in only some fifty feet of film he was compelled to create a make-up that took over two hours to produce and which involved less than ten minutes of time to film. Never in the history of either the spoken drama or that of the screen has there been a make-up that in any way resembled it. Mr. Hart was compelled to "stand-by" all day, and a hot day it was, with the thermometer hovering around the hundred mark. Though Mr. Hart was as thirsty as the proverbial dog on a Kansas prairie on the Fourth of July he could not quench his thirst as the make-up would not permit of it.

Mr. Hart has created some wonderful make-ups, as disclosed by his work in "The Grouch"; by his work as Big-Foot Ben in "The Man Hunt"; Harlan in "The Quickening Flame"; Ryan in "The Driving Power"; Sol Peter in "The Page Mystery," and Boss McDaniels in "A Woman of Redemption."

Before appearing in cinema productions Mr. Hart was for years identified with many Broadway successes. He began his stage career with Richard Mansfield when that famous star first started on his way to recognition as the greatest actor on the American stage.

Hammond Succeeds Linn as Big U Foreign Head

THE Universal has obtained the services of a traveler and student of world trade conditions to take the place of K. W. Linn, who is resigning as head of the company's export department to enter the industrial field. The newcomer is G. R. Hammond, of New York.

Mr. Hammond returned about six months ago from Spain, where he had passed the previous year. He has been absent for long periods from America, traveling in South America, Europe and Far East. His experience includes several complete trips around the world.

The Universal now has fifteen foreign branches, so situated that they serve every neutral and Allied country. Mr. Hammond, the new manager, speaks French, Italian, Spanish and Portuguese.

"The future looks bright for American trade," he said. "Especially is this true of the opportunities to be found in Spain. South America offers a great field for us, but the American exporters will have to make a fight for it."

Mr. Hammond declared that Germany is even now conducting a vigorous trade warfare in neutral countries, and is laying the groundwork for the most intense kind of competition after the war. He explained how that nation had virtually captured the South American market by extending long time credits.

This market can be taken over now by America, he asserted, if the exporters would strive to give the kind of credits and service the Germans formerly did.

He found Spain to be undergoing a radical change of sentiment during the last year. "In the first three years of the struggle, Spain was strongly pro-German," he said. "But lately it has been gradually turning its sympathies towards the Entente Allies."

ZION FILMS TO PRODUCE.

The writings of the late Sholem Aleichem, known far and wide as the "Jewish Mark Twain," will be adapted to motion pictures by the Zion Film, Inc., 1164 Broadway. Contracts with the author's widow were closed during the week.

Work on the first production, a two-reel picture, will begin shortly. The corporation says it will spare no expense to make these pictures perfect in every detail. A cast of noted stars is being selected, the humorist's widow herself playing an important role in engaging the most important characters for the adaptation of her husband's work.

The Sholem Aleichem films will be but an experiment. If they meet with success the writing of other noted Russian and Jewish writers will also be adapted to the screen. Arrangements are being completed for a showing of the first film at a Broadway motion picture house.

The officers of the corporation are Solomon Adler, president; Elias Cantor, of Boston, vice-president; E. Walitzky, treasurer, and E. Jacobson, secretary.

FACTS AND COMMENTS

WHAT are you doing for the Fourth Liberty Loan? When you answer this question for yourself weigh the question well. We do not mean when we ask "what are you doing" how much noise you are making, but how many bonds are you buying and how many are you inducing others to buy. The campaign is in full swing now, and to effect the sale of six billion dollars worth of bonds in three weeks someone has got to work overtime. In all probability this will be the noisiest bond campaign of all of them, but noise does not always mean bonds sold, and that is the only thing that counts. In the first place you should sit down quietly and alone and lay out your own campaign. First estimate your own limit of purchasing power. By that we do not mean the amount you can buy without putting yourself to any inconvenience or by denying yourself any of your usual pleasures. You must go farther than that this time; you must figure in cutting out some of your pleasures and putting the money thus saved into bonds. You have done your full duty only when you have bought up to your absolute limit.

Next step, provided you are an employer, is to canvass your employes to see just how many bonds they can buy. You pay them their weekly wages and you know just about what their expenses and financial obligations are. Do not use coercive measures; don't try to force any of your people to buy whether they can afford it or not, but talk the matter over with each one privately and show them how they can get at least a fifty-dollar bond, with your assistance, by paying one dollar each week. You will know how to arrange it for them. By this plan you should make a hundred per cent. return. If you have more people in your employ than you can talk to personally encourage some one among your staff who is popular to start the campaign, but make it your business to see that the returns are 100 per cent.

So far the suggestions offered cover interests over which you have considerable control—situations that any employer of labor can deal with. As a manager of a motion picture theatre you have a still wider field of action. In the first place use your screen as freely as possible for war propaganda pictures and slides; see that Four-Minute speakers get a regular and respectful hearing. If you know how to talk to your audiences do a little talking yourself—your audience is composed of your friends, you know, and you can talk to them as a friend. Have you any idea how great an influence you have with them? Suppose you try it out by seeing how many of them will sign a pledge to buy a bond. It is just possible that you have room somewhere in your theatre or lobby where a regular solicitor for Liberty Bonds can have a desk or table where he can take care of those of your patrons who want to subscribe for bonds. If you can arrange it do that little thing for the convenience of your patrons. If you have any original ideas that will help sell bonds try them out. It's all right to make a lot of noise, but it's much better to sell bonds. Try it.

WE do not believe that it is necessary to point out to exhibitors the advisability of getting as many war propaganda pictures into their programs as possible, but it is essential that precedence should be given to Government pictures at all times. This should not be overlooked. The Government has a reason for wanting the widest possible distribution of its war pictures, and it looks to the motion picture theatre managers to co-operate to the fullest extent. There should be no bargaining in this matter, such as we have heard of, but the pictures should be accepted without question and a place made for them at the earliest moment. While the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign is on, such subjects will be of the greatest value to the Government. Therefore, now is the time to comply with the request that Government subjects be given the greatest consideration. Are you complying with that request? You are essential in the same measure as you are useful.

CONSERVATION—BUT NOT STAGNATION

By James L. Hoff.

THERE has been a great deal of loose language—written and spoken—of late, about the way in which the motion picture business is being conducted with relation to war times and necessities. We hear charges of waste and lack of economy and failure to adopt proper measures of conservation as well as lack of efficiency.

Looking about the field carefully has brought us to the conclusion that these criticisms are groundless and were written or spoken by persons either uninformed or out of touch with the business they presume to criticise.

The mistake these critics have made has been, and still is, in taking as their text the instances in which entirely inexperienced men have endeavored to break into the picture business and have made dismal failures of their efforts, and then likening the whole business to them.

Naturally, conclusions so reached are dark and dismal.

Fortunately, the level-headed business men who are engaged in this industry are not disturbed by calamity howlers. They are conducting their affairs with a full knowledge of what they are doing, and doing it in a safe and sane manner, as the success of their work proves.

Furthermore, these men are highly sensitive to the needs and the restrictions of war. Anyone familiar with the economy of the business knows that every considerable and material form of waste in either production or distribution has been carefully eliminated. Proof that this is true may be ascertained with little trouble.

It may be safely said of every going concern in the motion picture business that its affairs are as conservatively administered as the dictates of good business could demand.

The difficulty seems to be in the understanding of the term "conservation" and a knowledge of how it should be applied to this particular business.

Also, the meaning of the term "essential" is being misconstrued and misused by ignorant or designing persons.

It would be well for some of our aerial performers to consult the dictionary. We note that Noah Webster says "conservation" means "to protect from loss or injury."

We know of nothing that would be more gratifying to Government authorities at this particular time than to realize that the many great industries of the country were being properly protected from loss and injury. Unfortunately, there are certain industries that are, by their very nature, interfered with by the business of war.

Thus we find the output of steel and its distribution and uses seriously diverted from the usual trade channels because it is needed for ships and shells and guns. In consequence of this diversion we build fewer buildings and automobiles and a thousand other things into which steel ordinarily goes. Those things made of steel that are not absolutely necessary can wait till after the war. But if enough steel can be made to answer all war requirements and afford some for other purposes it will be so used that our industries may be conserved.

In practicing conservation it is not intended that we shall drift into stagnation. The Government does not ask that all forms of peaceful human endeavor should cease and that those so engaged should turn their entire efforts to war industries. What is required is that, in so far as our individual industries are concerned, we should so operate them that they may assist the work of war to the fullest extent. If we do not do this; if we suspend operations and permit our respective businesses to stagnate, then do we not only cease to conserve, we cease to be efficient.

Then, and only then, would the Government be justified in coming in and taking charge of the business which we have failed to operate efficiently toward winning the war.

Our business—the motion picture business—is the business of amusement. To some minds amusements may seem unessential to our great task of winning the war, but experience has proved the contrary to be true. Our Government has recognized the latter truth, and is making the greatest possible use of every form of amusement for the purpose of maintaining the morale of our vast armed forces on land and water.

What is the meaning of the word "efficiency"?

Again we refer to our old friend Noah Webster, who says it means "power that accomplishes a desired work."

Has any one discovered that the motion picture business has not accomplished any task that the Government has set for it?

If so, we have not heard of it.

As to the war work of the motion picture industry, its percentage of efficiency approaches one hundred. Probably no other industry is so situated that it can render to the Government so great a service as has the motion picture industry.

It is because the men who are guiding the affairs of the established and going concerns in this business of ours have conserved their energies and resources, protecting them from loss and injury, that they are now able to produce the power that accomplished the desired work.

It is as plain as a pike staff.

Therefore, in behalf of our conserving and efficient industry, the Moving Picture World resents any inference to the contrary and decries any attempt to interfere with its present status.

The suggestion of a Chicago distributor reminds us of nothing so much as the famous old fable of the fox that lost its tail during an excursion among the neighboring chicken coops. Realizing that its caudle appendage could never be restored, the fox called a convention of his fellows and suggested to them the advisability of having their tails amputated, too.

Our recollection is that the other foxes could not see the efficacy of the suggestion, nor do we believe that the motion picture men to whom this later appeal is addressed will fall in with the Chicago man's idea.

Conservation and Efficiency we have.

Stagnation we do not want.

Therefore, let us continue to protect our business from loss and injury and maintain it at its highest power that it may accomplish the great work set for it to do. This means that we must maintain its present effectiveness in production and distribution that the several thousand motion picture theatres may continue in business and be potent for the collection of taxes for war purposes; that they may spread the propaganda of the Government more effectively and, finally, that they may be powerful agents for the sale of One Billion Dollars' worth of Liberty Bonds.

PERILS OF PERSONALITY

By Robert C. McElravy.

IT IS often said of an actor or an actress that he or she has personality. The comment is sometimes made as though the possession of this arresting attribute were the best bit of luck a performer could have.

Measuring one qualification against another, perhaps personality may be placed in the long list of accomplishments an actor must have. But it is quite easy for the performer to have too much of this particular gift, as many of them have long since discovered.

Personality in an actor is a great deal like style in a writer. It represents his individual mannerisms as he comes in contact with his public—his distinctive way or method of approach. He may win your instant admiration or perhaps your dislike, but in either case you must give him credit for affecting you in some degree as perhaps no other individual has done before. Whether or not you are deeply or permanently impressed is another thing; with the actor this depends in a measure on what he is playing, and with the writer on what he has to say. But if your admiration is really aroused, you are likely to strike up a long friendship with the person who has succeeded in pleasing you, and this is of course what he wants you to do. Of what earthly use is either personality or style if it doesn't win friendly interest?

"It isn't so much what she does, as the way she does it!" How often has that remark been made of certain actresses, indicating at once the presence of winning personality in the performer. Certainly the possession of such a natural gift is an immense help, not the whole battle, but perhaps equal to capturing the first line trenches.

But—now comes the solemn warning!—the fact that your Friendly Enemy, the great public, succumbs to your early barrage fire and initial dash over the top, does not mean that you have won the war. You may have to keep on selling thrift stamps and Liberty Bonds for a long while before the guerdon of victory trickles down over your ears.

Personality intrigues the interest; it makes people perfectly willing to sit up and take notice of what you are doing. But they must not be misled or betrayed too often, or the interest will soon disappear. For personality is not the whole thing in acting, thought it has of itself saved many a poor play or picture. As a general rule it must be backed up by acting ability, confidence, ease of manner, and most of all by an understanding of character portrayal.

There is the sticking point for the performer with personality. Can he lay aside this heaven-sent apparel when the proper times comes and get into the borrowed garments of the character he is playing? The performer with personality is in clover when he has a part that exactly fits this personality. He can keep on playing such parts without a great deal of trouble so long as the public wills. But is he at the same time fitting himself to carry on in other roles when the public wants a change?

A film was shown not long since in which a certain actress who had succeeded greatly in easy, natural parts, attempted something different. She was called upon to step out of her natural self and play a character role. The effort was not a great success, for the actress could not seem to get away from her own personality, which overshadowed her efforts at characterization. Every time she got properly into the story, there would come a long close-up of her true self and people watching the picture saw the actress and character at war with one another—making her altogether a sort of "Dr. Jekyll and Mrs. Hyde."

In this case the actress herself had a most agreeable personality, and some capacity as a character actress. But the two should never have been allowed to come into conflict. The long close-ups may have been the mistake of the director, or it may be that the actress herself insisted upon them.

A performer should always be willing to follow the requirements of his character role at all hazards. After all, the story is the thing that counts and to keep that moving properly is the main issue. Fortunately for the success of these productions, performers usually have this firmly in mind and are willing to forget self. It may be put down as a practical certainty that unless the actor gets thoroughly into the part he is playing, those who go to see the picture will never get very far into the story.

OUR GREATEST POWER

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

WE ARE rendering a great social service in this moment of one big central thought, that of returning to humanity its own, its rights and its happiness, by sending out to millions pictured accounts of what is going on. Education means the distribution of extant knowledge, and our screens all over the country are showing people what is being done. We can see for ourselves how our serious problems are met and solved by the Government in which we are reposing warm-hearted faith.

See what ignorance has done for Russia!

See what intelligence is doing for America!

The screen is playing a splendid part.

We know the ships are being launched, the sailors are being trained to man them, guns being made to arm them, and we will hold the oceans safe for travel and commerce as long as the spirit of justice stirs the hearts of our people. Those hearts are stirred to enforcing justice by the far-seeing and far-reaching messages of the screen.

It is a case of "show me" with Americans.

That is just what the pictures are doing.

The truth is shown, not merely talked about.

That brings out the sinews of war.

Our soldiers are marching away with purpose well-defined in their bright minds and brave hearts, doubly armed that the whole nation is behind them, working at greater efficiency than ever before. Their achievements are due to their own ability and the opportunity afforded them to use it to best advantage by a unity and harmony of feeling at home, a unity of sentiment moving pictures have made possible.

Over there they know "the Yanks are coming."

Over here we know they have arrived.

We have seen them on the fields of France.

We have seen that their physical welfare is taken care of, and we have seen that new attention is being paid to the physical welfare of factory workers in munition plants and elsewhere at home. Just as it was a new social service for us to see that the boys abroad were looked after in matters of entertainment as well of utility, so it is a new social service for us to give that same consideration to men and women in the factories, and the knowledge of this, as circulated everywhere by the pictures, has a tremendous humanizing effect.

That knowledge is making us a United Nation.

Noble work of the Red Cross is being shown.

Splendid efforts of the Y. M. C. A. are portrayed.

We help without grudging what we give, because we know.

Not only can we see with our own eyes how the flower of our youth has become the flower of world chivalry in helping the weak, but those same knights of the twentieth century can watch the pictures in far distant countries and see with their own eyes what is going on at home.

What a marvelous change moving pictures have wrought!

They have united North, South, East and West.

They may bring the whole world to a common understanding.

Why not keep that going after the war?

Let us show on the screen what is fine in American ideals, instead of cabarets and cowboys, what is compassionate in our national character instead of the imported Cinderellas and Camilles. We are treated to pitifully primitive emotions of the "Far North," or any other place unfamiliar enough to bare the raw flesh of decadence with almost nothing of modern feeling and its repression outside of comedy.

Why not tell the plain truth about ourselves.

How about the higher claims of feeling?

We are showing them dramatically in a thousand ways.

Why not picture ourselves just as we are?

"The novel and the short story," says Brander Mathews, "are valuable only when written by a native, unconsciously intimate with the character he is creating and with the social atmosphere he is evoking."

Our greatest power lies in doing away with false ideas and replacing them in the minds of all with knowledge.

A PROPHET OF THE SCREEN

By Edward Weitzel.

IN the year 1915 Vachel Lindsay published his book, "The Art of the Moving Picture." Of a most picturesque personality, an artist and a writer of a new form of realistic verse, Author Lindsay's work made interesting reading when it was first brought out. His predictions relating to the trend of the art were among the most thoughtful and clearly expressed portions of the book; but they will hardly give him much of a standing as a prophet, when measured with the present achievement of the screen. The thing most clearly proved by the book is that the practical improvement in the motion picture has been accomplished by the man who has done the actual producing of the stories for the silent stage—the director, the one person who is responsible for the way in which the human appeal is conveyed to the spectator.

Whatever assistance he may require from the technical director, art expert or highly proficient theorist, when it comes to putting in the element that spells success or failure for the picture, only the man who has learned the tricks of the trade—or, if you prefer, the practical application of the laws of his profession—can be relied upon for this important part of the work.

"The Conversational Theatre"

One of the things that Author Lindsay did not foresee was the development and importance of incidental music for the motion picture. An extract from the book reads:

> Almost every motion picture theatre has its orchestra, pianist, or mechanical piano. The perfect photoplay gathering place would have no sound but the hum of the conversing audience. The orchestra is in part a blundering effort by the local manager to supply the human-magnetic element which he feels lacking in the pictures on which the producer has not left his autograph. But there is a much more economic and magnetic accompaniment, the beforementioned buzzing commentary of the audience. There will be some people who disturb the neighbors in front, but the average crowd has developed its manners in this particular, and when the orchestra is silent, murmurs like a pleasant brook.

There is nothing like having one's own point of view. When the person whose name heads this article attends a moving picture theatre and some one near him starts to discuss the merits of the picture or the trimming on her neighbor's new hat he always feels an overwhelming desire to demand silence—and acts on the urge.

After advising the local manager to call his picture house "The Conversational Theatre" Arthur Lindsay suggests that each patron be handed a card, part of which reads as follows:

"You are encouraged to discuss the picture with the friend who accompanies you to this place. Conversation, of course, must be sufficiently subdued not to disturb the stranger who did not come with you to the theatre."

Unless the spectators are all boiler-makers, the only practical way to run a "Conversational Theatre" is to restrict the conversation to the deaf-and-dumb language. As to the doing away with the musical accompaniment, if the matter were ever put to vote it would be snowed under like a presidential candidate on a pacifist platform.

Another Deduction Gone Wrong

In a chapter entitled "The Contrast with the Stage," one paragraph commences in this wise: "The photoplay is as far from the stage on the one hand as it is from the novel on the other."

Time gives it proof that the motion picture as it is constructed today is very closely related to the novel, and bears very little resemblance to the stage play. Every step forward in the art of the motion picture has led it nearer to the form followed by the novelist—the same pauses in the action for descriptive passages, the same want of steady progress toward a series of climaxes. In other words, we have developed the photo novel and neglected the photoplay. The screen-drama is coming, however. It is only a question of technic. It may not be here three years from now, but it will add a new delight to the shadow stage when it does arrive, and will extend its activities a hundred fold.

WILLIAM C. THOMPSON IS DEAD. News came from Chicago that William C. Thompson died of pneumonia in that city September 23. He will be well remembered as a circus agent, advance man for dramatic shows and publicist for William Fox films. His presence in Chicago was due to the appearance of the Hagenback-Wallace show in that city, "Bill" having gone there in his capacity as general press agent of that organization. He was forty-six years of age, and leaves a wife to mourn her loss. "Bill" had hosts of friends—and they will miss him. The remains were brought to New York for burial, Sept. 28.

Geraghty Writes Pickford Story. Mary Pickford borrowed the services of Tom J. Geraghty, Metro scenario writer, to assist in the preparation of her propaganda picture, "100 Per Cent. American," made by Miss Pickford for the Government in behalf of the fourth Liberty Loan drive.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Ticker Topicals.

ENGLAND, first to use the screen newspaper, is again in the van with an idea which has been used hitherto only around election time and on the occasion of big prize fights. The Stoll theatres are now screening the war telegrams as they come in over the ticker service. They are making a feature of this service and find it profitable. With its important war movements, the newspaper bulletin is sharing popularity with the picture theatre. The Stoll management combats the counter attraction by making it an added feature. A patron may view the films with the assurance that all important news will reach him as quickly as though he stood before the newspaper office or in some barroom. Slides may be quickly prepared, ticker service costs but little, and it would seem that the idea is susceptible of adoption by American exhibitors. Nothing can be made more interesting, and with the added advantage of patriotic slides and music, a news service can be maintained that will prove as much of an attraction as the film feature. It was long ago predicted that the newspaper of the future would be filmed. This seems to be a starter. If you cannot gain access to a ticker service, you can at least arrange with your newspaper to share its wire service and perhaps get it free in return for a credit line or credit slide. Try the scheme, at least to the extent of making bulletins of big war news as it breaks.

Ruff Stuff.

Ralph Ruffner is making a big noise about the official war review at the Rialto, Butte, Mont. He realizes the value of the Government stamp and the value of the pictures themselves. We have already told how Ruff launched the idea, and for a permanent sign he is using a reproduction of the official cut. The first illustration shows how this looks on top of the canopy.

Emblem used by Ralph Ruffner to advertise the Allies War Review.

The wings of the eagle flap slowly, and the motion attracts much more attention to the sign than would be the case were the pinions still. The result is gained from a small electric motor which turns a large wheel. To this is attached a loose shaft which converts the rotary into an up and down movement, which causes the wings to rise and fall. The scheme is so simple that anyone, after a glance at the illustration, can work the same idea, not alone for this but for other motion attractors, and it is a well-known fact that motion multiplies the value of a display very greatly. Another recent stunt of Ruff's was worked in connection with Pershing's Crusaders. Working with the local recruiting office, he persuaded the City Fathers to consent to painting the sidewalks with "Pershing's Crusaders at the Rialto," covering the territory for half a dozen blocks around, and the work was done by enlisted men which gave an added official touch to the picture. The work was done in colors and the funny part is that while the rest of the lettering disappeared soon after the showing of the film, a different sort of paint must have been used for the house name, for that is still as bright as ever. The men of the 14th Infantry were invited to be the guests of the management at the matinee. The house was dressed with flags and the boys were photographed before they entered, the photographs being rushed to the newspaper offices to appear as news cuts, and Ruff carefully painted up the house name with artist's ink before he sent the photographs out. He doesn't overlook a single angle. That is the real secret of his success. When he gets an idea he makes it do all the work possible.

Mechanism for causing the eagle's wings to flap.

Sound Argument.

Charles Decker, of the Majestic, Grand Junction, Colorado, is getting them used to a four-change program. He asks in black face:

WOULDN'T YOU RATHER SEE FOUR GOOD, GUARANTEED SHOWS EACH WEEK, THAN SEVEN CHANCE SHOWS. UNDER OUR NEW STAR SERIES OF BOOKING WE GUARANTEE OUR PICTURES—YOUR MONEY BACK IF YOU ARE NOT SATISFIED.

There's a column of argument in those eight lines. Just to show that he does not depend upon ready-made advertisements he advertises "Her Body in Bond" and adds that Miss Murray sued Universal for $150,000 damages over this picture. That isn't going to hurt the attendance any. Mr. Decker's house organ, a six-page newspaper size sheet, is well along in its fourth year with a better advertising clientele than ever. That seems to be a record, though it is shared to some extend by a sister house in Greeley.

An Identification Campaign.

L. W. Barclay, of Johnstown, Pa., sends along the identification campaign he used to make Dorris Kenyon known. It is simple, effective and not too costly. Miss Kenyon was not known to the patrons of the Parkview and something had to be done to establish her identity. The picture opened Monday. On the preceding Thursday evening and Saturday morning the front and back page carried a five-line teaser that read:

WHERE
INN OF THE BLUE MOON?
WHO IS JUSTINE DRUCE?

Of course the inevitable "advt." tailed the display. On Friday evening and Saturday morning the same advertisement was carried on the front and back pages and each inside page carried a one-inch display, as shown. In the Saturday evening edition three elevens were carried telling that Miss Kenyon was Justine in the Vance story, and this told the rest of the details about the Vance play. The cut shows up poorly in the reproduction, but this seems ten as shown for Monday evening and Tuesday morning. Mr. Barclay adds that the picture went over well and that they expect the investment to apply to other pictures in which Miss Kenyon will appear. For this reason the star was played up strongly and Vance not so prominently, though we think that a more generous use of the Vance name would have helped to establish the star, since he is well known to magazine readers in all towns. Some day we shall come to a point where the play will be regarded as of equal importance with the star, but it will take a lot of education to make patrons generally desert their star system. Mr. De Mille is now featuring his production above the stars he uses and in time people will come to understand that certain authors and directors are as well worthy of a following as the stars—but before then the author must have more to say as to how his story is to be produced. Meantime it is necessary to establish new stars and we like Mr. Barclay's way.

Not Adroit.

We think that Mr. Kadow does not show his usual adroitness in advertising My Four Years in Germany at the Mikadow, Manitowoc, Wis. Instead of hammering upon the big lines from the book and playing of the natural sensation, he took a two fifteens for a reader. We are giving it in full. The trouble with the copy is that it seems to place the management upon the defensive. Instead of being aggressive, this endeavor to hook up with the propaganda talk makes the advertisement seem apologetic. It places Mr. Kadow in the position of explaining. It is a mistake to assume that fault may be found with an offering, even by its enemies. It suggests that there may be some basis for an attack and that it is this which the manager seeks to combat. Moreover, the truculent talk is directed against the town folk instead of against the enemy. Most of the advertising for this feature has used the striking lines from the book, incorporated into the play, as the basis for argument. We have reproduced many of these lines in various displays, and they have always seemed to work well. Here no use is made of these lines, but instead Mr. Kadow seems to be trying to assure the possible patron that the offering is really worth while. He assumes that there is reason to think otherwise, and meantime he has lost his chance to tell the good points. He has taken the wrong angle and we think it will react against the house. Indignation should have been directed against the Kaiser and not against the supposed spies. It is a more general appeal and a more definite one.

In the last couple of weeks a country-wide German propaganda has been launched against motion pictures. Their idea was to discourage the going to the movies because they realized what a tremendous arm of information the pictures meant to the government.
They have cooked up clever, crude and harmful information. Motion pictures are being attacked thru the pulpit as "Sinful Amusement," now by certain preachers, where before they were never mentioned.

Burned Out—No Panic.

Remember the good old days when papers would "eat up" stories of film flares when the reels and the audience "exploded" simultaneously? The other day the Oneonta (N. Y.) Theatre was showing My Four Years in Germany when the film caught and there was a fire that not only cleaned out that reel, but the better part of the remainder of the subject. Not a single person was hurt in an audience that packed the house and two employees were slightly burned putting out the fire before the department apparatus arrived. There was no disorder and no undue excitement. Manager Addison telephoned to New York for a new set of reels and then he put an advertisement in the local paper of which this is part. The remainder of the advertisement announced that new film had been sent for and would be shown if it arrived in time, the parade of the band being the announcement. There was no evening paper in which to make the announcemet, but the band was turned out in the afternoon and formed a more novel advertisement than any type could possibly have given. Mr. Addison advertised the film heavily. The band which announced the coming of the new edition, was also used for street work along with an Uncle Sam and Kaiser. Some of the advertising ran three and four columns page length, which is going more than a litte for a small town, but Mr. Addison does things in big town fashion. He takes two elevens even for his daily bill, and spreads when he gets a special.

Three in One.

We used to get two programs in the same envelope from Orange, N. J., but now there are programs for the Lyceum, Colonial and Palace in the same cover. They seem to be growing. The inside arrangement is the same for all, but care has been taken to get the front pages distinct. Different colors are used for the three houses and in addition the type display is markedly different in each of the three fronts; a further distinction being gained through the use of ornaments on two of the faces. This has been cleverly done, but each program carries all essential facts on the front, such as location, times of showing and phone numbers. It is clean work.

King Wants Credit.

Carroll E. King, of Leesburg, Ohio, rises to remark that he is also "there" and adds that he isn't all swelled up about it, but just wants to tell that he is alive. He says in part:

Two articles in your issue of Sept. 7th compel me to write you in order to stand up for little "old C. E.," for so little credit is being passed around these times that a fellow has to "holler" for his share.

Referring to your article on page 1388 concerning your correspondent's journey through some of the small towns, would especially call your attention to the report regarding Cherry Valley, town of 800. Mr. F. Levere Minne, manager. Regarding this would respectfully call your attention to the fact that Leesburg is rated at 828 population, but now has less owing to the draft and enlistments. The Johnsonia Theatre is a ground floor theatre in a separate building, seating 242. I run Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays and every other Friday. Therefore in one respect I go Mr. Winne one better. Further, I also am editor of the "Leesburg Citizen," and this paper, you will note by enclosed letter head, is the only eight-page, all home-print-paper in this section of the state. We, too, have a linotype and the plant is modern in every respect. Absolutely no plate matter is used in the news columns, everything being our own composition. Can Mr. Winne show up that well? Asy the "boys" through here.

Further, I am a "nut" on publicity and can't do too much of it. I agree with Winne that publicity properly exploited, pays just as well in rural communities as it does in the cities. Further, I have six, sixteen and twenty-four sheet stands scattered through eight small hamlets in the surrounding country and I sure do use them whenever the production I am running justifies it.

Mr. King overlooks the fact that he got more space and some cuts in the same issue reciting that very fact. Then Mr. King goes on to remark that Ruffner is not such a much on community singing as the Johnsonia has been doing that the past three months. Yep. But Ruff has been doing it two years and a-half as back issues of this paper will show. Mr. King turns the house over to his personally organized Community Club and they run a special sing. The reason for this is that there is a new school house with an auditorium which has not yet been provided with seats because the theatre provides all the necessary accommodation, and by getting the people used to this house Mr. King saves the town the cost of the seats they might otherwise buy—and also saves his bacon. But we think that letting the kiddies "speak pieces" is best held to the small towns. He ends up with "You see the little fellows have just as big problems to overcome, in proporotion, as do the big houses in the cities." It's more than that. The "little fellow" ninety-nine times out of a hundred has to be a darned sight better planner or he will not be able to live. In the city you can get people in somehow and if John Jones won't come you can get after Sam Smith, but in the small towns you must get both Jones and Smith or put up the shutters. It's the little man who most always is the live wire. The city man takes it easy—sometimes far too easy.

For Crashing Through.

For Crashing Through to Berlin the Broadway Theatre front looked like a misguided Hall of Fame. The cut shows the house front. Inside were similar niches showing nineteen heros of the war. They were not busts, but profile stuff, painted. On either side of the lobby were stills to suggest frames of film. Three stage effects were employed. The first was a huge hour glass with "blood" instead of sand running through. The second were tableaux showing Washington crossing the Delaware and Pershing crossing the Rhine, while following the play the screen was raised to show a cannon with the Dove of Peace doing light housekeeping in the next in the cannon's mouth. The lobby made a decided flash and is credited by the management with bringing much business.

Program Copy.

Here is some good program talk from A. L. Middleton, of the Queen, De Queen, Ark. It is not only good program stuff, but it is good logic. It leads up to a chat on the current program. It begins:

We could attract attention by standing on a corner and pointing to the sky.

But you would be disappointed when you found out what attracted your attention.

Likewise we could attract you to the Queen Theatre by a big roar about ordinary pictures.

But to get you back again and again and again we want to deliver the goods; we must make good; you must not be disappointed when you go.

We must point to something of quality; something that you are going to be pleased with, as an inducement to get you in.

Therefore we are coming into your home this week with the Herald to point out to you the fact that we are presenting besides our two big serial programs Monday and Thursday this week, four of the very best feature programs that money can buy.

The entire four pages of the program is a running story with this introduction. Mr. Middleton is as much an institution of De Queen as is the railroad station just because he has made himself a part of the town through his talks.

Pre-education.

Leon Granjean, of the Boehringer Amuesment Co., Inc., put into effect a clever scheme when that company's New Orleans Liberty was on the point of opening. Just before the opening he commenced a series of advertisements dealing with the esential features of the new house. Those shown in the cut are the second and third of the series. Number two tells why the Liberty can offer better projection than most houses through the proper placement of the projection room, while the third shows how the seating scheme, with four aisles instead of two makes for comfort. The first announcement was a two sevens, announcing the house and its location and serving as an introduction to the remainder of the displays. The fourth is three twelves and deals with the seats, showing by illustration how the bottoms cannot be soiled by the boots of the patron in the row behind, how the arm rests are rounded to prevent catching the clothing and how comfortable the seats are. In turn the other announcements are devoted to the lighted risers in the balconies, ventilation, the shadow box, double box office, decoration, location, fireproof construction and house policy. Most of the spaces were two eights, but more was taken if more space was needed, and as a result the first nighter knew all about the excellent features of the house and was prepared to enjoy them.

A three eights and a three tens, part of a series of advertisements showing the advantages of a new house.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

From Overseas.

George E. Edwards, late president of New York Local Union 306, and a live wire who tried to give New York projectionists a real organization, but failed, because of lack of support, writes interestingly, as follows:

> Just a line (Four pages is what brother Edwards calls a "line." Ed.) to let you know we are still doing business, with many novelties on the side. Am with the cinema department of the "Y." We have bunches of projectors, working, under all kinds of conditions, in barracks, camp, field and hospital. Some of the outfits would give you a fit, but they deliver the goods (after a fashion. Ed.), and that is, after all, what the boys want. We take a Power's 6 and equip it so we can use acetylene, arc, incandescent, oxy-hydro or storage battery, send it out on a flivver, with trailer, and give a show wherever it is most needed. The French projectionists have gotten wise to the outfits, and do very well with them, everything considered, and, oh boy! you should hear the yells of delight when one William S. Hart looms up on the sheet. It would do your heart good. We have all the American favorites, and it's worth a million dollars to stand near the sheet and watch the varying emotions on the boys' faces, the Poilus generally having the subtitles translated for them by an eager bunch of well-tanned yanks. All your carefully studied rules and formulas with regard to projection have been set aside, owing to the exigencies of war, and shows are put on under conditions that would cause the home projectionist to throw up both hands and yell "Kamerad" "Toute de Suite." The projectionist in service gets a projector, or a part of one, with some film, proceeds to give a show, and that is all there is to it. Sounds easy, but when you find your lamphouse smashed flat from a case of goods falling on it and proceed to improvise one from an empty oil can, arranging lamp and condenser as best you can with wood blocks, nails, wire, or anything else you can get hold of, it certainly keeps you on the jump. By the way, I ran across a bunch of French projectionists over here who, by the aid of a dictionary, had translated most of the second edition of your handbook. There was a lot they could not understand, owing to difficulty of literal translation, but what they did understand they understood thoroughly. You could not purchase the handbook from them for five hundred francs, and that is a lot of money to a French soldier. By the way, how would you like to be sent out with five reels U. S. film, a portable projector, which, in its case, looks like a multigraph, and give a show with a storage battery and a nine-volt lamp? We have them in use here, giving a picture 4 feet wide. With an aluminum surface screen we get a picture which would make you sit up and take notice. (Almost any light source would do that when concentrated on 12 square feet of metallic surface screen, brother Edwards. Ed.). In hospitals we use either the DeVry suitcase projector, or the regular portable, plus a mirror, showing the pictures on the ceiling between the beds, so that the boys in bed do not have to change their position. New York is well represented here. Eddie Fitzgerald, the demon motorcyclist, late of the Rialto; George Balsdon, late manager of the Vitagraph film corps; George Latta, of the Birth of a Nation, and yours truly, are all right on the job here in Paris and surrounding districts, while Press Wilson, of Local 35, is at the front, dodging 75s. The Cinema has not reached the magnitude in Paris it has attained in New York City. Projection, except in a very few cases, is very poor, and the theatres ditto. Music is used to drown the sound of the machines, and sometimes is successful. I was under the impression you were some punkins on a motorcycle, until I rode with Eddie Fitzgerald. It takes me a week to recover each time. Shell holes and barbed wire are considered by him as plenty good enough road for 40 to 70 miles an hour. We all wish you Merry Christmas.

This letter was dated August 18. Judging by the last sentence Brother Edwards has small faith in the speed of mail service over seas. Lord, man! how your letter reminded me of old days when we used all kinds of makeshifts, just as you are doing now. Sure, you can put on a show under such conditions, BUT there are shows and shows. Anyhow you are doubtless performing wonders, and the work you are doing, be the show good or bad (bad by comparison, I mean), is welcome to the men. The hospital stunt is a new one. With the DeVry you can just lay it on its back, start it going, and use the ceiling for a screen. The result will be just as good as though it were working in normal position.

We are glad to hear from Brother Edwards. He is of the right sort. My compliments to you all, and happy New Year to you in return for your Merry Xmas. If I can at any time do anything for you here just let me know.

Changing to Mazda Lamp.

Frank W. Briggs, Forked River, N. J., is anxious about the following:

> Have belt-driven special kerosene burning light plant, 3.5 KW at 60 volt, 1,900 R.P.M., Power's late model 6-B projector. Current is controlled through two Power's 60-volt rheostats. Have metaloid screen and get beautiful, clear 12-foot picture at 50 feet, BUT since I use the plant to light a hotel I am very badly overloaded and must race my engine to carry arc. Believe conditions in my theatre are ideal for Mazda lamp. Am compelled to make a change of some kind, as am ruining my plant, but the question is, will I be able to use Mazda with present equipment? How can I reduce voltage from 60 to 30? I understand the Mazda lacks in light brilliancy. Would it be practical, or possible, to use two Mazda lamps side by side, with reflectors set to throw light directly into condensers? Best wishes to yourself and the department.

No, the use of two lamps set side by side would not only be impractical, but impossible. The Mazda lamp must, for optical reasons, be exactly opposite center of condenser; in other words, on exact axis of the lens system. The slightest deviation therefrom is a very serious matter with the Mazda. You can control the voltage with a suitable rheostat, which any dealer in Mazda lamp appliances can supply, but I would strongly advise you to procure an automatic voltage regulator, of which Mr. Hallberg (U. T. E.) has excellent examples, both for A.C. and D.C., and I believe the General Electric also has one for A.C., though it was not yet complete when I was last at the National Lamp Works in Cleveland. Doubtless there are others, though these two are the only ones thus far presented to this department for examination. Under your conditions I see no reason why you will not be able to get a result which will probably equal or even excel your present one, and get it with considerably less expenditure of power, thus relieving your power plant. I do not know whether or not Lewis M. Swaab, 1327 Vine street, Philadelphia, Pa., carries this class of apparatus, but presume he does. He is probably your nearest dealer.

In the Navy.

Raymond Simmons, U. S. S. Magnolia, writes as follows:

> Maybe you would be interested in hearing from a projectionist in the navy, so here goes. Before enlisting, December 1, was working under a union projectionist, who was president of the Paducah, Ky., local. During my two years of work as assistant

I gained much valuable information from the projection department. Am now doing my bit in the navy; also am in charge of projection apparatus of this ship. The projection I have is a dandy. It is a "DeVry." With it I get a good, clear picture. Cannot use either of the two standard projecters, Power's and Simplex, because there is not room for all to see the pictures in one place, hence must give "shows" several times a day in different places about the ship. Sometimes, too, some of the boys are sick, and then I just grab friend DeVry (Suit case projector. Ed.), hike into the hospital and give them a show.

DISCARD THE JUNK. One thing I wish you would do for us, and that is, tell those in charge of securing pictures to be shown the boys in uniform that they could help their country a whole lot and us beyond measure if they would take a lot of those old junk pictures out and make a huge bonfire of them, instead of unloading them on us. Every trip I get reels of film in such utterly punk physical condition that I cannot use them at all. Cement and time would be wasted on them. Recently I received a Universal 1911 subject, the first two hundred feet of which was in almost as many pieces, and nearly all splices made out of frame. We are not just in from the backwoods, seeing our first moving pictures. Those old films are simply a bore to the men. We deeply appreciate what the Y. M. C. A. has done and is doing for us, but if they are purchasing those old reels they are, in that instance, spending money foolishly.

The attention of Y. M. C. A. officials is respectfully directed to the foregoing. Friend Simmons is right. Certainly it is not the part of wisdom to supply junk with which to amuse our men who are out dodging submarine torpedoes. Sending such stuff to them is worse than sending nothing at all. The pictures have, for the most part, already been seen by them, and there can be slight amusement in seeing them in fragmentary part again. Of course it is not to be expected that we can supply our ships with first run, but certainly we can do better than pure, unadulterated junk. Brother Simmons' criticism is well founded and his contention right. It is not the right thing to give (I take it, the films in question are donated to the Y. M. C. A.) films which have so far outlive their usefulness that they are rejected by even the five-cent theatre patron. Better do something better than that or do nothing at all. The DeVry is a high class projector of its kind.

Don't Know.

W. E. Williams, who signs himself "Operator," Lead, South Dakota, has the following to say:

Where can I get an "Ingento" dissolving slide carrier? What size condenser ought I have on a spotlamp having a six-inch opening. Throw, 88½ feet. Here is scheme for setting revolving shutter. Take short piece of new film, or film in good condition. Thread into machine in exact frame. Then move it down two sprocket holes, which brings it exactly one-half out of frame, with dividing line in center of aperture. Next, draw a straight line from center of shutter shaft across exact center of wide, or cutting blade of shutter. Place this line in line with dividing line of film when set as before described, and the shutter will be set correctly.

Your shutter setting plan would not work on some machines, as shutter does not cut across ray square with film picture. Where it would work you have, I think, failed to state it correctly. It would not work unless the squaring of the two lines be done when intermittent was exactly on point of starting, as you have stated it. The better way would be to turn flywheel until film dividing line comes exactly in center, and then square lines. But this is a lot of bother, since one must measure distance on rim of flywheel, the same as when measuring intermittent speed. Why go to all that trouble when one can set by light on screen, using title letters and travel ghost as guide. Don't know where Ingento dissolving carrier can be had, or even whether it is still made. I have one in fairly good condition which you may have for one dollar plus 25 cents for postage. You need a 6½-inch diameter lens for your spot. I do not remember what focal length is correct for spot lamp and have not the data at hand. Dealer will send correct focal length. As to the "Operator," are you content to be classed as a mere operator of a machine, or would you prefer to be classed as a projectionist, in all that term implies? Think it over!

Architectural Outrage.

As some of you remember, I have, from time to time, raked projectionists over the coals for their lack of knowledge—for attempting to do something that they do not know how to properly accomplish, and for making no adequate effort to gain the knowledge which they lack. But the projectionist is not the only one. The architect often leads him by several long laps. I recently received a letter from the manager of a large, new theatre, the cost of which must have run well up into the hundreds of thousands. Its seating capacity is large, its ornamentation splendid, and its appointments of the very best. But, alas, from the side seats, complained the manager, there is heavy distortion, and generally punk results from the spectators point of view. "We are sending blueprints," said the manager, "and want to know where the trouble lies. Would like you to come to ..... and look the matter over, if you can help us by so doing." It was close to 1,500 miles to the theatre in question, and it required but a glance at the blueprints to determine the trouble. An architect had attempted to design a motion picture theatre, with apparently a very hazy idea of even the most fundimental projectional problems involved. He had placed the screen in one corner with a view angle so acute from the side banks of seats that objects on the screen appeared as being but half their normal width, which, in its turn, made them seem abnormally tall. See figure 64 and top of page 154 of Handbook for explanation of reasons for this phenominon. I was able to suggest a possible improvement insofar as the side-shortening of figures on the screen was concerned, but it would not be enough to be dignified with the name "remedy," and would be at the expense of entire elimination of the stage setting, or rather the screen surroundings. It was a case where an architect had bungled matters in such way that the seating capacity of the auditorium must be reduced by the elimination of at least one bank of seats on each side, if anything like satisfactory results were to be attained. In other words he has, with possibility of entirely satisfactory results, made them impossible. In this case he drew plans for a building 132 feet square, and had, apparently, attempted to economize space by placing the auditorium in one corner, with the lobby in the opposite corner and store rooms on either side. A most excellent arrangement, if it would work! The architect should have known that it would not work. That was a part of his business. If he did not know, he should have consulted a projection engineer before the theatre was built instead of leaving it to the owners to consult one after the damage was done. Time and again I have warned theatre men about to erect motion picture theatres to consult a competent projection engineer. Architects are not projection engineers, consequently they are constantly committing the most inexcusable blunders, which injure the usefulness of the houses they design. Scarcely a month goes by that I am not consulted in at least one such case, but it is seldom that such a very serious and incurable blunder is committed in such an expensive theatre.

Why is it theatre men refuse to understand the fact that there are very real projectional problems entailed in theatre designing, fitting, decorating and illuminating? To me the thing is nothing short of amazing. Architects and exhibitors will cheerfully, and as a matter-of-course, consult experts in everything else connected with the proposed theatre except projection problems (the one thing the whole theatre is built to accommodate) before building. Oh, that will, they seem to think, in some un-understandable way take care of itself. And when it doesn't, and there is trouble, they then, after it is too late, rush off to do what they should have done in the first place, viz.: Consult with a projection engineer.

There is perhaps one possible solution to this state of affairs. A rather amazing assortment of self-styled "projection engineers" has, of late years, sprang into existence. Not long ago I received a letter from a man who was, if his letter head was to be accepted as conclusive evidence, a "projection engineer" par excellence. And what do you suppose he asked me? Why just this, "What is the real difference between a 6½ and a 7½ inch condenser lens. I know they give different results, but I want to know the exact reason why!" It is to laugh! There also are other men posing as "projection engineers" whose knowledge is either entirely or very largely theoretical: Then, too, we have the reverse in a lot of men calling themselves by the much abused title who have plenty of practical experience, but practically no theoretical knowledge at all. And theatre men who have applied to these rather weak staffs for aid over the rough spots have found themselves, in all too many cases, out a good sized fee, without much to show for it in improvement.

Now don't turn up your nose and say all this is leading to the assumption that Richardson is "it." Nothing of the sort! There are a few very capable projection engineers in the country, but they are invariably men who have had practical experience, and have supplemented it with deep study of the problems inherent in projection. As for myself, I am just a humble editor and projectionist who believes he knows projection and its problems as well, perhaps, as anyone else. I heartily welcome into the field every really competent projection engineer, but do object to four-flushers who have little or nothing to offer but an empty title. It is they who have made theatre men skeptical as to the advisability of consulting projection engineers before building or after either unless the trouble be very bad indeed.

Conducted by GEORGE W. BEYNON

The Dramatic Effect of Silence So Loud That It Is Audible

"ALL I want is silence, and very little of that," said the Irishman, and in his humor there is some truth. We have other anxioms regarding "Silence that is golden," "Wisdom of silence," and "Silence gives consent." Silence has played an important part in the diplomacy of nations, while the silent pause in music holds a wealth of meaning.

Silence in picture playing is beginning to be recognized as the strongest of dramatic effects. Used judiciously, it adds a punch to the picture that hitherto has been given with crashing chords. To emphasize the strong dramatic value of a screen action, we have had recourse to the cymbal, the big drum or the trumpeting in the orchestra. The slow crescendo ending in a double forte chord has hitherto typified the big moment.

But it was found that these means of accentuation were not always feasible. It required considerable deftness of timing and a close following of the picture to make the required synchronous effect. Moreover, if the orchestra reached the big chord before the climax had been reached in the picture, there was a semblence of burlesque that completely spoiled the picture. To attempt to retard the music in case the tempo had been too fast previously, would only take away the dramatic tension.

In melodramatic plays, it was found that the picture reached its climax when the villain was shot, and at the shot the music was abruptly broken off. A new number was started and the wise leader saw at once how much better it would sound if there was a well-defined pause after the shooting. In other words, the orchestra held its breath with the patrons until the suspense had passed. In this way, silence became a mighty dramatic factor in the presentation of pictures.

Analyzing the effects of silence, we find some very interesting facts. After the culmination of a valorous deed, when the audience has been held spellbound by the swift changing screen action leading up to it; silence relieves the nerve tension. On the other hand, after the well-beloved heroine has been run down by an automobile and we see her lying, bruised and dishevelled, upon the roadside, silence increases the mental strain. It is awesome and gives you that creepy sensation in the spine.

During the playing of the "Hearts of the World" at the 44th Street Theatre, in New York, the accompaniment became tacet every time the portrait of the Kaiser appeared. This form of silence might be called a portrayal of hate. It spoke volumes for the thoughts of the players and conveyed to the minds of the audience the fact that the hated Hun could not be interpreted musically. It has become the prevailing method of expressing disgust for Willful Wilhelm in the picture theatres throughout the country.

Strange as it may seem, silence expresses to a marked degree the antithesis of disgust-reverence. Some theatre orchestras allow a funeral scene in the pictorial to go musicless and the effect is splendid. After the hero has crossed the desert and dragged himself upon his hands and knees to the officer's camp, where he delivers the message that will save his sweetheart, his head falls forward and we know he has "fought the good fight." Silence is the most eloquent tribute to his bravery.

Another form of silence that meets with general commendation is that effected while a praying scene is shown. In "Enemy Aliens," during a scene showing the arrogant entrance of the enemy into the house of the heroine, a flash shows her child kneeling in prayer at the bedside. It lasts for fifteen seconds and the dramatic value of silence in this spot cannot be overestimated.

All flash backs may be handled in this way and obviate the continual difficulties encountered in selecting music for short extraneous situations. A scene that is totally foreign to the general situation being played cannot be fitted properly with a short number and a dacabo to the original theme. The break becomes so marked and the smoothness of the setting is lost. If the flash be in the atmosphere of the general scene, the music may continue pp, coming back to its natural volume when the flash has passed.

Scenes showing the thoughts of principals, enacted for the purpose of piecing together the screen story, may be portrayed by silence except where they run to any great length. Musically this illustrates the familiar saying "and in the meantime," great judgment must be used if these "reflection" scenes be silently treated, lest the audience may think that something has gone wrong with the orchestra.

Too much of a good thing is not a good thing at all, although we know that the silent pauses in a musical setting can be used to great advantage, it would be dangerous to use them continually. The less they are shown, the more effective they become when affected.

Let the musical director playing pictures seriously consider the many qualities of silence, for, in its judicial use, he has one of the strongest vehicles conveying dramatic values.

French Music Calls for Recognition.

Now that Germany has forever closed our doors to her music, we naturally must look about for a new source of atmospheric selections. Hunnish music must go and, although we have no desire to be as contemptible and brutal as our hated enemy, yet it is time we exercised a little common sense.

Why fatten the alien enemy's purse, flatter his vanity, advance his propaganda, and by tolerating German music, when we will not tolerate anything else from that source?

France, our two-time ally, offers to us her richest store of musical art. We have heard the French Military Band and French Orchestra render marvelous works, hitherto unknown. Thousands of masterpieces are awaiting rendition by American orchestras and the plaudits of American patrons. We owe it to ourselves to become more familiar with this school of music, numbering among its great composers such celebrities as Massenet, Bizet, Berlioz, Godard and Chaminade.

The recent visit paid to France by Walter Damrosch paved the way to a greater and better understanding. Mr. Damrosch, in speaking of the willing co-operation exhibited by the French musicians, recites the following anecdote:

"Let me give you one instance of how the French are co-operating with us. As you know I went over carrying with me a check from Harry Harkness Flagler, president of the New York Symphony Society, to defray the expense of securing an orchestra of fifty men and making with them, a tour of the American rest camps. It was found impossible to do this, as all available transportation facilities were needed in the prosecution of the war. It was decided, however, that I give a few concerts in Paris, and we began to get together the orchestra members.

"At the first rehearsal, forty-three men were present, and several of this number were members of crack regimental bands, whose official duties would not permit of their absence from their own organization on Sunday. I said to them: 'Now, men, we can't give a concert with forty-three men in the orchestra. Here, we in America, are giving you one, two, three millions of soldiers, if necessary, and you can't give me eighty men for an orchestra.' With one voice they said: 'But we will,' and at the next rehearsal I had seventy-seven players, some of them the finest musicians in France, who had volunteered in their eagerness to show their good will to America."

The true spirit of France is seen in this story. Every Frenchman wants to help and we should reciprocate his feeling, backing it up with action. We need French music and its acceptance will please France while it benefits us.

Rialto Orchestra Renders "Puccinianа."

The Rialto orchestra opened its program during the week of September 22 with the overture, "Puccinianа." This is a potpourri of melodies from Puccini's successful operas, "Manon Lescault," "La Boheme," "Tosca," "Madame Butterfly" and "The Girl of the Golden West." The latter had its premiere at the Metropolitan Opera House in 1910. It made a bigger hit as played by the Belasco Company, which toured the country, than it did at the Metropolitan. Possibly one reason may be that "Addio, mia California," does not sound like the language of the Western miners.

We felt that there was a distinct improvement in the brass section of the orchestra, whether it was due to the presence of Trumpeter Rubenstein or whether our seeing him in that part of the orchestra had its subconscious influence, we are unable to state. At any rate, the usual brassiness had disappeared in mellowness. The finale was somewhat spoilt by the seeming inability of the drummer to get his tympani in tune.

"Through the Fjords of Norway" received a characteristic Norwegian setting, and proved very pleasing.

Sascha Fidelman, the blond-haired concert-master, rendered the "Polonaise," by Vieuxtemps, in a manner startling in its simplicity. Mr. Fidelman has a style all his own, conveying to his auditors a sense of ease and tranquility. He is extremely popular with the patrons of the Rialto.

During the playing of the "Animated Magazine" there were two scenes that stood out. For the scene showing the funeral of Cardinal Farley the organist camouflaged the old Irish song, "Mavourneen." This, to our way of thinking, was inexcusable. Why will musicians continually accept it for granted that the average audience is not sufficiently conversant with the intricacies of music to see through a harmonious veneer and fail to distinguish its melody? The use of an Irish folk-song for the funeral of a dignitary of the church savored strongly of travesty. The other predominant feature of the review was the excellent rendition of the long-meter Doxology for the silent prayer of the populace of a Western city. It was magnificently done in a spirit of reverence which strongly impressed the audience.

Usually, in reviewing a new soloist who has all the ear-marks of a professional singer, but whose first performance is somewhat ragged, we refrain from any comment. But the singing by Eldora Stanford of "The Star" was disgracefully inadequate in every sense of the word. Amateurish in her stage presence, throaty in production and continually slirring her notes, she gargled and garbled the words in a key frequently foreign to the song. Inquiry has elicited the fact that her earlier experience has been along the lines of light opera and very little of that. Why spoil the wonderful reputation of the Rialto for high standards of vocal art by allowing such a public affliction.

Rivoli Offers Splendid Musical Bill.

The music at the Rivoli becomes better all the time; in fact it has resolved itself into the outstanding feature at this theatre.

During the week beginning September 22, "Marche Slave," by Tschaikowsky, opened the program. This Slavic march is based on two themes—a Serbian folk-song, "Come, My Dearest, Why So Sad?" and the former Russian National Hymn. It was composed in 1876, and first played in Moscow. It was well directed by Erno Rapee, although the finale suffered a bit through haste. Mr. Rapee seems especially at home in the interpreting of Slavonic music, and his command of his men is growing stronger.

The educational film depicting "Picturesque Industries of Mexico" received a fine setting of Spanish music, distinctly atmospheric.

Then followed the Rialto male quartette singing (a) Sandman, (b) Drum a capello. In our years of experience we have heard numerous male quartettes, and had the honor of directing a few good ones, but we can honestly say that we have never heard such excellent unaccompanied singing by any other four. The voices blend beautifully, their enunciation is clear, phrasing together, and the general ensemble perfect. Frequently we have paid two dollars to hear celebrated artists perform worse in recital work. Mr. Rothapfel is to be congratulated upon securing such a highly artistic offering for the Rivoli.

The animated pictorial, as usual, was admirably adapted musically. Opening with "Il Guarany," the orchestra went into a potpourie of old and well-known sea songs, such as "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," "Larboard Watch" and "La Mariner." It is the proper use of these ancient melodies that makes the Rothapfel performances stand in a class of their own.

Leeta Corder, a soprano, sang "China Dream," beautifully set by John Wenger. Her stage setting was distinctly Oriental, and we had a glimpse of China as it is today.

The feature, "Laughing Bill Hyde," although somewhat uninteresting in itself, was well fitted musically.

Following this we heard the selection from the "Pink Lady" and watched the comedy, both well played by the orchestra.

A Courteous Comment from Carl.

STRAND THEATRE
September 24, 1918.

My dear Mr. Beynon:

Allow me to congratulate you upon the efficiency of your department," Music for the Picture." It interests me mightily, and I conscientiously read every word of it.

I sincerely appreciate your frank candor and unbiased criticism. They are all for the uplift of music in the picture theatres and the establishment of this new profession on a sound basis. Every musician should feel grateful for the help to be obtained from your unstinted efforts.

Nothing could give me greater pleasure than to assist in the good work.

Yours very sincerely,
Carl Edouarde.

The entire program of music was perfectly synchronized, presented smoothly and in good taste.

Sherman and "Marching Through Georgia"

"'Sherman's dashing Yankee boys will never reach the coast!'
So the saucy rebels said, and 'twas a handsome boast."

Thus the fourth verse reads. Was it the personal reference that displeased General Sherman or did the tune really annoy him, as he always insisted. Whatever the cause, the illustrous gentleman professed great antipathy to "Marching Through Georgia," and showed much annoyance whenever he heard it. He is authority for this little story regarding it:

While he was traveling abroad, he was in his room one night getting ready to retire. Suddenly he heard a band playing the hated tune. Although he resented being pursued into a foreign land by the one piece of music he could not endure, he hastily got into his uniform and went out on the balcony, thinking he was to be welcomed into the city with a serenade. To his great surprise, the band marched right past his hotel with never an upward glance. Later he found out that the air was then, and still is, very popular abroad.

There is no special story connected with either the music or the lyrics. Aside from its genuine merit as a war song, the most interesting fact in connection with it is the peculiar idiocyncracy of a great man which caused him to detest it.

The author and composer, like Dr. Root, was a New Englander, having been born in Middletown, Connecticut, in 1832. Henry Clay Work was not favored with the opportunity for study afforded to most composers, and was absolutely self-taught as far as his compositions were concerned. His first success was "We Are Coming, Sister Mary," but "Grandfather's Chair" and "Shadows on the Floor" are equally well known. Among the war songs he composed between the years of 1861 and '65 are "God Save the Nation," "Drafted Into the Army," "Song of a Thousand Years" and "Marching Through Georgia." The last named is the only one of them that seems inclined to remain in the minds of the people. It commends itself to the reminescent mood of the veteran soldier, and is always heard at the reunions of the Grand Army of the Republic.

On Memorial Days, when we watch the remnant of that splendid body of men to whom we owe so much, and see them march falteringly down the street to pay their tribute to their comrades who have passed on, our hearts go out to them in loving sympathy. But we always feel a flow of warmth and comfort as the drooping shoulders straighten and the dragging steps quicken when the band breaks into march time wafting the years away with the strains of "Marching Through Georgia." A miracle is performed before our eyes! The memory of the long ago rejuvenates the men in uniform, and they become again the "Boys in Blue" if only for a day.

Hadley Announces Cinema Song Cycle.

Hopp Hadley, who has been making a special study of combining the charms of music and pictures for several years, now announces another innovation which promises to attract considerable attention in musical and picture circles. His first production along musical lines completed last spring was the five-reel drama, "The Lost Chord," especially arranged to feature the theatre orchestra, pianist or organist by the introduction of scenes illustrating the symphony played by the musicians. He called "The Lost Chord" a cinema-symphony, and it is now being distributed through the Four Square Exchange.

Mr. Hadley's new effort combines several high class baritone solos with a picture telling a complete story; the picture so closely allied to the songs that the words of the soloist appear on the screen as the subtitles of the drama. He calls this production a cinema-song-cycle, as it tells the story of the world-famous song-cycle, "Eliland," the beautiful songs of which are found on concert programs everywhere.

"The title of the first cinema-song-cycle is 'The Vow'," said Mr. Hadley. "The negative is now being cut, and I hope to give a private showing in about a week. The song-cycle 'Eliland,' which it illustrates, is too well known to need any introduction. The picture is practicable from the theatre standpoint in every way, although, of course it is only suitable for first-class houses. I had the pleasure of showing it to David Bispham, William G. Stewart and several other prominent artists recently. The noted baritone, Raymond Ellis, will sing the solos for its initial presentation. I think that the picture is worthy of the beautiful music which is really a part of it. Herbert Carlton is responsible for the camera work, which is as fine as any I ever saw. It runs just thirty minutes, and will be offered as a novelty for theatres featuring their music and also for use as a concert number. I believe it will mark the introduction of motion pictures into the concert world."

Ticket-tax agitation will ultimately compel landlords to pay space-rates for flat-windows overlooking airdomes.

MUSIC SERVICE EXCHANGE

507 Fifth Avenue, New York

ITS POLICY.

We do not and will not publish any music nor ally ourselves with any publisher. Service is our middle name and we serve to please.

ITS PURPOSE.

We will select or buy music of all kinds from any publisher for the benefit of musicians who cannot come to New York or for those who through lack of time cannot write for small orders to many and various firms. For this service we charge no fee.

ITS OPERATION.

Send us your order for music with a deposit cheque, showing good faith, and we will procure your music from the various publishing houses, ship it as one consignment on the same date of receipt of the order, charging you the usual retail price less your deposit.

ITS MEANING TO YOU.

Quick action, accuracy in filling your order, a retail store at your door, a saving of carfares and postage and a service that you have long needed.

EXHIBITORS—

Avail yourself of this opportunity to build up a musical library for your theatre.

LEADERS—

Send in your lists of music wanted. If suggested in any cue-sheet, indicate the name and the number and we will do the rest.

THANK YOU!

Questions Asked—Suggestions Offered.

Q. Would it be possible for you to print a cue sheet for the serial, "Hands Up," in your columns, "Music for the Picture?" This would be greatly appreciated.

A. As you have noticed, all our cue sheets are classified and arranged in uniform style. Unfortunately, all those issued by the producer are not adaptable for rearrangement unless we alter the subject of the suggestions, which would be unfair to the arranger. However, we have spoken to the producers, and hope that all their cue sheets will soon appear in our department. If there is any assistance which we can offer personally, we will be glad to do so.

Q. I find in the cue sheet for "The Hun Within" four typically German numbers, as follows: "Lorelei," an old German folk-song; the American light opera drinking song, "Old Heidelberg"; the notorious "Wacht am Rhein," and Beethoven's "Egmont." While charmed with the beauty and technique of the play, the production was somewhat spoiled for me by the introduction of these German numbers, although one of them was purposely omitted by the orchestra leader. It seems to me that, while the picture scenes are necessary to the action of the plot in the delineation of German character, the introduction of incidental German cue music is an offence to the ear that might easily be dispensed with, and good old U. S. A. music substituted. What do you think?

A. We are not responsible for the suggestions as embodied in "The Hun Within," as we have no authority to change any of the subject matter found in the cue sheets as presented to us for publication. However, we have seen the picture, and agree with you in your protest. In this particular instance, other selections are possible, and the ones used, although atmospheric, are not absolutely essential. You will note in our columns an article expressing our views of music from German origin.

Q. Will you kindly tell me in your Leader's Service Bureau where I can obtain the song recently published which begins, "Dear land of the free, the land of our birth?"

A. The patriotic song you mention is entitled "When the Bugle Calls for Old Glory." The words are by Walter S. Griffith, and the music by Everett J. Evans. You will be able to procure the music by addressing Mr. Griffith at the Riant Studio, 90 Rogers avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Praises Mutual's Musical Settings.

The Mutual has received many complimentary letters of appreciation on the musical settings made for its productions which are printed on each press-sheet issued. These settings are compiled by Joseph O'Sullivan, Director of Music Service for Mutual, who has incorporated several interesting and helpful suggestions in his cue-sheets.

Max Adamsky, musical director of the Gold Theatre, Chicago, which ran "Love's Law," the first Gail Kane Production, released by Mutual, for two nights, is enthusiastic in his praise of Mutual's musical settings. Mr. Adamsky was soloist of the Chicago Grand Opera Co. for several seasons, and has played with the foremost symphony orchestras in America and Europe.

In a letter to Mutual, Mr. Adamsky says:

"I wish to say that it gave me great pleasure to synchronize the music cues compiled by you for 'Love's Law' which was shown at the Gold Theatre for two nights. The music was of a classic nature, well selected, and fitted the picture perfectly

"Kindly send me, as soon as possible, cue-sheets on 'A Hoosier Romance' and 'His Birthright,' which are booked at the Gold. Also, send me orchestration of 'Nipponese,' the theme which you wrote for 'His Birthright'."

The musical setting made for "His Birthright," the first Haworth Production starring the great Japanese actor, Sessue Hayakawa, contains a theme written by Mr. O'Sullivan "Nipponese," which is printed on an insert sent out with each pressbook of "His Birthright." This is distinctly Japanese in character, being based on fragments of old Japanese themes, an Old Samura Prayer and a Love-Lay supposed to have been indited by a Mikado of the seventh century furnishing material for this theme. It should prove a splendid aid in interpreting the character of action in "His Birthright."

Classified Cue Sheets Receive Praise.

During an itinerary of the Eastern states recently one of the representatives of the Moving Picture World received many favorable comments about our classified cue sheets. Exhibitors and musical directors were enthusiastic over the service rendered through the music department. It is the first time in the history of the industry that a trade journal has attempted to purvey a uniform music service, practical from every standpoint and easily read by the leader.

There were some who complained about the unsuitability of a few of the musical suggestions, but this is really a matter of personal opinion, and we have no authority to change any of the subject matter submitted to us by the producer. Others were loud in praise of the ease with which the classified cue sheets could be filed for future reference.

All this is most gratifying. Our department is for the leader. We wish to join hands with that of the producer that he may receive quick and reliable service, and every exhibitor should see that his leader gets our department, "Music for the Picture."

General Handles Series of Red Cross Subjects

A SERIES of films being made by the American Red Cross Bureau of Pictures and which are being handled by the General Film Company are not alone a revelation of the great work being done by this organization, but in many cases they visualize for us the awful effects of German cruelty. The first of these previously reviewed in our columns was entitled "The Fourth of July in France." These films will be released a week apart and it is the duty of every exhibitor in the country to see to it that his audiences get a chance to see them.

Two of the pictures shown recently to reviewers were "Soothing the Heart of Italy" and "Of No Use to Germany." The former in introducing the picture, tells in subtitle of the low morale which existed among the families of Italians gone to war, through German influence. Many of them were half starved and sleeping in cattle cars. The entry of the American Red Cross marks the beginning of a change which put fresh spirit into the languishing ones. Food was supplied to them and their various needs were met in an efficient way. One of the most important items in the raising of the morale of the Italians was the reestablishment of communication between the Italian soldier and his family. Scenes in Rome, Genoa, Milan and other parts of Italy in which relief is being abundantly supplied by the Red Cross comprise the greater part of this reel.

The following extract from the account of the film "Of No Use to Germany" supplied by the American Red Cross Bureau of Pictures of which W. E. Waddell is the director, tells effectively the story of what the film really visualizes. The picture is a single reel of Evian, outpost of Red Cross Mercy:

"Through the little French town of Evian-les-Bains, at the edge of Lake Geneva on the Swiss border, there has poured back into France from Germany such a stream of wretched and broken exiles as the world has never known.

"Twice a day for over five hundred days Germany has returned long trainloads of pitiful war prisoners—babies, young children, old men and old women who are now of no further use to the Huns.

"These people have been systematically subjected to inhumanities too terrible to narrate. They have been compelled to make bullets to kill their own relatives and to engage in employments which released German soldiers for the front. Some atrocities beggar description. Imagine groups of French women being placed in front of German troops to compel French fathers, brothers and husbands to cease firing!

"When Germany, at last, returns these helpless people there is not a single day's work left in them. Sickly, diseased and in many cases actually dying, they are in truth dumped into France that their care and feeding may further burden their distressed land.

"It is in this condition that they flock into the arms of the American Red Cross, which has reared a great hospital and receiving station at Evian, the gateway always open at Freedom's frontier. It is to brighten the shortened years—often months—of these enfeebled repatries that the American Red Cross has devoted itself with tremendous zeal and success.

"Sixty per cent. of these repatries are children, and most of them are pathetically underfed and ill. American physicians examine these little exiles at the rate of 3,000 a month. Many are found to be doomed to early deaths through exposure and sufferings. Cases of measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria and pneumonia are common. All the little ones with their elders are treated and put on the road to recovery, if possible, before being sent to Red Cross comfort stations further in France.

"'Of No Use to Germany,' a single reel film about to be released by the Red Cross Bureau of Pictures, tells in striking scenes the story of Evian, refuge of homeless France and Belgium. It portrays the wonderful redemption work of the American Red Cross doctors and nurses. It will fire the patriotism and harden the will of Americans to right the terrible wrongs inflicted upon innocent and defenseless people by a barbarism without parallel in the world's history."

Eskay Harris Has Brind Educationals.

The Eskay Harris Film Company, of 126 W. 46th street, are releasing Brind Educationals. This should be interesting news to educators and exhibitors, as the series of pictures which have been made and are being added to by W. L. Brind have been arranged to meet both educational and entertainment requirements. This series will be released in eight split-reels as follows: "All About Bees" and "The Fresh Water Aquarium"; "Beautiful Goldfish" and "My Friend the Ant"; "Denizens of the Deep, No. 1" and "Strange Insect Life"; "Birds of the Orinoco" and "Swat the Fly"; "Denizens of the Deep, No. 2" and "Birds of the Tropics"; "Dog Kennels Afloat" and "Microscopic Life in Water"; "The Mosquito Pest" and "Familiar Reptiles"; "Butterfly Wonders" and "Aquatic Plant Life."

Educational's Film Menu for October.

On the Educational's menu for the month of October will be the special treat of some new Bruce Scenics, with more of Wright's Mexican travels as pieces de resistance and Happy Hooligan and Silk Hat Harry providing the cartoon comedy appetizers. The newest Robert C. Bruce offering is entitled "Tales of the Tall Timber." The scene is laid in the redwoods of northern California, and all the processes of cutting and logging the world's most majestic trees are graphically portrayed. Mr. Bruce also has ready another film of the same general theme, but descriptive of the water transportation of timber.

"Mexico Historic and Architectural" and "Picturesque Industries of Mexico" are handled by George D. Wright in his October Educational releases. Both films have already been shown at the Rothapfel theatres.

What's to See in Pictograph.

The 139th release of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph contains two serious subjects and one in lighter vein. They are "U. S. Employment Bureau," third of the series, "Says Uncle Sam," "Our Newest Possessions," and a cartoon comedy, "Goodrich Dirt, Millionaire."

The first concerns the work of the Department of Labor of the U. S. Government, which has established 400 offices where men and women may register for work and be sure that they will be placed promptly in a position where their best abilities can serve not only themselves but their Government. The second contains a colorful trip through the Virgin Islands, which were purchased by us from Denmark. On these islands as shown in the picture are innumerable places of interest such as boiling lakes, extinct volcanoes, dense jungles and high mountains. The towns and villages where the Indian and negro population live are different from those in other lands as are also the kinds of industry which flourish there. The cartoon comedy is a wonderful stretch of the imagination by Wallace Carlson in which our friend Goodrich

Dirt lives for once surrounded by the luxuries of millionairedom.

Universal's Latest Magazine Program.

Wonders of the insect world are revealed in next week's issue of Universal's Screen Magazine. This picture gives glimpses into the lives of interesting specimens from the tropics. Walking leaves, giant centipedes and other queer creatures are made to show their secret feet and fangs.

Other scenes reveal the scientific measures now being taken to provide for crippled persons. An electrical engineer who lost both his arms, is seen performing high feats of efficiency. The program includes also scenes of the manufacture of glassware. Glass blowers are revealed working with the molten crystal shaping it into beautiful objects. The spectator sees the making of lamp shades, lamp standards and many bulbs for the decoration of the home. "The Revolt of the Toymakers" is the title of a series of pictures. Child actors impersonating the popular stars of current musical shows. The issue closes as usual with some interesting "Miracles in Mud" by Willie Hopkins.

"Unknown Switzerland" (The Lotschenthal).

The second of the Burlingham series of films which is being released through the William L. Sherry Service, was exhibited at the Strand Theatre, New York City, during the week of Sept. 22. This picture was of unusual interest owing to the fact that the views presented in it were photographed in an unfamiliar part of Switzerland known as the Lotschenthal, and situated between the Bernese Alps and the Rhone Valley. Here Swiss peasants live their lives after primitive fashions of years ago. In the heavy winter weather in the region of Kippel these good people industriously weave the cloth from which they afterward make their own clothing. There is evidently no knowledge of the heatless day in the Lotschenthal, for the houses are surrounded with great piles of firewood. Homely scenes about the farm yards of these peasants are attractive and interesting. Herds of goats and cattle are seen grazing on the mountain sides, and no such thing as a wagon road is known of in these parts. The children in the Lotschenthal wear pads on their heads for the purpose of protecting them when they fall, and the soldiers when they mobilize for purposes of parade, as in the annual fete of the Corpus Christi wear uniforms of ancient pattern and decoration. Blatten, the most isolated village in Europe, is also shown. The photography and laboratory work on these films is excellent, and the subtitling instructive and entertaining.

"Official War Review, No. 14" (Pathe)

The great living flag, photographed at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, is the final feature of this number, but one of the best. Other scenes are taken in the American trenches in France, on the Italian front and with British troops. The repairing of enormous guns, views of the shattered city of Ypres and decoration of French heroes are also pictured.

"The Triumph of Transportation" (Pathe).

This industrial subject gives a brief picture of the growth of transportation facilities since the days when manpower alone was used. Ox teams, prairie schooners and other vehicles are shown, but the chief space is devoted to picturing the modern motor truck. Scenes are taken in a factory where the trucks are manufactured and assembled. A brief comic, in keeping with the main idea, closes the reel.

Segal Out After Business in New England Territory

WHEN H. G. Segal was interviewed early in August, upon his taking control of the general management of the American Feature Film Company in Boston, he had "nothing to say," since he felt he could not at that time tell what the results of his efforts would be in his new enterprise. Results from his energetic efforts, however, have come even earlier than he expected, and today the American Feature Film Company is forging ahead.

Upon taking charge Mr. Segal started to reorganize all departments, increasing both his selling and service force to that extent that the exhibitor could not help but receive every possible ounce of service. By a system of specialization and concentration on the individual programs and special features he soon proved to himself that he could show a rapid increase in business, and working along these lines for the past several weeks he is already well on his way to his goal.

H. G. Segal.

The American Feature Film Company had already made a big success with the Jewel production, "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," and even today this production has extra prints busy. When the Screen Classic production, "To Hell With the Kaiser," was released it was watched with interest to see what it would do after the fine combing the territory had had with the previous Kaiser production.

Mr. Segal made a quick start to send the title of "To Hell With the Kaiser" from one end of New England to the other, issuing gummed pennants bearing the title, which could be stuck to the automobile windshields and carried far and wide throughout the territory. Today one sees countless pennants touring everywhere upon the automobiles, business trucks and even the front windows of homes, not alone in the immediate vicinity of Boston, but all over New England.

Mr. Segal first became associated with the film industry ten years ago in New York, when he became connected with the Motion Picture Patents Company. Later he opened an exchange for the Mutual Film Corporation in Buffalo, and later still assumed a responsible position with the World Film Corporation of New York. In 1915 he organized the Globe Feature Film of Boston, which was well under way when it secured the New England franchise of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Gillstrom Goes to Coast to Make Fox Comedies

ARVID E. GILLSTROM, who recently joined the William Fox forces as a director and completed his first picture, will leave for the Pacific Coast in the next ten days as the vanguard of the Fox producing forces who in the near future will leave for Hollywood to make Fox films. The first picture Mr. Gillstrom made for Fox was "Swat the Spy," a comedy-drama, featuring Jane and Katherine Lee. William Fox, after reviewing it, sent for Mr. Gillstrom and entered into a two-year contract with him.

In going to the Pacific Coast Mr. Gillstrom will find himself at home because he directed comedies for a year in Hollywood, and several years ago made his debut in the films on the Pacific Coast. Mr. Gillstrom has just passed the age of thirty.

At one time Mr. Gillstrom was a civil engineer. Later he became a professional baseball player. It was while playing ball in Los Angeles that he became acquainted with film folks, and began work before the camera.

David E. Gilstrom

Mr. Gillstrom is the author of his first Fox film. He is also author of the new story he is directing for Mr. Fox, which likewise features Jane and Katherine Lee.

START SMILEAGE NIGHT FOR SOLDIERS

Boys in Training Camps From Your Own Town Will Get the Proceeds in Liberty Theatre Admissions

A NEW plan for getting Smileage Books into the hands of soldiers who need them, has been proposed to the moving picture exhibitors, and has received the approval of some of the biggest men in the industry. As Smileage coupons are now used in Government theatres in the forty-six largest camps, where something like 500,000 men are always kept for training, it is no surprise that about 1,000 requests for Smileage Books are received daily at the Smileage Division offices at Washington.

The new plan is to run a "Smileage Night" once every month in each theatre. Ten per cent. of the gross receipts on that night are to be devoted to the purchase of Smileage books to go to the men, who come from the same city the theatre is in. That is, the money raised by New York City picture houses will buy Smileage for New York City boys now in camp "over here." The Chicago funds will keep Chicago boys supplied, and Cedar Rapids cash will enable Cedar Rapids soldiers to have a good time in the camp theatres, "on the folks back home."

As over 5,000 cities and towns have established permanent Smileage sales agencies, the entire country is pretty well covered. This additional method of assisting each local Smileage fund should enable the local chairman who had direct charge of the sales in his city to keep all "his boys" supplied with Smileage coupons.

Your Home Town Boys Get Smileage.

Smileage coupons are based on the theory that people back home enjoying a show would be glad to take their khaki clad friends to the show with them, if said friends were around town. As their friends are in camp, Smileage provides the acceptable substitute. The soldier who has a Smileage Book simply exchanges the Smileage coupon for his ticket to the camp theatre, and thanks the person who sent him the book for sending him the seat, as it were, by long distance.

Many cities supplied their men with one-dollar or five-dollar Smileage books when the men went off to camp. Of course the coupons swiftly disappeared, for the average soldier takes his friends in "on Smileage." Then the demands came to the Washington headquarters, asking how to secure additional Smileage. These demands were referred to the cities from which the men came, and each city took care of its own soldiers. The request were coming too fast for most of the local chairmen, so the aid of the picture people comes at a most timely moment.

Each "picture house fund" will be kept separate. The books bought through the funds will all be marked as coming from the various picture houses. Smileage will thus serve as a pleasing reminder of the home town, and the fact that the people back there wanted the men to have as good a time as military regulations permit.

Red Cross Calls for Smileage.

The advantage to the houses which are co-operating under this plan are quite obvious. In addition to the increased attendance which a "Smileage Night" should bring, their name goes on the Smileage Book which goes to a man from their city. This man will be a pretty warm friend of that theatre when he comes back from camp. The intangible good will is well worth cultivating.

Red Cross hospital directors in fifteen camps sent in urgent calls "for as many Smileage Books as you can send me" to the Smileage Division of the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities.

"There are 4,000 troops here from the mountain sections of several southern states and the men have no Smileage. It would do more than anything else to cheer them up. I could use 4,000 books to splendid advantage if you could send them to me at once." That is what one hospital director wrote.

Another asks that fifty books be sent him every week for distribution to soldiers who leave the hospital to report for active service. "Supposing that you were sick," said one hospital director, "and that there was no one to care particularly what happened to you. You would feel mighty lonely.

"Then supposing you were handed a book of theatre tickets with the name of your home town on the cover. Wouldn't that cheer you up? It has cheered up every man I've tried it on."

It is to provide funds to maintain exactly this sort of work that the theatres will give 10 per cent. of their receipts. The feeling is strong that the extra patronage on Smileage Night will not make the entire cost of the donation fall on the house owner.

England to Build Studio on Famous Players' Plans

IN response to a request from the British Ministry of Information in London, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has forwarded a complete set of plans and specifications of its big studio at Fort Lee, which is one of the most perfectly designed and equipped plants of its kind in the country. The plans will be utilized in connection with the erection of a plant in England for the making of propaganda pictures for the British Government.

Negotiations for the co-operation of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation were opened during the past summer between Lord Beaverbrook, of the British Ministry, and C. A. Clegg, manager of the Famous Players Film Company, Ltd., of London. At Lord Beaverbrook's request Mr. Clegg cabled the New York office asking if the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation could furnish a head for each department, both for the construction and maintenance of a studio for producing the propaganda films, the expenses of every nature to be paid by the British Government.

President Zukor immediately cabled Mr. Clegg to advise Lord Beaverbrook that arrangements could be made to lend from the Famous Players-Lasky forces whatever department heads might be requested and that there would be no charge except for the compensation of the men actually engaged, any further organization assistance necessary to be gladly contributed. The request for the studio plans and specifications followed, and they were duly forwarded through the British Bureau of Information in New York.

Death Benefit Paid for World Film Man.

Recently World Pictures insured all of its employes with a prominent life insurance company under a group policy inaugurated by that concern, and this last week the first claim, due to the death of one of those insured, was paid by the company. This claim of $600 was paid to Mrs. Natalie Ostland, widow of Louis Ostland, the veteran World cameraman, who died a week ago. The claim was adjusted in record time after the death of Mr. Ostland. Under this group policy all World employes are insured for amounts varying from $500 to $1,000 without cost to themselves, the World paying the premiums for the entire group.

NATIONAL FILM COMPLETES YEAR'S TASK

"Tarzan of the Apes," "The Romance of Tarzan" and "The Still Small Voice" Fulfill Promise

WITH the sale of "The Romance of Tarzan" to the First National Exhibitors Circuit and the completion of the Walthall production "And A Still Small Voice," the National Film Corporation of America, has finished its self-allotted task of three superfeatures a year. In February, 1918, "Smiling Bill" Parsons, while in New York for the opening of "Tarzan of the Apes" at the Broadway Theatre, said: "If 'Tarzan of the Apes' will prove the success we anticipate, I will positively make three superfeatures this year, 'Tarzan' being the first." This was before "Smiling Bill" thought of making Capitol Comedies with himself as a star.

The success of "Tarzan" being assured by its phenomenal run at the Broadway Theatre, Parsons gave orders to Production Manager Bernstein to prepare for the next superfeatures, "The Romance of Tarzan," which is a sequal to "Tarzan of the Apes" and tells the romance of the wild man of the jungle and the pampered daughter of America's aristocracy. The First National Exhibitors' Circuit purchased this also before it was given a public showing and present public indications give promise of breaking the phenomenal records of "Tarzan of the Apes."

Parsons was diligently working on his Capitol Comedies, which were contracted for by Goldwyn and were to be released every two weeks, with directors Bess Meredith and Wilfred Lucas on "The Romance of Tarzan" and directors Louis William Chandet and Al Santell on Capitol Comedies.

The little studio at Gower and Santa Monica became a bee hive of activity, with the completion of 14th comedy "Smiling Bill" made a trip East and stopped at all of the large towns. The reception accorded him in all of the houses using Capitol comedies convinced him more than ever that the clean, wholesome comedies, in which he appeared, were the long sought for laugh producers the industry was in need of.

Parson's promise that the National would make three superfeatures during the year still lacked one feature for fullfilment. Henry Walthall's announcement of his retirement from pictures to enter the ranks of the speaking stage, gave opportunity for the third superfeature. Walthall had been proclaimed by press and public as the greatest actor of the screen and it seems psychological that his retirement from the screen should come at a time when the National was seeking a vehicle as their third superfeature for 1918. Mr. Walthall was finally convinced that his farewell to the screen would not be complete without his appearing in one more production that would be bigger than anything he had done yet and would be specially written for him.

William A. Parsons.

Through W. M. Aronson, a contract was made with Walthall and Bert Brackin was secured as the director. "And a Still Small Voice" is an exceptional appropriate production for Mr. Walthall and the finished product more than comes up to the expectation of Production Manager Bernstein. During Parsons' trip East he acted as his own scout for an enginue whose popularity would warrant putting her into five reel features. Dainty Billie Rhodes, who for several years had appeared in Strand comedies, was finally hit upon as the logical one, and her first production, "The Girl of My Dreams," gives promise of a young "Bernhardt of the screen."

Billie Rhodes

In an interview with Parsons he said: "Watch our superfeature that will start our 1919 year. In point of daring and originality it has never been equaled.

The man who is writing the story has been on it off and on for over a year and it appeals to me because it will appeal to every man, woman and child. I am making pictures for everyone, not a select few and so far the public has had no occasion to disagree with us. Our first superfeature for 1919, which will be started very soon, will far exceed anything we have ever done and will startle the world. Bernstein has been ordered to spare no expense and you know what that means with him. We intend to make a record in this industry by producing only 100 per cent. pictures—100 per cent in production and 100 per cent. in receipt getting."

Death of Ralph Camp Goldwyn's Boston Manager

RALPH CAMP, who since last June had been manager of the Boston branch of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, died in Boston at 5 o'clock Monday, September 23, of pneumonia, following Spanish influenza. He had been ill less than a week.

Mr. Camp's illness did not seem alarming until a few hours before his death, and his mother, Mrs. Anna Camp, and his sister, Mrs. Charles Lafayette Jones, both of New York, were on their way to Boston to care for him when word of his passing away reached the Goldwyn home office.

The death of Ralph Camp cut off a career rich in promise of big success. In scarcely more than a year in motion pictures this lovable young man, barely thirty-five years old, won his way from the bottom to very near the top in the selling end of the game. In a short time he became the star salesman of Goldwyn's New York exchange, revealing such marked ability that he was promoted in six months to the managership of the Boston office.

Ralph Camp leaves an uncountable number of friends. To know him was to love him. Hundreds of theatre owners and managers in Brooklyn, his early field, and in his own New England territory knew him as a square man and a fighter. The funeral probably will be in New York.

H. M. OSBORN JOINS GENERAL.

After four years of absence from General Film Company, H. M. Osborn, a well-known exchange man, has returned to that company, the announcement being made that he is the new appointee as manager of the Pittsburgh branch. Mr. Osborn, during his absence from General, was with Pathe in Philadelphia and Washington.

Helen Gibson, Universal's daring woman player, is the latest temporary war widow in the Hollywood film colony. Her husband, "Hoot" Gibson, has joined the tanks. He was seen with Harry Carey in a number of pictures, and played in the Vitagraph serial, "The Woman in the Web."

Goldwyn Appoints Sherwin a Special Representative

AFTER a record of eight years as dramatic critic of the New York Globe, Louis Sherwin has retired from that newspaper to become special press representative of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, thereby bringing to this big producing organization still another man of reputation.

Mr. Sherwin, long known in Los Angeles and Denver journalism, came to New York twelve years ago, and from the day that he joined the Globe attracted the attention of a large metropolitan clientele. He is an able and always has been a fearless writer; a man of force and distinction who has insisted upon maintaining his own viewpoints with a disregard for the hackneyed routine of mere play reviewing.

In the Goldwyn organization Mr. Sherwin will devote the larger part of his time to the development of the company's features and news for the big daily newspapers of the country and for the important general magazines. It is the feeling of Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn, that his organization should offer the newspapers and magazines feature material prepared by the ablest writer who can be enlisted in the service of Goldwyn. Mr. Sherwin's personal work, advice and suggestions will amplify the fine work done by Dwight S. Perrin, who will continue, as director of publicity, to devote the major portion of his time to the trade press section of the company's publicity, which he has handled with ability for the last year.

Norbert Lusk will continue to handle special features for the motion picture "fan" magazines, as well as to develop material for the exploitation department and press sheets of the company work that he has heretofore done.

In addition to these facilities for the general promotion of Goldwyn's stars and productions, the organization maintains a service department, under the direction of Hunt Stromberg. This branch of the work is for the intensive development of exhibitor aids and exploitation; the devising of means for emphasizing the drawing power and appeal of pictures for individual exhibitors.

September 29 Attractions at the New York Theatres

STRAND—Fred Stone in a screen release, "The Goat," produced by Artcraft, made his picture debut at the Strand the week of September 29. A number of his acrobatic stunts are introduced in the picture, which was directed by Donald Crisp. A Burlingham travel scenic of Switzerland, the Allied War Review and the Topical Review were also shown. A scene from "Tales of Hoffman" and a solo by Herbert Waterous were the vocal numbers.

RIVOLI—Dorothy Gish in "Battling Jane," a Paramount picture, was the leading player at the Rivoli. She takes the part of a little waif who drifts into a Maine village. A scenic called "Raindrops," the Animated Pictorial, the Allied War Review and a comedy completed the screen program.

RIALTO—William S. Hart in "The Border Wireless," a war story that involves a gang of Mexican mauraders and two Hun spies, was the screen star at the Rialto. Wanda Hawley is the heroine of this Artcraft picture. Other screen numbers were a Happy Hooligan comedy, "A Bold Bad Man," the Animated Magazine, a comedy and an educational. The soloists were Josephine Forsythe and Martin Brefel.

EIGHTY-FIRST STREET—First half, J. Warren Kerrigan in "Prisoners of the Prince." Second half, James K. Hackett and Effie Shannon in "Ashes of Love."

FORTY-FOURTH STREET—Griffith's "Hearts of the World."

BROADWAY—Harold Lockwood in "Pal's First."

William L. Sherry and His Official Family.

Madlaine Traverse Signs to Play in Excel Pictures

WHEN at the beginning of this season William Fox announced the inauguration of a policy, whereby he would produce a group of productions under the brand of Excel Pictures, he declared that the stars in this group would be Peggy Hyland, Virginia Pearson, Jane and Katherine Lee and other well known players of recognized ability and drawing power. The announcement now comes from the Fox offices that another player has been engaged. She is Madlaine Traverse, one of the ablest feminine stars now playing before the camera, and noted for a distinctive ability to portray strong dramatic roles. Her pictures, to be released under the Excel group, will be the work of authors of recognized ability, and will be marked by strength of story and lavishness of setting.

For the production of her first picture the new Fox star has just left for Hollywood. What this first picture will be has not yet been announced, but it is understood that a story unique in plot and conception has been obtained for her. Neither has it been announced who will direct Miss Traverse's first picture.

Miss Traverse, in becoming a Fox star, brings to her work the benefit of a long and varied and successful experience on both stage and screens. She played the part of Mme. Caillaux in the great all-star Fox production of "The Caillaux Case," released this month. Those who have seen this picture were struck by the power and the discriminating sense of values which Miss Traverse revealed in delineating the character of the wife of the former Premier of France.

Following the production of "The Caillaux Case," Miss Traverse organized a producing company of her own, The Madlaine Traverse Film Corporation. The offer made by William Fox, however, was of such a nature that Miss Travers felt constrained to abandon her producing venture and join the Fox stars.

Besides playing in "The Caillaux Case" and other well known productions, Miss Traverse has had prominent parts in several stage successes.

UNIVERSAL MAKES SAILORS' STORY.

So great was the popularity of "Around the Clock with a Rookie," that the Universal has arranged to release a similar subject in behalf of Uncle Sam's Navy. The newest picture is "Around the Clock with a Sailor," which will be issued the week of October 6.

This film is a two-reeler, where as the rookie subject was only in one reel. It is full of bright scenes depicting the experience of the sailors.

Two well known players take the leading roles. They are Otto Kruger and Helen MacKeller. Mr. Kruger was in training for an officer's commission, but gladly made arrangements to serve in the film.

The war service of the Y. M. C. A. is strongly treated in the picture. It was produced by H. E. Hancock and photographed by George Coudert.

Minneapolis Exchanges Combine on Loan Films

WITH 200 prints of Government film coming to Minneapolis for distribution in Northwest territory September 25 to October 19 exchange managers of this city held several conferences last week and decided upon a plan which will keep all of the Liberty Loan pictures working and avoid duplication.

The exchange managers agreed to submit schedules of their bookings to each other to avoid confusion and prevent the sending of several Government films to any one community at the same time. With only twenty-four days in which to show the Government films it was agreed that in order to get the best possible results a systematic plan of distribution would have to be adopted. E. R. Pearson, manager of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit of the Northwest, anticipating confusion, was sponsor for the idea, and called several meetings of his brother managers.

Harry Helwig, former booker for Metro, and more recently with Universal, was selected to work out the bookings for all of the Northwest managers, whose joint action has set a precedent in the moving picture industry of the country.

Thirty-six subjects, with five prints to a subject, are coming to Minneapolis exchanges. These must be distributed in a field of 1,200 theatres located in Minnesota, the Dakotas, part of Wisconsin and Iowa. In the twenty-four-day period it will be possible to have a maximum of 4,800 showings, according to Manager Pearson. "We're going to make every film work every day, and we will attempt to cover every city, town, village and hamlet that it will be possible for us to reach."

A regular circuit for the Government film has been mapped out, and they will be shown from one town to another. The moving picture men of the Northwest, fully awakened to the gigantic task of raising six billions more for Uncle Sam's war forces, have determined to get together and put their shoulders to the task in a united effort in the interest of democracy.

"We want to bring the credit to the moving picture industry which it deserves," said Manager Pearson. "We want to show what a vital force it is in the interest of the nation's welfare. We want to show what a truly essential industry it is."

Exchange managers, in the interest of the plan to systematically handle the Government film, have sent letters of instruction to exhibitors, telling them how to forward the pictures and urging their co-operation so that a maximum of showings may be reported at the conclusion of the drive.

Third Official Film Announced.

Director Charles S. Hart announces that the material for "Under Four Flags," the third United States official feature war picture, is rapidly being culled from the thousands of feet of American, British, French and Italian film that is being sent from overseas, and that this will be in many respects the most comprehensive picture issued by the Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information.

The release date of the new picture has not yet been announced, but it will probably have its first showing in New York early in November. George Bowles, manager of feature films, has already tentatively arranged a route covering several weeks, during which the picture will be exploited by the direct representatives of the Division of Films. It will then be released to the exhibitors throughout the United States.

Selznick Secretary Now Foreign Department Manager

MISS EDITH KOCH, recently appointed manager of Select Pictures' Foreign Department, has been on a brief business visit to Montreal, the first trip which she has made in the new capacity to which she has just been elevated.

Everyone who knows Lewis J. Selznick, president of Select Pictures Corporation, knows Miss Koch, who for the past year and a half has been his private secretary. During this period Miss

Miss Edith Koch.

Koch has earned an enviable reputation among the many big business men of the picture industry with whom she has come in contact for her astuteness and diplomatic tact, which have been much admired. Miss Koch will continue to act as personal secretary to the head of Select Pictures Corporation, at the same time exercising her duties as manager of the foreign department.

In an industry where every element seems to be thrust continuously into the limelight Miss Koch has remained a widely known but little heard of young woman. Being thoroughly conversant with the many ramifications of Mr. Selznick's business and personal affairs, she has been able to act with an initiative which has made her sought and consulted by persons in high places, but always she has stayed in the background. Now that Miss Koch has been officially put in charge of Select's foreign sales, she will have to endure more of the white light of publicity.

Influenza Decree Closes Many New England Houses

BOSTON, due to the large increase in new cases and deaths resulting from Spanish influenza, through an official order signed by Health Commissioner William C. Woodward and approved by Andrew J. Peters, mayor of Boston, closed all theatres in that city, to remain so from midnight September 26 until 7 p. m. October 7, unless the order is altered or extended. Similar action has been taken by officials in nearly every city and town in Massachusetts.

At a meeting in Boston September 26, which was attended by members of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League, Association of Theatre Managers of Boston, and managers of attractions now playing in that city the following statement was issued:

"The managers of the theatres and attractions now playing in Boston readily and unanimously voice their willingness to obey the authorities to close all theatres and places of amusement during the period between Thursday midnight, September 26, and Sunday midnight, October 6.

"The present calamity of the influenza plague which inspired the authorities to this action calls for drastic treatment, and though we regret exceedingly the deprivation of employment which this suspension inflicts upon so many working under us, there is only cheerful compliance with orders to be considered. We adhere to our belief expressed to the officials of the Board of Health that the theatre is the least harmful of all places of gathering and claim that the providing of amusements for the people would appear to be most necessary in these threatening times that portend panicky conditions. But though we submit cheerfully to this dictum, we claim the constitutional right to protest should any further legislation be aimed at our proper conduct of a legitimate business, which has equal rights with institutions of trade to exist. Therefore all local theatres will remain closed until Monday, October 6, but the sale of tickets for future performances will begin at the box office on Thursday morning, October 3."

Palmer Plan Arouses Interest.

Frederick Palmer, head of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, Los Angeles, says that the encouragement given his plan by many members of the industry is convincing testimony that the Palmer Plan of Photoplay Writing, of which he is the founder, is solving the problem of suitable stories for the screen.

The Palmer corporation have issued an attractive booklet as a souvenir of their enterprise, wherein the plan of bringing about a better and more complete co-operation between the author and producer is described in detail, and how the writer of screen stories may keep in touch with the needs of the directors and secure the quickest recognition for their efforts is fully set forth.

Mr. Palmer says that one of the noticeable things developed in recent months is the fact that interest in photoplay writing has been inspired in the minds of the better class of writers and picture enthusiasts, and that the stories of today are in sharp contrast to the wildly impossible scripts going the rounds of the studios a while back.

PATHE SALES FORCE HOLDS CONVENTION

"Save and Serve" Is Keynote of Sessions of Managers, Who Gather from All Over Country

ONE of the events of the week of September 23 to 28 was the holding of a convention of the sales forces of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., at the home offices in New York. All branch managers had been called in to talk over questions of policy brought up by war emergencies. "Save and Serve" was the apt term applied to the meeting, for the business in hand concerned largely the necessity of getting the greatest possible service out of forces which had been materially reduced through the calling to Government service of many salesmen. How to get topnotch service out of what was left brought about considerable discussion during the sessions, which covered the greater part of two days.

Of course, there was some pleasure interspersed with business, so that most of the twenty-four hours of each day were made much of by the visiting branch managers. A trip to the Pathe studio at Jersey City was one of the pleasant events of the convention.

Convention Ends With Dinner.

A fitting closing for the convention was a dinner at Delmonico's, where all the branch managers and a few invited guests gathered about 8 o'clock Thursday evening, and partook of a very sufficient and satisfying banquet. Those present were, Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager; F. C. Quinby, sales manager; E. O. Brooks, exploitation manager; Frank Duffy, general representative, and Branch Managers H. A. Bugie, Atlanta; J. W. Hill, Jr., Dallas; F. B. Rogers, Chicago; C. Stombaugh, Minn apolis; W. E. Raynor, New York; S. W. Hand, Boston; E. B. Tate, Los Angeles; E. W. Dustin, St. Louis; E. O. Child, San Francisco; B. Moran, Albany; G. W. Fuller, Pittsburgh; F. B. Chase, Cincinnati; A. M. Holah, Cleveland; F. B. Pickrel, Oklahoma City; G. Ames, Philadelphia; J. B. Dumestre, New Orleans; E. R. Champion, Washington; J. E. Storey, Kansas City; W. E. Scott, Denver; R. L. White, Omaha; L. O. Lukan, Seattle; W. A. Calkins, Salt Lake City; R. S. Schader, Indianapolis; F. W. Gebhardt, Detroit; L. A. Sheridan, Des Moines; A. Reinlieb, Newark; J. W. Fuller, Charlotte; C. A. Taylor, Buffalo; W. A. Aschmann, Milwaukee; P. L. Carroll, Spokane.

Among members of the Pathe staff present were, W. C. Smith, P. A. Parsons, L. E. Franconi, Tom North, George Seitz, studio director, and Wilson Gillets, scenario editor. The trade papers were represented by H. A. Hallett, of the Morning Telegraph; W. A. Johnson, of the News; Leslie Mason, of the Trade Review; H. A. Wyckoff, of the Dramatic Mirror, and James L. Hoff, of the Moving Picture World.

The principal speaker of the evening was Mr. Brunet, whose address was read by Gilson Willets, preceded by an introduction by Mr. Brunet himself. It follows in part:

Speech of Mr. Brunet.

This council of war with our sales force was held for discussion of the ways and means of effecting a maximum of serving and saving of the kind by which the cinema corps, as a unit, can help win the war. We have told one another how we have served and what we have saved up to now, and we have given one another helpful suggestions for serving still further and for saving still more. That's our job, gentlemen—the job of war-saving and war-serving. And that's how we got the name for this convention of our thirty field marshals from thirty picture battle front, namely, the Pathe Serve and Save Convention.

Our sales force is our field army. The men who distribute our war reels are the men who keep the war wheels turning on the firing line of the cinema unit. The war over there will be won by force of sales—sales of our film of patriotism—sales of our features of propaganda. For these war pictures inspire the nation to serve and save in money and materials and man power over here in order to save lives over there.

Every time you of the sales force place a patriotic reel of celluloid in front of the public eye you help to slay the Hunnish dragon of Bloodlust, Landlust and World Destruction. Helpful propaganda of world reconstruction is our ammunition. Celluloid reels are our cannon. And the men of the sales force are the gunners that fire the shells of patriotic service into the ranks of slackerism and help to spur the nation to carry on and on to victory.

"Keep the Home Wheels Turning"—that's our slogan.

Serving and Saving Not Optional.

We must not "kid" ourselves, gentlemen, that this matter of serving and saving in the motion picture field is a matter optional with us. Nor is it a matter of volunteering such service and such saving according to our convenience. We've got to do this serving and saving stuff at our greatest inconvenience and do it cheerfully, even if inconveniently. We've got to serve and save in our industry, gentlemen—or we've got to goose-step.

And now—just a brief review, gentlemen, of our own campaign against the kultur of barbarism: Serve and save. What exactly do we in the motion picture field save? And how exactly do we serve? I will mention saving first. Because the very act of saving in itself constitutes an act of service. And he serves best who also saves.

The slogan, "Business as usual," is a "busted" theory. We're not doing business as usual. We're doing business in an absolutely unusual way and under unusual conditions. We're doing business the best we can do it consistently, with war serving and war saving.

We have saved material needed for the war by cutting down the extent of our product and by shortening our program. We have achieved this reduction in output and this abbreviating of program by producing quality rather than quantity.

In considering the kinds of saved material that will help win the war take the matter of coal—of fuel. Countless thousands of tons of coal will be saved this winter by the transfer of moving picture companies from the East Coast to the sunshine and warmth of Southern California; Pathe companies being among the first to be thus transferred. We have already sent to California all our companies, excepting one. And our lightless Eastern studios bear testimony of the coal we have saved for greater use in keeping ever in motion the bridge of ships across the Atlantic.

But cutting down our production to quality only, we have effected a tremendous saving in the use of chemicals that can be used in the conduct of the war. We are saving also gasoline—as requested by the Government—by cutting down to the minimum the use of motor cars in making pictures and by refraining from making pictures that call for use of aeroplanes. For the army needs gasoline more than we do.

Have Declared War on Waste.

And then the elimination of waste. In our home office and in every one of our thirty branch offices we have declared war; declared war on leakage of money, on waste of materials, and on over-production. We're on the job of fighting extravagance and halting the profiteer. We're on the job of serving and saving one hundred per cent.

The first thing we did was to eliminate the cash waste. A wasted dollar, like an idle dollar, is a slacker dollar. We have converted our slacker dollars into patriotic dollars through reduction in the amount of purchase of material that can be used in the conduct of the war. We of Pathe have cut out the fuss, feathers, furbelows, trimmings and vanities of our business. We have eliminated the merely ornamental stuff and are down to the rock bed of utility. Every dollar wasted on unessential material seems one dollar's worth less of bullets and shells for shattering kultur.

On the other hand, every reel of patriotic film that turns in the projection rooms of the country is a war wheel turning for the victorious armies of Liberty.

And now, a word as how we serve.

In every war drive we play our part not only as couriers spreading the news, not only as a nation-wide bureau of intelligence for twenty-millions of the public every day and night, but also as heavy contributors to the drives in the form of cash and personal service. Thus we have helped the drives for War Savings Stamps, the drives for the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A., the drives for Liberty Loans. And in every one of these drives each reel of our turning in a projection room is a driving wheel in the great engine of war.

We assist the drives, too, in supplying slides and space in our weekly topical films and other films; space devoted to information and inspiration relating to the drive of the hour. We serve by inspiring the service of others. We serve by issuing films that are in themselves an inspiration to the public to jump in and do something.

Helping Sustain National Morale.

We serve by helping to sustain the national morale. Our news weekly is a booster. All the war films we issue are boosters. Our advertising and publicity hoosts. And when you boost morale, you boost victory. It is often said that we are behind our sublime Allies in their determination to win the war, meaning that we are backing them up. We must make the propaganda in our films show that we are not behind our Allies in this great work, not merely backing them up, but are shoulder to shoulder with them, crying not only "Carry On," but crying "Come On."

We serve even in our advertising and publicity, in much of which there is a patriotic note. When we issued "The Fourth of July in France" we put out an artistic Liberty boosting poster that was and still is to thousands a reminder that doing one's bit is not enough, but that each one must do his utmost. We serve because every time one of the sales force puts into motion in a projection room a patriotic war reel he reels the Huns back another step toward Berlin.

Every Man's Job to Save and Serve.

To save and serve is every man's job, gentlemen, and it's a man's size job. It's our job, the entire nation's job, to serve and save. And you are here tonight, all of you, because you are all on the job. And because you are on this job, gentlemen of the sales force, you are helping the whole world to keep the flags of free peoples flying at the mastheads of Liberty.

Our save and serve convention is nearly over. Tonight we adjourn. And the thirty field marshals of our sales force will return to the first line trenches of the moving picture battlefields heartened in serving and encouraged in saving as the result of this serve and save convention. Gentlemen of the sales force, in your service and your saving may you, each and all, win a place in the cinema's legion of honor.

And now, gentlemen, here are many colors, yet those who serve under them serve but one cause. These are the colors that have never run. And as long as you and I are properly on the great big job of serving and saving each in our own way, and each to his limit of self-denial and sacrifice, none of these colors will ever run.

Gentlemen, I give you our colors, and the colors of our valiant Allies and the armies and navies that keep the colors from running, and the Commander-in-Chief of our own army and navy—President Wilson!' The toast was drunk standing and with hearty cheers.

Among the other speakers were S. Stanwood Menken, organizer of the National Security League; Louis Aubert, High Commissioner of the French Government; Captain G. McLeod Baynes, managing director of the British Official Government Pictures, Inc., and Edmund Ratisbonne.

Louis Innerarity, secretary of the Pathe Exchange, was toastmaster.

Following the last speaker the diners sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" and the "Marseillaise," Tom North presiding at the piano.

The festivities closed with the running of a Lloyd comedy and pictures taken of a visit to the studio in Jersey City of the branch managers Thursday afternoon.

On the Trail

PERCY WELLS, of Wilmington, N. C., was in New York the week of September 22. We met him at one of the big hotels. He said he was in Washington, D. C., and ran over here on special business and at the same time to get a moderate night's lodging. He says things are booming in the South. At Wilmington he owns the five theatres in the city, and property has increased in value in leaps and bounds. Shipbuilding has brought a large number of workmen to the city, and he felt safe in saying that its population would grow from 30,000 to 50,000 within the next year, judging from the way it is filling up now. He expected to leave town the day we saw him, and he wished us to tell his many friends that he regretted his inability to see them during his hurried and unexpected visit.

Frederick Thompson, whom we met on Broadway last Friday, told us he is no longer directing at the Vitagraph studio. He resigned on September 21. Mr. Thompson is a member of the Moving Picture Directors' Association and a member of the Players' Club.

Mabel Green, who was an ingenue at the old Lubin studio in Philadelphia, is now hostess of the Kamakura Room, Hotel Wallick, New York City.

A. V. Anderson, who was formerly in Atlanta, Ga., as manager of the Pathe branch office, is now in New York preparatory to going to South America.

The big eats of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers of the N. A. M. P. I. is to be held on Friday evening, October 11, to be known as the Victory Dinner. This dinner was originally planned two or three months ago. It was finally decided to hold it on the foregoing date, during the Motion Picture Exposition, to be held at Madison Square Garden, New York, October 5-13. It will cost $6 a plate to enjoy the feast of eats, oratory and good fellowship to be served. W. W. Irwin is chairman of the committee of arrangements.

Wally Van, secretary of the Directors' Association, formerly of the Vitagraph players and directors, is all set for Los Angeles. He expected to go September 15, but would be on his way by the 28th.

A. H. Schwartz, who is interested in the Brevoort, Linden, Rialto, Oxford and West End theatres of Brooklyn, has purchased the Garden Theatre, Richmond Hill, L. I.

Cary Wilson, formerly associated with the First National, is now affiliated with other interests.

The Moving Picture World has completed arrangements for a booth on the main floor at the Motion Picture Exposition at Madison Square Garden, October 5-13, where a representative will be continually in attendance.

Virginia to Show Health Films.

A Simplex machine has been selected by the West Virginia State Department of Health for use on a railway coach, which has been specially fitted up for touring that state. Periodic trips will be made from one end of West Virginia to the other, and lectures will be given regarding hygiene, tuberculosis and water and general sanitary conditions. Pictures are to be shown to illustrate the talks.

The Simplex machine has been fitted up in such a manner that films can be shown inside or outside of the car.

McGowan Is Not Superstitious.

Jack McGowan must have been conspicuous by his absence when the gods handed out superstition, for that Universal director who is creating Eddie Polo's new serial of the sawdust ring, "The Lure of the Circus," defied fate happened, he used stage No. 13 and shot on Friday, the thirteenth of September by starting in on episode thirteen, which bore the official number in the Universal accounting department of 3013. And just to show that he didn't care what thirteen scenes and then stopped.

Jewel Celebrates Its First Year of Business

JEWEL PRODUCTIONS, Inc., celebrated last week the completion of its first year of business. The actual anniversary occurred August 26, but official notice of the event was delayed until all the records could be compiled.

H. M. Berman, sales manager of Jewel, commemorated the birthday with a review of the company's achievements. His records traced the career of many big productions, and the story in each case was illustrated with figures representing thousands of dollars in profits.

"Two things have been established by the success of Jewel," said Mr. Berman. "One is the fact that the public wants crackerjack, big pictures and is willing to pay for them. The other is that human nature is the same in Spuedunkt as it is in New York. That second point is important, because a lot of producers, distributors and exhibitors have been operating on the theory that small town people somehow are different from those who dwell where high buildings grow.

"Jewel has proved beyond doubt that big feature pictures can be made a success in small towns. It has absolutely emancipated the small town exhibitor from the fear of tackling a big proposition. Jewel pictures have made money for those who dared."

"There are thirteen high class productions under the Jewel banner, all of which have won their laurels," said Mr. Berman. "Two other big features will be released Nov. 4. They are 'The Yellow Dog,' and 'Borrowed Clothes.'

"I have found in my correspondence that these pictures have developed a new science in publicity work and lobby decorating by the exhibitor."

Mr. Berman demonstrated this by showing novelty cards which Jewel exhibitors had distributed to advertise "For Husbands Only," and by photographs showing window decorations employed for the same picture in Brooklyn.

There was a letter from W. E. Smith, who signed himself manager, janitor, operator and publicity man for the People's Theatre, at Stanfield, Oregon. Mr. Smith announced that with a population given (for advertising purposes) as 400, and with a seating capacity of 150, he took in $178.50. He said he was conducting the theatre as a side line, and had never paid over $25 for a picture. He gambled $100 on "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin" for the foregoing results.

"This is the only show for which I ever had to use the S. R. O. sign," wrote Mr. Smith. "The crowd didn't pay attention to that sign, but continued to come until they were packed like sardines. I charged 25 and 50 cents admission, and everyone was pleased with the show, many of them attending the second showing."

Blackton Engages Count Pompeo.

J. Stuart Blackton has engaged Count Pompeo Pieri, the Italian artist, to design the sets for "The Battle Cry of Liberty," the superfeature which he has announced for production immediately after "The Common Cause" is launched.

It was at Mr. Blackton's suggestion that Count Pieri became interested in motion pictures and his engagement for work on "The Battle Cry of Liberty" is the result. This feature, which is to be produced by Commodore Blackton from a story written by Charles T. Dazey and himself, will be the successor of the producer's earlier success, "The Battle Cry of Peace." "The Common Cause," the current Blackton special under the auspices of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission, is rapidly nearly completion and date of distribution by Vitagraph will shortly be announced.

Franklin Signs to Direct Norma Talmadge

SIDNEY A. FRANKLIN, who has directed Miss Norma Talmadge's last three pictures—"The Safety Curtain," "Her Only Way" and "The Forbidden City"—has just signed a year's contract with the Norma Talmadge Film Corporation to direct eight pictures for the star. Mr. Franklin is in all probability the youngest director in the business as he has just passed his twenty-fourth birthday, yet he is one of the most widely sought after, and has to his credit many of the most successful productions of the screen. With his brother, Chester Franklin, now a sergeant in the United States Army, he directed jointly for several years, and the "Franklins" were a famous duo, whose name on a main title always gave a guarantee of direction of the highest order.

Mr. Franklin went into the motion picture industry as an "extra" at the Selig studio in Los Angeles. Both he and his brother did extra work and bits for a time at the Selig establishment. At that time the Triangle Film Corporation had just been organized, and David W. Griffith, on the alert for good directors for his Fine Arts Producing Company, engaged the Franklins to direct for that organization. While there they turned out a number of productions, but were most successful with those starring Miss Talmadge, including "Going Straight" and "Children in the House."

Later William Fox brought the Franklins East to do a series of kiddie pictures with children, and under the Fox banner the Franklins turned out such hits as "Jack and the Beanstalk" and "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp." After their Fox engagement Chester joined the colors and Sidney was temporarily engaged to do three pictures for Miss Talmadge. Each of these three was a big hit, and the result was the year's contract just entered into between the Talmadge corporation and Director Franklin.

General's Pioneer Joins Army.

The loss of the Boston branch's oldest employe, and probably the oldest employe of General Film, has been regretfully announced to the headquarters of the company by Manager J. D. Levine in reporting the resignation of E. H. Warren. The severance of this long connection was due to a call for army service. Mr. Warren has been in the Boston office since 1909, and was in fact an employe of the exchange when it was taken over by General Film in 1910. He holds the palm for length of continuous service with the company as well as for length of continuous service in one exchange.

Famous Players to Refilm Former Screen Successes

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has started a movement that bids fair to establish a new field in the world of motion pictures. It is the refilming of former screen successes. Just as on the stage there are frequently given with new appointments and improved facilities in stagecraft revivals of plays that have been unusually successful, so it would seem this will be the trend of the big motion picture producers. Within a month the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has announced the refilming of two productions that several years ago were staged before the camera, "The Squaw Man" and "Arizona." The new version of "The Squaw Man" is now being staged by Cecil B. De Mille, who incidentally filmed this well known play for the first time some four years ago. "Arizona," now being produced by Douglas Fairbanks as his latest starring vehicle for Artcraft, was pictured several years ago by Augustus Thomas, author of the famous play.

In connection with this idea of retaking pictures already screened, Jesse L. Lasky said: "With the improved facilities for motion picture production, subjects that were filmed years ago can now be put on in such a way that the two photoplays will be about as different as night and day. Take for instance, 'The Squaw Man.' In the original film production there was possibly no tremendous attempt to secure that absolute realism so essential in a modern photoplay, though Cecil B. De Mille has always been a stickler for accuracy and perfection in detail. But that was four years and more ago. Four years in the film industry is equivalent to twenty in any other field of art or business, practically. The facilities were extremely limited, as compared with the present equipment. And yet the original of 'The Squaw Man' was a good picture for its time. It was better in many respects than some of the pictures of today. Nevertheless, it will be most interesting to those who have seen the first version to witness the second and draw comparisons. The fact that Mr. De Mille will have staged both film versions of 'The Squaw Man' adds interest to this new picturization."

A HANDSOME BOOKLET.

Vivian M. Moses has produced for Select Pictures an unusually attractive brochure announcing that company's plans for the current season. It is sixteen pages and cover, and as a sample of the printer's art it ranks high. Better still is the text, which simply and forcefully puts forward Select's claims to consideration. Included is a series of portraits of the stars worthy of preservation, for the art work is above the average. The entire production suggests solid, dignified achievement; which is what Mr. Moses aimed at.

Final Hodkinson Appointments.

This week finds a Hodkinson service represented in every General Film Exchange, except Seattle, by a special representative of the W. W. Hodkinson Corp. The last appointments to be made were C. Henschel in Philadelphia, E. C. Moore in Pittsburgh, H. C. Simpson in Atlanta, and W. O. Edmonds in San Francisco.

SELECT ROUNDS OUT ITS FIRST YEAR

Seventeen of the Original Twenty-one Branch Executives Still Remain with the Company

WITH the approach of the first week in October Select Pictures organization rounds out its first year as a releasing concern. For it was at the beginning of October that the first Select Picture was presented to the country. This was "The Moth," with which Norma Talmadge started her series of phenomenal Select successes.

Altogether October is a large month in Select's calendar, for it was also during this month that the first phase of Select's business organization was brought into shape. The corporation started business August 6, 1917, with sales branches throughout the United States to the number of eleven, which, before the week was out, had been increased to thirteen.

General Manager Arthur S. Kane took hold of the eleven original offices on August 6, and immediately opened exchanges in Boston and Washington. Bringing to the situation methods which he had formulated and proved in the past, Mr. Kane bent his energies to establishing Select's sales organization upon the high plane which it today occupies. Aiding Mr. Kane in getting the new machine going smoothly was John J. Rotchford, who joined the Select forces early in September, 1917, becoming assistant general manager. Mr. Rotchford had assisted Mr. Kane in 1914 in establishing the exchange system of Pathe Exchange, Inc. It is interesting to recall that when Mr. Kane left Pathe Freres, in October of that year, it was to go as assistant general manager with Lewis J. Selznick, now Selects' president, in his then newly organized World Film Corporation.

Select on September 1 took over the Chicago exchange, now in charge of Fred C. Aiken, and on October 1 took over exchanges previously handling in part the same product in Philadelphia, St. Louis, Kansas City and Des Moines, the latter branch being subsequently moved to Omaha. On October 15 an exchange was opened in Detroit, bringing the number of Select branches up to twenty. At this figure the list remained until February 10, when Select opened its New Orleans exchange, completing the organization now in operation.

Meanwhile, on November 10, the Cincinnati office had been raised from a sub-office to a buying exchange. Both this and the Detroit exchange were placed under the efficient supervision of Sam E. Morris, east central general manager, and manager of Select's Cleveland branch.

Eighteen out of the twenty-one branch executives were branch employees of Select at the time that its exchange system was completed, and seventeen of these branches are now administered by the same men then holding positions as branch managers. In addition, J. S. Woody, who was a branch manager at the time of the completion of Select's exchange system, has been promoted to the position of field manager, which he now occupies. Eleven are managers in exactly the same exchanges as when first appointed by General Manager Kane at the opening of the Select system. Two others are still with Select as branch managers, but have been transferred to other offices. One man, previously an employe of a Select exchange, has been elevated to the managership of that exchange.

A complete list of the men who represent Select in its twenty-one exchanges at the beginning of the company's second year of production comprises: Atlanta, T. O. Tuttle; Boston, Charles R. Rogers; Buffalo, Sherman S. Webster; Chicago, Fred C. Aiken; Cincinnati, A. M. Muller (under supervision of Sam E. Morris); Cleveland, Sam E. Morris; Dallas, Claude C. Ezell; Denver, H. E. Lotz; Detroit, James O. Kent (under supervision of Sam E. Morris); Kansas City, A. H. McLaughlin; Los Angeles, Bernard E. Loper; Minneapolis, Harry A. Rathner; New Orleans, H. G. Till; New York, Henry Siegel; Omaha, C. W. Taylor; Philadelphia, M. Milder; Pittsburgh, Leo F. Levison; St. Louis, J. C. Ragland; San Francisco, H. L. Knappen; Seattle, Henry H. Hicks; Washington, Vivian P. Whitaker; and John S. Woody, field manager.

Death Alters Plot of Comedy.

It was necessary considerably to alter the plot of "Hearts in Hock," an L-Ko comedy, directed by Charles Parrott and featuring Billy Armstrong, Babe Hardy, Peggy Prevost and Jack Henderson, owing to the sudden death of William Hutchinson. When necessary alterations were completed the work proceeded.

Hutchinson, who was playing the important part of the detective, was suddenly stricken with appendicitis and was rushed the the hospital but to no avail.

Say Ban Has Been Lifted From Many War Secrets

FILM experts who have seen the Official British War Pictures entitled "Fighting for Freedom," which are being distributed by the Universal, declare these films show that the ban virtually has been lifted in this country on many facts about the way the Allies are fighting the war.

Hitherto the seas, land and air facilities employed against the Hun have been subjects closely censored for the camera. In "Fighting for Freedom" there are scenes revealing in great detail just how the war craft operate, how airplanes are armored and otherwise equipped, how they are loaded, and the particular types of missiles employed on them.

The spectator is taken on an actual excursion over the five fighting fronts, and to many points of war activity elsewhere.

It is understood that whatever scientific information can be gleaned from the films would be of slight use to the enemy.

There are seven episodes in "Fighting for Freedom." One will be issued each week. Each episode was filmed with an idea primarily to produce thrills.

Universal Making Big Drama.

The finishing touches are being put on Dorothy Phillips' big war spectacle, now being made at Universal City under the working title of "Until We Meet Again." It will be Universal's first big war effort since the successful "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin." "Until We Meet Again" will be in ten reels and will be the most expensive production ever turned out by Universal. It is described as a drama, vibrant with the heart throbs of the titanic struggle.

THRILLING RESCUE FROM REAL LIFE

Pearl White, Heroine of a Thousand Moving Picture Stunts, Rushes from Studio, Snatches Tony the Wop from Deadly Peril and Appoints Him Her Understudy on the Spot

By Edward Weitzel

DIRECTOR SEITZ had just finished rehearsing an interior scene for the new Pathe serial and was about to give the signals "Lights! Action! Camera!" when Pearl White, leaning forward in a listening attitude in place of gazing up at the big police captain, called out "Hold it a minute!" and disapeared around the corner of the set. From the fire escape outside the studio came the sound of one who was being hard pressed by the enemy. It was also evident that the imperiled person was defending himself valiantly with his tongue at least and hurling a bewildering mixture of English and Italian malediction and defiance in the very teeth of his tormenters. Before a properly constructed rescue squad could be organized by the studio force or the five stalwart police officers who were rehearsing with the star in the blue tailormade suit could draw their clubs and rush to the rescue Pearl White was back in the room, accompanied by a grimy little chap who grinned with pride and pleasure.

"The gang was trying to beat up Tony again," she explained.

Everyone showed sympathy and smiled encouragingly at the small son of Italy. He was quickly installed on the top of a radiator at the side of the room, by his rescuer, and bidden to keep quiet for a few minutes. The representative of the Moving Picture World thought this his opportunity to introduce himself to Pearl White. She was agreeable about an interview after the scene was finished.

"While you are waiting," she suggested, "you might interview Tony. I'll appoint him my understudy. He's been around the studio for three days now and lots of people learn all about the moving picture business in less time than that." In another moment the actress was in the center of the set, surrounded by the five policemen, and the two cameras were busy with their share of the work.

Interviewing an Understudy.

Interview an understudy! Tony the Wop did not look very promising; but the story of his rescue from the gang suggested thrills and swift action. Both were Pearl White specialties—and Tony's tale might throw a strong sidelight on an unknown phase of her character. A glance at the small boy on the radiator brought a friendly grin.

"Why were the gang trying to beat you up, Tony?"

"Dey don't like cause I know her."

"Why not?"

"Dey don't like 'cause I goes in the machine."

"Do you mean that you go out in the auto with Miss White and the company, when they are taking pictures?"

"Yep. I been two times." The boy's grin was now one of sheer delight.

"What do you do?"

"Set in the auter an' watch that fer her." ("That" was a small make-up box on the other end of the radiator.) "She gives me money, five cents at a time."

"Where did Miss White see you first?"

"In a fight. Two fellers had me down an' was punchin' me, when she come by in the auter. She jumped out an' pulled 'em off an' give me a nickel—an' I'm going to get another. Here she comes now."

Tony proved correct in his forecast. The first thing Pearl White did when she reached her youthful admirer was to open her purse and take out a coin.

"Here's a quarter, Tony. Get yourself five cents worth of candy and bring me back the change. Tony took the money and hurried away.

"His father has gone back to Italy and is fighting for his country," the actress explained. "The family haven't any too much to live on. Now about this interview—is it going to cost me money?"

"Not a penny."

"That suits me."

"I've always heard you were a good business woman, Miss White."

"Not always—most of the time, perhaps. What do you want me to tell you?"

"About some of your interesting happenings since you've been in moving pictures."

"Can't do it."

"Why not?"

"They're all in my book, 'My Struggle for Fame.' I've just finished it. It's the story of my life; tells how I started when I was eleven as an actress playing Eva in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' then joined a circus, got hurt, had to go to work as a nursegirl after I got out of the hospital, got back on the stage and finally landed in the pictures. Most of the interviews tell about the movie stars after they've got to the top and have autos and fine homes and everything. My book tells about the way I had to work before I started starring in Pathe serials. Excuse me; Mr. Seitz is ready for me again."

Taking Interiors at High Speed.

Making a serial is in a class by itself. The rapidity with which the scenes are rehearsed and taken at the Astra studio is almost incredible. Much of this speed is due to the method of George Seitz, who writes the stories and directs them. He is a quiet, low spoken young man, with remarkable powers of concentration. While the electricians and cameramen are getting ready for the next scene, Director Seitz paces nervously backward and forward, deep in thought. The instant it becomes time to rehearse, his directions are issued to the actors without the slightest hesitation. The scene is then gone over rapidly two or three times, and the signals given for it to be taken. As the cameras start to grind, the director redoubles his concentration. His words are barely audible but each one is surcharged with intensity. The actors feel the influence he is sending across to them with the force of a galvanic battery, and the melodramatic tempo is maintained throughout the entire scene. This is hard, nerve racking work to keep up, day after day. Moving picture directors earn their salaries.

Tony Gets an Object Lesson.

"Can't you spare one interesting happening that isn't in your book, Miss White?"

The heroine of "Hands Up" had strolled over to another part of the studio and was watching James K. Hackett and Ormi Hawley rehearse a scene from a new feature picture. While she paused to think, Tony walked up to her and held out the quarter.

"Where's your candy?" demanded the actress.

"Money's no good." The boy drew a deep sigh.

Pearl White in "The House of Hate."

"What's the matter with it?"

"Canad—"

"That's why I gave it to you. Take a long look at it and be careful what kind of money you take after this. Hand it back now, and I'll give you a nickel."

As Tony's short legs carried him and his expansive grin rapidly to the door, his fairy godmother seemed to forget the incident entirely. She walked over to the make-up box on the radiator, touched up her lips with a little carmine and glanced frequently at the rehearsal of the feature picture. Pearl White is evidently used to doing little things like making a child happy.

Service Department Is a Feature of Fox Bulletin

A SERVICE department, containing numerous helpful hints to exhibitors in putting over pictures, forms an interesting feature of the latest number of the Exhibitors' Bulletin, issued by the Fox Film Corporation.

This department, which occupies five pages of the Bulletin, not only gives advice as to how to exhibit Fox pictures successfully, but it also recounts the experience of exhibitors in various parts of the country in handling Fox productions.

One page in the Bulletin gives a close-up sketch of Joseph Erber, proprietor of Erber's Theatre, East St. Louis, Ill. The page is illustrated with a handsome portrait of Mr. Erber.

The Bulletin this month contains forty-four pages. The cover design, done in brown on a heavy buff paper, is a drawing of Gladys Brockwell. Two pages are devoted to "18 to 45," the great draft picture produced by William Fox; two pages are given to "Why I Would Not Marry," the morality play which Mr. Fox has now in work, and two pages are given to Evelyn Nesbit and "The Woman Who Gave," the first of a series of five productions she is making for Mr. Fox.

In the center of the magazine are three-page art portraits of Peggy Hyland, Virginia Pearson and Jane and Katherine Lee, the stars of the Excel Pictures brand.

Goldwyn Adds a Studio to Its Fort Lee "Lot"

WITH all the Goldwyn stars in the midst of production, the Fort Lee studio has become too limited to accommodate Geraldine Farrar, Madge Kennedy, Mae Marsh, Tom Moore and Mabel Normand and maintain the schedule of releases expected by Goldwyn's exhibitor-customer.

To overcome this difficulty, what is practically a new and separate studio has been built on the "lot." Where once stood the Alexandrian street and temple created for Mary Garden's "Thais" there is now a structure of another kind. It is a frame building 100 feet square, and is in no sense an open air studio. Roofed and equipped with a full complement of lights, it offers every facility for production found in the studio proper.

Up to the present, Geraldine Farrar and her director, Reginald Barker, have had the exclusive use of this auxiliary studio, it having been planned and constructed chiefly to give full play to the magnitude of the third of Geraldine Farrar's series of Goldwyn pictures.

WARNER BROS.' THE KAISER'S FINISH

A New War Feature with Louis Dean Again Essaying the Role of the Kaiser

WARNER BROTHERS, co-producers of Ambassador Gerard's sensational motion picture success, "My Four Years in Germany," announce this week the completion of an eight-reel special feature production, called "The Kaiser's Finish," made especially for the state rights market.

Characterized by its producers as "a photoplay prophecy of the day when the Yanks enter Berlin," and "the manner in which the Kaiser will find his place in the sun," "The Kaiser's Finish" is said to include, in its big cast, a number of actors and actresses who had prominent parts in "My Four Years in Germany." The production was directed by John Joseph Harvey, assisted by Clifford P. Saum. The Biograph studios in New York City were used during the months required for its making. William Nigh, director of Ambassador Gerard's picture, supervised the final editing and titling.

The story is said to involve sensational revelations of secret acts in the private life of the German war lord which even now are known to be working to his undoing, as a factor entirely apart from the present military situation. The action is based on these facts, showing their development, with big scenes laid both in America and behind the German lines, and with the climax at the gates to Berlin.

In their correspondence with state rights buyers throughout the country during the summer, Warner Brothers frequently referred to the new production they were making, with the result that inquiries were instituted concerning the nature and size of the feature. As a consequence of the answers given, stating the title, length and character of the story, bids have been received from practically every territory. No contracts have been signed, according to A. Warner, and no definite pledges of territorial rights will be made until the industry generally has been thoroughly informed of the readiness of the picture.

"We know," said A. Warner, "as a result of the total income to date from 'My Four Years in Germany,' the value to exhibitors of a production such as 'The Kaiser's Finish,' and it is possible for us to gauge with more than a fair degree of accuracy the approximate returns that state rights buyers will receive from it. We felt that the fair thing to do, both to buyers generally and to ourselves, was to hold the bids we have already received until an advertising campaign in the trade journals had made known the fact that 'The Kaiser's Finish' was available to everyone. There are undoubtedly a great many buyers who will be interested, and this is in addition to those from whom we have had offers by mail.

"Another important phase in merchandising 'The Kaiser's Finish' to the public is the great number of unique advertising opportunities provided both by the title and the action. There are unlimited possibilities for campaigns of every description.

"A rumor was started last week, immediately following the appearance of our first advertising announcement, that the picture had been offered to several of the bigger companies having exchanges throughout the country. This I want to deny emphatically. 'The Kaiser's Finish' was made for the state rights market, and we do not propose to deviate an iota from the sales policy which has existed since work on it was started several months ago."

An elaborate advertising campaign has been prepared for exhibitor use.

The story of "The Kaiser's Finish" begins with the discovery by an American-reared youth that he is barred from enlistment in the United States Army and a part in the great struggle in France because of the stain of dishonor cast upon him by the Kaiser years before. This introduction is based on a number of the little known incidents of the warmaker's life before the war. This youth is impersonated by Ernest Schenck, the Crown Prince in "My Four Years in Germany."

Louis Dean, who played the part of the Kaiser in the Gerard picture, again essays this role in the newest Warner special feature. Other principals in the cast of the previous picture have prominent parts in "The Kaiser's Finish."

MELFORD IN NEW YORK.

After ten years of absence from Broadway, George Melford, tenderfoot, came back. Melford has been directing Famous Players-Lasky productions in Hollywood for the last three years. He has journeyed to New York to direct Billy Burke's next picture, "Good Gracious, Annabel," to be made at the Fort Lee studios. Mr. Melford has been directing little Lila Lee. Mr. Melford says that New York now is not the New York he once knew. He says one does not feel the demands made by the war as acutely in California as here. The question of lighting in the California studios has not been touched upon by the Government as it was here, and because of the long days one can get over about twice as much work, he says, as is possible at Fort Lee. Mr. Melford expects to remain in New York about two months.

Norma Talmadge Off to Coast.

Norma Talmadge, her director, Sidney A. Franklin; assistant director Ward Lascelle, Thomas Meighan, Gladden James and A. E. Warren of her company, left Sept. 29 for Los Angeles to do the exteriors for Miss Talmadge's "The Heart of Wetona." This picture will be a screen version of the famous Belasco success by George Scarborough, in which Leonore Ulrich played for so long at the Lyceum Theatre. While Miss Talmadge prefers, as a rule, to make all her productions in New York, she decided at the last minute to make a hurried trip to the Coast to do the exteriors which require the sort of Western background that cannot be picked up in the Adirondacks or the Berkshires. She expects to be gone only four weeks, and then will return and do the interiors at her studio at 318 East 48th street.

WORLD MAN VISITS CANADIAN HOUSES

On Way Home from Convention He Stops at St. John and Montreal—In Latter City Forty-two Out of Forty-four Houses Are Doing Business

By Sam Spedon

FROM New York to Halifax, it listens like a long, long way, and so it is, but when we get there it seems as it we had only walked 'round the corner to visit our neighbors. There is so much snap and go to the place, and we are received with such hospitality we feel as if we had been born and brought up there. In fact, all through the Maritime Provinces hospitality is written all over it.

The first question asked on our return were: "Did you see much evidence of the war? "Were there many disabled soldiers on the streets?" If there were any there we didn't see them. Canadians are not wont to wear their grief on their sleeves. They show a splendid spirit of patriotism.

Through the courtesy of J. M. Franklin, of the Strand Theatre, and Harry Meyers, who drove us from one end of Halifax to the other, we had a chance to see the ravages of the terrible explosion of one year ago, and the vast improvements being made by the construction work of the Government since that disastrous event. New homes are being erected to the south of the devastated district, great shipyards are being built where the explosion occurred, and an immense railroad and shipping terminal, of three miles, is being constructed on the eastern side at a cost of $30,000,000, unequaled by any city in the world. All these activities make Halifax a boom town, and will make it one of the greatest import and export cities in the Provinces, if not on the Atlantic coast. While we were impressed with the tragedy of the calamity that happened a year ago, we could not help thinking after all that Halifax would come into its own.

Picture Business in Halifax Good.

Business in Halifax, as far as motion pictures are concerned, is good. If it were not for the impost of heavy taxes on theatrical enterprises, and the scarcity and cost of material and help it would be very good. The streets of Halifax are at present entirely dark at nights, but notwithstanding this and stormy weather we saw long lines of people waiting for the second showing at all the moving picture theatres. At the Majestic Theatre, occupied by a stock company, there was a capacity house. We visited the Strand, the Empire, Orpheus, Imperial and the Casino, all in the centre of the city, all well managed and equipped. The architecture of the theatres is of the stereotyped order of a decade ago, seating from six to twelve hundred.

In conversation with managers from other parts of the Provinces, we received the most encouraging reports, although they said it requires the most careful management and judgment to meet the present day conditions and come out on the right side of the ledger. From the report of the Motion Exhibitors League Convention, held at Halifax on Sept. 18 and 19, published exclusively in the Moving Picture World of October 5, you can get an idea of some of the propositions with which they have to contend.

On our way home from Halifax we stopped at St. John, N. B., at the invitation of our good friend and that indefatigible worker Walter H. Golding, of the Imperial, and, while in St. John, called on F. G. Spencer, of the Lyric. While our time was too limited to call on everybody, we gave A. B. Farmer, of the Star, a jingle and had a conversation with him over the 'phone.

St. John with its many harbor advantages is one of the most conservative commercial cities in the provinces of Canada. It has not made the most of its mercantile possibilities. Its population is a home loving, industrious and prosperous people, who, while they support their theatres well, are descriminating in their tastes and divide their patronage in accordance with them. Manager Golding showed me a letter from Harry Lauder's manager, setting the dates of January 1 and 2 for the great Scotch comedian's appearance at the Imperial, which, being in the Keith chain and one of the largest and most modern theatres in this section, is the only one at which he has appeared. Mr. Golding told us his receipts on Lauder's two dates last year were between four and five thousand dollars. This goes to show how the St. John people support the efforts of local showmen.

Montreal Is Canada's Film Center.

After a little persuasion by our long time friend, L. E. Ouimet, who promised to stay over at St. John with us, we took a flyer to Montreal. We are glad we did. We had a long deferred chance to meet a great many of the Moving Picture World readers and men prominent in the industry. Montreal is the centre of filmdom in Canada, although Toronto next door is a close second. When you say Ouimet in Canada it is the open sesame to all branches of the industry, as he is the recognized pioneer in Canada's film circles. After stopping at the Specialty Film Import, Limited, of which Mr. Ouimet is president and general manager, we made a tour of exchangeland and met the managers. We shook hands with Robert E. Wells, the district manager of the Triangle; R. S. Peck of the Mutual, formerly editing the Canadian Motion Picture Digest; J. A. Gagnier of the Vitagraph, Irving Sourkes of the Regal, representing the World and Goldwyn; A. Hazza of the Universal and The Allens of the Famous Players-Lasky. We expected to see the manager of Fox, but reached the exchange after closing hours. It was not a difficult matter to cover these, as all the exchanges are located in the same district just the same as they are in any metropolitan city.

After this round of exchanges, we retraced our steps to the Specialty Film and Import Limited. We were surprised on closer inspection to find it fully equipped with an industrial outfit on the same order as Rothacker, of Chicago. Mr. Ouimet pointed out a new location, which he has purchased a few doors away, where he will build after the first of the year a large two-story fireproof building to meet all the up-to-date requirements and the fire ordinances of Montreal.

Looking Over Montreal Theatres.

After lunch, we visited many of the theatres of the city, to get an idea of what they are like, and say hello to the managers. We started at Loew's Vaudeville, 3,500 capacity, one of the largest and most beautiful theatres in the world. Then we glanced over the New Grand, 900; Strand, 1,000; Tivoli, 1,000; Orpheum, 850, where there is a stock company of French players, programs printed in French—an exclusively French theatre; the Holman, on the main thoroughfare, seating 1,000, presided over by H. Pomeroy, and the Imperial, 2,500, is managed by H. W. Conover in splendid style. All of these theatres, while some are more beautiful than others, are ably managed and well equipped.

Later in the afternoon we visited "The Allen," a new suburban or neighborhood theatre, 2,000 seats, owned by B. Jule and J. J. Allen, of the Allen Theatre Enterprises, and presided over by the resident manager, H. C. La Marr. This house is one of the most beautiful in Canada. On our way out to the Allen we passed through the French section of Montreal and gave several of the theatres a hurried once over. On the return trip we passed the St. Denis, one of the larger houses in Canada, said to seat 4,000. It is now closed, but is soon to be reopened as one of the Loew Circuit.

Forty-four Theatres in Montreal.

There are forty-four theatres in Montreal, of from 500 to 3,500 capacity, and most of them are doing a good business. Only two of them are closed and one of them will soon reopen. The forty-four houses are divided as follows: Thoroughfare houses, in the West End; the Cosmopolitan districts; the tenement or laboring class; the French suburban class, and the neighborhood or suburban districts, peculiar to a cosmopolitan city like Montreal with a population of nearly one million.

While in Montreal we met our old friend M. R. Nutting, erstwhile publisher of the Canadian Digest, and now running an advertising establishment. He has recently taken unto himself a wife, whom we had the pleasure of meeting. He evidently has struck the right trail and is acquiring a fine clientele. We also met J. M. McLennan, manager of the Brock Theatre, Brockville, Quebec, where he does the honor also at the New Theatre, which shows stock specialties.

We made a very pleasant call on George F. Perkins, general manager of the Perkins Electric Company, and the Independent Film and Supply Company. We felt quite at home when we saw in his salesrooms a large array of Power's and Simplex machines. Mr, Perkins has the largest supply and equipment house in Canada.

Hampton Buys Davis Story for Kerrigan Production

JESSE D. HAMPTON has just purchased, through Edgar Selden, the rights to Richard Harding Davis' popular and successful play, "Soldiers of Fortune." The price is said to be the largest of any recently sold play or story.

Mr. Hampton wants the tale for J. Warren Kerrigan, and promises that the picture will be a notable achievement, with Kerrigan—in Robert Edeson's original stage role, of course—surrounded by a cast of all-star calibre.

It is expected that the Hampton production will be a seven reel feature. The picture will be released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation in this country and through the Robertson-Cole Company in the foreign field.

"Soldiers of Fortune," it is expected, will be produced at the Hampton studios in Los Angeles immediately after the filming of "Come Again Smith," F. McGrew Willis' picturization of John H. Blackwood's comedy of the same name. The latter is scheduled for production immediately after "The Unfinished Story," upon which Mr. Kerrigan and his director, Ernest Warde, are now actively engaged.

Tefft Johnson made his first picture for World Film with Madge Evans in "The Latch String." This story was written by Mrs. Backus, who has for many years been one of the best known authorities on Normal school work as applied to young children.

Lasky Talks of Company's Activities on West Coast

PRIOR to leaving for New York on a periodical business trip, Jesse L. Lasky, first vice president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, at the head of production, in an interview made the statement that the West Coast Studios would be busily engaged, more busily than ever, in all probability, in the months to come.

Discussing the arrival of other stars on the coast, Mr. Lasky said: "Among others, Shirley Mason will arrive in the very near future to work at our western studio.

"An interesting change in the west coast scenario department results from the promotion of Miss Mary O'Connor, former assistant to Frank E. Woods, to the position of scenario and film editor, while Gardner Hunting has been appointed assistant supervising director. Both will work under Frank E. Woods, supervising director. This change was found necessary owing to the increasing activities in the west coast studios and the natural growth of the department as a consequence.

"I may say that our productional activities here have been characterized by the most splendid and harmonious results. There has been no waste time as a result of the recent labor difficulties, or for any other reason.

"Cecil B. deMille has finished and is now engaged in cutting and assembling his modern version for Artcraft of "The Squaw Man," by Edwin Milton Royle, which is to be released under a new name. Just what that will be is as yet undecided. The reason for this is to assure the exhibitors and the public that it is not a reissue, but an entirely new production, from an adaptation by Beulah Marie Dix, with numerous changes and an all-star cast.

"At the Griffith studio, Dorothy Gish is at work on 'The Hope Chest' and Mr. Griffith is engaged on another of his Artcraft specials.

"The Thomas H. Ince studios are working on schedule and ahead of it with Charles Ray, Dorothy Dalton and Enid Bennett, while Henry Walthall has about completed 'The False Faces.' Mr. Ince is keeping his stars busy, and each succeeding production seems to be more popular with the public than the last.

"The Sennett studios are creating comedies with speed and satisfactory results, while Roscoe Arbuckle, whose popularity is greater than ever, according to reports, has recently completed 'The Sheriff' and is now at work on another Paramount comedy.

"I was highly gratified by the results of the Fourth Liberty Loan propaganda pictures for the United States Treasury Department, contributed by practically all of our stars, as well as those of other companies. Some of these I personally witnessed and was extremely pleased by their splendid 'punch.'

"So, I can say with truth, that we are extremely busy and that the progress is satisfactory all along the line."

Hatton to Play Tony in "Arizona."

Considered one of the most talented of character actors, Raymond Hatton of the Famous Players-Lasky forces, has been engaged by Douglas Fairbanks to appear in the all-star cast of "Arizona." He will characterize the attractive part of "Tony."

Three Notable Directors Have Been Engaged by William Fox

WILLIAM FOX, because of the success attained by George Walsh in the light, wholesome, young-American type of comedies in which he has appeared recently, has just engaged for this popular star one of the best known light comedy directors in the business. This director is Edward Dillon, and he will begin work at once with Mr. Walsh in a new play, which, it is believed, will prove one of the best of the athlete-actor.

Mr. Dillon is one of the veterans of the screen art. His first experience was in the old Biograph one-reelers, Dillon playing juvenile leads. In the same company were a number of players now famous either as actors or directors. Mr. Dillon spent eight and one-half years laying a foundation of screencraft and film knowledge, which makes him one of the most versatile directors now in the business.

He directed DeWolf Hopper in "Sunshine Dad," "Don Quixote" and "Mr. Good, the Samatarian." He also directed Bessie Barriscale in several productions. Others stars whom he has directed are Ann Pennington and Madge Kennedy. It was while directing Miss Kennedy in "The Danger Game" that Mr. Dillon broke his ankle. Laid up for fourteen weeks he only recovered recently.

Mr. Dillon has long been an admirer of George Walsh, and as his own directorial talents are along the lines of exploiting Walsh's genius in athletic stunts and straight comedy the forthcoming Walsh picture should prove one of the most interesting of its kind made in a long time.

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week by the Fox corporation that Charles J. Brabin, who has directed numerous leading actors and actresses in the film profession, has been engaged by William Fox to direct Virginia Pearson, one of the stars in the Fox group of Excel Pictures.

Mr. Brabin will begin work at once. His first picture with Miss Pearson will be a dramatization of "Buchanan's Wife," one of the most popular novels written by the late Justus Miles Forman, who lost his life on the Lusitania.

Mr. Brabin has had wide experience and training as a director, having guided several big productions to success. He has directed Henry Walthall, Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, Marc MacDermott, Naomi Childers, Peggy Hyland, Viola Dana and other players.

Besides his success as a director Mr. Brabin has also written several well-known photoplays. All his work has been marked by a close attention to detail, by a fine imagination and a strong sense of dramatic values.

Mr. Brabin is enthusiastic over the prospect of working for William Fox, and is especially pleased that he is to direct Miss Pearson.

"I have known Miss Pearson for a long time," said the new Fox director this week, "and have followed her screen career closely. Her work in every picture in which I have seen her shows a thorough grasp of the character she portrays, a conscientious study of the play and a fine power for emphasizing the more dramatic situations in a manner that makes them stand out in their proper light."

JAMES KIRKWOOD has joined the William Fox organization. This well and favorably known director, who has an enviable producer's record, including dramas for both the stage and screen, will supervise the making of the next Evelyn Nesbit picture. He is already at work on the scenario.

Mr. Kirkwood has been prominent in the producing end of the film business for the past decade, having begun his career when the old single-reelers were in vogue. Among his early successes were "Classmates" and "Strong Heart," two Robert Edesonsuccesses.

After a short period in the motion picture business he returned to the stage for three years, becoming leading man in Margaret Mayo's play, "Behind the Scenes." Subsequently he was director for Mary Pickford in the screen version of the Mayo production, remaining with Miss Pickford two years.

Mr. Kirkwood also directed John Barrymore in a series of productions, and was director of Billie Burke, after which he produced eight pictures in a year featuring Mary Miles Minter. The new director was especially engaged for Miss Nesbit in the belief that his long experience peculiarly fitted him for directing a star of such pronounced emotional qualities. Mr. Kirkwood expressed great enthusiasm over the possibilities of the story which has been bought for Miss Nesbit, and manifested eagerness to begin work at once. It is understood the next Nesbit picture, the second in the series of productions to be made by her for William Fox, is a story of a frivolous woman who is purified in the fires of war.

JUVENILE LEADS ARE SCARCE.

The inroads made on motion picture actors by the draft boards has rendered it difficult properly to cast pictures. This is especially true where young juvenile leads are required. Last week World Pictures had to postpone productions of two photoplays on which continuities were completed because it was impossible to secure young leading men for important roles. No relief from this situation is promised at least for the next twelve months. A condition of this kind offers great difficulties not alone to the producing companies, but also to scenario writers, who will be compelled to create interesting photoplay material in which female characters will have a preponderance of influence. In the new pictures the male element will be represented by either the very young or those who have passed the draft age.

Any promising young juvenile man who can play parts ranging from 21 to 30 years of age is worth his weight in gold these days. The juvenile lead who holds a deferred classification card will be very much in demand in moving picture studios.

Rambles Round Filmtown

With WALTER K. HILL.

An Idiotorial Inspired by Recent Sittings Before Miles of Close-Ups

WHAT a blessing it would have been last fall, when the footage tax fell upon the industry, if the producer had taken between his teeth the well known bit and resolved as follows:

Stories shall be filmed only in exact length of their worth. The plot shall be told in meaty reels that run to the full length of the yarn, and only that far.

Close-ups of pumps, sides of barns, meadow-land, hay-stacks, factories, office safes, rocks, rills, rivers, oceans, hop-vines, automobiles, garbage cans, fire-escapes, clothes-lines, dinner buckets, wrist-watches, heaving chests, cedar chests, ankles, feet, corns, bunions, warts, moles, church-spires, clouds, thunder-storms, tree-tops, orchards, corn-fields, canal boats, vaccination marks, throats, rubber boots, baled hay, chairs, tables, fish-hooks, kittens, frogs, cows, daschunds, cabbages, barbed wire, mustard gas, pianos, sheet music, poetry, kitchenettes, pillows, twin beds, stars, garters, mice and other non-essentials to be limited to three-inch flashes.

Features now running to 5,000 feet, including 1,500 feet of padding and close-ups, titles and printed details, would give better entertainment if simmered down to brass tacks; comedies now expanded to a thousand or two film feet would be more funny, and the exhibitor would give a shortened program with better results.

The audiences would be better pleased, crowds would not be kept so long standing in the lobby and elsewhere, and the mole on the star's left eyebrow would not intrude itself so frequently upon the light running, new, home entertainment.

All of which amounts to little more than space-killing.

Ah, There, Jim Milligan!

FRED SCHAEFER, publicity director of General Film, makes it a rule never to be "out" to anyone, and therefore has become ex-officio "soother" of the company. He strives his best to make every session in the reception room end at a point when everyone concerned is happy.

But he is put to the greatest test of diplomacy when he must allay the anxiety of an advertising solicitor. Came one of these the other day with reproach in his mild, blue eye, complaining that General had used space in other publications and not quite so much in his. Schaefer had to admit that General hadn't used quite so much.

"Then why don't you?" said the advertising man.

"Well," said Schaefer, after intense thought, "you see, old man, we think so highly of your sheet that we reserve it for only the most important announcements."

Which sounded complimentary, anyway.

Hayakawa's Method of Nomenclature.

WHEN Hayakawa gets a scenario the title first engages him.

Strangely enough the working title seldom suits. Then it is that the neighbors are called at an evening session, and the synopsis is read to a parlor full of enthusiasts.

By popular vote taken on the spot the title is selected—and then Hayakawa calls it something else. In the East the method is somewhat different.

Scenarios carry a title, the completed production is called something else, and after the photoplay is released and advertised the title is changed as frequently as two or three times.

And never, under any circumstances, must the title have any bearing whatever upon the nature of the plot or the theme of the story. It has been discovered that the public likes to go to theatres believing they are to witness a certain stylo of photoplot and remain to see an entirely different kind of offering.

It was either Barnum or Lincoln who said: "The public likes to be bunked until it gets sore, and then business goos all to pieces and we wonder what happened to it."

Ben Grimm Finds Life In Hawaii Just One Cockroach After Another

TWELVE days after the time it was written a letter from Ben Grimm, of the Moving Picture World family, arrived in this office last week. From many paragraphs of intensely interesting details we select the following:

"I have had quite a number of flights since I came here, but flying has stopped as far as the squadron is concerned for the time being. That leaves me but little to do except count the number of cockroaches in the dark-room. If I ever expect to complete that job I might as well figuro on being here for 10,000 years.

"Oh, yes, we have cockroaches here—little bits of ones. It takes at least a dozen of them to pull one of the motor trucks. Their favorite food is the emulsion on plates.

"So far they have eaten about nine gun batteries, three wireless towers, eight battleships, four seaplanes, nine rice fields, fourty-two miles of roads and six blocks of houses. They seem to pick out our choicest plates, too.

"But I suppose I should not pick on the poor cockroaches, because they are only one of a breed of about 6,000,000,000,009 different kinds of bugs in this 'Paradise of the Pacific' (see tourist dope).

"And there seems to be a different nationality in Honolulu for each species of bugs. If I don't go crazy with the heat before I think of it again, I'll try and dehydrate one of the cockroaches and send him (or her) to you."

Getting Back Sixty Minutes of Beloved and Soothing Sleep

FULFILLING its mission of timeliness, RAMBLES, in its issue of October 12, reminds you that on Sunday the 27th of the current month you should sit up until midnight. Promptly at 11:60 set the clock hands back one hour and (if you wish to get the full benefit of the change) go immediately to bed.

While you are sleeping there will come back to you the hour you lost last Spring. You will retire at 11 by the hands, and will be an hour in bed before it is 12—although it was 12 when you hit the Ostermoor at 11.

There are two ways of figuring out the best sensation when time comes to face a new day, a new week, and a new season of time serving—and saving. Some may set the alarm at the accustomed hour by moving the hands back one twelfth of the circle. Others will do it this way:

Leave the alarm set exactly as it was before time changed. Wind it up good and tight, so it will ring long and loud. Have a night of sweet dreams, and when Big Ben jangles in the morning open one eye, stare at the Hunish beast and say:

"Go 'To Hell with the Kaiser'. There's a sweet hour of sleep coming to me."

Then roll over and collect.

Pacifist Propaganda Would Have "Bean Bag" Become New Army Game

JOHNNY GALT, who has been employed in the production department of the Triangle, has handed in his resignation to assume the position of shipping clerk for a large bean concern in Wilmington, Cal. The southern section of California is the biggest bean-raising locale in the world.

Galt expects to be quite a success as a bean-herder, and says that nothing gives him more pleasure than to see the beans gamboling in their sacks, especially when he recalls that they are going to feed Uncle Sam's soldiers.

Film Salesman Happily Creates Idea for Transcontinentalists

VERY frequently, out of neccssity, comes an idea that results in reams of press agent's copy. Take Leon Schlessinger, for instance. We'll let Leon have his say in the letter he wrote to Sales Director J. L. Kempner, of the "Manx-Man" Company, to wit:

"I arrived at North Judson, Ind., at noon, closed the contract in thirty minutes after I landed, had my lunch, and learned there wouldn't be another train out until 5:18 p. m. I didn't want to lay around for four hours, and learned that a fast freight would go through at 2 p. m.

"I got hold of the conductor of same, and landed here at 5:30, beating the passenger train in by a few hours. Rode in the caboose, because the conductor was a movie fan, and at the same time enjoyed the experience—and in the bargain a nice nap, all stretched out, with a soft cushion for my head."

Think of the possibilities of rides in cabooses between here and Los Angeles! Take along the publicist with his Blickensderfer.

Prepare "statements of policy" while the engine is switching at way-stations—adding cars and cutting out others. The utility of the scheme may only be exceeded by the novelty of such "statements" issued every few hours, fired into headquarters by the next mail and mimeographed for distribution.

By this method a picture magnate could change his policy at every station and send out a new "statement." The time may come when the fifth and essential industry may be glad that Leon Schlessinger hopped the freight at North Judson and had his picture drawn for RAMBLES.

We Shall Yet Hear of This Star.

WORLD FILMS recently signed a new star, and, following the fashion of all good publicists, Lee Kugel opined to himself that he should know more, and well, of the lady's career.

With that end in view he dashed off a polite request that the star send him some data upon which he might base paragraphs, quips, personal items, longs, shorts, mediums and interviews. He then turned his attention to other details of his work.

Two days later an expressman appeared in the office of World Film publicity. On a truck he shoved ahead of him there were three trunks. Lee thought a new publicist was moving in until, upon investigating, he found the Saratogas were addressed to himself.

Inside he discovered scrap-books that told the life story of World Film's new star. The three trunks were filled to capacity with kind words.

Rudolph vs. Reichenbach—Concluded.

With Harry Reichenbach hurrying to join the other sixteen, Bill Rudolph rises to remark in a manner thus:

"When it comes to 'treating' and 'retreating,' Reichenbach is right—I am generally in advance. Many a time and oft have I shown Harry the way. I'm glad I've been saved from the other sixteen."

Reviewing the Reviews of the Reviewer of Reviews

WE have Reviews, Advance Reviews, More Advanced Reviews, Most Advanced Reviews.

Reviews written from showings in the projection rooms have given way to reviews written before the picture is edited and cut.

The next stage may include reviews written while the picture is being produced. Back of that may come reviews written from the working script. Still digging reviews may be written from author's synopsis.

Then back of all that there may be reviews written while the story is still in the author's brain. Once the thing is well started there may be no end to it—and then the producer changes the title!

Betty Blythe, in the costume of a French-Canadian girl, was working at the Vitagraph studios in mid-August. They were taking scenes in a back-woods log cabin.

On the stage to the right of them a summer scene was being made, while to the left a South Sea isle production was being filmed.

In the yard the tank was being employed for a bathing scene. Betty, in her heavy sweater, toque and dress, nearly sweltered, and cussed her luck.

But now she's up in Canada in real locations, where it's nice and cool.

Fox Now Well Started on Second Year of Standard

SEPTEMBER marks the beginning of the second season of the William Fox series of Standard Pictures. One year ago William Fox started Standard Pictures with the announcement that they were to be the best that money and brains could produce. That this promise has been kept is attested by the popularity these pictures enjoy.

A resume of the first year of Standard Pictures made recently in the Fox offices brought to light some interesting statistics. Four directors have produced the majority of the twenty-six Standard Picture releases of the first year—J. Gordon Edwards, Frank Lloyd, R. A. Walsh and Richard Stanton.

Mr. Edwards has six Standard Pictures to his credit in the first year. These are "Camille," "Rose of Blood," "DuBarry," "The Forbidden Path," "The Soul of Buddah" and "Under the Yoke."

Mr. Lloyd's score was four, three starring William Farnum, and one, "The Blindness of Divorce," enacted by an all-star cast. The Farnum pictures are "When a Man Sees Red," "Heart of a Lion" and "True Blue."

"The Honor System," a great money-maker, was directed by R. A. Walsh. Mr. Walsh directed two of last year's Standard Pictures, the other being "Woman and the Law," which achieved a signal success.

The other director who had a large share in the production of Standard Pictures is Richard Stanton. Mr. Stanton's first Standard Picture was "The Spy," which set a mark for itself. "Cheating the Public," with an all-star cast, was another Stanton picture, and Mr. Stanton also directed William Farnum in "Rough and Ready."

For the season of 1918-19, Mr. Fox plans to strengthen Standard Pictures with new stars, better stories and with an even more elaborate scale of production.

Red Cross Angle in "Two-Gun Betty."

"Two-Gun Betty," Bessie Barriscale's latest production for the screen, contains no preachment or obvious lesson in patriotism or anything else, but nevertheless, in the light vein of comedy-drama it is a patriotic picture with a distant background of war. It is thoroughly modern, of Western locale.

The war had made cow hands scarce, and mister hero wrote a letter to that effect, jokingly suggesting that they send a "farmerette" or so to help them out. The heroine bets $2,500, payable by the winner to the Red Cross, that she can pass as a boy on the hero's Western cattle ranch.

The fact that everyone on the ranch from the Chinese cook to the hero-boss himself, knew instantly that she was trying to fool them, and proceeded to put up all manner of practical jokes on her, while she held gamely on thinking that they did not know her secret, also is a little lesson of itself. It is doubtful if any Red Cross worker ever stood so much humiliation and danger to raise funds as this one did to win the twenty-five hundred for the cause.

The picture, which was written and directed by Howard Hickman and produced at the Brunton studios, in Los Angeles, will shortly be released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

"Italy's Flaming Front" Drawing Large Audiences

Reports from exhibitors throughout the country who have shown the First National Exhibitors' Circuit release, "Italy's Flaming Front," tell of remarkable audiences attracted by this pictorial history of Italy's part in the world war.

Italian-American clubs in many states have undertaken extensive voluntary propaganda work in behalf of the picture, going so far, in a number of instances, as to send broadcast special letters to all members urging their attendance at theatres showing it, and requesting their utmost co-operation in popularizing the subject in every conceivable way.

An interchange of correspondence between the many Italian-American clubs relating to "Italy's Flaming Front" has been directly responsible for a great national interest in the production.

One interesting feature of the reports sent to the First National Exhibitors' Circuit is the scores of references made by exhibitors to exclamations from their audiences at the showings of the Italian war picture in recognition of soldiers seen marching or fighting in the Italian uniform either far up in the Alps or along the banks of the Piave who, a few months ago, were residents of the American cities and towns where their pictures are now being exhibited.

Universal Gets Praise for New Publicity Policy

UNIVERSAL'S new publicity policy, modeled under the slogan of "Facts Without Adjectives," has won several strong indorsements from exhibitors. The last comment is that contributed in a letter from B. C. Steele, manager of the Symphony Theatre, in Los Angeles. Mr. Steele asserts that the "facts without adjectives" material has helped him to crowd his house.

His letter is in part as follows:

"Using the matter furnished in your Weekly as a basis, my advertising man put over a whirlwind campaign on Harry Carey in 'Hell Bent' that broke the house record three weeks ago, and then broke the 'Hell Bent' record with Mary MacLaren in 'Bread' this last week.

"I find the advertising catchlines just what we need for lobby teasers and slides. The 'At a Glance' gives my ad writers all that they need to prepare an appeal to the public that will line 'em up at the box office, and the advance notices make a hit with our dramatic editors.

"I am strong for your policy of facts without adjectives, for we have plenty of adjectives we can throw in for ourselves out here.

"Your publicity service was a strong factor in causing me to sign up to use Universal, Bluebird and Jewel attractions, despite the fact that the Superba, a first run house a block away, is also featuring these pictures to the exclusion of other programs."

Sennett's Next Is "Beware of Boarders."

Fast and furious is said to be the fun in the newest Paramount Mack Sennett comedy, "Beware of Boarders," which is released October 6. The two-reeler was directed by Fred Fishback, and a large cast headed by Chester Conklin, Ford Sterling and Mary Thurman is featured. Gene Rogers, Beet Roach, Paddy McGuire and Jack Cooper assist in the fun-making.

Scenes from "Salome," Which Will Open at the Forty-Fourth Street Theatre, New York, Sunday, October 6.

Metro Stages Cabaret for "Sylvia on a Spree"

A RAID scene which contains both thrill and comedy will be a feature of Emmy Wehlen's forthcoming Metro picture, "Sylvia on a Spree," now in process of production at Metro's Eastern studio under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger. Harry L. Franklin is directing, assisted by Fred Warren.

In this charming comedy-drama by E. Forst, which June Mathis has adapted for Miss Wehlen's use, the star in the leading character of Sylvia is determined to see a little of real life. She refuses to marry Jack Bradley (W. I. Percival) unless he will show her the Beaulieu Inn, a rather "sporty" roadhouse. Sylvia has always been so sheltered that she feels stifled. Jack reluctantly agrees to escort her, fearing that if he does not she will go anyway.

The Inn scene as staged at the Metro studio is an elaborate one, and will add both liveliness and beauty to the production. It is Egyptian in tone and is a faithful reproduction of one of New York's up-to-date restaurants, where new revues are frequently introduced. Around the circle of roped-off dancing space are grouped the dining tables, with handsomely gowned women and men in evening clothes dining under the soft-shaded lights. Music for the dancing is furnished by a "jazz" band, the musicians being dressed in Egyptian costumes.

Clever specialties are introduced by the cabaret performers.

Three cameras were used on these scenes in order to get the raid incident from every angle.

"Come Again, Smith" (Hampton).

Following his production of Kenneth B. Clarke's story of Alaska, "The Unfinished Story," J. Warren Kerrigan will be seen in a picturization of John H. Blackwood's comedy, "Come Again, Smith." In this latter picture Kerrigan will be seen as the son of a California oil millionaire who has been expelled from college on account of his disinclination to study and who, when he proposes to his father that he go to work for him, incurs the parental displeasure to the extent that he starts out to make his own living.

There is a dominant note of cheerfulness throughout "Come Again, Smith," and the chief role affords Kerrigan splendid opportunities. Lois Wilson will be the "girl in the case," and a score of well-liked and capable players will contribute their talents to the film, which will be directed by Ernest Warde and distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Jefferson in Lytell Support.

Thomas Jefferson, a son of the late Joseph Jefferson, of "Rip Van Winkle" fame, and himself a veteran actor, has a prominent supporting role in Bert Lytell's newest picture, "The Spender," now under production at Metro's West Coast studios in Hollywood. His hair, of which he has an abundant crop, figured very largely in Jefferson's engagement for the part, that of a flinty millionaire of seventy years.

Jefferson has just finished a picture at a neighboring studio in which he was required to let his locks grow long. His hirsute luxuriance was just the thing for his new role. But now, after some of the scenes have been "shot," Jefferson has to get a haircut, as in the story of "The Spender" the crabbed millionaire suddenly takes a fancy to "doll up" and set a giddy pace.

So that with Jefferson his hair has become his profession—just one part after another.

Louise Huff has just finished her fourth picture for World Pictures. It bears the title of "The Crook of Dreams." It was written by Forrest Halsey and directed by Oscar Apfel.

Scene from "The Woman the Germans Shot" (Plunkett & Carroll).

"Woman the Germans Shot" May Go on Broadway

MARKING the debut of Julia Arthur before the motion picture camera and the picturization of what is unquestionably the most widely known atrocity of the world struggle, Messrs. Plunkitt and Carroll are about to offer to the public a strong and timely appealing production of the life and murdering by the Huns of the British Red Cross nurse, Edith Cavell. That the producers have selected a subject timely and of marked import to the entire world is evidenced by the indorsement which has already been accorded the picture by a group of high Allied military and civilian dignitaries.

Under the title "The Woman the Germans Shot," Anthony Paul Kelly, writer of this screen play based upon the story of Nurse Edith Cavell, has contributed his usual excellent work, compiled after a most thorough research and attention to historical accuracy, particularly in the matters attendant to the brutal shooting of Nurse Cavell.

The producers have assembled a most unusual cast for their production. In the selection of Julia Arthur for the portrayal of the character of Edith Cavell they have chosen wisely. It is also unusual that such a striking likeness is to be found as that which exists between the martyred nurse and Miss Arthur. Supporting Miss Arthur in the leading male role of a young English soldier is Creighton Hale.

Others of the exceptionally strong cast are J. W. Johnston, a favorite whose work with Famous Players and Triangle has elevated him close to the rank of stardom; William Tooker, who has appeared as a featured player with many Fox and Metro productions; Joyce Fair, the former co-star with Ernest Truex on the stage version of "The Dummy"; Paul Panzer, former Pathe star for a number of years; Sarah Alexander, George Majeroni and Martin Faust.

Release plans for "The Woman the Germans Shot" have not as yet been announced. It is probable that because of the tremendous strength which has been developed in the production of this feature that it may have an early presentation at a leading Broadway theatre.

Rainbow Starts Off Well.

Rainbow Comedies, the new single-reel comedy brand for General Film release, has started off at a fast galt, the subjects being of an especially spirited nature. "My Lady's Slipper," the current Rainbow Comedy, deals with a widow and a widower, neighbors, one owning a cat and the other a dog, and when the animals quarrel, the owners follow suit. Joseph Richmond directed this picture for the United States Motion Picture Corporation, Lillian Vera and Eddie Boulden being the featured players.

"The Border Raiders" Is Fast.

George Larkin, the strenuous rough-rider, and Betty Compson, who can manage a broncho as well as most of the cowboys, have an excellent vehicle for their talents in "The Border Raiders," a swift-moving Western serial, produced by Diando, and released on October 6, as the first of the Pathe Program Features. The story is written by Frank Beresford and directed by Stuart Payton.

The feature is specially well cast, and beside the principals there are Frank Deshon, a finished character actor, well known to the speaking stage, who gives a vividly sinister and subtle interpretation of the master villain Mock Sing; Clare DuBrey as an ingratiating vampire, who contrives an odd but thoroughly effective device; H. C. Carpenter as John Hardy, the susceptible ranchman, who falls for the innovation in vampirism; Howard Crampton as a suave "stall" for the gang, and Fred M. Malatesta as "Square Deal" Dixon.

Fox Has Five Plays In Work.

Five plays are now in work for William Fox in the East and West studios, it is announced by the Fox Film Corporation. The only star working in the West at present is Tom Mix, who is engaged on his third Charles Alden Seltzer story, which bears the temporary title, "The Coming of the Law."

In the East, Evelyn Nesbit has just completed "The Woman Who Gave." Richard Stanton is nearing the finish of the big morality production, "Why I Would Not Marry." Peggy Hyland has just begun on a new play under the direction of Harry Millarde. It is an adaptation of a magazine story, "A Stitch in Time," written by Fred Jackson. Virginia Pearson is at work on "Buchanan's Wife," the picturization of Forman's novel.

Jane and Katherine Lee are working on another picture under Mr. Gillstrom. This picture, which has not yet been titled, will be an early release.

Sessue Hayakawa in "The Temple of Dusk," a Mutual-Haworth Production.

Sessue Hayakawa's Second Release a Story of Japan

THE second of the Haworth Pictures Corporation series of productions starring Sessue Hayakawa, "The Temple of Dusk," is set for release by Mutual October 20. It will be pre-released October 13. The story presents the high regard for, and the devotion to, "the family honor," which is typical of the Japanese.

Akira, a young Japanese poet and dreamer, has fallen in love with Ruth Vale, an American girl, who upon the death of her father, a missionary, was reared by Noyoshi, the aged father of Akira. Faithful to his father's wish that he marry one of his own people and realizing the barrier which separated him from Ruth, he does not tell his love. When Ruth, a few years after her marriage to a young American living in Japan, dies, Akira promises to protect and love little Blossom, Ruth's child. How Akira gave up his own life in expiation of the crime of Blossom's father, is told in a story full of the high lights of emotional acting and big dramatic moments.

As the faithful Akira, Hayakawa has a role that stirs the human emotions. Those who noted his comedy in "His Birthright," will again marvel at his versatility. From a bizarre imitation of a chimpanzee, with which he amuses little Blossom, and his impromptu stunt of transforming a bell boy into a striking likeness of the Kaiser, to his highly emotional acting and his exhibition of the Jiu Jitsu of the Japanese athlete, is a big range, but he negotiates it admirably.

As in Sessue Hayakawa's first picture, many of the scenes are laid in Japan. The settings and locations show with fidelity the beauty of the Kingdom of Flowers and the quaint and picturesque life of the Nipponese.

Hayakawa is a stickler for verisimilitude, which is evidenced by the cast in this production. Every Japanese character is taken by a real Japanese. What a real Japanese tea-garden looks like is shown in a picturesque scene in which eight genuine Geisha girls perform one of their graceful and dainty dances.

The production was made under the direction of James Young, and the cast includes Jane Novak, Sylvia Bremer and Louis Willoughby. Little Mary Jane Irving, as the child Blossom, has one of the important parts in the production.

"Salome" Makes Hit in Los Angeles.

The critics on the Los Angeles newspapers apparently had to dig up all their best and most enthusiastic adjectives properly to express their admiration for the Theda Bara super-production of "Salome," on the occasion of this play's opening at Clune's Auditorium in that city. Every critic in the city hailed the Fox production, which will have its New York premiere October 6, at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, and declared that Theda Bara had made the greatest success of her career.

"Salome" proved one of the biggest attractions ever booked at Clune's. The capacity crowd that greeted the picture on the opening night was duplicated at every performance during the entire engagement. Special prices prevailed during the run, as they have wherever William Fox has shown this spectacle.

"The Rose of Wolfville" (Broadway Star).

Another of the Alfred Henry Lewis "Wolfville Tales" has been put on the screen for Broadway Star Features progress by Vitagraph, making the fourteenth of the series, and reaching a point where audiences are thoroughly engrossed with the conflicting motives of the highly picturesque characters in the legendary border town. The citizens of Wolfville have become so real to readers of the Lewis books and to motion picture fans that the latest turmoil comes rather as a climax to many preceding it.

The title of this story is "The Rose of Wolfville," and Patricia Palmer again plays the leading role. She appears in town as the new clerk of the "New York Store" and the male population falls in love with her. Two hotheaded young cowpunchers use every art to win her, the more daring going even so far as to kidnap her. Thrills in plenty abound as a result of the action.

B. S. MOSS.

Producing Seven-Reel Feature Based on Modernized Version of "Just Break the News to Mother," by Charles K. Harris.

Anita King Tries a Shallow Dive.

Knowing her acquatic prowess when he wrote "Whatever the Cost," for Anita King, the Outdoor Girl of Plaza pictures, Leslie T. Peacocke worked his climax up to a big rescue scene in which the star dives into the water and saves not only the hero, but the villain as well from drowning.

Miss King was delighted with this opportunity to prove to her admirers that she really can swim—that is, she was delighted with it until after it had been done. The scenes were taken in a rocky cove. Miss King knew she would have to take a shallow dive, but it was not shallow enough to avoid getting several ugly and painful scratches on her face from the sharp rocks.

"Whatever the Cost" will be released October 7 by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

"Our Four Days in Germany" (Fox).

"Our Four Days in Germany" is the title of one of the latest of Bud Fisher's Mutt and Jeff Fox Animated Cartoons. Although Mutt and Jeff spend only four days in Hunland their stay is crowded with thrilling events. The two Americans meet the Crown Prince skating down the Uter den Linden in a flivver after a hard day with the seidel hounds of Berlin. They force the prince to escort them to the royal palace, where they find the Kaiser mounted on his favorite mahogany steed.

Through a subterfuge, Mutt and Jeff take the places of the Kaiser's favorite chefs, so that when the All-Highest orders a "victory dinner" the orders are delivered to them. The dinner is attended by the Kaiser, the Crown Prince and Admiral von Tirpitz, but instead of being a victory dinner it is a banquet of defeat through the machinations of Mutt and Jeff.

Arbuckle to Burlesque Contemporaries.

Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle has been a busy man during the past few weeks, for, in addition to making the picture, "Scraps of Paper," which is his contribution to the National Association's Liberty Loan Committee, he is now nearing the completion of "The Sheriff," his newest comedy for Paramount release. This comedy, described as a fun riot, is said to be a rich satire on the great West as depicted in the usual motion picture thrillers. In fact, it is said that the burlesque of two of the greatest stars of the screen is one of the cleverest things that the mammoth comedian has done.

Fox to Release Seven Big Pictures in October

SEVEN big pictures, representing the four brands of dramatic productions issued by William Fox, will be released during October by the Fox Film Corporation. These seven pictures, it is stated by the Fox offices, not only represent three brands, but they also typify seven widely different forms of dramatic stories.

One of the October releases will be George Walsh in "On the Jump," a rapid-fire action picture, in which the athletic Fox star is said to appear at his best. This picture was directed by R. A. Walsh. Not only is this picture a spirited drama, but it also will have an unusual appeal in that it shows George Walsh as the secret service agent who revealed the existence of a big German slush fund for the subsidization of American newspapers. It will be the first George Walsh picture released under the new Fox Victory Pictures brand.

Another picture in October will feature Evelyn Nesbit in "The Woman Who Gave." Peggy Hyland's second Excel Picture, "Marriages Are Made," described as a production in which Cupid traps a spy and wins a maid, is also on the October schedule. The story was written by E. Lloyd Sheldon and staged by Carl Harbaugh.

Another of the William Fox Big Timely Pictures also will be released in October. This is "Why I Should Not Marry," a powerful morality picture which treats of married life and problems. It has been completed under the supervision of Richard Stanton.

William Farnum in "The Rainbow Trail" will be another Standard October release. It is an adaptation of a novel of the same name by Zane Grey and is a sequel to "Riders of the Purple Sage."

One of the most interesting October releases will be the production featuring Tom Mix in "Treat 'Em Rough," an adaptation of a novel by Charles Alden Seltzer and staged by Lynn Reynolds. To film this picture Tom Mix and his company spent five weeks on a big ranch at Prescott, Ariz., and one of the many stunts Mix performs is that known as "bulldogging the herd."

Under the direction of Arvid E. Gillstrom, who staged the great comedy success, "Swat the Spy!" Jane and Katherine Lee have just completed a fast comedy-drama which will be released the latter part of October.

Good Reports from Fang Comedies.

Since the initial releases of two Charley Fang comedy productions several weeks ago, the venture of presenting a Chinese player in a humurous role turns out to have been well justified. Comments from General Film exchanges indicate that the Oriental star in his quaint characterizations is pleasing audiences. Each of the Charley Fang subjects consists of a one-reel human interest story, in which the principal's roles are of straight comedy type. In fact, the stories incline to the comedy-drama side of the line at times. Such well known players as Jules Cowles and Paul Panzer are in the casts.

Two favorite Charley Fang comedies appear to be "Fang's Fate and Fortune" and "Parson Pepp."

Viola Dana to Return West.

"Diana Ardway," which has been chosen as Viola Dana's next Metro feature production, will be the last picture made by her before she leaves for the Pacific Coast for the winter.

Miss Dana will play the name part of the story from Van Zo Post's clever novel of the same name. John H. Collins is now making the picturization and will direct the five-act feature. Albert H. Kelly again will be his assistant, with John Arnold as cameraman.

Many Booking Applications for the Tarzan Sequel

ANNOUNCEMENT of the release soon by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit of "The Romance of Tarzan" as the sequel to the big novelty feature, "Tarzan of the Apes," has brought hundreds of applications for bookings to the various First National exchanges, according to reports made to the home office during the past week.

Classification of the booking applications shows that, almost without exception, the exhibitors who booked early runs of "Tarzan of the Apes" are again the first to request dates for the sensational sequel production.

"This proves to a certainty," states a First National exhibitor director, "that the slogan adopted by our advertising department for the campaign-to-the-trade copy anticipated the opinion exhibitors generally would have about 'The Romance of Tarzan.' We have urged that advantage be taken of the tremendous amount of advertising and publicity that was given to the first Tarzan production and convert it into a secondary profit on the sequel. We felt that the character of Tarzan was so widely known, and so immensely popular with the theatregoing public, that no one who had seen 'Tarzan of the Apes' would fail to patronize a performance of its concluding chapters if they knew where to go.

"And the reports from the First National exchanges bears out this slogan of 'make your first Tarzan advertising pay you a double return by showing "The Romance of Tarzan".' Franchise holders have advised us that with many applications for booking dates have come statements from exhibitors expressing a strong confidence in the returns they expect entirely from the popularity of the jungle-reared man of fiction in their immediate neighborhoods. Add to this the new business that will be developed for it by the advertising and publicity exhibitors will do in behalf of a special attraction, and one gets some idea of the immense patronage awaiting its release."

Isadore Bernstein, supervising director for the National Film Corporation of America, producers of both "Tarzan of the Apes" and "The Romance of Tarzan," who arrived in New York recently from the Los Angeles studios, has declared his opinion that the sequel production, from the standpoint of originality of story, novelty of situations, scope of plot and real dramatic action, will, in the estimation of every exhibitor who books it and every patron who sees it, outrank even the famous parent feature.

An interesting phase of the results of the advertising thus far done on "The Romance of Tarzan" is the remarkable increase in the bookings for "Tarzan of the Apes." While this production has been playing at top speed, and practically all of the First National exchanges have had their prints dated solid until the latter part of October, they have reported another big volume of applications for bookings from exhibitors who intend to play the parent feature and then show "The Romance of Tarzan" a short time later.

It is expected that First National will announce shortly a list of the bookings so far arranged for "The Romance of Tarzan" with some of the largest circuit and independent theatres in the country.

"The Border Raiders" Leads Pathe October 6

THE Pathe program for the week, beginning October 6, is headed by "The Border Raiders," a stirring Western drama with George Larkin and Betty Compson, produced by Diando and written by Frank Beresford and Jack Cunningham, and directed by Stuart Payton. It is the first of the Pathe Program Features.

The eighth episode of "Hands Up," featuring Ruth Roland, is called "The Fatal Jewels," and revolves around the theft of the gem-incrusted headpiece of the Inca Regent and the exciting events which followed it.

Stan Laurel, the English slapstick comedian, with the sunny smile, is literally hurled before the American public, for the first time on the screen, in "No Place Like Jail," by which we learn that jail is a place of hilarious laughter.

"The Triumph of Transportation" reveals how we are aiding in the war by an enormous production of powerful motor trucks. The Post Travel Series shows Antigua, British West Indies, typically English and patterning all of its customs and habits strictly after the mother country. It is a bit of England set down on the tropics, with many famous naval relics.

The Official War Review gives diversified glimpses of the entire conflict, and is called "Where the Allies Fight"

The Far Flung Battle Line series, sixth issue, deals with the "French Colonial Troops in the War," the natives of French Indo-China, of Senegal, and how they are working for the tricolor. This series is steadily gaining in popularity.

Many Rallies to Mark Release of "Yellow Dog"

AS THE release date for the "Yellow Dog" is approaching the actual campaign against the distributors of veiled Hun propaganda continues to swell in size and enthusiasm, and when the Jewel Productions goes to the exhibitors on November 1 it will be presented in most cities in connection with big rallies of the Anti-Yellow Dog clubs.

Reports from the branch managers of the Jewel exchanges show that many of the clubs in their territories are already planning special demonstrations to take place when the film is shown, and every effort will be made to harness the power of the screen to the personal efforts of the club members in fighting the treacherous rumors started by the agents of the Kaiser.

The latest cities to take up the Yellow Dog drive are Cleveland and Pittsburgh, where the most elaborate preparations for the organization have been perfected and the formation of clubs is now under way.

In Cleveland the Jewel Production will find waiting for its presentation an organization headed by the mayor, with branches in each ward in charge of political workers attached to the mayor's staff. A big parade is being planned. It will be headed by the city officials and be participated in by Boy Scout troops, Red Cross workers and other regular organizations that have joined in the Yellow Dog campaign.

Assurance of co-operation has also come from the school board of Cleveland, and it is expected that excerpts from Henry Irving Dodge's book will be written on the blackboards in the classrooms.

In Pittsburgh all of the newspapers have been co-operating with the organizers of the Yellow Dog clubs, and at the Westinghouse Electric Company a branch of the club has been formed with a membership of over 1,000.

A big demonstration is planned also for that city, and the exhibitors will be in a position to present the picture as a part of the campaign.

Gail Kane's Second Release Ready.

The release date of "The Daredevil," the second in the series of productions starring Gail Kane, which are being made by her own company, Gail Kane Productions, for Mutual, has been set for October 13. The picture was made from the novel written by Maria Thompson Daviess. The story is not only timely, but adapts itself readily to motion pictures. In its leading character it offers a part to Miss Kane that gives her a wide latitude to display her talents. Through the greater portion of the picture Miss Kane appears as a boy. This situation is brought about through her coming to America from France after the death of her father to live with an uncle who is a woman hater.

In support of Miss Kane a fine cast has been gathered which includes Norman Trevor in the leading male role. Mildred Marsh, sister of Mae Marsh, is seen to good advantage in the part of Sue Tomlinson. Duncan McRae plays the role of Armand de Lascelles, a French army officer; Roy Applegate, who is a well known actor of the speaking stage, does Colonel Robert Carruthers. Francis Grandon, who directed Miss Kane's previous release, "Love's Law," also directed this subject.

Mutual exchanges have made all preparations for prompt distribution of "The Daredevil."

General Releases Subtle O. Henry.

Perhaps the most humorously subtle of O. Henry's Stories has been interpreted for the screen as the current offering on the Broadway Star Features program released by General Film. "A Ramble In Aphasia" relates the mysterious wanderings of a Denver lawyer, who forgets who he is and lands in New York to find himself a delegate to a pharmacists' convention. Recognized there as a nationally known figure, he persistently denies his identity. He also encounters there the ghost of an old love. Under dramatic circumstances he is brought to his proper consciousness, and vastly improved in health and spirit. The story is so worked out that the audience is left with a haunting suspicion that the hero is shamming, an offset to the perplexity being the charm of his wife with whom he is reunited. The story is one to cause such debate and only O. Henry himself knew the full depth of his whimsical plot.

Edward Earle plays the frolicsome hero, and Agnes Ayres his puzzled wife, and the direction is by Kenneth Webb, who has handled all the recent O. Henry pictures made by Vitagraph Company for Broadway Star Features. "A Ramble In Aphasia" will be followed by a Wolfville Tale by Alfred Henry Lewis.

Gerard Film Still Draws Record Crowds All Over

HALF-PAGE advertising space purchased by the Industrial Securities Company, of Harrisburg, Ind., and donated to the exhibitor without his knowledge; a record run of 168 performances to a gross of $23,401.75 at the Grand Opera House in Cincinnati; showing to 4,000 people of a total of 12,000 population in Grand Forks, N. D., and leading editorials in newspapers in scores of cities commending exhibitors who showed it, and demanding that every reader patronize it, are some of the recent tributes to the First National Exhibitors' Circuit release, "My Four Years in Germany."

The act of the Industrial Securities Company, of Harrisburg, Ind., is probably unique in the annals of exhibitor activities, and pays a remarkable compliment to motion pictures as an educational medium and a potent force in molding or tempering public opinion, apart from its unprecedented effect on the exhibitor in question. Shortly after an announcement had been made that a local theatre would present "My Four Years in Germany" for three days—up to that time a longer run than any picture had ever been given in Harrisburg—there appeared in one of the local papers a half-page advertisement headed, "Winning the War Three Years Quicker—Saving a Million Murders." The introductory paragraphs read, "If you do not do anything else for a whole week—read every word of this advertisement. It is, perhaps, the only one you ever read in which nothing was offered for sale—in which the advertiser has no wares to offer you."

Then follows a statement by Dr. Theodore Khras, author of the copy, that he had seen "My Four Years in Germany" four times, and that as a result each time he was able to sell more Liberty Bonds. "The seeing of the actual pictured truth of conditions in Germany and Belgium makes one fairly ooze enthusiasm in the matter of licking the German Government to a finish," he said.

The exhibitor knew nothing whatever of the intention of the Industrial Securities Company to publish the advertisement, and, according to his statement, it gave him one of the greatest surprises of his life. The result of it was that the theatre was packed at every performance for the three days, and an arrangement was made immediately with the First National Exchange for a return booking of three days. In addition to breaking all records for duration of initial run and receipts, "My Four Years in Germany," in this instance, is the first production to be booked for a return engagement in Harrisburg of more than one day.

The speculation attending the opening of the famous Gerard picture in the Grand Opera House at Cincinnati was early satisfied, when it settled down to a run of one hundred and sixty-eight performances. When it is considered that "My Four Years in Germany" was shown at popular prices, and not to the advanced figures which have been charged for some of the other specials, the total gross receipts of more than $23,000 are phenomenal.

Rivoli to Show Norma Talmadge Picture.

"The Forbidden City," the latest of Norma Talmadge's Select Pictures, in which she is presented by Joseph M. Schenck, will be shown at the Rivoli Theatre in New York for the entire week of October 6 to 12. This is the first of Miss Talmadge's second series of Select Pictures.

"The Forbidden City" marks Miss Talmadge's return to a character role for the first time in several months. Moreover, it is the first time that she has ever played an Oriental role, "The Forbidden City" being a Chinese story with the scenes laid in Pekin and Manila. The story is by George Scarborough and the scenario is by Mary Murillo. The picture was directed by S. A. Franklin.

Francis McDonald in "Tony America" (Triangle).

Triangle Stars McDonald in "Tony America," Oct. 6

TRIANGLE'S release for the week of October 6 is "Tony America," and presents Francis McDonald as the featured player. He will be recalled for his work with Alma Rubens in "The Painted Lily" and "The Ghost Flower."

This picture is said to have a plot that is strongly dramatic and particularly adapted to this star's powers of impersonation. As Tony is an honest Italian lad, he is led to believe that America is not the land of promise he thought it to be, but a country of stern reality, with almost as much intrigue and treachery in it as his own country by the Mediterranean.

Yvonne Pavis is Rosa Piccano, Rae Godfrey interprets Mamie Dean, who interests herself in the welfare of this young Italian lad, and little Dorothy Giraci is the daughter Giulia.

Thomas N. Heffron directed the picture, which was written by Evelyn Campbell, with scenario by Doris Schroeder. B. H. Wales was the cameraman.

Extensive Billboard Campaign for "The Iron Test"

THE nationwide billboard campaign with which Vitagraph will introduce "The Iron Test," its new serial featuring Antonio Moreno and Carol Holloway, will be inaugurated early in October. Posting will start within a few days and it will be complete all over the United States by October 15. Posting in Canada will follow a little after the start of the campaign on this side of the border.

The twenty-four sheet which Vitagraph will use to put "The Iron Test" before the public is declared to be the finest and most striking which the company has yet put out on a serial. The sketch was made by the artist Madan, who also turned out the company's great twenty-four on "Over the Top," and a photograph of the completed stand shows it to be full of action and rich in color. The scene shows Antonio Moreno and Carol Holloway in one of the thrilling situations from the serial, which was written by Albert E Smith and Cyrus Townsend Brady. Antonio Moreno is shown lashed to a horse, Mazeppa-like, which is tearing along a mountain trail, while Miss Holloway, also mounted, is racing to rescue him before the horse can plunge with him over a precipice.

The background of the scene is done in a rich sky-blue, while the main lettering is in white and the horses and figures of the stars in lifelike colors. The twenty-four is possessed of wonderful carrying power and is certain to attract attention on any stand.

Vitagraph's plans contemplate liberal posting in the key cities and important towns throughout the United States and Canada, and in addition to its own campaign the company will supply free to exhibitors all of the twenty-four sheets they will post in their respective territories. "The Iron Test," like its predecessors, is to be released in fifteen episodes, the first of which will be shown on October 21. The play is declared to abound in thrilling stunts and fine riding.

American Setting for "Private Peat."

In the production of "Private Peat," the Paramount-Artcraft Special, which is to be released October 13, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation asserts it has made the first war picture of feature length in which is incorporated in every scene, in every subtitle, in practically every foot of film, a tremendous patriotic appeal.

In transferring "Private Peat" to the screen the company, with the approval of Private Peat, who himself appears in the leading role, has given it an American setting throughout. Thus the production is pro-American, as well as anti-Hun propaganda, and so skillfully have Scenarioist Charles Wittaker and Director Edward Jose woven together the incidents of New England life, the training camp experiences, and the battle moments, that the production is said to breath the American spirit in every scene and every line.

Baker Hires a Real Theatre.

Glimpses behind the scenes in a real theatre will be a feature of May Allison's newest starring vehicle, "Kate of Kentucky," which has just been completed at Metro's West Coast studios. George D. Baker, manager of production, who, with Tom J. Geraghty, wrote the scenario for Miss Allison's picture, rented the Majestic Theatre in Los Angeles for a day for the purpose of "shooting" the back-stage in the new production.

There are not many of these scenes in the script of "Kate of Kentucky," but Baker was determined that the ones filmed should be absolutely authentic, and correctly convey the atmosphere of the other side of the footlights and the proscenium arch. Baker, an actor once himself, would be satisfied with nothing less, although it might have been cheaper to build a theatre "set" on the studio stage.

Hamilton Club Sees Mutual Films.

"The Temple of Dusk," the second production of the Haworth Pictures Corporation, released through Mutual exchanges October 20, through the courtesy of President James M. Sheldon, of Mutual, had a pre-showing at the Hamilton Club, Chicago, September 20. Roderick Ross, chairman of the motion picture committee of the Hamilton Club, arranged for the showing, and invitations were sent to all members of the club to attend. The members of the club were lavish in their praise of the production. Another Mutual picture, "A Hoosier Romance," was also pre-viewed by the Hamilton Club. Mutual's Screen Telegram has had several showings before the club members.

Gladys Leslie Featured in "The Mating."

"The Mating," the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature which is scheduled for release the week of October 7, presents Gladys Leslie in a role of unusual strength and appeal. It is a real love story of a true-blue American girl from the pen of Millicent Evison, and the screen version has suspense, plenty of mystery and also plenty of action.

The picture was directed at the Brooklyn studio by Frederic Thomson. The star is supported by a cast of unusual strength, including Herbert Rawlison, Forest Robertson, Stephen Carr, John Thomson, Aida Horton, and Francis Grant.

October to Be a Busy Month at World Film Studio

OCTOBER is to be a busy month at the studio of World Pictures at Fort Lee. Over three hundred actors are to be employed in the picturizing of four photoplays that will be completed this month.

Tefft Johnson begins his second picture for the company by directing June Elvidge, Frank Mayo and Madge Evans, heading a large cast in "The Love Defender." The story is by Maravene Thompson, scenariorized by George Du Bois Proctor.

"The Hand Invisible," an original story by Wallace Clifton, with the continuity fabricated by Clara S. Berenger, will serve as a vehicle for Montagu Love. Travers Vale will superintend the making of it into a photoplay. Mr. Love will be supported by Ruriel Ostriche, Virginia Hammond, George Le Guere, Marguerite Gale, William Sorrelle, Martha Mansfield, Kate Lester and others.

Louise Huff will devote her talents to the making of "The Little Intruder." Oscar Apfel will direct. Forrest Halsey, a well known magazine contributor, is responsible for the story. Miss Huff will be supported by George MacQuarrie, Johnnie Hines, Christine Mayo, Stuart Holmes and Albert Hart.

Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley will spend the month of October at work on "Hit or Miss." Harry O. Hoyt and Hamilton Smith are credited with the authorship. Dell Henderson will oversee the making of the picture. Prominent in the supporting company are Jack Drumier, Robert Walker, George Sutton and Escamillio Fernandez.

"A Perfect Lady" Has Good Supporting Cast

A BRILLIANT cast supports Madge Kennedy in Goldwyn's picturization of "A Perfect Lady," the Rosa Stahl stage success by Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf.

Chief in the Goldwyn star's support is Jere Austin, who was Mae Marsh's leading man in her recent Goldwyn success, "All Woman," and who also appears to advantage in the same star's newest Goldwyn Picture, "Hidden Fires." In "A Perfect Lady" Austin has the role of the Rev. David Grayling.

Immensely popular with modern picture devotees, but new to Goldwyn Pictures, is Walter Law, who plays the role of John Griswold, the village deacon. As a stage favorite Law was perhaps best known for his performances in "The Belle of New York," "Mistress Nell" and "The Spoilers."

Rod La Rock, an established Goldwyn favorite, is seen with Madge Kennedy for the first time in "A Perfect Lady."

Previous to his debut in Goldwyn pictures La Rock was prominently cast in "A Corner in Smiths," "Would You Believe It?", "The Long Green Trail," and "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship."

Ben Hendricks, Sr., veteran stage favorite, who was a prominent factor in the success of many Broadway comedy productions, has splendid opportunity to display his ability as a funmaker in the role of Sam Lipman, a burlesque troupe manager.

Harry Spingler is entrusted with an important part in "A Perfect Lady." Spingler was well known in vaudeville circles before making his first screen appearance six years ago. Two other prominent players supporting Madge Kennedy are Agnes Marc and Mae McAdoy.

Clarence G. Badger, who supervised the production of Miss Kennedy's previous success, "The Kingdom of Youth," is the director of "A Perfect Lady."

"A Perfect 36" Miss Normand's Latest.

A prank a minute is Mabel Normand's record in "A Perfect 36," her latest Goldwyn picture. As a boarding house slavey, a travelling saleswoman, a diving girl and an alleged jewel robber, the comedienne gives more of her joyous self than in any of her recent comedy successes.

Right at the start Miss Normand gets in some strong licks as a jokester after her employer sets her to the task of papering a wall. Her novel way of papering having cost her the job, Mabel finds new employment as a traveling waist saleswoman. She's a farce as a saleswoman. Quitting her job, she goes to the beach and becomes a bathing beauty. Her antics with the paste brush and pot are trivial compared with her pranks at the beach.

Vitagraph Starts New Booking Policy Sept. 30

THIS week marks the beginning of a new chapter in the life of Vitagraph, its new booking policy of Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature services now being in active operation. The announcement is made from the home office that September 30 will see the inauguration of Vitagraph service in many of the important theatres of the country which have not been on a regular weekly basis.

Among the hundreds of prominent theatres which have enlisted under the Vitagraph banner for first-run showings under the new plan are the Riviera, of Chicago, which will be one of the handsomest theatres in the country; the Clemmer, Seattle; the Turner & Dahnken chain in California, the Orpheum in Chicago, the Jefferson in Dallas, the Regent in Newark, the New Grand in Montreal; the America, leading theatre in Denver; the New Theatre, in Baltimore; the Park, Boston.

Under its new booking plan, which at the outset provides exhibitors with the dates on which the productions of each Vitagraph will be released during the coming year, Vitagraph will supply eight each of Earle Williams and Alice Joyce productions, and nine each of Bessie Love, Harry T. Morey, Corinne Griffith, and Gladys Leslie productions.

The plan assures exhibitors of getting all the productions of each of the players at fixed intervals of six weeks during the year, so that they may, if they so desire, make up their booking charts for a year in advance certain in the knowledge that they will have their Vitagraph stars on given dates. Vitagraph, by thus arranging its production and releasing plans so definitely, has taken a considerable burden off the shoulders of the exhibitors.

Metro to Build Church for Pennsylvania Town

METRO will build and present a church to a small town in Pennsylvania, in appreciation of the courtesy of its mayor in yielding "the keys of the city" and of its citizens for their promise of aid and co-operation in preparing Metro's great patriotic photodrama, "Wilson or the Kaiser?" The name of this town is for the present being kept a secret because it is such a choice "location," but after the seven acts of "Wilson or the Kaiser?" have been photographed every screen company in the world is welcome to know just where it is, according to Director Charles Miller.

The Pennsylvania town is pure Alsatian in its architecture and general construction and will be used in the Metro picture to represent the home village of Conrad Le Brett, the Alsatian hero (played by Creighton Hale), and as the background of the stirring scenes there acted. The citizens of this village have long been mourning the fact that they have only one church, which is inadequate for their needs, and as a practical token of gratitude Metro has voluntecred to build them another church.

The entire community will take part in the picture, and as the village is apparently a bit of the Old World set down in the Pennsylvania mountains, some colorful and picturesque backgrounds and costumes will be seen. The mayor and citizens are intensely patriotic, and have refused to take payment in money for their share in "Wilson or the Kaiser?" so Richard A. Rowland, Metro's president, feels that the bestowal of a church is a small matter in comparison with the noble spirit of co-operation shown.

Defense Committees Backing Up "Wolves of Kultur"

WHEN "Wolves of Kultur" is released by Pathe on October 20, it will have thousands of patriotic persons throughout the land interested to witness its unfolding, through the hearty co-operation of the Committee of National Defense in various states, which believe that the fifteen-episode serial, produced by Western Photoplays, Inc., while containing all the elements of popular entertainment, carries a constantly repeated call to patriotic service and is an effective revelation of the operations of the secret enemies still at work at plot and propaganda in this country.

The exhibitors' showing of the first episodes of the serial on the New York Roof on Tuesday last was attended by representatives of all of the patriotic societies in New York.

It is not alone one production carrying a remembered lesson, but in effect fifteen separate productions of thrilling romance and daring and self-sacrificing work that the world be made free to democracy. Each episode is a story by itself.

Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, has been in correspondence for some time with the heads of the State branch of the Council of National Defense, and is gratified by the ready and hearty manner in which they have promised to bring the power and influence of their organizations to establishing the fact that "Wolver of Kultur" should be seen by every person who loyally stands behind the pushing of the war to ultimate victory.

Joseph A. Golden, the author and producer of "Wolves of Kultur," and president of Western Photoplays, Inc., brought to its making a wide knowledge of the stage and the screen. Actor and stage director, including two years for Charles Frohman in various stock companies, he later devoted himself to writing and producing his own plays. One of the most successful of these was "The Countess Nadine," used as a starring vehicle for Blanche Walsh for several seasons.

In addition to his activities as a writer, director and business manager, Mr. Golden supervised the production of many successful features, including "The Warning" with Henry Kolker; "The Libertine" with John Mason; "Would You Forgive" with Holbrook Blinn; and "Redemption" with Evelyn Nesbit.

In the casting of "Wolves of Kultur" it was a happy choice to have enlisted the services of such a popular screen star as Leah Baird. Sheldon Lewis, who is famous as the arch-villain in the most famous of the Pathe serials, is a notable factor.

Charles Hutchison is the leading man. All of the company, which included Edmund Dalby, Betty Howe, Peirot, the racing chauffeur and aviating high-jumper; Carl Dane—all of these gave 100 per cent. in making for the best results.

Capital City in Select Picture.

Marion Davies' latest Select Picture, "The Burden of Proof," which is now being shown in first run theatres throughout the United States, is one of the best "Washington-in-a-nutshell" souvenirs ever distributed. Although "The Burden of Proof" is hardly in the picture post-card class, it provides the distant citizen with a better conception of his national capital than any postal card album or souvenir picture book ever published.

With the exception of a very few location shots, every scene in the big Marion Davies picture was taken in Washington. Julius Steger, Miss Davies' director, was fortunate in obtaining permission to shoot a number of scenes which cameramen have never before been able to get.

Among the more remarkable scenes are exteriors and interiors of the Army and Nevy Building. This building provides one of the greatest difficulties in Washington to visitors.

Equally interesting views show the Department of Justice building, the new Union station, White House, Capitol and numerous others.

"Crashing Through" for Convention Hall.

Arrangements were completed last week by which "Crashing Through to Berlin" will be shown under the auspices of the Liberty Loan Committee October 9 and 10 in the Convention Hall at Kansas City. This is the second time that Jewel Productions has had one of its pictures exhibited as the big feature of a Loan drive in that historic show place.

The previous occasion was with the use of the film "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," during the last Loan drive. The latter picture at that time was witnessed by 75,000 persons in two days. Convention Hall is a huge structure, whose seating arrangement is planned so that four pictures can be exhibited in the hall at one time. There are four screens established in the centre in the form of a perfect square.

"Crashing Through to Berlin" will be shown on the 9th for the especial benefit of the Liberty Loan workers and their families as well as the general public. On the 10th the showing will be for everybody.

"The Goddess of Lost Lake" Is Louise Glaum's Latest

IN The Goddess of Lost Lake," Louise Glaum's latest play, now being filmed at the Brunton studios, and soon to be released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, the star does a change of character out of sheer mischief which resembles the famous case of Jekyll and Hyde. It is the comedy relief situation which accompanies the serious drama of the play.

The heroine, though a quarter-breed Indian, has graduated with high honors from college, and is as white as white can be, in nature and actions as well as appearance. But when she goes back to her prospector father and his little cabin among the huge pines and lofty mountains of the wild country in which he has spent his life in the vain search for gold, a very English hero comes to visit them on his vacation, and the way she dons the buckskins and beads, moccasins and very manners of an ignorant, withal very pretty squaw, is something to chuckle over even while we know that big, serious troubles are gathering over the mischiefmaker.

In contrast to her picturesque bead and straight-braided, feather-and-band ornamented hair, the star is seen in the tasty garb of civilization; diametrically opposite to her assumed stolidity and stoicism of poise is her polished and delightful conversation, and when in the denouement all of these things hit the hero at once, including a sight of her college diploma showing that she is a Bachelor of Arts, it is no wonder he is staggered and has to go away to readjust his ideas of her.

Alice Howell Camps Out.

The many new and varied uses to which a camping trailer outfit may be put to are comically depicted in "Society-in-Tents," a Century comedy featuring Alice Howell and Hughie Mack and directed by Vin Moore. Miss Howell herself suggested the story after her own experience with camping out in a trailer which she went through on her vacation.

Pathe's Five-Color, Twenty-four-Sheet Poster Exploiting "Wolves of Kultur."

Select Will Distribute Dixon's "The One Woman"

SELECT announces that it has acquired for distribution through its exchanges the special attraction, "The One Woman," the latest photoplay by Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman" ("The Birth of a Nation"), "The One Woman" is based on Mr. Dixon's famous novel of the same name, which, when published a few years ago, quickly attained one of the most sensational successes ever scored by a work of fiction in this country, its edition running into the hundred thousands.

Weight is given to this announcement by Select, which unhesitatingly presents "The One Woman" as one of the large special attractions of recent years. Without making any predictions as to its reception by the country, Select places itself on record in pronouncing the picture an unusually fine piece of work, telling a story of absorbing interest, superbly directed and splendidly acted. The Select Company will bring to the distribution of "The One Woman" a special campaign of advertising and publicity commensurate with the value of the production. Not only will the picture consistently be kept to the front in the trade journals, but other channels of advertising will be utilized. A striking twenty-four-sheet printed in six colors is now coming from the press, and will soon make its appearance on well selected stands in prominent locations. Other posters are being prepared with great care and at extra expense, all the paper for this subject being printed in six colors. It is the purpose of the Select organization to put its entire force at the command of wide-awake exhibitors in order that the full box office possibilities of this big special attraction may be fully realized.

It is in the theme of "The One Woman" and the manner in which it is presented that the greatest interest in the production lies. The story is 100 per cent. strong in "The One Woman." Starting with this advantage the production of the photoplay has been carried to completion with skill in all departments. "The One Woman" comes to the screen so well rounded in theme, in direction, in technical presentation, in cast, and in assembly and continuity that the picture is at once placed beyond the valid objections to many pictures presented as special attractions. "The One Woman" holds out promise of exceptional box office returns.

Mr. Dixon's story deals with a subject that will arouse controversy. This is the modern conflict now being waged between representatives of the established order of society and those radical socialists who would push the tenets of their creed of personal liberty to an extreme that would mean the dissolution of marriage and the break-up of the home.

In selecting a man to direct "The One Woman" the producers were guided by the desire to secure a person who would combine technical genius with a complete intellectual grasp of the material contained in Thomas Dixon's remarkable book. Such a man was finally discovered in the person of Reginald Barker. Prior to his connection with this production, Barker directed "Carmen of the Klondike," and in addition put on a large number of the most successful plays released by the Triangle-Ince organization.

The players who appear in the Thomas Dixon special make up a cast that may be described as "all-star." Lawson Butt, who takes the part of Frank Gordon, the radical minister, is one of the most talented English actors now appearing on the screen. Clara Williams, who swept into wide popularity by her handling of the title role in "Carmen of the Klondike," adds an even deeper note to her delineation of the character of Kate Ransom, the woman of wealth and unbridled emotions. The part of Mark Overman, financial power, friend and later rival of Gordon for the mercurial affections of Kate Ransom, is impressively portrayed by Herschel Mayall.

Adda Gleason, whose acting of the title part in "Ramona" endeared her to thousands of film fans the world over, appears as Ruth Gordon, the faithful and self-sacrificing wife of the misguided egotist. Thurston Hall, who has been featured in support of Louise Glaum in several of her biggest successes, is seen to pleasing advantage in the part of Governor Morrison. The character of Van Meter, richest and most influential of the trustees of the church from which Gordon is ousted because of his socialistic outbursts, is handled with consummate skill by J. J. Dowling. Bobby and Lucy, the Gordon children, are played by Ben Alexander, who will be remembered for his exceptional acting of the small boy's part in "Hearts of the World," and little Mary Jane Irving, the diminuitive emotional actress who shared plaudits with William S. Hart in "The Square Deal Man."

Thomas Dixon and Harry Chandlee prepared the novel for the screen, the final continuity being the work of E. Richard Schayer.

"Yellow Dog" Publicity Estimated at $500,000

BACKED up by figures and the evidence of newspaper clippings, the Universal Film Company officially states that the Jewel production, "The Yellow Dog," has already had five hundred thousand dollars worth of advance publicity, and it is estimated that half that much more will be given before the production is released on November 3.

No other picture ever produced has had this overwhelming volume of advance publicity, and Charles J. Giegerich, national organizer of the Anti-Yellow Dog clubs, and publicity manager for the campaign, says it exceeds the combined advance publicity of any ten productions released to date.

Practically every newspaper from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast has given space to "The Yellow Dog," and many of them have published series of articles on the general news pages, as well as giving space in the editorial columns for comment on the practical side of "The Yellow Dog" story.

To have the theme of a modern picture drama receive such wide editorial discussion is unique in the history of motion pictures, but having first attracted the official attention of state and city officials and then inspired a nation-wide movement to curb the dangerous habit of incontinent rumormongering, "The Yellow Dog" acquired local interest everywhere, and commanded editorial recognition.

Special magazine articles and trade paper publicity have not been taken into consideration by the company in the summary of advance notices. Only newspaper space was considered, and the estimate of its value is made on a low basis of the rates charged by daily papers for reading notice advertisements.

"Borrowed Clothes" Is New Name for Weber Story

AFTER much heralding from the coast, the latest production by Lois Weber and Phillip Smalley, originally entitled "Orange Blossoms," is announced as ready for release November 4 under a new title. The picture now is called "Borrowed Clothes."

Its sponsors declare that aside from the other attributes it possesses, "Borrowed Clothes" will prove a thriller by reason of the fire scenes which are depicted in it for several hundred feet. Hundreds of extra players in bathing and holiday costume take part in this spectacle, which occurs on a beach. Miss Weber adapted the film from a story by Marion Orth. Mildred Harris takes the leading role as Mary Kirk.

The homely title represents the vital twist in the story. Figuratively it suggests the whole experience of a person who steps out of her preordained environment and attempts to dwell in another. That is what befalls the heroine.

The scene of the fire at the beach is one of the most audacious spectacles ever filmed. A panic occurs in the shadow of the flame and smoke clouds and the resort buildings are seen collapsing like tinder boxes.

Jack Cohn Talks About Scoops in Film Weeklies

"THE news pictorial business," said Jack Cohn, "is the greatest business in the whole world." With this prelude Cohn discussed the strife for scoops in the news pictorial game. Then it was revealed that as editor of Universal's three news film departments, he had just scored two or three scoops.

They were principally on affairs relating to the Fourth Liberty Loan. The Animated Weekly and Current Events were the first services to release Liberty Loan films after the official time for such pictures had come. These scoops were punchy cartoon series drawn by Hy Mayer.

A raft of other pictures in the Universal service put over special propaganda for the recruiting of men in the aeronautic division and for the mobilization of nurses and money for the Red Cross.

Finally the Animated Weekly made a pinch hit scoop for the New York division of the Liberty Loan by producing an animated cartoon of Uncle Sam, from an original drawing that had won the praise of the Loan Committee. The cartoon was drawn by George M. Unger, a page in the Stock Exchange. It pictures Uncle Sam with an unusually strong, determined facial expression, and has been labeled "Uncle Sam's Fighting Face."

Critics Praise Will Rogers on Screen.

New Yorks newspaper critics of motion pictures heartily praised Rex Beach's first production for Goldwyn star series, "Laughing Bill Hyde." And in doing so they but reflected the attitude of audiences which for a week crowded the Rivoli—audiences, which had read the famous Beach novel and had seen Will Rogers, the featured player in the screen version, on the stage.

Birth of a Nation Syndicate to Handle "Mickey"

THE W. H. Productions Company announce that The Birth of a Nation Syndicate, formed to handle a series of big special features, has purchased the rights to "Mickey," starring Mabel Normand, for the entire United States, with the exception of New York, which has already been sold to the Magnet Film Exchange. "Mickey" will be the first production launched by this syndicate.

In closing this deal the W. H. Productions Company have agreed to co-operate as much as possible with this syndicate in exploiting the production, and the advertising campaign already inaugurated by W. H. will be utilized in every way. Negotiations are now under way for a prominent Broadway theatre for a preliminary showing.

This announcement clears up the mystery which has shrouded the releasing arrangements for this much heralded production, on which an extensive publicity campaign has been in progress for some time. Through the talking machine companies, music roll and song distributors, together with campaigns in magazines and newspapers, also by means of booklets, cut-outs, window displays, special announcements, leaflets, etc., it is estimated that many millions of persons in this country are now or will be familiar with "Mickey" before its presentation.

With the exception of Canada, South Africa, Egypt, Switzerland, Argentine, Uruguay and Paraguay, the entire world's rights on this picture have been disposed of.

Steiner Will Issue Two Jesters a Month

TO MEET the demand for the Jester Comedies, which have been on the market for nearly a year, William Steiner has decided to release Jesters on a two-a-month basis, commencing November 1, and on the 15th and the 1st thereafter.

Pursuant to the new policy the playing personnel of the Jester Comedy Company has been materially increased, and among those who will be seen besides Twede-Dan and Nilde Babette are Jimmy Aubrey, the well known comedian; Pearl Sheppard, who is well known in the comedy field, and A. Rustrelli, who, no doubt, will be remembered by the fans in connection with Max Linder.

To the direction staff, William Seiter, a comedy specialist, has been added. Up to the present time there has been eight Jester Comedy releases. The first release under the new plan will be "Camouflage," followed by "Some Baby."

Excellent Bookings for Hall Caine's "Manx-Man"

IT PAYS to know the exhibitor personally," says Sales Director Kempner, of the Manx-Man company, "and every manufacturer ought to do it through skilled personal representatives. They can dissect the picture for the theatre man and bring out its every exploitation point. Of course the cooler weather has been a help, but the personal contact work of the representatives is mostly responsible for the increase in bookings during September. The Hall Caine story has played more important theatres during the present month than in the three preceding ones."

Special Representative Weiner, operating from the Goldwyn Boston office, visited Quincy, New Bedford, Fall River, Weymouth, Plymouth, Lowell, Waltham and Roxbury, and it is announced that he signed up for the picture in every one. "The Manx-Man" is playing a return at the Emery Theatre, Providence, and is also being played during the present week in three St. Louis theaters—the Strand, Shenandoah and Park.

"Wives of Men" Arouses Interest.

Since the engagement of "Wives of Men," starring Florence Reed, at the Casino Theatre, New York, exhibitors all over the country have been inquiring about bookings. This picture is a drama of to-day, a story of a wedded woman's life, and is said to combine an absorbing plot with a lavish production and a series of surprising situations. Florence Reed is said to have one of her strongest emotional roles and to have taken full advantage of the opportunity. In addition Miss Reed displays a number of up-to-date and startling gowns especially designed for this production.

Doll-Van Will Handle Gaumont News Service

THE Gaumont Company announces a redistribution of territory in Indiana and Illinois.

In future the Doll-Van Film Corporation, Merchants Bank Building, Indianapolis, will handle the Gaumont News and Graphic for the entire state of Indiana, except the counties of Lake, LaPorte, Porter, St. Joseph and Elkhart, which, being near Chicago, will receive their supply of these independent news reels from the Celebrated Players Film Corporation, of 207 So. Wabash avenue, Chicago.

The Doll-Van Film Corporation will also distribute the News and Graphie in that portion of Illinois embraced in the counties of Edgar, Clark, Crawford, Lawrence, Richland, Clay, Wayne, Edwards, Wabash, White, Hamilton, Saline, Gallatin, Hardin and Pope. The remaining portion of Illinois is included in the territory supplied by the Celebrated Players Film Corporation.

Tourneur's Second Film Has Many Unique Points

MAURICE TOURNEUR'S second independent production now in course of filming is unique in many ways. For one thing, it is claimed to be remarkable in the number of beautiful women utilized in telling the story and the few men necessary to the unfolding of the plot.

"My new picture," says Mr. Tourneur, "reflects the spirit of the day. Women—women—women—everywhere! In personnel it is distinctly a war-time production, although its story but briefly touches upon the great war. We find women in every position these days, and it is quite natural to turn out an almost wholly feministic production."

The story of the new photo-offering is being kept secret. However, it is the work of Mr. Tourneur, and the production is said to be a veritable revue of beautiful womanhood. The releasing arrangements are in the hands of Hiller & Wilk, Inc. The title selected for the production is "Woman."

Gaumont News Shows First American-Built Caproni

GAUMONT NEWS NO. 27, released on Tuesday, September 24, shows the successful test of the first Caproni plane built in the United States. Equipped with three Liberty motors and carrying a load of a ton and a half, this Italian type flying machine easily reached an altitude of 14,000 feet, and more than fulfilled the expectations of our Aviation Corps.

The reception tendered the first royal visitor this country has welcomed in years is also photographed in this issue of the News. His Royal Highness, Prince Axel, of Denmark, meets the President and members of the Cabinet in Washington. He is in this country to study our navy, and it is hoped that his visit will be another additional bond which will increase the good feelng existing between his country and ours.

Among the many other news subjects in this issue of the News are some showing the harvesting of war gardens by soldiers. An unusually interesting subject of some length to start the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign completes the reel.

Gaumont Graphic No. 27, released on Friday, September 27, shows the elaborate preparations the Aviation Corps is making over here for a little call on the Kaiser very soon. The saving of California's $14,000,000 grape crop by a quick mobilization of women, the voting of President Wilson in the recent primaries, activities of soldiers and women who are harvesting crops during the scarcity of farm labor, the work of the Red Cross, etc., etc., are included with other topics of current interest.

Cummins to Handle "The Submarine Eye"

SAMUEL CUMMINS, of Washington, D. C., announces that after considerable negotiations they have secured from Williamson Brothers rights to their under-water picture, "The Submarine Eye," which he will exhibit as a road show in Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia, Virginia and North Carolina.

Mr. Cummins states that this production will be handled in the same manner as at the Lyric Theatre, New York, and Studebaker in Chicago, and that only first-class theatres at top prices will be considered. This picture will open some time in November in either Washington or Baltimore after an extensive advertising campaign.

Mundstuk Closes Big Deal for Twenty Arrow Films

W. E. SHALLENBERGER, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, has just closed what is claimed to be the largest state right proposition ever consummated for the State of Michigan.

Dave Mundstuk, president of the Strand Features, without even a screening of the productions, but solely upon the representations of Dr. Shallenberger as to the character of the attractions, and an examination of the advertising matter, signed contracts for the following releases: Twelve two-reel reissues—Anna Little Western dramas, "The Sunset Princess," starring Marjorie Daw; "The Woman's Law," a reissue starring Florence Reed; "Her Aviator," "The Perfect Model," a reissue of "Inspiration," starring Audrey Munson, and the following five-reel reissues, starring Harold Lockwood and May Allison: "The Web of Intrigue," "The Fire of Hope," "Human Shuttles," "The Shadow of Fear."

In connection with this deal Mr. Mundstuk stated:

"In all my experience as an exhibitor, producer and state right exchange man I have never closed any deal involving so much money, but the controlling factor was the spirit of co-operation of the Arrow Film Corporation, which in effect guarantees a profit on the transaction, even though the purchase is an outright sale without any strings attached to it.

The state right field in Michigan has never been in a more flourishing condition, and I merely fortified myself with box-office attractions to meet the growing demand on the part of exhibitors for independent productions.

Petrova's "Panther Woman" About Ready for Release

THE negative of the fifth special Petrova production, "The Panther Woman," has been cut and edited and is now in the hands of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company. The First National Exhibitors' Circuit, which has distributed the four previous Petrova vehicles, will also handle the marketing arrangements for "The Panther Woman." "The Panther Woman" is a picturization of the celebrated novel, "Patience Sparhawk and Her Times." The book is from the pen of Gertrude Atherton, one of the foremost American authors. It tells a vivid story of the battle for the life of a woman wrongly accused of murder. Directed by Ralph Ince and photographed by Harry S. Harris, it contains a notable cast in support of Madame Olga Petrova, headed by Rockcliffe Fellowes. Among the other players are Tefft Johnson, Vernon Steele, Frederick Truesdale, Gene Burnell, Matilda Baring and Norma Selfert.

Announcement of the release date for "The Panther Woman" will be made in the near future from the offices of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Sales of the Week

ARROW FILM CORPORATION reports the sale of rights to twenty of their productions for the state of Michigan in another article in this issue.

The Doll-Van Film Corporation has secured rights to Gaumont News reels for Indiana, except Lake, La Porte, Porter, St. Joseph and Elkhart counties.

Announcement of sale of rights on "The Hun Within Our Gates" to Bell Film Corporation for western Pennsylvania, Southwestern Film Corporation for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas; Criterion Film Service for Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, North Carolina and South Carolina, is made by the Arrow Film Corporation.

The C. C. Hite Attractions of Cincinnati has secured Ohio rights; Strand Features, Detroit, the Michigan rights, and Keystone Distributing Company, Philadelphia, the eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey rights to "Hun Within Our Gates" from the Arrow Film Corporation. In addition the Unity Photoplays Company of Chicago has secured the Illinois and southern New Jersey rights to this production.

Warwick Film Aids Loans Drive.

In connection with Captain Robert Warwick's Liberty Loan message from the front, Harry Rapf Productions report that great interest is being aroused in "The Accidental Honeymoon," the last production in which Captain Warwick appeared before entering the service of his country, and that exhibitors in all sections of the country are booking this production, which in addition to its entertaining qualities also boosts the Liberty Loan.

Kaufman Specials Handling "Topics."

Kaufman Specials, Memphis, which recently secured Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi rights to "Topics of the Day," a weekly release, based on clever, timely sayings secured by the Literary Digest from various periodicals published throughout the world, reports that their first release was offered to exhibitors on September 15, and judging from the rapidity with which bookings are being received it will be necessary to purchase additional prints.

This company, of which Abe H. Kaufman is president and general manager, has also received the third Shorty Hamilton five-reel feature distributed by Ernest Shipman, entitled "The Pen Vulture," and are sub-distributing in a portion of Tennessee for the Big Feature Rights Corporation of Louisville. One feature a week is now being received, the first four being "The Mad Lover," "On Trail," "Alimony" and "Marvelous Maciste."

Stills of Arrow Feature Requested by Government

THE Arrow Film Corporation, distributors of the six-part production, "Huns Within Our Gates," has received a request from Colonel C. W. Weeks, of the Historical Branch of the War Department, for a collection of the still photographs made from that production, stating that the still plates are to be incorporated in the permanent records of the War Plan Division of the General Staff as evidence of the part the motion picture companies have played in the present war.

"Huns Within Our Gates" is said to be the first war propaganda picture in which there does not appear a uniform, and in which a representative of none of the Allied powers is shown.

The story was inspired by the proclamation of President Wilson warning loyal citizens against engaging in conversation with unknown persons concerning the plans of our Government.

Unique Story in Gaumont Serial.

Though the adventurer whose escapades furnish numerous thrills in the Gaumont serial, "The Hand of Vengeance," is continually outwitting a clever detective, it is claimed that this serial should not be classed as a criminal or "underworld" story, but that, primarily, it is a story of action, adventure and ingenuity. But it is also a love story filled with heart-interest, and one which will satisfy men, women and children.

There are no automatons, but every character has a decided personality. These flesh and blood characters are portrayed by an all-star cast. The state rights distributors report excellent business on this serial, and many of them have doubled their order for prints.

Dolores Cassinelli to Remain in Films.

Dolores Cassinelli, who is featured with E. K. Lincoln in Leonce Perret's first independent production, "Lafayette, We Come," is well known as an opera singer, and it is announced that she recently refused a flattering offer from a prominent impresario in Chicago to return to the concert stage. She will remain in motion pictures, and at the present time is at Great Neck, L. I., working in connection with E. K. Lincoln on the second of the series of patriotic Perret productions, entitled "Stars of Glory," which will picturize the heroic conduct of our fighting men at sea.

Elliott Is Author of "Pals First."

Another well known work of fiction by a prominent author will find its way to the screen next month when Metro will release the Screen Classics, Inc., production of "Pals First." It is a romantic story written by Francis Perry Elliott Harold Lockwood is the star.

WOBBER NAMED FILM DIVISION DIRECTOR

Paramount's Pacific Coast Manager in Charge of Propaganda Pictures in Twelfth Federal District

By T. A. Church, 1507 North St., Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Herman Wobber, manager of the Pacific Coast division of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has been appointed director of the motion picture division of the Liberty Loan Publicity Department in the Twelfth Federal Reserve District, which embraces California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, Idaho, Utah, Alaska and the Hawaiian Islands. He entered upon this patriotic work with characteristic energy, and within a few hours after his appointment had a campaign of action outlined and was busy gathering a staff of assistants. District directors, who will have charge of the distribution of propaganda film in the various distributing centers, have been selected as follows: H. G. Ballance, Los Angeles; C. M. Hill, Portland, Ore.; H. G. Rosebaum, Seattle, Wash.; and Louis Marcus, Salt Lake City. Leon Netter, formerly of San Francisco, and who returned to this city a short time ago to join the navy, has been placed in charge of the distribution of film in this territory.

Thirty-six films, donated to the Government by leading film stars and producers, will be handled and three hundred and fifty prints will be used in the Twelfth Federal Reserve District. Plans are being made to give these productions the widest possible publicity, and it is believed that more people will be reached through the medium of the screen than by any other form of communication. Film exchange managers, exhibitors and moving picture operators have signified a willingness to co-operate to the full extent of their ability in securing a wide distribution of these subjects and in caring for them. New booking methods have been decided upon, and instead of films being returned to exchanges by each theatre, a relay system has been advised and they will be sent from house to house, where this is practicable. The Government has recognized the value of work of this kind and arrangements have been made with the postal authorities by which country exhibitors will be permitted to ship the films by parcel post under a franking permit.

Director Wobber is being assisted in perfecting the plans for distribution by a committee which includes Sol Lesser, Leon Netter, William J. Citron and Louis Reichert.

Pathe Manager Off for Conference.

E. O. Child, manager of the local branch of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., left recently for New York to attend a conference of branch managers, and will be away for about two weeks. Film Row will seem rather quiet until his return, when the latest from Broadway, told as only he can tell it, will be eagerly consumed.

Knappen is Dee-lighted.

H. L. Knappen, who arrived recently from Denver to take charge of the local Select office, is about the proudest man in the United States, declaring that nothing could have pleased him more than this appointment. He states that the growth of the city during his absence of two years is but little short of marvelous, and that conditions in the moving picture business impress him as being splendid. Immediately upon his arrival he inspected the new California Theatre, of which he had heard so much, and declared that it was doubtless the finest in the United States. During the previous stay of Mr. Knappen in this city as manager of the International Film Service, he won an enviable reputation for himself as a business builder, and some of his publicity stunts are still the wonder of the local trade.

Strand Manager Honored.

The assistance rendered the United States Government by the Strand Theatre in the various war activities of the past year and a half was officially recognized and rewarded on the evening of September 20, when the State Council of Defense formally presented Manager Leo Weinberger with an official certificate from Washington making him a member of the theatre division of the "Four Minute Men." A community sing was held in connection with the presentation.

Sol Lesser Buys State Rights.

Sol L. Lesser has purchased the state rights to "The Natural Law," from the play of that name, for California, Arizona and Nevada. The prints of the first episodes of "The Hand of Vengeance" are now at hand, and the All-Star Feature Distributors, Inc., has commenced booking this serial.

Coast Managers Change.

William Alexander, formerly Pacific Coast district manager for the Parex Film Corporation, has resigned to take up similar work for the United Picture Theatres Company, and was in San Francisco recently to arrange for the opening of an office with the General Film Company. F. M. Steele, formerly manager of the Parex branch at Los Angeles, has been made district manager for this concern and will shortly visit all the exchanges in this territory. Edward L. Cowles, formerly in charge of publicity work in this territory for Bluebird and Jewel productions, is now connected with the local Parex office as salesman, and met with every flattering success on his first trip down the Coast.

Fotoplayer Installation at Ellis Island.

It is a far cry from the Golden Gate to Sandy Hook, but a Fotoplayer made in San Francisco is in steady operation in the Immigration Building at Ellis Island, New York, now used by the Government as a receiving station for sailors. Many men who have manipulated these instruments in Pacific Coast moving picture houses have passed through this station, and those in charge advise that it is seldom that there is no one on hand familiar with the working of the Fotoplayer.

The receiving station has been fitted up with a theatre through the generosity of Edith Kingdon Gould, of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense, and entertainments are given here along the lines of those presented at Liberty Theatres or Y. M. C. A. houses throughout the country where soldiers or sailors are stationed. The theatre seats 1,000 and the instruments and furnishings represent an outlay of about $10,000.

Secures Big Advertising for "America's Answer."

America's answer to the Hun means something to everybody, and in an attempt to reach as many people as possible with the second official war picture, "America's Answer," the management of the Rialto Theatre, San Francisco, has gone out of the beaten path and has enlisted the aid of the business men of the city in advertising the engagement at this house. Distinctive cuts bearing the legend: "Uncle Sam urges you to see 'America's Answer.' Now at the Rialto Theatre." were prepared and advertisers in the daily papers were asked to make use of these.

The local Chamber of Commerce, which has a membership of about five thousand, was appealed to, and this organization published a description of the film in its weekly news organ, reproduced the cut prepared for advertisers and urged its members to co-operate with the Government in giving it the desired publicity. Many firms followed this suggestion, and for the first time in this city a moving picture has been advertised by department stores and other concerns making a free use of space.

The management of this theatre did not stop, however, with its unique plan of advertising, but presented the production with a one act playlet, "An American Answer," by Paul Gerson, used as a prologue.

Local Concern to Make Picture.

The Liberty Feature Film Company, with headquarters at 376 Sutter street, is preparing to commence work on a ten-reel patriotic picture, "Don't Bit the Hand that Feeds You." The picture will be filmed here and in the suburban city of San Rafael.

Florence Turner Visits San Francisco.

Florence Turner paid San Francisco a visit recently and announced that she would soon be hard at work in a California studio on a stirring war drama, "The Patriotic Mother."

Loie Fuller Lecturing with Pictures.

Loie Fuller, the famous dancer of past glory, is touring the West with moving pictures under the patronage of the Queen of Belgium, the views shown depicting work that the women in France are doing for their country. Several thousand feet of these pictures were recently projected in Photo Player Hall for the benefit of Red Cross workers, and a running talk on the subjects was given by her.

Alhambra Dispenses with Orchestra.

As a patriotic war measure the Alhambra Theatre has done away with its orchestra, thereby releasing six men for government work. A Deluxe Style 50 Fotoplayer has been installed under the direction of the new manager, Frank L. Brown, formerly of Boston, and the new form of music is giving full satisfaction.

PRICE OF ADMISSION TEN PEACH PITS

Rochester Exhibitor Aids in Collecting Many Barrels of Fruit Stones for Army Masks

By L. B. Skeffington, 61 Main St. East, Rochester, N. Y.

MANAGER FRED J. SARR, of Fay's Theatre, has adopted a novel method of popularizing his house and at the same time helping the United States Government win the war. Last week he advertised that beginning on Monday the box office of his theatre would accept peach pits for tickets, the same as money. Ten pits would secure one ticket, and each and every person could bring as many peach pits as he or she wished, as there would be no restriction on the number of tickets to be given to any person. It was also announced that these tickets would be good any time until November 1. It was pointed out that the Government used the peach pits to make carbon, which is placed in the gas masks worn by American soldiers on the firing line. This carbon neutralizes the effects of the poisonous German gas and saves the lives of the fighters. One hour after the box office opened on Monday Manager Sarr placed a barrel of peach pits on exhibition in the lobby. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the third barrel was overflowing. When the evening crowds started to turn in their peach pits it was a case of filling barrel after barrel until it seemed that the people were bringing them in wagon loads. The idea proved very successful, and the filled barrels were lined up on the street in front of the theatre, where they were photographed, with Manager Sarr, by several local newspaper photographers.

Does Good Business With Same Programs.

The Family and Strand theatres are now showing the same pictures on Sundays and both houses seem to be doing a good business. It has been figured out that it is easy to attract the people when they know that in addition to seeing a good show they will secure a seat without having to wait in the line at the box office, or to have to stand in the back of the house waiting for seats to empty. The Strand and the Family are both down town, within a block of each other. Showing the same pictures at both houses was the result of the huge crowds that lined up at either house, according to the show being presented. Now a uniformly good bill is presented and much of the crowding and waiting is avoided.

Show Appreciation of Stoffel's Kindness.

Joe Stoffel, of the Grand Theatre, has received a huge bequet of flowers from the children of a local school that he recently entertained at a matinee. Joe booked a bill especially for the edification of the kiddies, and was on the job himself to see that they enjoyed it. The kids have now officially informed Joe that they did.

A Little Bit About Harry I. Garson.

It is not generally known that a Rochester man is rapidly forcing his way to the front rank in the motion picture industry. Harry I. Garson, a son of Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Garson, of this city, who for several years was actively engaged in business here, is only thirty-four years old, but his gross takings for a year are in the neighborhood of a million.

Always an immaculate dresser, Garson left Rochester to enter the tailoring business in Troy. He was successful from the start—for he dressed the Trojans as he dressed himself, ultra-fashionable. But the tailoring business was not exciting enough for him, so he utilized his spare moments in organizing country clubs, crack amateur baseball teams, tennis tournaments, etc., until finally he cast an observing eye on the then virtually new motion picture field.

The result was that young Garson secured a lease on the Broadway-Strand Theatre, in Detroit, a theatre that had been passed up by every motion picture manager that it had been offered to as the prize lemon. Many people laughed when Garson took over the "cold storage plant," but to-day it is one of the best paying houses in the United States. Garson then opened two exchanges of his own, the Harry I. Garson Productions and the Broadway Exchange.

Garson made money in the exchange business, and began to look at the producing end of the industry. He signed a long term contract with Clara Kimball Young. Before the ink on the contract was scarcely dry he sold the pictures outright for four years at a big profit. Under his management Miss Young made some of the best pictures of her career.

Garson also signed Blanche Sweet, who has just completed "The Hushed Hour," under his management. Marshal Neilan has been engaged by Garson as supervising director and will have general oversight of the making of all of his productions.

Soldiers Thank Farren for Smokes.

Every mail from overseas brings scores of letters and postal cards to Jack Farren, manager of the Victoria Theatre. Some time ago Jack started sending smokes and other luxuries to his friends in the service. The thanks that he received from them so touched Jack that he asked mothers who patronized his house to leave the name and address of their sons overseas. To a great many of these Jack has sent gifts, and just how many and how welcome they are is attested by the display of letters and postals of thanks which Jack proudly displays to visitors.

EXHIBITORS ALL SET TO AID LOAN DRIVE

Baltimore Theatre Men Formulate Plans to Stimulate Bond Sales by Showing Patriotic Films and Slides

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

A SPECIAL meeting of the moving picture exhibitors was called and held at the Maryland Theatre Building on Tuesday, September 24, and definite plans were laid out to aid the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign by showing slides and running patriotic pictures.

Sunday, October 6, is to be known as Moving Picture Sunday by the film men throughout Maryland, and on that day the moving pictures theatres throughout Baltimore City and the State of Maryland will be thrown open to the public and special programs of Liberty Loan features and news from the front pictures will be shown.

Louis A. DeHoff, manager of the New Theatre, has made arrangements to give a regular program of pictures each Sunday while the Loan campaign is going on, as has Manager Frederick C. Schanberger, of the Maryland Theatre. The latter will give two shows each Sunday.

A committee of two, Guy L. Wonders, of the Wilson Theatre, and George A. McDermitt, of Loew's Hippodrome, were appointed to arrange for the distribution of the patriotic films in the state. Slides are now being shown at all theatres to boost the loan.

Meeting at Victoria.

Through the courtesy of the management of Nixon's Victoria Theatre, 415 East Baltimore street, a meeting was held in that theatre on Sunday night, September 22, under the auspices of the Baltimore branch of the Jewish People's Relief Committee, to familiarize the Baltimore public with the work of this organization. Dr. Mossia Olgin, lecturer at Columbia University, New York, was the principal speaker.

Memorial Service at New Theatre.

A memorial service for the members of the 117th Trench Mortar Battery who have made the supreme sacrifice on the battlefields of France, which was attended by relatives and parents of the members of the Battery, was held at the New Theatre, 210 West Lexington street, through the courtesy of Louis A. DeHoff, manager of that house, on Sunday afternoon, September 22. Former Governor Phillips Lee Goldsborough presided. There were several inspiring addresses and a solo. The Baltimore boys who have died for their country in the Battery are: J. E. Potts, Henry P. Cushen, Charles J. Blankford and Franklin A. Landram.

"Hearts of the World" Benefits.

A special performance was given of Griffith's "Hearts of the World," for over 2,000 newsboys through the courtesy of Charles E. and John T. Ford, co-proprietors of the theatre, through arrangements made by and held under the auspices of the social department of The Evening Sun, of Baltimore. The boys showed their honest enthusiasm by shouting, whistling and singing and cheering Messrs. Griffith, Ford and General Pershing.

One hundred convalescent soldiers from the Fort McHenry Base Hospital went to see the picture on Tuesday, September 24, as the guests of the management and the Broadway War Relief Club, the United Railways and Electric Company furnishing cars to take them. On Thursday afternoon another 100 were taken to the theatre to see the performance.

Tunis Dean to Be Road Manager.

Tunis F. Dean, who formerly managed the Academy of Music in Baltimore and later was connected with a Pittsburgh Theatre, as manager, for Harry Davis, has now become associated with David Belasco as road manager. He will go out with the "Tiger Rose."

Munition Workers at Garden.

Through the courtesy of Charles E. Whitehurst, president of the Garden Theatre Company, a special performance for the workers at the Poole Engineering and Machine Company was arranged by the Ordnance Department of the War Department, Washington, at the Garden Theatre, Lexington street, near Park avenue, on Sunday afternoon, September 22. About 2,000 attended. There were several patriotic speeches, music, and five thousand feet of film sent by the Committee on Public Information were shown.

Patterson Theatre Sold.

The Patterson Theatre, 3136 Eastern avenue, which has been owned by B. Baumbach, has now been sold to Harry Reddish, a well-known film man of Baltimore. Mr. Reddish has been associated with several film companies as their Baltimore representative. He contemplates many changes in the Patterson.

Frank Cavanaugh Dies.

Frank Cavanaugh, whose sister, Catherine Cavanaugh, is a well known actress and is now associated with the William Fox and Metro Film Companies as scenario writer, died at his home in Baltimore, at the age of 57 years, on Sunday morning, September 22, from heart trouble. Mr. Cavanaugh for the past eight years has acted as president of the Theatrical Mechanics' Association in Baltimore. He was at one time connected with the old Front Street Theatre in Baltimore. His brother, Matthew Cavanaugh, is stage manager at the Maryland Theatre in this city. The funeral took place on Thursday, September 26. He is also survived by his widow, Mrs. Margaret M. Cavanaugh, two sons, a daughter and another sister.

Peabody Lease Filed.

According to a lease filed at the Record Office of Baltimore, Harry W. Webb and the Parkway Theatre Company has leased from the Theatorium Company, the property on North avenue, near Charles street for a term which began September 1, and will end in 1923. This lease evidently covers the Peabody Theatre. The specified rental per month is $543.12½ excepting the months of July and August of next year when $343.87 rental per month will be paid.

Griffith Film Fills Grand at Each Show.

THE Griffith feature, "Hearts of the World," filled the second week of its engagement at the Grand with fully as much success as the first week, which means crowded houses at all performances. A number of large parties were made up from time to time to see the picture, one, consisting of 300 persons, the guests of a well-known insurance man, filling a large part of the lower floor, with the boxes, at one performance; while a special Red Cross morning performance, at which the city's clergymen were the guests of Manager Havlin, was a noteworthy occasion as well.

Weigel to Show Metro's "Kaiser" Picture.

Manager Weigel considered himself fortunate in securing for a week's engagement, beginning with September 22, Metro's patriotic film, "To Hell with the Kaiser," so shortly after its successful run at the Grand, as this made its first appearance in the city at popular prices. Manager Weigel was recently elected to one of the offices in a social organization which includes some of the leading men of the city in its membership, the Milestone Club. John Huebner, another moving picture man, was a guest at the meeting.

Runey Named as Film Division Representative.

The reward of some years of excellent work as a moving picture man, and especially in the production of interesting news films, was given to Clarence Runey, of the Cincinnati Motion Picture Company, a short time ago, in official recognition by the Government, which has appointed him as Southern Ohio representative of the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information. In this capacity he will make films for the use of the Committee not only in Southern Ohio, but in Kentucky and West Virginia, which are attached to this district. The pictures made by Mr. Runey of the military funeral of Captain James Fitzmorris, the British aviator killed here in an exhibition flight, were especially valued by the Committee, who sent the film to England.

McMahan to Push Loan Publicity.

I. W. McMahan, of McMahan & Jackson, made all arrangements for laying aside his regular work, including the operation of the Gifts and other theatres, attention to film service, and the details of his big realty venture near the Government nitrate plant, in order to give all of his time to his post as publicity manager of one of the Fourth Liberty Loan teams. Mr. McMahan was responsible for the use in Cincinnati of the suggestion of Thomas A. Edison for closing all letters with "Yours for the Fourth Liberty Loan" instead of "Yours truly" or some other trite form.

Incorporate Theatre Company.

Mullens, W. Va.—D. D. Moran and Hiram Sizemore, of Mullens, with others, have incorporated the Wyoming Theatre, with a capital stock of $25,000, and will build a modern house of that name in Mullens. The charter of the company permits the construction and operation of other theatres as well.

WOUNDED AMERICANS AT THE PARK

Thomas D. Soriero Entertains Veterans of Chateau Thierry Battle at His Theatre in Boston

By Robert N. Howe, 80 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

NEARLY fifty wounded American soldiers just back from the battle front of France were special guests of Manager Thomas D. Soriero, of the Park Theatre, Boston, at the first showing of "To Hell with the Kaiser," a Metro film, in Boston. Manager Soriero booked this film for his Boston house and also the Strand at Lowell, of which he is general manager.

For nearly half a hour traffic was blocked in front of his house in the shopping district of Boston when the wounded soldiers arrived in Red Cross ambulances from Boston city hospitals, where they are convalescing. The street was jammed with people, and the soldiers were cheered to the echo. Several were minus a leg or an arm. They were mostly veterans of the American victory at Chateau Thierry.

Manager Soriero reports a record business for his two houses with "To Hell with the Kaiser." The S. R. O. sign was in front of his box office most of the week.

Red Cross Films Going Big.

Manager J. Levine, of the Boston office of the General Film Company, reports great success with the Red Cross productions in New England. The first, "Fourth of July in Paris," has been booked in ninety per cent. of the motion picture houses in Greater Boston largely through the efforts of Ernest Warren, representative in that district. He also reports heavy bookings on the United States Government release, "Our Bridge of Ships."

Gordon Circuit to Open Another Theatre.

A new theatre to be operated by the Gordon Circuit is soon to be opened in Dorchester, Mass. The theatre, which will be called the Strand, will be operated under the Gordon policy of motion pictures and vaudeville. The date of opening will be announced in the near future.

Another Star in General's Service Flag.

The General Film Company, Boston, has added another service star to the flag that already hangs outside its door. The General Film now has five employees in the service. They are James J. Donovan, former assistant manager, who is training in the Wentworth Institute in this city; William L. Jennings, who is about to sail with the Y. M. C. A. unit for France; E. W. Whitford, former salesman, now in the army, and Daniel O'Brien, former poster clerk, who is in the merchant marine. The latest employee to go is Ernest Warren, salesman and booker for the General. He is to take a course in an officers' training school.

Ross on First National Sales Force.

Nathan Ross, who was formerly connected with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and the Boston Photoplay, has been added to the sales force of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit. He is one of the oldest film salesmen in New England, being with the Paramount for six years and the Boston Photoplay for two years. He has been assigned to cover the territory of New Hampshire and Vermont.

Pathe's New Serial Being Booked.

"Wolves of Kultur," the new Pathe serial, is predicted by Manager Hand, of the Boston exchange, to break all records of previous bookings on Pathe serials. Manager Hand states that he is now receiving advance bookings, and that he believes that New England exhibitors will do all in their power toward helping New England live up to its name of the real "Cradle of Liberty" by booking this patriotic serial. The serial is to be released for distribution in New England October 14.

Safier to Succeed Leahy at Select.

S. Selznic, acting assistant manager of the Select office in this city, has announced that the Select has had the biggest two weeks in the history of the New England office. He is now filling the position vacated by Mr. Leahy, who went to the Metro. Morris Safier, a salesman in the Cleveland branch of the Select Pictures, is to succeed Mr. Leahy as assistant manager of the Boston office.

New Exchange Opens in Boston.

A new exchange known as the Edward Klein Film Enterprises has been opened in Boston at 53 Church street under the management of Edward Klein. The policy will be to handle everything in the way of feature productions and single-reel comedies. This is the only exchange in New England operated under this new policy, and Manager Klein reports excellent business. The first picture to be distributed in New England is, "I Believe," George Loane Tucker's production.

Wounded American Soldiers Guests of General Manager Soriero of the Park Theatre, Boston, and the Strand Theatre, Lowell.

BUSINESS FINE IN DAKOTA AND MONTANA

Feinberg of Minneapolis on Way to Pacific Coast Writes of the Prosperous Times in the Northwest

By William Edward Mulligan, Minneapolis Journal, Minneapolis, Minn.

THE moving picture business is flourishing in North Dakota and Montana, according to a newsy letter sent here by J. George Feinberg, of the Theatre Equipment Company, of Minneapolis, from Butte. Mr. Feinberg is on a circle business trip to the Pacific Coast, and expects to return to Minneapolis by October 12. He writes:

"In general, the exhibitors I called on told me that July was the largest summer month's business they had ever enjoyed, and all talked optimistically of the fall season.

"Crops around Fargo are wonderful, so there should be plenty of money on hand. At Glendive, I visited Tom Vallancey, who is packing them in. He is going to sell his Rialto at Dickinson on account of his manager going to war. It's a good bet for someone. It's a new theatre especially built for pictures, with the finest equipment, and the only show house in town.

"Stopped at Miles City and found H. W. Bruen had sold his Iris to an exhibitor from Kalispel. This man Bruen took the Iris about eighteen months ago, then a lemon, and made the finest clean-up on record for such a short time. He purchased a new $2,400 car, and will motor to Seattle with his wife, where they expect to locate.

"At Billings, Jean O'Keefe, who operates the Regent, is doing a fine business, and will build a large new house as soon as the war is over. Jean is a former Minneapolis boy who believed in the saying, 'Go West, my boy!'

"Was surprised to find Mr. Louis had closed his Billings office when I called to pay my respects. Mr. Andrews, who managed the place, is now working for O'Keefe on two Simplex machines and getting some pictures.

"Here in Butte, the 'Great Love' at the American is doing a big business. The new Rialto here, which was built last year, is doing a land-office business, and is the finest picture theatre between Detroit and Seattle. It would be a credit to Minneapolis."

Big Taxes on New Prints.

Benjamin Friedman, president of the Friedman Film Corporation, Minneapolis, paid several thousand dollars in taxes to the United States Government on new prints which he ordered in the "Big Four" series of pictures—the Triangle reissues of Hart - Fairbanks - Talmadge - Keenan. These productions are booking solid, and this fact necessitated the purchase of additional prints, according to Mr. Friedman. The Friedman Company is offering to exhibitors a combination booking contract on its five big special productions, "The Whip," "The Spoilers," "The Bar Sinister," "Lust of the Ages" and "The Grain of Dust."

Buys "Carmen of the Klondike."

The purchase of the successful production, "Carmen of the Klondike," starring Clara Williams, was announced last week by B. N. Judell, president of the B. N. Judell Company, state rights distributor, Minneapolis. Mr. Judell has also bought the Edward A. Salisbury animal pictures, "Wild Animal Life in America." The latter has been booked by the new Garrick theatres, Minneapolis and St. Paul, for an early showing.

Changes in Managers.

Important changes in the personnel of the United Picture Theatres of America and the American Film Companies in Minneapolis were made last week. E. S. Flynn, formerly manager of the Minneapolis branch of the Fox Film Corporation and for several years previous with the local Paramount-Artcraft Exchange, took over his new duties as manager of the American Film Company Exchange, succeeding David G. Rogers. Mr. Rogers, who had been in charge of the Minneapolis American office since it opened here, resigned to take over the management of the Minneapolis exchange of United Picture Theatres. Mr. Rogers was formerly with the United, having resigned from that company previous to its reorganization.

Stombaugh to New York.

C. W. Stombaugh, manager of the Minneapolis Pathe Exchange, announced before leaving for New York last week that October 13 is to be the release date for distribution in this territory of "Wolves of Kultur," starring the screen favorite, Leah Baird, and Sheldon Lewis.

New Tarzan Picture Released.

"The Romance of Tarzan," sequel to the big feature, "Tarzan of the Apes," is now ready for release, E. R. Pearson, manager of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit of the Northwest, announced last week. Judging from the phenomenal success of "Tarzan of the Apes" the new sequel should prove a great drawing card in the Northwest, he said.

Nation Officially Credits Theatres.

Managers of Minneapolis moving picture theatres, which have been co-operating with the Four-Minute Men of the Committee on Public Information, were honored last week with the presentation of certificates from the Government accrediting them as theatre members of this official organization.

These certificates were issued in accordance with a recent expression by President Wilson acknowledging the debt the country owes the managers. In a letter addressed to the national director of Four-Minute Men, the President said: "The motion picture theatres of the country are rendering so substantial a service in aiding the Four-Minute Men that I would not willingly fail to acknowledge the debt the country owes these managers. Will you please convey to them my appreciation of their aid in giving this exclusive privilege to your speakers?"

Among the theatres here receiving certificates last week were the Orpheum, New Garrick, Bijou, Camden, Crown, Crystal, Gayety, East Lake, Liberty, Shubert, Elite, New Aster, Emerson, Empress, Lake, Strand, Pantages, New Garden, Princess, Nokomis, Nicollet, New Unique, Sun, New Star, New Palace, Lyric, Royal, New Lyndale, Fairview, Glenwood, Gopher, Main, New Arion, New Franklin, New Grand, Lagoon, Rialto, Metropolitan, New Ione, University, Brandt and New Lake.

Several more will be awarded soon in both Minneapolis and St. Paul.

New Westcott Manager.

Harry Hollander is assisting General Manager Kemp, of the Westcott Film Corporation, in the management of the Minneapolis office. He is taking the place of Tom Burke, who will leave in a few days for an army camp.

Closes Sun Theatre.

J. S. Woodhouse, who had a three months' lease on the Sun Theatre, South Minneapolis, closed the theatre at the expiration of the lease several days ago and left the city to join a large producing company in Los Angeles as director of publicity.

Cutter on Palace Theatre Staff.

William Cutter, associated with Heine Breilein in the management of Breilein's theatres in St. Paul for the past few months, is now on the Ruben & Finkelstein staff acting as assistant to Manager Mick at the new Palace Theatre in St. Paul.

Indiana News Letter

By Indiana Trade News Service, 69 Layman Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

Conners Joins the Film Division.

MANAGER J. G. Conners of the Indianapolis branch of the Mutual Film Corporation, and recently elected president of the newly organized Board of Exchange Managers, left this week for Washington, D. C., where he will work in the film department of the committee on public information. Before leaving he resigned as president of the board, and R. S. Shrader, manager of the Pathe local exchange, was chosen to succeed him. I. Beitman, of Indianapolis, was appointed to succeed Mr. Conners as local manager of the Mutual. H. G. Stevens, of Dallas, Tex., general supervisor of the Mutual, and F. C. Martin, also of Dallas, of the Fox Film Corporation, addressed the board of exchange managers at the meeting at the Chamber of Commerce on Monday.

Mollet Acquires the Transfer Theatre.

The Grand and Transfer theatres of Fort Wayne are now under one management, as a result of a deal consummated this week by which J. P. Mollet, of the Grand, acquired the latter theatre. He will operate both houses, and under his direction material changes are to be made, not only in the physical arrangements of the Transfer but also in the matter of the policy. Both houses will be redecorated, and two new mirror screens, are to be installed. Mr. Mollet is one of the pioneer exhibitors of the city, having ben manager of the Casino and Fairy theatres several years ago. He has been highly successful in his management of the Grand Theatre, which fact is accurately reflected by his taking over the Transfer.

Admits Soldiers and Sailors Free.

A new angle in patriotic efforts has been offered in Indianapolis by Messrs. Bingham & Cohen, managers of the Regent Theatre, by opening their photoplay house, which is situated at 42 South Illinois street, to soldiers, by giving them free admission every morning in the week except Sunday, from 10 A. M. to 1 P. M., excepting the payment of the required 1-cent Government war tax. Many soldiers and sailors are either in from camp in the morning hours or are traveling through Indianapolis. The offer of the Regent management gives them an attractive place to spend an hour or more.

Free Admission for Soldiers and Sailors.

All soldiers and sailors in uniform hereafter are to be admitted free of charge to the Grand and Theato theatres, in Washington, according to an announcement this week by Hugh O'Donnell, president of the O'Donnell-Eskridge Amusement Company, which operates both theatres. Another important announcement was that beginning next Tuesday evening, vaudeville is to be combined with pictures at the Grand.

Donates Use of Theatre to Loan Committee.

Samuel Carlton, manager of the Sipe Theatre, Kokomo, has not only offered the use of the theatre to the local Fourth Liberty Loan Committee on the evening that Ex-Senator Albert J. Beveridge is to deliver an address but has agreed to pay all expenses of the evening, including light, heat and the services of the attendants. The usual price charged for the theatre has been about $100 a night.

Liberty Plays to Big Business.

The new Liberty Theatre, of Terre Haute, which was formally opened last Thursday, attracted about as many people last Sunday as on the opening day, more than 5,000 persons paying admission at the box office. The film offering at the Sunday show was Theda Bara in "When a Woman Sins."

Gaiety to Show Griffith Film.

The Gaiety Theatre Company, of Bluffton, operating the Grand Theatre, has contracted for the exhibition of D. W. Griffith's big war picture, "Hearts of the World," at the Grand on October 31 and November 1 and 2.

Detroit News Letter

By Jacob Smith, 719 Free Press Building, Detroit, Mich.

Does Big Business with Fox Film.

THE Fox special film, "The Prussian Cur," opened an engagement at the Campus Theatre, Detroit, Sunday, September 22, to the biggest picture business in the history of the theatre. The line of people started at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and never broke until after the last night show. Five shows were given daily and to capacity.

Victory Singing a Big Hit.

Victory singing at the Regent Theatre proved such a big success that it was held over for a second week starting September 22. Henry Santrey certainly works hard to put this feature of the program over, and at times he would be held on the stage for over a half hour, people demanding "to sing more." Victory singing has also proved a big success at the Alhambra Theatre, Detroit, under the auspices of Charles H. Darrell. The Butterfield circuit throughout Michigan is also conducting Victory singing, having engaged a special "pep booster" to handle it in each town.

Lights Exterior with Presto Tanks.

Harry Sommerville, manager of the Drury Lane, Detroit, has practically solved the outdoor lighting on lightless nights, Mondays and Tuesdays, by the use of Presto tanks. He is able to light up his front with four arc lamps through this medium.

Starts Review Column for Public.

The Detroit News has started a review column for the public on first-run motion pictures. Its readers are invited to send in criticisms of not more than 150 words in length after they see the pictures. The reviews are printed in the Sunday editions only.

Wernick to Manage Goldwin in Boston.

Richard Wernick, salesman for Goldwyn in Detroit since the office was established, has been promoted to manager of the Goldwyn exchange in Boston, having left September 24 to take up his new duties. Mr. Wernick did excellent work in Michigan, being about the most persistent salesman that ever hit the state. He is a 100 per cent. enthusiast for Goldwyn.

Books Shows for Regent and Orpheum.

Tom Ealand is managing director of both the Regent and Orpheum theatres, Detroit, which are under lease to Charles H. Miles. Mr. Ealand books all of the pictures and arranges the shows for each house. He has been with Mr. Miles since the latter leased the Orpheum and has proved himself a capable and highly efficient executive. Prior to coming to Detroit he was with road shows and was at one time in vaudeville himself. Both the Orpheum and Regent are enjoying a very successful season.

Richardson Is Promoted.

Art Richardson, recently salesman for Select, has been appointed booker and assistant manager for Goldwyn in Detroit. He succeeds Earl Hennessy, who has gone on the road for Goldwyn.

Widger Succeeds Blythe at Fox.

N. D. Widger, better known as "Skipper," has been appointed Detroit city salesman for Fox Film Corporation, succeeding Dave Blythe, who has been appointed by the Government as manager of the Liberty Theatre at Camp Sevier, South Carolina. Mr. Blythe has been inducted into the service as captain.

Heavy Bookings on Gerard's Film.

Sales Manager Harlan Starr, of the Madison Film exchange, reports that he has an unusual number of bookings on "My Four Years in Germany" between September 28 and October 20, the dates of the campaign to buy Fourth Liberty Loan Bonds.

LOEW'S PALACE TO OPEN IN OCTOBER

Washington City's Newest Theatre a Most Beautiful Structure—Has Many Striking Features

By Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made that Loew's Palace Theatre at F and Thirteenth streets, Washington, will open early in October. This house is declared by Walter Brownley, general manager for the Loew theatres in Washington and Baltimore, to be the finest theatre of its kind in the country.

The new theatre, which seats 3,000 persons, has a number of novel features, one of the most striking being the entire absence of stairs, which the architect has accomplished by adapting the entrance arrangement to the natural slope of Thirteenth street, so that short flights of six steps reach both the orchestra and the balcony from the central lobby.

The interior of the house has been decorated in soft, rich colors. The lighting system is entirely new to this city, consisting chiefly of panels reaching from the roof illuminated with cathedral lights. Not a lamp or dome is visible to the audience. The lighting is controlled by a thirteen-foot switchboard, and 146 dimmers, controlled by a master wheel, regulate the lighting effects to meet the needs of any performance.

The lobby of the theatre is remarkable, having highly polished columns of French marble and panel mirrors. The balcony is reached through a promenade lounge, a feature of which will be the open fireplaces, and which has an open wall of Mexican mahogany, providing an uninterrupted view of the lobby below. Rest rooms for both men and women have been provided.

The installation of large Typhoon fans insures a circulation of cool air during the summer months, while a novel heating system, consisting of cone heaters under each seat, will keep the house comfortable during the cold period.

Twelve boxes have been provided, six on each side of the stage. On the balcony slope and leading to the loge boxes panel lights under each alternate step will enable patrons readily to find their way even in the dark.

The theatre was designed primarily for motion pictures, but a large stage has been installed, as well as green room, dressing room and other conveniences for actors.

A large orchestra is to be a feature of the theatre's operation. When motion pictures are shown the musicians will be located on the stage below the screen. A pit has been provided for the orchestra, however, and covered with a false floor, which can be removed should any legitimate productions be staged at the house.

In addition to the orchestra two large pipe organs, one on each side of the stage, have been installed to be played in conjunction with the other music.

Savoy Theatre Raises Admissions.

Admissions at Crandall's Savoy Theatre have been increased from ten to fifteen cents for children and from fifteen to twenty cents for adults. This, however, is not a straight increase of five cents, since the new prices include the war tax. By making the change the theatre does away with the bother of handling pennies on each admission, while the increase helps to pay the added cost of music, etc. The change is made at this time in order that it might not give rise to the impression that it was the result of the new taxes that will soon apply, while at the same time leaving it possible to make a further increase if the new taxes make such a step necessary later.

Telephone Ruling Bothers Exhibitors.

A new rule bothering Washington exhibitors is that which prohibits the transfer of telephones. Recently one of the smaller theatres here changed hands and the new owner sought to have his listing in the telephone directory changed. To his dismay he learned that he was not entitled under the wartime regulations adopted to service. He is in something of a quandary for telephones in Washington theatres are essential.

For the first time in the history of the telephone business here subscribers are also being charged for moving their phones. This charge ranges from $3 upward. This rule, however, is applicable all over the United States, and inasmuch as it may be that phone companies in other cities have adopted the rule against extending service, it would be well for exhibitors on securing control of new houses to ascertain that fact before seeking a change in listing or billing.

Bulkley Now With Exhibitors' Exchange.

Colonel Barry Bulkley, who is associated with Harry M. Grandall in the string of theatres in this city bearing the latter's name, has joined him in the Exhibitors' Film Exchange, at 420 Ninth street, Northwest, succeeding to the interest, formerly held by Joseph P. Morgan, manager of Grandall's Savoy Theatre. Mr. Morgan expects shortly to enter the service of Uncle Sam, and for this reason disposed of his interest in the exchange.

The Exhibitors' Film Exchange, of which Abe Dresner is manager, is increasing its activities to a considerable extent. In the territory comprising the District of Columbia, Delaware and Maryland it will handle the Warren Kerrigan reissues, "The Accidental Honeymoon," "Struggle Eeverlasting," and the Shorty Hamilton five-reel productions, in addition to the other singles and features which it has been offering from time to time.

Max Colman Dies of Pneumonia.

The first gold star in the service flag of the film men of the District of Columbia is in commemoration of Max L. Colman, son of Mose Colman, jr., proprietor of the Grand Theatre. Young Colman passed away at Camp Lee just two weeks after answering the call to the colors, death being caused by pneumonia. Young Colman was just getting into the game of fighting when taken sick. About four months ago he was married, and is survived by his widow, his mother and father and a brother, First Lieutenant Henry L. Colman, of the Aviation Corps, now a fighting flyer in France.

Osborn's Resignation Causes Surprise.

There was a great surprise in local film circles last week when it became known that Herbert M. Osborn had severed his connections with the local exchange of Pathe, Inc., after a long service with that company, both in Washington and Philadelphia. Mr. Osborn started in with the General Film Company a number of years ago. He later joined the then existing Eclectic Film Corporation, and when Pathe absorbed that concern he remained, and soon became manager here. Some time ago he was transferred to the Philadelphia branch, but was returned here upon the resignation of D. F. O'Donnell.

Mr. Osborn is succeeded by E. R. Champion, who has been assistant manager of the main branch exchange in New York for Pathe. Mr. Champion entered the film business about two years ago, handling "Civilization." He disposed of the southern territory for this film on behalf of its owners and then went on a long tour of the East. Beginning at Honolulu, he carried his proposition through the Hawaiian Islands, China, Japan, the Philippine Islands, Java and the Malay States and India. Upon his return to the United States about six months ago he joined Pathe, being assigned to special work for about four months, then being given the post of assistant manager of the main branch.

TO DEMAND BETTER EXPRESS SERVICE

Dallas Exchange Managers Collecting Data on the Situation to Show the Authorities

By Phil Fox, Times-Herald, Dallas, Texas.

DALLAS film men are still up in arms against the poor express service which they are at present being afforded, and several of the film men are compiling interesting data on the matter, which in due time will be presented to proper authorities with a demand for action.

J. B. Dugger of Vitagraph reports that in Arkansas the express company in taking a film for shipment stipulates that it shall be subject to delay. Bad routing is making the branch office men in Dallas frantic and putting the exhibitors up in the air when films do not arrive as advertised.

The Vitagraph offices made a check on the progress of "Over the Top," sent for exhibiton at Crossett, Arkansas, 200 miles from Dallas. The film was given three days' leeway to make the trip. It arrived two days late. It took five days and nights for it to reach its destination.

All the Dallas film exchanges now have regular runners in their employ whose job it is to go down to the express company offices and pry and pull around in search of films which are hopelessly misplaced or delayed.

Dallas film men say that the situation is growing intolerable, and it is likely that they may hold a joint conference to see if they can obtain relief. Shortage of labor on the part of the express companies is declared to be the basis of the trouble.

Consolidated to Push Winter Features.

Consolidated salesmen from all parts of the Southwest were called in to the Dallas offices during the last week in September by Manager Ned Depinet for a special conference regarding the pushing of big winter features in this territory.

William Oldknow, general manager of the Consolidated Film and Supply Company, came to Dallas from Atlanta, Ga., for the occasion. Joe Brandt, assistant treasurer of the Universal film company, was also on hand to dispense a little "pep." William Richardson, well known film man, who has charge of the Consolidated business at El Paso, came all the way up from the border to take part in the business discussions. Special campaigns to feature the Yellow Dog and various official war films were discussed.

Elsert to Manage Prince Theatre.

John Elsert, city editor of the Houston Press and well known newspaperman, has taken the place of Ben Johns, manager of the Prince Theatre, Houston. Ben Johns announces that he will go East within the next few weeks.

Poleminkus Buys the Opera House.

The Greenville Opera House at Greenville, Texas, has been bought by Theodore Poleminkus, who will show motion pictures only. Mr. Poleminkus was a visitor to Dallas film row late in September, where he booked Vitagraph, Metro and General attractions for the coming winter.

Novel Lobby Display for "Berlin" Film.

Manager Ray Stinnett, of the Jefferson Theatre, had a big week with "Crashing Through to Berlin," a Jewel production, late in September. He decorated the lobby of his theatre with a huge British tank made from canvas and card board and put a big picture of General J. J. Pershing directly in front of his ticket booth. Life sized paintings of the Yanks going into battle decorated the sides of the lobby. In all it was a very tasty display and it got the results, for Stinnett simply had to turn 'em away.

Harry M. Owens, Paramount manager, made the principal address at the opening of a new Robb and Rowley motion picture house at Hillsboro, Wednesday evening, Sept. 25. He told of the good work done by this firm of exhibitors in maintaining a high scale for the motion picture business of Texas. The new theatre was formerly the Best, which was sold by Ton Gaines when he left for the army. It is the fourth of a chain of R. & R. Queen Theatres to be established. The firm now has houses in Hillsboro, Abilene, Big Spring and San Angelo.

Owens Makes a Speech.

Peter Buys the Queen Theatre.

E. T. Peter, formerly with Goldwyn, and at one time owner of the Imperial Film Company, has bought the Queen Theatre at Cuero, Texas. Mr. Peter is one of the best known film men in Texas, and it is a new departure to find him in the exhibiting end.

Exhibitors Who Visited Dallas.

Among exhibitors visiting film row during the last week in September were A. Zucara, Queen, Fort Worth; S. E. Dean, Palace, Plano; Sam Swartz, Aztec, Eagle Pass; J. L. Cammack, Cozy, Shawnee, Okla.; J. B. Quinn, Lyric, Terrell; Paul Baraca, Best, Houston; J. J. Hegeman, Crescent, Temple; F. R. Newman, Greenville Theatre, Greenville, and O. Gill, Erie, Okla.

To Sell American Rights on Washington Corporation Film.

F. K. McBROOM, receiver for the Washington Motion Picture Corporation, announces that the picture recently completed by the company will be placed on sale in the New York market this month for the American rights only. Reports from local people who viewed portions of the picture are that it compares favorably with the best screen productions viewed in any of the moving picture theatres of the city.

World Correspondent Visits Pendleton.

While covering a Methodist Episcopal church conference for my paper in Pendleton, Ore., September 3 to 8, I took occasion to visit a couple of the moving picture theatres and found they had on good programs. There are three nice moving picture theatres in the city, also the Arcade, which runs both pictures and vaudeville and houses road shows during the fall and winter months. It was closed during my visit. The entire chain of four theatres is owned and operated by G. C. L. Matlock and John Gruiich.

The Atla runs several vaudeville acts additional to a feature and a comedy picture, giving a good program with matinees and night shows daily and Sunday. The Cozy and Pastime also operate afternoon and night daily and Sunday with features, comedies and a weekly picture. Reports were that business was good.

TAKE STEPS TO REDUCE FILM FIRES

Fire Association Urges That Slow Burning Films Be Shown Where Fireproof Booths Are Not Provided

By Ohio Valley News Service, 1404 Starks Building, Louisville, Ky.

THE National Fire Protection Association, 87 Milk street, Boston, under date of September 1, 1918, got out a circular calling special attention to the fire hazard encountered in handling moving picture films. A picture is reproduced showing the interior of a smoking car of a local train into which were brought four reels of inflammable film by a passenger intending to exhibit pictures at a suburban club. The reels are supposed to have taken fire from a cigar or cigarette stump, or dropped match. The blaze spread so rapidly, due to rapid combustion, that escape was made almost impossible, resulting in thirty-eight persons being burned, two fatally, while the car was damaged to the extent of $2,465.

In this connection the association calls attention to all of its members to the nitro-cellulose motion picture film, stating that it is of the character of gunpowder. The letter further states: "This is the highly inflammable film in common use in the motion picture houses, in which a special fire-resistive booth is required for public safety. The demand for motion pictures in Liberty Bond, Red Cross, charitable and educational campaigns in places in which the safety booth is not provided is increasingly endangering life in the United States. These inflammable films are being handled, cared for and displayed in places by persons who do not understand the danger that is present. Members are urged to give this hazard personal attention in their home cities and towns, and where motion pictures are to be displayed for any special purpose outside of regular motion picture theatres, to make sure that the pictures to be shown are on slow-burning stock.

"If proper slow-burning films are used disasters like the one illustrated above cannot occur.

"Committee on Public Information,
FRANKLIN H. WENWORTH,
Chairman."

This is not a matter to be carelessly dismissed by the exhibitor and operator. At the present time exhibitors are being called upon to assist in putting on free pictures in the interest of numerous war movements. Carelessness may result in a big loss of life and heavy property damage.

At the present time much inferior help and untrained help is being used in moving picture booths, due to the scarcity of men and the steady draft calls. This untrained labor has been responsible for numerous fires, and reports of burning films are coming in from numerous points throughout the country every week. The number of film fires in many districts has been considerably larger than usual. In some cases the papers have stated that operators became frightened, and left the booth in a hurry. With proper extinguishers and a cool-headed man a fire in a booth is a small matter, and in some cases the audience hardly knows of it.

Smoking is supposed to be prohibited in operating booths, but many operators will be found smoking while rewinding a film, with sparks directly over the moving film. Others, while not smoking themselves, will allow friends and visitors to enter the booth while smoking, and pay little or no attention to it, although the owner would probably raise Cain if he discovered it. Visitors are especially dangerous, as they may throw a cigarette stub or lighted match into a box of films.

When films are exhibited in convention halls, public places, etc., and carelessly handled without a booth, serious damage may result and numerous injuries, as was the case on the smoking car referred to by Mr. Wentworth, of the National Fire Protection Association.

This organization is not composed of merely fire underwriters, but includes many prominent organizations, material manufacturers, and, among others, the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Buffalo News Letter

Mutual and General in New Quarters.

THE Mutual and General companies have opened well-equipped exchanges, directly north of the Fox Exchange, which is at 209 Franklin street. While occupying the same building, the Mutual and General exchanges have separate quarters, entrances at the front and rear and other individual facilities. The location is in the heart of the uptown business district. Each company has a solid twelve-inch brick vault, which is fireproof and represents the last word in modern vault construction. There are two floors. The business offices, which are on the first, are equipped with new office furniture, new rugs, pictures, palms and other embellishments. "Welcome, Exhibitors" appears on the door mats of each exchange, and, according to Manager Mack of the Mutual and Manager Fox of the General, "the latch strings are always on the outside." They were formerly located at 106 Pearl street.

Celebrates Fourth Anniversary.

Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, recently celebrated its fourth anniversary. One feature of the week was that the Hippodrome orchestra was augmented to thirty soloists. This organization has long been the pride of Buffalo, and visitors here have been told that "even if you don't care for pictures, you must hear this wonderful orchestra." Harold B. Franklin, manager of the theatre, arranged a beautiful stage decoration for the birthday celebration. A colonnade of majestic pillars supported a stained glass dome, and three openings in heavy velvet draperies gave a marvelous effect. "The Spirit of America" was the name given this setting, suggested by the splendid paintings revealed when the curtains were pulled aside at the overture illuminations.

Fox Exchange Opens Sub-Branch.

The Fox Film Exchange, Buffalo, has established a sub-branch in Albany under the management of E. H. Arnold. The reason for the opening is the growth of the Fox business in the Albany territory. Every Tuesday at 10.30 a. m. and at 4 p. m. current releases will be shown at the Fox screening parlors at the company's exchange in Franklin street, Buffalo. A. L. Skinner has been appointed assistant manager of the Fox office in Buffalo and J. F. Kirsch, formerly with the Universal, is now Fox sales representative. C. E. Goodwin has been appointed sales representative of the company in the Rochester territory.

Named Manager of Loan Features Bureau.

Harold B. Franklin, managing director of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, has been appointed manager of the features bureau of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign. As part of the celebration at Lafayette square, this city, at the opening of the drive, the bureau, in charge of Mr. Franklin, unveiled a memorial tablet bearing the names of the Buffalo boys, members of the American army, who have died in action since the United States entered the war. In order to make the list absolutely accurate and complete Mr. Franklin asked that relatives or friends of such boys send to the bureau the warriors' names, addresses and command with which they served. The response was highly satisfactory.

Exhibitor and Exchange Notes.

Mrs. L. Stewart, of Geneva, N. Y., has taken charge of the Majestic moving picture theatre, East Ferry street, Buffalo.

Dewey Michaels, former manager of the Plaza moving picture theatre, Buffalo, has joined Uncle Sam's emergency fleet at Cleveland.

Hub Taylor has been succeeded as booker of the Triangle, Buffalo, by Otto Stieffel, formerly with the Vitagraph, Syracuse. Mr. Taylor is now traveling representative for the Triangle.

BUDGET OF FILMDOM NEWS FROM IOWA

Des Moines Exhibitors Complain of Scarcity of Advertising Matter—War Stops Theatre Building

By J. L. Shipley, 615 Locust Street, Des Moines, Iowa.

Palace Shows "Italy's Flaming Front."

A. H. BLANK and staff were most successful with "Italy's Flaming Front" at the Palace Theatre last week. The theatre was decorated with Italian, French, English and American flags and a thorough canvass of the Italian district in the city was made on behalf of the film. One-sheets printed in Italian called attention to the picture. A special showing was held the Sunday before the opening, to which representative Italian citizens and newspaper people were invited. Des Moines has an Italian population of more than 6,000, and nearly everyone saw the picture.

Frisch Complimented on Good Work.

Hal Hodes, assistant general sales manager of Universal, spent two days with M. J. Frisch, local Universal manager. Mr. Hodes complimented Mr. Frisch on the capable manner in which the local branch is being conducted and for the success that is being met with the specials and the Jewel productions.

Griffith Film at the Rialto.

An experiment that will be watched with interest by local picture men is the engagement of "Hearts of the World" at the Rialto, a picture theatere that has been showing at 15c. Prices for the big Griffith film range from 25c to $1.50, and the engagement is scheduled for three weeks. In the past picture managers here have shunned the higher prices, 25c being top on even the biggest productions. Perhaps "Hearts of the World" will establish a precedent that will cause other managers to play the big ones at dollar prices.

Redecorated Strand Theatre Opens.

P. L. Alleman, of the Strand Theatre, Clinton, has reopened after a month spent in the enlargement of this house and its thorough redecoration. The seating capacity has now been increased to 1,000 and a new pipe organ installed. Handsome decorations prevail and the Strand is said to be doing the best business in its history. Mr. Alleman runs the big specials at advanced admission prices and is one of the most enterprising managers in the state.

War Holds Up Theatre Projects.

Several new theatre projects are being held up until after the war. J. B. Julius has the plans drawn for a fine new theatre in Fort Dodge, Louis Rosenfield for a new house in Creston and A. H. Blank for a mammoth new Des Moines theatre. Under present conditions it is doubtful if work on these houses will be begun for some little time.

Complain of Advertising Matter Scarcity.

A great deal of complaint is made by local exhibitors over their inability to secure the necessary advertising accessories on new releases. Several times pictures would have had to open cold on publicity were it not for advance notices in the Moving Picture World and other trade journals. It seems that the least the exchanges can do is to have a sufficient stock of cuts, press matter, photos and other accessories on hand to take care of the first-run accounts that are paying real money for service. There is one Omaha exchange that is never known to have anything in ahead of a picture but the bill for service and local managers are threatening to take the matter up with New York officials direct if better service is not forthcoming.

May Use Feature Pictures with Vaudeville.

Jake Rosenthal, manager of the Majestic, Dubuque, is thinking of using feature pictures in conjunction with vaudeville as his policy for the 1918-1919 season. Although Mr. Rosenthal has run pictures for the past several summers, he always used a six-act vaudeville show with short reels as the winter policy. With the dearth of good acts, owing to the draft, Mr. Rosenthal plans to cut his vaudeville down to four acts on each show and run a big feature to take the place of the other two. His new season will start October 1.

Tracey, of Arrow Film, Visits Des Moines.

Special Representative Tracey, of the Arrow Film Corporation, was a Des Moines visitor the past week in the interests of "Today" and other features which his company is handling.

Holmes Succeeds Daley at Rialto.

Ralph Holmes, former manager of the Grand at Burlington and for some time on the road for the A. H. Blank forces, took over the management of "Hearts of the World," current at the Rialto. Mr. Holmes succeeds Johnny Daley, former K. & E. Company manager, who, it is understood, returned to New York to go out with a big musical show.

Launches Big Publicity for "Berlin" Film.

A 5,000-line publicity campaign on behalf of "Crashing Through to Berlin" has been launched by Universal in advance of a week's showing of the film at the Palace Theatre. Manager A. H. Blank has gotten out a half-sheet poster calling attention to the Fourth Liberty Loan drive and at the same time referring to the picture. These are being posted by the local Liberty Loan Committee.

Institutes Novel Advertising Scheme.

House Manager Dan Burgum, of the Garden, has gotten out a novel drop curtain effect in front of the lobby billing the current attraction. The curtain is painted new every week and a space left in the centre for the name of the current attraction. It is artistic in creation, and a novelty that attracts attention.

Princess Enjoying Good Business.

John Anderson, manager of the Princess, Boone, was a Des Moines visitor last week, and announced that he is having the best business in his career. He is charging 20 cents admission for program features and 25 cents and 35 cents for the big specials, and cashing in on them.

Watts and Martin Made Corporals.

Two Des Moines film men at Camp Dodge, Harry Watts and F. R. Martin, have been promoted to the rank of corporal in the infantry and quartermaster departments, respectively. The boys have been in camp but a few weeks, and indications are that they are as good as soldiers as they were in the celluloid days.

Business Booming for Mutual.

Manager R. S. Ballantyne, of the Omaha office of Mutual, was a Des Moines visitor last week en route home after a brief trip through middle Iowa. He reports business booming with Mutual, and states that the new Hayakawa subjects are in big demand, as is the Mutual Screen Telegram.

Majestic Raises Admission Prices.

The Majestic Theatre, which has been a second-run house for the past year at 10 cents admission, announces that hereafter 15 cents plus tax will be charged adults on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. With other theatres showing the same features first-run, and from thirty to sixty days before they are put on at the Majestic, it is a little difficult to determine just what the latter's management expects to accomplish by the price switch.

WEEK'S DIGEST OF NEWS FROM CANADA

Winnipeg Exhibitors Improve Their Houses—Ontario Exhibitors Association Issues Year Book

By W. M. Gladish, 33 Wineva Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

Theatre War Tax Receipts Low.

THE revenue from the war tax payable by patrons of theatres in the Province of Manitoba has not come up to expectations, according to a statement by the provincial treasurer, Edward Brown. The receipts from the tax did not exceed $75,000 during the first five months, but it is expected that the returns for the whole year will exceed $160,000, because Winnipeg theatres are doing much better business than they were enjoying last spring. Winnipeg exhibitors have been wondering whether the disappointment of the Manitoba government will result in an increase in the war tax schedule or not. With the coming of cooler weather, however, the revenue is expected to take a jump and thus the province may be satisfied.

Exhibitors' Association Issues Year Book.

The Moving Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario, Limited, has issued a souvenir year book consisting of sixty-four pages. The book contains information and illustrations of the majority of Toronto moving picture theatres and portraits of many of the exhibitors. A list of the members of the association throughout Ontario is also included, the association having about one hundred and fifty paid-up members. The editor and advertising manager of the book was Thomas Scott, secretary of the organization.

Discuss Plans for Victory Loan Pictures.

A recent general conference in Toronto was the meeting of representatives of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario, the Toronto Exchange Managers' Association, the Moving Picture Distribution Committee of the Canadian Government, and Ralph Stephenson, Toronto director of the forthcoming Victory Loan campaign in Canada. The gathering discussed various details in connection with the presentation of special Loan pictures in the Dominion. Arrangements were agreed upon in a highly amicable spirit. The Moving Picture Distribution Committee consists of Messrs. Jule and J. J. Allen and Clair Hague, president of the Canadian Universal Film Company. Secretary Thomas Scott, of the Ontario association, has sent out notices for a general meeting of Ontario exhibitors in Toronto on Tuesday, October 1.

Admission Prices for Gerard's Film Disputed.

Manager George Ganetakos, of the Strand Theatre, Montreal, and President J. J. Unger, of the Metro Film Service, Limited, worked up a big argument over the question of admission prices for a run of Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany," for four days starting Sunday, September 22. Manager Ganetakos advertised that the special feature would be shown at the Strand for the first time at popular prices and that the regular prices of the theatre would be charged.

Mr. Unger got all heated up when he saw this announcement in the newspapers and forthwith notified the publishers that Ganetakos was all wrong, the contract for the booking calling for admission prices ranging from 25 cents to $1. Mr. Unger also declared in his letters that his company would take steps to prevent the showing of the feature at any but these prices.

By way of reply Mr. Ganetakos advertised that possession was nine-tenths of the law, or words to that effect, and that as he had the film safely in his theatre he was going to stand by the public, his advertised promises and his regular admission prices. He also declared that he would accept any responsibility that might occur from such action.

Mr. Ganetakos advertised in large space that "Starting Sunday, injunction or no injunction, we will show Ambassador Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany," at our regular admission prices. We have promised our patrons this and we will keep our word no matter what the cost may be."

The natural result of the controversy and the threatened legal action was that everybody in Montreal pricked up his or her ears and looked for trouble. Incidentally there was a big rush to see a ten-reel feature over which there could be so much fight regarding admission prices. The theatre got some of the best publicity for a picture in months.

Montreal Operators May Unionize.

Montreal, Quebec, is to have a Moving Picture Projection Machine Operators' Union if present developments come to a head. Organizers are at work, it is reported, and a local is being formed. In this connection it is interesting to note that the pay of the Montreal operators, with a few exceptions, is the lowest of any city or town in Canada. Some of the Montreal operators are paid as low as $9 a week, and the great majority of the men work all day.

Improvements in Winnipeg Theatres.

Manager Davis of the Dominion Theatre, Winnipeg, has decided to have an eight-piece orchestra during the present season in addition to the organ.

Manager Williamson, of the National Theatre, has given his house a bright appearance with the aid of the paint brush and the use of mirrors, velvet curtains and new electrical fixtures. The front and interior have been redecorated.

Manager George Graham, of the Avenue Theatre, Winnipeg, is being complimented on the manner in which he has raised the standard of his house. It was formerly a five-cent theatre with poor patronage, but now it is doing well at 15-cent and 20-cent prices. Mr. Graham also owns two suburban theatres, the Star and the Classic, both of which are also paying propositions. Manager Graham is spending $3,000 for a more attractive front on the Avenue Theatre, which is located in a good position on Portage avenue.

Manager Morton, of the Monarch Theatre, Winnipeg, is also doing good business with the adjoining theatre, the New Majestic, which he opened a few weeks ago. The Majestic was the third moving picture theatre in Winnipeg.

Improvements are also being made with the Lyceum Theatre, Winnipeg, by Manager Wilson. A new canopy has been placed over the entrance to this theatre. Admissions are 15 cents up to 7 p. m., and 25 cents after that hour, with five cents extra for box seats. Special children's performances are held on Saturday mornings, the admission price for which is five cents. The Lyceum is noted as one of the best "matinee film theatres" in Canada.

Lotz Goes to Select's Denver Office.

H. E. Lotz, formerly the general manager of the General Film Company in Canada, with headquarters in Montreal, has been appointed branch manager for the Select at Denver, Colorado.

Temple Reopens as the Strand.

The Temple Theatre, Galt, Ontario, was reopened on September 18 as the Strand Theatre by the Paramount Theatres Company, Limited, which is a subsidiary of the Regal Films, Limited. The opening attraction was "My Four Years in Germany," and the house was packed in spite of a severe rainstorm. The front has been rebuilt and the interior has been redecorated, making the theatre one of the finest in any of the smaller centres of Canada. Among those who attended the formal opening were a number of prominent film men of Toronto, including N. L. Nathanson, managing director of the Regal Films, Limited, Regent Theatre Company and the Paramount Theatres Company, and A. N. Aranson and others.

The Dominion Compliments the Province.

A unique tribute was paid by the management of the Dominion Theatre, Winnipeg, to the Province Theatre, another large moving picture theatre of Winnipeg, on the occasion of the recent reopening of the Province after it had been remodeled and improved throughout. The Dominion Theatre published a large advertisement in the local newspapers in order to extend its congratulations and to say a complimentary word about the rival house. The advertisement read as follows:

"An appreciation. The Dominion Theatre extends to the Province Theatre its heartiest congratulations on the opening of their splendid new theatre—a theatre that is a monument to the worth of Winnipeg labor and a theatre which is at once a credit to the owners, the city and the entire Northwest.

"The Dominion Theatre at this time desires to express its sincere appreciation of the high standing of the Province Theatre, and its wishes for their continued success.

"THE DOMINION THEATRE."

The compliment made a deep impression, particularly as the two houses are controlled by totally different interests.

Carrol Has Narrow Escape from Death.

Charles Carrol, an exhibitor of Tillsonburg, Ontario, had a narrow escape from death at the local flour mills when he was caught by a revolving set screw as he was oiling a bearing. He was twisted around the shaft, but managed to hold to a hanger, thus saving his life. He was badly cut and bruised, however. Carrol was just finishing his job at the plant before taking over the local moving picture theatre on which he had secured a three-year lease.

Fine Acquires Dundas Theatre.

S. Fine, formerly salesman with the Fox Film Company at Toronto, and manager of the Northern Star Theatre at Iroquois Falls, Ontario, has secured the Dundas Playhouse, 1585 Dundas street west, Toronto, from N. J. Morgan. The Dundas Playhouse seats about five hundred and fifty persons. Mr. Fine announces that he will make no change in the policy of the theatre for the present. Admission prices will be 15 cents and 10 cents.

Mr. Fine's theatre at Iroquois Falls has a seating capacity of less than four hundred. The house is a good proposition, because the admission price is 35 cents. Iroquois Falls is one of the most Northerly centres of Ontario, and it has a floating population of about 6,000. It is in the centre of a pulp-wood section and a farming district. Mr. Fine will continue to look after both houses.

To Rehabilitate Exhibitors' Association.

The Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association, of Montreal, Quebec, has died a slow death, according to the statements of some of the local exhibitors. For some time this organization was very active. A meeting of the association has not been held for two months, and most of the members are in arrears with dues. Comparison is being made between the defunct exhibitors' body and the Exchange Managers' Association. The latter is holding meetings and conferences regularly, and is accomplishing results. With the return of cool weather an effort is being made to shake up the exhibitors so that the Exhibitors' Association will get busy in proper style.

SHERRY OPENS KANSAS CITY BRANCH

Establishes Offices at 319 Gloyd Building—Adolph M. Eisner Installed as Manager

By Kansas City News Service, 115 Railway Exchange, Kansas City, Mo.

THE William L. Sherry Service, of New York, has opened offices at 319 to 325 Gloyd Building, Kansas City. Adolph M. Eisner, about eleven years interested in the moving picture game, will be in charge. Mr. Eisner started with the Theatre Film Service Company as salesman, later becoming booker, and when the General Film Company took over the company, he was made manager of the General's 17 South Wabash office. Later he was transferred to the General Film Company's Kansas City office as manager. After leaving the General, Mr. Eisner was manager of the two Mutual offices in Chicago and some time afterward had charge of four offices for the Universal Film Corporation in western Canada. Prior to becoming associated with the William L. Sherry Service, Mr. Eisner was also president and organizer of the E. L. K. Film Co., Chicago. From being associated with these various enterprises, Mr. Eisner has come to be well known among moving picture men.

The Kansas City office of the William L. Sherry Service already has four men on the road covering the Middle West territory. Frank M. Brown is the Missouri and Oklahoma traveler for the company; J. D. Thatcher, Jr., formerly with Jewel Productions and later with the World Film Corporation, is covering Kansas; and Eddie Carr has charge of the Nebraska and Iowa territory. Joseph Silverman, who is well known among exchange men as proprietor of the Emerald and Prospect theatres in Kansas City at one time, is with the William L. Sherry Service, covering greater Kansas City.

The new film exchange is already securing bookings on Catherine Calvert in "A Romance of the Underworld" and "Out of the Night" as well as Doris Kenyon in "The Street of Seven Stars," and "The Inn of the Blue Moon." The Sherry Service also has the Burlingham Travel Series ready for release at this time.

United Theatres to Move.

The United Picture Theatres of America, now at 1003 Commerce Building, is making arrangements to move into the offices of the General Film Company on the second floor of the Gloyd Building.

Exchanges to Push Loan Campaign.

Moving picture exchanges in Kansas City are making all arrangements to push the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign with all possible enthusiasm. Besides providing special Liberty Loan films free to exhibitors, some of the exchanges are expecting to bring stars to Kansas City during the drive. Practically all of the leading theatres are arranging to show special war subjects at this time. The Griffith production, "Hearts of the World," will appear at the Grand Theatre for a week's run, September 22. "America's Answer" will be shown at Convention Hall from September 30 to October 5 in connection with the Liberty Loan drive. "Smashing Through to Berlin," the new Jewel production, also opens at Convention Hall, October 9 and 10.

Kansas City Exchange Notes.

Mr. Quade, formerly representative for Mutual out of Oklahoma City, and at one time owner of the Bonaventure Theatre in Kansas City, is now with the Universal Film Exchange here. Mr. Quade will cover the Missouri territory for Jewel productions, taking the place of William T. Bernfield who has been transferred to Oklahoma City.

D. D. Lederman, special representative for the home office of the Universal Film Exchange, was in Kansas City recently, leaving that point for Des Moines, Iowa. Mr. Lederman is special efficiency man and has been conducting a tour of the various exchanges.

Mr. Kiser has been added to the sales force of the Standard Film Corporation to cover the territory in Kansas. Mr. Malone is now covering the Missouri territory for the same company.

The Standard Film Corporation has secured the producing rights on "Berlin via America" for the State of Kansas. This concern has also taken over the Ford Weekly for Missouri, Kansas and Northern Oklahoma.

Joe Brandt, general manager of the Universal Film Corporation, New York, is in Kansas City for a conference with the sales force of the local exchange.

Herman Sturn, formerly city salesman for the New York Universal office, has been transferred to the Kansas City branch in the capacity of Bluebird salesman, covering the larger towns of Missouri and Kansas.

O. K. Mason, manager of the Universal exchange, Wichita, Kan., was in Kansas City this week for a conference with Mr. Brandt, general manager from the New York office.

P. B. Dana, of the publicity department of the Kansas City Feature Film Corporation, Paramount-Artcraft distributors in this territory, has just returned from a week's trip through southern Missouri. He states that the wide advertisement of National Paramount-Artcraft week met with all hoped for success locally, one example of this is the fact that the Casino Theatre at Excelsior Springs, Mo., had such large receipts during the Paramount-Artcraft week that it has contracted for the entire Paramount-Artcraft output for the coming year.

Harry K. Rogers, formerly manager of the Princess Theatre, Marion, Kan., is now traveling representative of the General Film Company in the Oklahoma and Kansas territory.

E. J. Peskey, formerly salesman with the Equitable Film Corporation, is back in his territory in western Missouri awaiting his call to service.

The Hodup-Towne Photoplay Company will hereafter be known as the W. B. Towne Photoplay Company, as V. H. Hodup is no longer associated with the company. Jack Rodman has been made manager of the Kansas City office.

J. J. Rotchford, assistant manager of the Select Pictures Corporation, is in Kansas City on his way from New York to the coast. Mr. Rotchford came to Kansas City directly from St. Louis.

ORGANIZE TEAMS TO PUSH BOND SALES

Salesmen of Philadelphia Exchanges to Work in Crews to Aid Liberty Loan Drive

By F. V. Armato, 144 North Salford Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

LOCAL theatre men and exchange managers have already prepared extensive plans to boost the Fourth Liberty Loan in Philadelphia. Headed by that indefatigable worker, Frank W. Buhler, managing director of the Stanley Company's theatres and chairman of the Motion Picture Liberty Loan Committee, the next campaign promises to be a revelation to the Government by the manner in which the selling of Liberty Bonds will be pushed. The campaign will be opened by Mr. Buhler with the presentation of entirely patriotic photoplays during the first week of the campaign, while the exchange managers have organized teams among their salesmen to sell bonds everywhere. There is expected to arise a keen rivalry between the various exchanges that are going to strive to break records. J. Hagarty, manager of the Triangle, held a special meeting last week, and called all of his employees before him to notify them that this was the most critical period of the war and that he expected everybody connected with his organization to go out and do their level best to sell Liberty Bonds. Fred Nixon-Nirdlinger, managing director of a large chain of theatres, has also avowed his intention of going into the campaign with great determination, and has also issued orders to every one of his managers to afford every one identified with the selling of Liberty Bonds the entire freedom of the houses under their management.

To Organize F. I. L. M. Club.

A special meeting will be held shortly which will be attended by all the local exchange managers in order to organize a F. I. L. M. club similar to the one now being conducted in New York.

Earle W. Sweigert Promoted.

Earle W. Sweigert, of the Paramount and Artcraft Exchange, received a well deserved promotion last week when he was placed in charge of the local sales and contract department. Manager John Clark has noticed a steady increase in business during the past month, and predicts a notable fall season for the motion picture industry in general.

Benefit for Film Men in Service.

A benefit for the boys of the motion picture industry who have gone into Uncle Sam's service will be held October 1 at the Forrest Theatre, where the popular show "Business Before Pleasure" is now playing. The funds which is being obtained by the sales made from tickets will go toward buying "smokes" for our lads in the army and navy. From present indications the local motion picture men are going to be represented there 500 strong, and a large bundle of "smokes" will soon be on its way to each former movie man. The benefit will be given under the auspices of the local boys and "Vine Street."

Piacentino Enters the Navy.

S. Piacentino, a popular exhibitor having been identified in the motion picture industry during the past twelve years, has enlisted in the navy. Mr. Piacentino was formerly manager of the Electric Theatre at Eighth and Washington avenues and Lills Opera House, Consohocken, Pa., for Harry Schwalbe, the proprietor.

Four-Minute Men Honor Exhibitors.

J. Drinker, local director of the Four-Minute Speakers, gave a luncheon in honor of all the theatre managers last Friday at the Hotel Adelphi, in appreciation of the splendid work of the managers and the excellent results accomplished by them in co-operating with the speakers during the past year. A large number of exhibitors were on hand and the plans for the coming Liberty Loan campaign were outlined. Among the prominent exhibitors present were Frank W. Buhler, chairman of the Motion Picture Committee; Fred Nixon-Nirdlinger, Harry Jordan, G. Metzel, Abe Einstein, Ben Shindler, Sablosky and McGuirk, Alexander R. Boyd, Herbert Effinger, G. M. Graver, H. Hendricks, W. Goldenberg, Edgar Wolf and H. Forbes.

Collects "Smoke" Money for Soldiers.

J. Cunningham, of the Globe Theatre, Sixtieth and Market streets, donated his theatre to the Soldiers' Smoke Fund Committee, Sunday, September 15, when there was given a special concert, consisting of music, singing, motion pictures and addresses by prominent citizens of this district. The entire proceeds of the voluntary silver offering at the door went to provide "smokes" for the boys "Over There."

Critical Reviews and Comments

Concerning Current Productions

"THE STRANGE WOMAN"

Gladys Brockwell Star of a Fox Production Made from the Stage Version of William J. Hurlbut's Work.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

WHEN Ruby LaFayette, a kindly old lady of the earlier days of stage accomplishments, took to the films to spend her declining years of entertainment usefulness there was a great gain for the screen. It was Miss La Fayette's work that held true and good in "The Strange Woman" as screened in the Fox projection room, with Gladys Brockwell playing the star role—a part created by Elsie Ferguson in the original stage version of William J. Hurlbut's work. It was this kindly old lady that lifted her part into such idealism that it saved from entire disregard the whole story as scenarioized by J. Grubb Alexander.

More years ago than is necessary to here record, Ruby LaFayette was heading her own company in the Middle West, after being graduated from the supporting ranks of numerous stars of other days. In her stage schooling, Miss La Fayette secured a touch of art, a hold upon the naturalness and realities of the drama that makes her work in pictures essentially a delight—a natural sequence of thorough schooling.

"Never again will I put on the manacles of accursed, wicked marriage" is the keynote of the play—the plot undertaking to enforce the motto this sub-title nails at the masthead of the screen craft in which Miss Brockwell stars.

From a small town in Iowa a young man goes to Paris, meets the woman who has arrived at "free love" conclusions because her matrimonial ship had once been wrecked. Sailing now in the craft that has been hauled off the rocks of disappointment and restored to seaworthiness the woman in the case admits her love of the young American, and is willing to voyage without a pilot's license.

Back to Iowa comes the young man with his Parisienne love, and would start instanter to convert his mother to the acceptance of "free love" faith.

This matter of social "salvation" is taken out of his hands by the women folks who constitute the villagers. Their ideas do not quite coincide with the Parisienne view of matrimony, and they all have read a copy of the Frenchwoman's book on the subject. For, when a small town starts upon its mission, we are led to believe that they go through with it, whether the job be knitting for soldiers or ripping up the frail reputation of a Parisienne society matron.

Through this concerted movement on the part of the villagers the Frenchwoman is able, in due season, to tell the natives of Delhi, Iowa, what she thinks of them, and then speeds home to tell the good old lady, the supremely trustful old lady, the abidingly loyal old lady—who believes in her son and believes in the woman who loves him because he is her son.

As a matter of fact the mother is shown to be turning over to the "free love" faith (a trick of this particular mother love) that finishes off the story by opening the eyes of the Parisienne to the better and more substantial uses of the marriage bond.

Gladys Brockwell has a thankless role, and enacts it with credit. What we lack in admiration for her dogmas we pitch into the naturally heavy-weighted scales of her personal charm, and enjoy the show because Miss Brockwell is so really nice, agreeable and pleasant to look upon in the person of her photographic deputy. As for the denizens of Delhi, Iowa; Paris, and the scenes and settings that introduced them, all are in excellent order and faithful to the varying occasions.

"QUEEN OF HEARTS"

Virginia Pearson Has Melodramatic Role In Fox Production of Mystery Story.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

CONSTRUCTED with the sole object of baffling the spectator, "Queen of Hearts," a five-part Fox production written by Harry O. Hoyt and directed by Edmund Lawrence, accomplishes its purpose. The mystery concerns a murder, and three different men are suspected of the crime. If the story is taken at its own valuation and no doubting questions asked it will interest the seeker after the sensational. It is produced and acted so as to catch the fancy of the non-critical, and follows in the path marked out by a long line of popular successes. The introduction of a coffin and the emblems of mourning that go with it will not be approved of by many persons, and adds nothing to the impressiveness of the story.

Pauline Cheraud is the daughter of a prominent citizen in New Orleans who loses his fortune on the stock exchange and turns professional gambler. The little girl is sent to France and educated in a convent. Meanwhile her father is established in New York in one of the most prosperous gambling houses in the city. When Pauline is eighteen she returns home and learns the truth about her father's business. She begs of him for her sake to give it up. Cheraud promises to do so.

That night he is murdered. Suspicion points to three different men. One of them met Pauline in France, and is already interested in her. The evidence against the trio is strong enough to keep Pauline, and also the spectator, in doubt as to the guilty person. The author plays his trump card by clearing all three of the charge and implicating an old family servant. In her efforts to discover and punish the murderer, Pauline has the gambling house kept open, and earns the title of "Queen of Hearts" by the high play she encourages. She and Jimmie Dreen are married at the end, Jimmie being the young chap that met her abroad.

Virginia Pearson does her best work as the gambling house queen. She has the personality and method to bring out this phase of the character. As the young girl at the convent she is not nearly so convincing. Joseph Smiley, Victor Sutherland, Edward J. Burns, Peggy Shaner, John Webb Dillion and James A. Furey are members of a capable support.

"THE RAINBOW TRAIL"

William Farnum Scores Success in Fox Screen Version of Zane Grey Novel.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

A WESTERN romance of Utah and the reign of the Mormons, "The Rainbow Trail" is a sequel to Zane Grey's "Riders of the Purple Sage," and carries on the story with the same leading characters. The screen version produced by William Fox, with William Farnum in the dual role of Lassiter and Shefford, retains much of the romantic atmosphere of the original in the scenes among the mountains. The stirring story with its strongly contrasted characters and its many dramatic situations has been effectively produced by Frank Lloyd, who also assisted Charles Kenyon in preparing the scenario.

"The Rainbow Trail" takes up the thread of narrative about twelve years after John Lassiter, Jane Withersteen and Fay Larkin are first trapped in the valley, where they are driven by the Mormons. During all this time the three have been held prisoners by the great rock which blocks the entrance. Fay has grown into young womanhood, and she and her companions are clad in the skins of the wild animals Lassiter has killed.

John Shefford, who is related to Lassiter and bears a striking resemblance to him, starts to hunt for his kinsman. Before he locates the valley, Wagoner, the Mormon Elder, and two of his men, have found their way into the place and carried off Fay. The elder wants to make her one of his wives. Shefford meets her, and the two fall in love. Wagoner tries to put Shefford out of the way, but the gritty Gentile turns the tables on the Mormon. There are several lively fights between the two, and any number of live incidents all through the story. Lassiter and Jane are rescued from the valley, and there are two happy couples at the finish.

William Farnum doubles Lassiter and Shefford skillfully, and both men have the advantage of his vigorous physical development and his aptitude for romantic acting. He is ably supported by Ann Mersch, William Burress, William Nye, Genevieve Blinn and George Ross. Photographed by Billy Foster.

"A SOCIETY SENSATION"

Bluebird Subject Features Carmel Myers in Story of Contrasts.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel offering, "A Society Sensation," was adapted by Hope Loring and Paul Powell from a story written by Perley Poore Sheehan. It contains numerous elements of universal appeal, and will hold the interest even though it contains no great novelty or suspense. The production is well cast, featuring Carmel Myers as the vivacious heroine, and she is assisted by M. Rodolpho De Valentina, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Alfred Allen, Fred Kelsey, Zasu Pitts and Harold Goodwin.

The opening scenes at once catch the interest, the locale being a fishing village on the Southern California coast. Capt. Parmelee, an old fisherman, believes that he is of noble birth, and that he should really be a member of the House of Lords. His pretty daughter, Sydney, does not take much stock in this belief, but the story eventually makes its way into the papers, and they get considerable notoriety as a result. The family receives a visit from a crooked lawyer and a certain Mrs. Jones, who has been trying to break into San Francisco society. The latter thinks she can use Sydney to good advantage, and induces her to go to the city with her.

The contrast of social conditions is brought out in an enjoyable way. In fact the whole first part of the production is above the average, but it does not quite hold up to the pace set at the beginning. The story is nevertheless a clean, pleasant sort of a tale, and, though there is no particular question about how it is going to turn out, there are some interesting twists in the general situation from time to time. The beach scenes and other settings are attractively pictured.

"CARMEN"

Paramount Reissue of Lasky Production with Geraldine Farrar Still a Vivid Picture.

CECIL B. DeMILLE'S screen version of "Carmen," with Geraldine Farrar as the gypsy, still retains the intense dramatic force and glow of passion that made the picture such a success when it was first released. The vivid romance of the beautiful cigarette girl has been transferred to the screen with a surprising amount of the original atmosphere that was enriched by the immortal strains of Bizet. All the scenes that Geraldine Farrar and her support acted with such effect—the tavern scenes, the fight in the cigarette factory, the smuggling episodes and the final tragedy before the doors of the bull ring—have their old power to grip the spectator.

"THE GOAT"

First Fred Stone Picture Released by Paramount Is Filled with Star's Acrobatic Stunts.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

FRED STONE, the celebrated comedian of the musical comedy stage, has become a screen actor, and introduced his talented legs, wonderfully trained muscles and daring stunts in a picture called "The Goat," produced by Paramount. The scenario is the work of Frances Marion, and was directed by Donald Crisp. The star plays Chuck McCarthy, a young iron worker, who is in love with a stenographer in a moving picture studio. Chuck gets bitten with the movie actor craze, and determines to sign his name to a studio pay roll.

While doing construction work for a moving picture company he has a chance to chase the leading lady's monkey, when the little beast gets away and climbs over the frame of the new building. This gives the star an opportunity to do some of his acrobatic stunts. Chuck catches the animal, and is rewarded by being given a small part in a picture. He is greatly disappointed at his humble beginning, but he has promised his sweetheart he will earn the money to help her pay off a mortgage, so sticks to his job and hopes for better things.

The great moment comes when the leading man refuses to risk his life in a war drama, and Chuck is asked to double the part in the dangerous scenes. While being pursued by Mexican bandits, Chuck's horse falls, and his rider is badly hurt. He is taken home and nursed by Molly. The next day the film company send him a check for $1,000. Molly and he decide to go to Niagara Falls on their honeymoon, and Chuck quits the movies for good.

Fred Stone is not at ease in the quiet scenes, but performs all the stunts with his well-known skill. The studio portions of the picture are cleverly handled. Winifred Greenwood as Molly, Rhea Mitchell as Bijou Lamour and Philo McCollough as Marmaduke X. Caruthers are the leading members of a capable support.

"RULING PASSIONS"

First of Schomer Productions Fortunate in Selection of Cast Headed by Edwin Arden and Julia Dean.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE first effort of the Schomer Photoplay Producing Company, Inc., to make a picture evidences great sincerity of artistic purpose. Recalling the old adage concerning good intentions, this is no reason why the production, "Ruling Passions," written and directed by Abraham S. Schomer, should be a faultless one. Before going into detail regarding its faults and its virtues we will say that Mr. Schomer was exceedingly fortunate in his choice of a cast, and he would have been more fortunate still had his scenario been better planned, for here the most serious faults evidently lay.

Edwin Arden and Julia Dean have the leading roles, with Claire Whitney, Earl Schenck and Dean Borrup in support. The work of Edwin Arden in this production is superb. He defies the disadvantage of appearing in a faultily made production to restrain him from doing his very best—he has not deviated one instant from the path of art.

The story of "Ruling Passions" concerns the overmastery of an otherwise splendid and generous character by hate and revenge, which are in turn obliterated by love and mercy. The production makes a good start by the presentation in allegorical fashion of these ruling passions. In the telling of the story proper in picture form the author-director has in a sense fallen down. He has made his start in the middle of his story, and has then fallen back on the servant in the house to reveal to his nurse its commencement, in making known to the audience the reason why John Walton, banker and broker, is embittered against the world, before resuming the thread where he broke off. The story as told by the servant is so lengthy and has been developed to such an extent that the impossibility of this servant being acquainted with all the details as shown in the picture is immediately conveyed to the mind of the spectator. The situation between the man and his nurse who discovers what others have failed to do—that it is his mind and not his body that is responsible for his misery—does not ring true. The sudden change brought about in his mental condition by an absolute stranger is rather unconvincing. The language of the subtitles is not skillfully chosen, causing them to lose effect. Other minor faults occur in the course of the picture.

On the other hand the development of individual scenes is often very effective. And, while the lack of suspense causes the production to drag toward the end, there will be many picture patrons who will enjoy it. This, we will say again, is largely due to the good work of the cast, especially that of Edwin Arden.

"UNEXPECTED PLACES."

Bert Lytell Gives Pleasing Performance in Metro Production of Passable Merits.

THE STORY from which the five-part Metro production, "Unexpected Places," was taken is one by Lieut. Frank R. Adams, in the Blue Book Magazine. The picture was directed by E. Mason Hopper, with Bert Lytell and Rhea Mitchell in the leading roles. Others of the cast are Louis Morrison, Colin Henny, Edythe Chapman, John Burton, Rosemary Theby, Stanton Heck and Jay Dwiggins. The picture is not one of Metro's best. The suspense is not well sustained; the method of development is entirely too obvious, and only at times is there a feeling of satisfaction with the action of the picture.

As the story runs, a young reporter is sent out to get the facts of the story of the murder of the valet of an English nobleman who has come to America on an important secret mission. The reporter, arriving at the hotel at which the nobleman is stopping just at the moment when he is being overcome by a dose of poison delivered to him in his coffee, becomes the keeper of his lordship's secret and plans which are concealed in a dispatch box in the lid of his trunk. By force of circumstances he poses as the nobleman and enters the home of the Englishman's American relatives and carries out the deception by means of which he keeps next to a pretty girl and at the same time holds to the papers. Some interesting scenes occur when the persecuting party tries to obtain possession of the papers and finally kidnaps the girl, a cousin of the nobleman and sweetheart of the reporter in a last attempt. The police are called in and the matter settled in the usual way. Bert Lytell gives a pleasing interpretation of the role of the reporter.

"THE CRAVING"

Five-Part State Rights Production on M. H. Hoffman Program Employs Old Tricks with New Ideas.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THOSE looking for a production with which to drive home the principles of temperance will not find exactly what they are looking for in the Francis Ford production, "The Craving," the state rights of which is being handled by M. H. Hoffman, for in spite of the fact that its author and director has had in mind the projecting of a forceful lesson on the cure of the alcohol habit through the conquest of mind over matter, his ideas are not clearly presented. Francis Ford has directed the picture and also played the leading male role. Mae Gaston has the feminine lead and Peter Gerald plays the heavy. Old tricks of photography employed some ten years ago by the Vitagraph Company have been effectively worked into this production, and no doubt are an improvement on the first revelation of the sort that the screen offerd in bygone days. Girls are seen to dance in a champagne glass which stands on a table in front of the drunkard—forms which his distorted fancy has conjured up. They also mingle with the liquor being poured from the bottle, and when the bottle lies on its side on the table they cavort within. He impatiently plucks one of the saucy imps and puts her in his outside breast pocket, occasionally flicking his finger at her as at a fly when she momentarily disappears only to tantalizingly emerge again. The scene in the bottom of the bottle as seen when the man's spirit leaves the body and enters the bottle is somewhat questionable, presenting as it does a bevy of nude girls moving in rapid scenes of confusion.

The plot of the story is at variance with what seems to be the basic idea to such an extent, that one is at a loss to know exactly which of two ideas is the one primarily intended to be followed. The second idea of the story concerns two scientists, one of which is endowed with hypnotic power which he exercises over the mind of a young girl of whom circumstances has made him guardian. He sends her to another scientist who has been experimenting with an explosive to lead him back to his former drink habit, and thereby place him in his power that he may acquire the formula of the explosive. In the end the girl comes to the man in spirit and helps him to conquer.

"SWAT THE SPY."

The Lee Kiddies Are Stars of Lively Comedy That Keeps Them in Evidence Almost Continuously.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

GRANTED that the public make their own favorites, Jane and Katherine Lee have been screened in an offering that will give great delight to every individual who revels in the pranks and doing of these clever children. Basing the assertion upon the original premise, the "Baby Grands" will have in "Swat the Spy" the best feature they have ever worked in for satisfying the demand for their screen doings.

It will consequently be their best picture, because they are on view practically all of the time throughout five reels of broad comedy. The things they do are many, and the ways they will accomplish laughs are various. Director Arvid E. Gillstrom has looked well into the methods of screen farce, and there might be written many "L-Komiums" in praise of the results. The scenes move fast and switch quickly from one "stunt" to another until the things the "Baby Grands" do would form a card-index of almost every juvenile prank known to pictures.

The spy is swatted through no design of the kiddies; it is an outcome of their mischieveousness that finally lands the devotees of Kultur in durance vile. The purpose of the production (to exploit the two cut-ups) has been accomplished to the limit of possibilities, and exhibitors who operate where Jane and Katherine Lee are favorites may confidently assure their patrons of a "Baby Grand" carnival of comicalities.

LIBERTY LOAN SPECIALS.

Motion Picture Industry's Boost for the Fourth Liberty Loan Splendid Tribute to the Art.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE influence brought to bear on the public in the Fourth Liberty Loan Drive by the special short productions which have been contributed by the motion picture industry will be unlimited in its appeal. A group of these contributions viewed by the writer are astonishingly effective, especially as they are confined to a very few hundred feet each. In every instance the big thought is put over with a bang. True there are some that contain more force than others: for instance the Goldwyn all-star number, which is a satirical masterpiece, and visualizes the war as a poker game between the nations, in which he who has the biggest backing is bound to win. The Earle Williams number is also tremendously forceful. It has been developed in the shape of an allegory visualizing the tragedy of Belgium, and the several attempts of the Allied nations to break the chains which bind her. Uncle Sam's representative tries three times to sever the chains, returning each time with a file larger than the last, each representing a Liberty Loan. Finally with the last tremendous file the purpose is accomplished.

Then there were George M. Cohan and William Faversham, who put their appeal over the top with irresistible speeches. Alice Brady fully equips ten soldiers, Harold Reid institutes a bond pocket in which he puts all the money which he would otherwise spend for pleasures, and Edith Storey holds up a bandit with his own gun and forces him not only to give to the Liberty Loan, but also to enlist. In fact, the motion picture industry's contribution to boost the Fourth Liberty Loan is a tribute to the art and to the industry.

THE W. W. Hodkinson Corporation is distributing the five-part Plaza production entitled "Whatever the Cost," which was written by Captain Leslie T. Peacock and directed by Robert Ensminger. October 7 is set for its release date. The featured member of the cast is Anita King, "the outdoor girl," who gives a pleasing portrayal of the orphan daughter of a moonshiner. Others of the cast are Bruce Smith, Charles Dudley, Stanley Pembroke, Gordon Sackville, Patrick Calhoun and Corenne Grant. The production is a fair sample of melodrama, which at times falls shy of that convincing element that even melodrama must have to meet standard requirements.

The story follows the fortunes of Jess Farley, an orphan who has been brought up among moonshiners and dresses in male attire. One day having accompanied her father to the village dance hall, she is noticed by the piano player of the saloon, who becomes enamoured of her, ferrets out her home, and, ejected forcibly from it by Jess, shoots her father because he refuses to consent to give his daughter to him. The girl, unaware of who her father's murderer is, goes to the dance hall as an entertainer, and after a series of events suspects a man with whom she has fallen in love, because she discovers that it is his gun that has been used in the murder of her father. Finally the real murderer, after a fight with his rival, dies, confessing his crime.

"THE HEART OF RACHAEL."

Brunton Adaptation of Kathleen Norris Novel for Hodkinson Program Features Bessie Barriscale.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE screen has long been partial to stories of wrecked domestic happiness. These stories no doubt find favor with a vast majority of the public, especially when they are well screened. "The Heart of Rachael," from the novel by Kathleen Norris, is one of this kind, and has the advantage of competent direction and a good cast headed by Bessie Barriscale. The picture, which is in five reels, was made at the Robert Brunton studios, and was directed by Howard Hickman. The arrangement of the story, which runs smoothly, by-the-way, was made by Jack Cunningham. In the cast besides Bessie Barriscale are Hershel Mayall, Ella Hall, Herbert Heyes, Edward Coxen and Gloria Hope. A clever little boy, Ben Alexander, plays the part of Rachael's little son. Miss Barriscale's graceful personality appears to advantage in the production, although it does seem that there are an overabundance of closeups of the star in which her expression varies very little. It is also noticeable that the unpleasant character of the husband, from which the wearied wife obtains a divorce, detracts materially from the driving home of the point which the story evidently intends to impress on its audience, and that is, when a wife divorces herself from her husband, and in turn her second husband seeks a divorce from her, she has little right to complain.

The story is a fairly interesting one of its kind, and Bessie Barriscale does intelligent work throughout. The work of Hershel Mayall is also noticeably good. The production is being distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

We think, on the whole, e subject will get over well, as it has fficient exuberance to carry it past the ak spots.

William Russell is particularly pleas- g in the role of Hobbs, Jr., a young man ways in a hurry in spite of the fact that has nothing in particular to do. His her, a Wall Street financier, decides to nd the youth to New Mexico to buy ck a mining property he had sold to Louis Willoughby. The mine was originally thought to be practically worthless, but he now believes it to be a bonanza.

Hobbs, Jr., first arouses interest by the dashing manner in which he hums his way to New Mexico on a passenger train, carrying out some hair-raising stunts en route. Rufus Renshaw, the father of Helen Renshaw, his sweetheart, is also on the train with the girl, and they are accompanied by Lord Willoughby, brother of Louis. The girl's father is also anxious to buy the mine.

The events in New Mexico include a dash on a stage coach, some difficulties with Angus MacDonald and his cowboys, and a real and fake purchase of the mine. The trip back is a strong feature of the story, in which Hobbs, Jr., impersonates the colored porter, and Lord Willoughby passes himself off as his brother. The plot is full of ingenuity, but the construction is not always convincing. Clear, attractive photography is a pleasing feature.

The story was written by George Lee McCandless and directed by Henry King. Winifred Westover appears as the girl, Hayward Mack doubles as Lord and Louis Willoughby, Henry Barrows appears as Hobbs, Sr., and Carl Stockdale as MacDonald.

"A DIPLOMATIC MISSION"

Earle Williams the Hero in Highly Colored Romance Produced by Vitagraph.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

ANOTHER of those impossible but amusing romances of the American hero who woos and wins a noble lady with a title, "A Diplomatic Mission," produced by Vitagraph, and starring Earle Williams, tells of one Sylvester Todd, born and bred in the United States, who stops off at a South Sea island that is not on the map and makes things interesting for all there who have handles to their names.

The most thrilling moment is when Todd comes upon a third-rate German princeling telling the Lady Diana Loring, who is English by birth, that she must be his by fair means or foul, and assists the representative of an arrogant and wabbling dynasty from the scene with the toe of his boot. As this is a pleasant reminder of how Bill, the Hun, is going to make his exit from his seat on the German throne the incident is bound to be received with loud applause from all loyal Americans.

As for the rest of the story, Don Bartlett, the author, tells us that an English family had a platinum mine on another island that is not on the map, and that, just before the great war broke out, the mine had a German foreman. Todd has to run away after kicking the prince. He goes to the platinum island at the request of an English diplomat who has heard that the Hun foreman is getting ready to destroy the mine, and has started an uprising among the natives.

When Todd gets there he finds things just to his liking—plenty of good, stiff fighting. The arrival of Lady Diana completes his happiness. With her to fight for there is nothing he does not dare and accomplish. The German leads the blacks against the chateau where Todd and his English friends are staying. The gate is battered in, and the inmates give themselves up for lost, but the arrival of an American warship brings a star spangled finish.

"BATTLING JANE"

Dorothy Gish Makes a Hit in Comedy Melodrama Released by Paramount.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

DOROTHY GISH has responded delightfully when given opportunity in the story of a pure American type, "Battling Jane," by Arnold Bernot, the visualization directed by Elmer Clifton. She is not the "weepy" heroine so much affected by those authors who know more about past generations than they do about the present one. The "weepy" heroine is a dead one so far as young America is concerned. The young girls of today, those genuinely American, have too much sense of humor to take themselves seriously, to say nothing of tearfully. They have the old fighting spirit of the country in their blood, but they have a more independent viewpoint than the girls of yesterday, are better able to take care of themselves in an emergency. This is of the type portrayed by dauntless Dorothy, the most comically adventurous soul at the outset ever shown on the screen.

The story of "Battling Jane," though by turns pure comedy and pure melodrama, is logically and consistently told, the bright picture of a brave young heart, cheerfully adaptable to circumstances, as foolish as the rest of us in love affairs, but keen enough to see the comical side of it all, herself included. Her sense of humor is so powerful that it breaks out in the midst of her tragic adventures, and she is continually adventuring. A spirited little waif from nowhere in particular, with no objective in view, Jane battles for her living and to save the fine baby of a dying woman as well. She fights for her own rights and those of the child through some stormy melodramatic episodes; she battles for the baby in courtship, and the baby unconsciously battles for her in the end, bringing her triumph over older and weaker minds and an assured future. We could even stand more of her adventures, though it might not be wise to play on this one note so long. Dorothy has "arrived," an A-1 comedienne, pleasing a large audience at the Rivoli.

"MRS. LEFFINGWELL'S BOOTS"

Constance Talmadge Has Congenial Role in Clever Select Comedy Adapted from Thomas Play.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

TO PUT it truthfully, "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots" fit Constance Talmadge as snugly as does the character of the charming lady herself. This five-part Select picture, adapted from Augustus Thomas' clever comedy that had a successful stage career, has been turned into scenario form by Edith Kennedy with much skill, and directed by Walter Edwards with corresponding ability. The spectator who is not pleasantly entertained by the neat turns of plot and light-hearted fun of the picture doesn't know a good thing when he sees it. It also refutes the absurd contention that stage plays can not be made into acceptable screen stories.

An extravagant wife, a pair of expensive slippers and an economical husband start the trouble, which always affords a hearty laugh for the onlooker. Mrs. Leffingwell pays seventy-five dollars for the slippers after Mr. Leffingwell has told her he cannot afford the price. Walter Huntley, engaged to Mabel Brown, buys the mates to the Leffingwell slippers for his sweetheart and gives them to his maid after a quarrel with Mabel. In consequence of the twists and turns that all good dramatists give to human affairs in a comedy, friend husband is made to think that friend Huntley bought and paid for the slippers that friend wife is wearing at a dance. Matters get very serious for Leffingwell, and he goes in search of Huntley's life. The innocence and good sense of Mrs. Leffingwell saves any bloodshed, and both couples make it up in time for the final scene.

Constance Talmadge evidently enjoyed playing the title role. Harrison Ford is excellent as Mr. Leffingwell. George Fisher as Walter Huntley, Fred Gooodwin as Aleck Brown, Julia Faye as Mabel Brown, Vera Doria as Mrs. Brown and Herbert Prior as Mr. Brown complete the efficient cast.

COMMENTS

General Film Company.

SOOTHING THE HEART OF ITALY (American Red Cross Picture Bureau).—This reel of views visualizes the successful effort of the Red Cross to strengthen the morale of the Italians, which at one time during the war was partially destroyed. The picture is reviewed in the Educational Department of our issue of October 12.

OF NO USE TO GERMANY (American Red Cross Picture Bureau).—A reel of interesting material showing how the old men, women and children, also the sick and worked-out Belgians and French who have been under the German rule, are dumped by train loads at Evian-les-Bains and are taken care of by the Red Cross. A review will be found in the Educational Department of our issue of October 12.

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

A SOCIETY SENSATION (Bluebird).—A five-reel offering, adapted from a story by Perley Poore Sheehan, with Carmel Myers in the part of the heroine. She appears as the daughter of a fisherman who is believed to be of noble birth. A San Francisco society woman takes her in tow, and some interesting situations follow. The story is a pleasant one of about average strength. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

THE TALK OF THE TOWN (Bluebird).—A five-reel subject, written by Harold Vickers and produced by Allen Holubar, with Dorothy Phillips in the lead. The plot is one of light texture, but contains numerous appealing scenes. It makes a production of about average interest. Reviewed at length in last week's issue.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation

THE MARRIAGE RING (Ince-Paramount), Aug. 26.—Enid Bennett has a dramatic role in this five-part picture. The scenes are laid in the Sandwich Islands. Fred Niblo directed the production. The picture has considerable novelty of plot and location.

THE GOAT (Artcraft), Sept. 22.—The well-known acrobatic comedian, Fred Stone, makes his film debut in this five-part picture. It tells a story of the studio, and was written by Frances Marion. The star does a number of his celebrated stunts. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

THE BORDER WIRELESS (Artcraft-Ince).—A highly sensational story of patriotic service on the Mexican border, with William S. Hart in a new and pleasing characterization. A winning production.

Fox Film Corporation

SWAT THE SPY, Sept. 29.—Exploiting Jane and Katherine Lee, this comedy will be voted the best these clever children have ever essayed, for it keeps them on view practically all the time and will give their admirers a full measure of delight in the things they do. Mischief of many kinds propels a speedy shifting of scenes and incidents, and in the end the spy is "swatted" in good and proper fashion. Exhibitors where the Lee kiddies are in special favor will do well to promise almost anything from these clever little ones, and "Swat the Spy" will make good.

THE STRANGE WOMAN, Nov. 3.—Gladys Rockwell is star of this feature, directed by E. J. Le Saint from William J. Hurlbut's stage play of the same title. Elsie Ferguson starred in the original, and Miss Rockwell may not be fairly compared because of the way the scenario has turned out the stage story. The shock a small Iowa town gets from disciples of "free love" is the theme that leads to the one valuable point in the story—mother love and its vast comprehension. There will be a shock to some, a smile for others and average screen entertainment for nine out of ten "fans."

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation

LAUGHING BILL HYDE (Rex Beach-Goldwyn), Sept. 30.—A very humanizing and satisfying story of a confirmed thief by Rex Beach, with Will Rogers a decided success in the title role. Reviewed in last week's issue.

Greater Vitagraph, Inc.

A NYMPH OF THE FOOTHILLS, Sept. 9.—Blue Ridge mountaineers and city folk are the characters in this five-part picture, the heroine having a stormy time before she settles down to married life. Gladys Leslie has the title role and plays it well.

A DIPLOMATIC MISSION, Sept. 30.—Written by Don Bartlett, this five-part picture is a romance of a lively young American and an English lady of title. It is full of the adventures belonging to highly colored romance. Earle Williams and Grace Darmond head the cast. A longer review is published on another page of this issue.

M. H. Hoffman

THE CRAVING (Francis Ford-Hoffman).—A five-reel novelty film, the story of which is based on the alcohol habit. A great deal of trick photography has been used in the picture, forming the most interesting and entertaining part of the production, which in other respects is ordinary and ineffective. These tricks are not altogether new, such as girls dancing in champagne glasses, but are attractive. A full review will be found in another part of this issue.

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation

THE HEART OF RACHAEL (Brunton).—A five-part production featuring Bessie Barriscale. The story is one of wrecked domestic happiness and has been well made. A full review will be found in another part of this issue.

THE EMBARRASSMENT OF RICHES (Lillian Walker-Hopkinson), Sept. 23.—A five-part comedy-drama featuring Lillian Walker. The screen version of the Louis K. Anspacher play does not seem to provide great opportunities for the star, and we believe that the direction rather than the play is to blame. A full review will be found in our issue of October 5.

WHATEVER THE COST (Plaza), Oct. 7.—A five-part moonshine melodram featuring Anita King. The production is a fairly good one, but at times fails to be convincing. A full review will be found in another part of this issue.

Jewel Productions, Inc.

THE YELLOW DOG (Jewel), Nov. 1.—An excellent six-reel patriotic number, based on a short story by Henry Irving Dodge. The events take place in a small shipbuilding company where a "Yellow Dog" club is organized for smoking out peddlers of German propaganda. This number has humor as well as a dramatic finish of an inspiring sort. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Metro Pictures Corporation

UNEXPECTED PLACES (Metro), Sept. 30.—A five-part comedy-drama featuring Bert Lytell. The production is based on a fairly interesting story and could have been made considerably more attractive than it has. A full review will be found in this issue.

Mutual Film Corporation.

KEEP HER SMILING (Strand).—Elinor Field and Bobby Vernon are the featured members of the cast in this moderately entertaining comedy. The story follows the love story of a young girl whose father wants her to marry a man of his choice rather than her own. Her sweetheart, a young doctor, in a plot to win able. Most of the incidents occur at a beach resort, in which various concessions are brought into play, with some laughable results. Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels are also in the cast.

MONEY ISN'T EVERYTHING (American-Pathe).—A five-reel comedy-drama featuring Margarita Fisher. It is this star's first appearance on the Pathe program, and it is a pity that her opportunities have not been greater. The production falls short on the comedy line. A full review will be found in our issue of October 5.

THE MANTLE OF CHARITY (American-Pathe).—A five-reel number, with Marguerita Fisher and Jack Mowrer in the leads. The hero and heroine conduct rival charity organizations, one run on the familiar red tape line and the other on an open plan for dispensing supplies to the needy poor. There is some good comedy running through this subject, which is enjoyable. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

appears in this as a man just out of jail, with a companion crook. They invade a girl's school to kidnap one of the fair maidens, but get the pricipal by mistake. The scenes in the girls' school are the most amusing; the number as a whole is of average interest.

THE TRIUMPH OF TRANSPORTATION (Pathe), Oct. 6.—This gives a brief review of the various forms of transporting goods since the days when manpower itself was the only means. Ox carts, prairie schooners, and other vehicles are shown, and the film then gives interesting glimpses of the way in which modern auto trucks are assembled. A short comic is added at the close.

WHY PICK ON ME? (Rolin-Pathe), Oct. 13.—One of the funniest of Harold Lloyd comedies, which is saying considering feature of this instalment. Echo makes a great dash in a stage coach to escape them, during which some fine riding scenes are pictured. But she is captured and once more taken to the temple. Plans are laid to sail to Peru, but Two-gun Carter and his men are already scheming to recover the girl.

OFFICIAL WAR REVIEW, No. 14 (Pathe) Sept. 29.—This opens with scenes from the American trenches in France, then shows President Poincaire and officers of the French army decorating heroes. Other features deal with the Italian front, inspection of British troops by the Earl of Scarborough, and the number closes with a living flag photographed at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

NO PLACE LIKE JAIL (Rolin-Pathe), Oct. 6.—The first of some new comedies with Stan Laurel as chief comedian. He out, has had her carried home apparently injured from a fall from her horse. He is then sent for to attend her, and effecting a wonderful cure wins the sympathy of the father and the hand of the maiden.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 59 (Mutual).—This issue opens with some scenes from the front showing how a handful of marines captured 165 Germans. Other scenes of interest show the Legion of Honor here to take part in the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, the funeral of Cardinal Farley and a Californian duck farm.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 60 (Mutual).—Over Chicago by aeroplane is the first item in this issue. This encompasses a fine birdseye view of the city. Other events recorded are Brooklyn honoring its heroes, a bathing girl revue at Idor Park, California; a school for the instruction of shipbuilders at Hog Island Yard, Philadelphia, caterpillar wheat harvesters at work, soldiers of 1918 on a visit to Lookout Mountain, and deaf mutes rendering "The Star Spangled Banner" with their hands.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

TOSSED IN THE TORRENT (Pathe), Sept. 29.—Episode No. 7 of "Hands Up." Fighting with the Inca Indians is a lead-

Schomer Photoplay Corporation

RULING PASSIONS (Schomer).—A multiple reel production in which Edwin Arden and Julia Dean play the leading roles. The picture, which is faulty in construction, is fortunate in having been played by an excellent cast. Edwin Arden's work is superb. A full review will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Select Pictures Corporation

MRS. LEFFINGWELL'S BOOTS (Select).—Taken from a story by Augustus Thomas, this five-part picture is full of clever comedy situations. Constance Talmadge has a neatly fitting role. The picture is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Triangle Film Corporation

THE SECRET CODE, Sept. 8.—Gloria Swanson has a weepy role in this five-part story, written by Adela Rogers St. John. The scenes are of official life in Washington. Albert Parker directed the production.

THE GRAY PARASOL, Sept. 29.—Claire Anderson is the leading player in this five-part picture, which deals with German secret agents in this country. It has an interesting plot. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Universal Film Company

ANIMATED WEEKLY, No. 41 (Universal), Sept. 11.—The launching of the "Piave" leads this number, which includes a meeting of Y. M. C. A. leaders in Washington, scenes from the World's Series, a chicken show at Petaluma, Cal., gasolineless Sunday in New York, and various other features.

CURRENT EVENTS, No. 71 (Universal), Sept. 21.—War training at Harvard University, American registration, Secretary Daniels reviewing "Devil Dogs," aerial mail from New York to Chicago, scenes from the American front, and numerous other features are included in this. It closes with an animated cartoon by Leslie Elton.

NUTS AND NOODLES (L-Ko), Oct. 2.—A two-reel comic, with "Oriental Charlie," Eva Novak, Rube Miller and others in the cast. The fun consists almost entirely of small stunts which are quite amusing in their way, though a stronger connecting plot would have helped. A burro, a goat, a pig and a cow and calf "assist." This is of about average strength.

THE DEAD SHOT (Western), Oct. 26.—This is a Western offering, in which a girl, Helen Gibson, plays the part of a stranger with a quick finger on the trigger. She rounds up her erring husband and child in an interesting manner. This varies the usual conventional "bandit" theme, by having a woman play the leading role.

THE BRASS BULLET, No. 13 (Universal), Oct. 28.—This opens with Jack's dive from the steamer to safety. Rosalind escapes from Gilbert at the dock in a taxi, but the crooked taxi driver takes her to a blackmailers' resort. Jack comes to rescue her and is beaten up by the gang. The number carries the interest along in a rather conventional, but acceptable, way.

World Pictures Corporation

THE APPEARANCE OF EVIL (World-Picture).—A five-reel subject, written by Horace Hazeltine, and directed by Lawrence C. Windom. June Elvidge and Frank Mayo appear as a pair of newlyweds who keep their marriage secret under critical conditions. This has some weak points in development, but is novel and entertaining. Reviewed at length in last week's issue.

"His Birthright" Goes Big in Chicago.

Mutual's reports from the large Chicago houses showing "His Birthright," the first Sessue Hayakawa production, indicates that the Japanese star is one of the greatest box-office assets in the Windy City.

The Woodlawn Theatre, the mecca of the South Side motion picture fan, ran "His Birthright" September 13 and 14, and Managing Director Andrew Karzas reports capacity houses both days. Although no special exploitation or house display was made, the star's name was sufficient guarantee of the quality of the production, and the result was gratifying to the box-office.

Goldwyn's Second Quintet Is Up.

A further strengthening of exhibitor interest and support has been recorded in every section of the United States following the release of five big production "hits" by Goldwyn. As in no other business successful productions have a way of making themselves immediately felt, and Goldwyn benefits from the national approval of Geraldine Farrar in "The Turn of the Wheel," Mabel Normand in "Peck's Bad Girl," Tom Moore in "Just for Tonight," Madge Kennedy in "The Kingdom of Youth," and Rex Beach's "Laughing Bill Hyde," with Will Rogers.

Now, following up these initial successes, Goldwyn presents five more productions, each of which, the organization is certain, will win the same exhibitor liking and public popularity as was bestowed upon the initial releases of the company's first season under the Star Series sales policy.

The next five Goldwyn productions in point of release are Mae Marsh in "Hidden Fires" on October 7; Mabel Normand in "A Perfect 36" on October 14; Tom Moore in "Thirty a Week" on October 28; Madge Kennedy in "A Perfect Lady," by Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf, on November 4, and Geraldine Farrar in "The Hell Cat" on November 11.

Changes in Vitagraph's Directing Staff.

There have been a few transfers in the directorial staff at the Vitagraph Hollywood studio. Robert Bradbury, who played one of the "heavies" in the serial "The Woman in the Web," is assisting Director Paul Hurst in the concluding episodes of "The Iron Test," the serial in which Antonio Moreno and Carol Holloway are the featured stars. Gilbert Pratt has been given the direction of Earle Montgomery and Joe Rock in the two-reel Big V Special Feature Comedies. R. H. McCray, who directed these comedians in a two-reel submarine comedy at Catalina, could not be spared by W. S. Smith, manager of the studio, and he has again resumed his place as assistant to Mr. Smith.

Fritzi Brunette Making "Sealed Orders."

Fritzi Brunette, whose two Bluebird features, "Playthings" and "The Velvet Hand," are now going strong, will have as her next starring vehicle "Sealed Orders," a play based on an original story by Andrew Soutar and George Hull," from which Harvey Gates has prepared a script. The story is said to give the star a highly melodramatic part that will give her full opportunities. Douglas Gerrard will again handle the megaphone.

Fourth Big V Comedy Named.

"Bears and Bad Men" is the title of the fourth Big V Special comedy to be listed by Vitagraph since the inauguration on September 16 of its two-reel weekly feature comedy service. This subject has for its star Lawrence Semon, and is scheduled for release October 7. It is said to be the best picture that Semon has made since he began his career as a screen comedian and director.

Shows Lesser Known Side of War.

"The Far Flung Battle Line," Official War pictures, issued by the British Government, and distributed by Pathe, on the week, beginning October 6, will give a view of an unfamiliar side of the war. From far away French Indo-China come these pictures, showing France's long line of man supply—from Senegal in Africa—colonies of the French motherland, whose peoples are eager to take their part in the great world conflict. The pictures are entitled "French Colonial Troops in the War." Slant-eyed Asiatics and full-lipped Africans are seen doing their bit. The Indo-Chinese are used mostly for work behind the lines, and the Senegalese as warriors to France in the front battle line. These pictures constitute intimate studies of native colonials, their work, their play, and their ardent patriotism for the flag of France.

Outing-Chesters Go Big in South.

S. T. Stephens, general supervisor of Mutual exchanges, who has been in Chicago the last few days, reports to Assistant General Manager Kirkpatrick that the Outing-Chester Pictures are well liked in the South, and the bookings have taken a big jump within the past few weeks. Throughout the Middle West the large theatres are featuring this Mutual brand on their programs. The Circle Theatre, of Indianapolis, is now showing the Outing-Chester Pictures with Screen Telegram.

"Scars and Bars" Has a Surprise.

Director Noel Smith has just completed a comedy feature for the L-KO company, entitled "Scars and Bars." According to advance information the story abounds in new comedy elements, ending with a decided and novel surprise. Dick Smith, the versatile comedian, carries off the honors as a gloom chaser in his laughable interpretation of the poor jailbird who always gets left on everything. Bobbie Richards gives a clever presentation of the hero thrust into fame and into the arms of the beautiful girl, Helen Lynch.

Rebooks Vitagraph's "Over the Top."

There's one exhibitor who is firmly convinced that advertising pays and he feels so strongly on the subject that even in advertising a return engagement of such a big attraction as Vitagraph's "Over the Top" he is running a billboard campaign as extensive as he used on the first showing of the great war special. The exhibitor is Dr. Charles J. Alleman, proprietor of the Bijou Theatre, Church Point, Ia., and he sent in an order for a full line of paper, including twenty-four sheets, sixes, threes, ones, window cards and 1,000 heralds. Dr. Alleman is one of the many exhibitors who have booked "Over the Top" for repeat showing, and he plans to show it for two days—October 8 and 9.

Female Strategy in "Keep Smiling."

In her next release, "Keep Smiling," Elinor Field, the star of Mutual-Strand comedies, applies female strategy to get out of a situation which is not entirely pleasing to her.

Appearing with Miss Field in this picture is Harry Depp, who was recently secured to play leads in the Strand comedies. "Keep Smiling" will be released by Mutual on October 1.

Mission Productions Star Gloria Joy.

Mission Productions, the newest California motion picture corporation, has been organized to star Gloria Joy, the child actress, whose first releases are just coming to the screen through Oakdale Films. I. W. Keerl, formerly business manager of Dustin Farnum productions and secretary of the Corona Cinema Company, is chief organizer of Mission Productions, and will have charge of production, with the office of secretary and general manager.

Sherwood Macdonald, formerly of Balboa, will direct Gloria Joy, and William Beckway will have charge of photography. Dan F. Whitcomb, author of most of the famous Little Mary Sunshine Stories filmed by Balboa and released through Pathe, has been retained to write for Gloria Joy, and as Mr. Whitcomb wrote "The Locked Door," one of the Oakdale features starring Gloria Joy, he is thoroughly familiar with her requirements.

Production will begin as soon as Mr. Whitcomb's work is finished, and until further developments Mission Productions' features will be staged at the Robert Brunton studios.

Advertising Aids for Busy Managers

"A SOCIETY SENSATION."

Bluebird Presents Carmel Myers in the Brisk Comedy of a Lawyer-Made Nobility for a Pretty Girl.

Cast.

Sydney Parmelee ("The Duchess") ..... Carmel Myers
Dick Bradley ..... Rodolpho De Valentina
Jim ..... Fred Kelsey
Mary ..... Zasu Pitts
Capt. Parmelee ..... Alfred Allen
Tommy ..... Harold Goodwin

Directed by Paul Powell.

The Story: Capt. Parmelee, a fisherman, has seen a steel engraving of a Sir Hugh Parmelee and gradually comes to believe that he is related to him. He brings up his family in that belief, and refuses the hand of his daughter, Sydney, to a fisherman on that account. A San Francisco paper picks up the story for a Sunday feature, and Mrs. Jones, who is seeking to break into society, invites Sydney for a visit. The girl's beauty makes an impression on Dick Bradley, son of the real leader of fashion, and they fall in love. Then Mrs. Parmelee comes for her daughter, learning that the claims are false, and Dick follows her to the island, where, after a battle with the disdained fisherman, he wins her for his own.

Feature Carmel Myers as Sydney Parmelee and Rodolpho De Valentina as Dick Bradley.

Program and Advertising Phrases: How Society Was Shocked Into Realizing Its Own Shortcomings.
How a Fisherman Imagined Himself a Nobleman and Surprised Society.
Sensational Newspaper Story Works to Advantage of Photoplot.
Surprisingly Sensational Outcome of a Tamely Started Episode.

Advertising Angles: About the best way to get this over would be to rouse interest in the story through veiled allusions, heading one advertisement, perhaps, with "Have you a little duchess in your home?" and working along similar lines to awaken curiosity in the story. Put a withered branch in a tub in the lobby, and announce it as the Parmelee family tree, details of which may be learned inside.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Stock one-sheet of star. Colored and black-and-white lobby displays. Slide. Heralds. Player cuts in three sizes. Scene cuts one and two columns wide. Press book.

Released September 23.

"CARMEN"

Paramount Presents a Reissue of the Famous Production in which Geraldine Farrar Made Her Debut on the Screen.

Cast.

Carmen ..... Geraldine Farrar
Don Jose ..... Wallace Reid
Escamillo ..... Pedro De Cordoba
Morales ..... William Elmer
Pastia ..... Horace Carpenter
Frasquita ..... Jeanie Macpherson
Mercedes ..... Anita King
Garcia ..... Milton Brown

Directed by Cecil De Mille.

The Story: Carmen, a beautiful cigarette girl, is persuaded by a band of smugglers to work her wiles upon Don Jose, a young officer whose honor they cannot purchase with bribes. She wins the love of the officer, but later turns her fickle fancy to Escamillo, a bull fighter. But Don Jose is not so easily to be denied and she pays for her amours with her life.

Feature Geraldine Farrar as Carmen and Wallace Reid as Don Jose.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Famous Opera Screened by the Most Famous Interpreter of the Original Role.
Geraldine Farrar, Queen of Opera, Brings Her Greatest Triumph to the Screen.
Brilliant Production of Famous Opera with Most Wonderful of "Carmens."
Picturing the Career of Fiction's Greatest "Villainess."
Paramount Presents Geraldine Farrar in Her Greatest Stage Role.
"Carmen," the Opera; "Carmen," the Drama; "Carmen," the Picture All in One.

Advertising Angles: Announce this as a reissue, and do not seek to suggest it is new. Seek rather to capitalize the fact that it was one of the best productions, now revived because of its excellence. Use the name of the star freely, and back this up with photographs and paper.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.

Released September 29.

"PALS FIRST"

Metro Presents Harold Lockwood in a Screen Version of Lee Wilson Dodds' Dramatic Version of Francis Perry Elliott's Novel of the Same Title.

Cast.

Danny Rowland ..... Harold Lockwood
Dominie ..... James Lackaye
Jean Logan ..... Ruby de Remer
Judge Logan ..... Frank de Vernon
Dr. Harry Chilton ..... Richard R. Neill
Uncle Alex ..... Anthony Byrd
Aunt Caroline ..... Pauline Dempsey
The Sheriff ..... Walter P. Lewis
The Squirrel ..... Rollo Lloyd

Directed by Edwin Carew.

The Story: Danny Rowland and his pal, Dominie, arrive at Winnicrest Hall in Tennessee, where Danny is recognized as Richard Castleman by the aged servitor. Dick is supposed to have been buried at sea, but the servant is strong in his faith. Dominie, however, knows that Danny lately served a term with him in state prison. Danny, accepted by all, finds that Dr. Chilton is trying to persuade his supposed sweetheart, Jean, to marry him, declaring Dick to be dead. He learns of the imposition and denounces Danny, but Danny maintains that he is Dick. He is about to marry Jean, when Dominie intervenes and betrays his pal to protect the girl, but to the surprise of all it develops that Danny really is Dick and never has served in San Quentin, and Jean's faith is justified.

Feature Harold Lockwood as Danny Rowland and Ruby de Remer as Jean Logan.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Greatest of Last Season's Stage Successes Now Brought to the Screen.
Interest Impelling Mystery Story with a Surprise Finish.
Graduates of Yale and Jail Give Society a Surprise Party.
Thrilling Story of Love Conquering Over Intrigue and Villainy.
How a Fight for Fortune Ended in a Victory for the Oppressed.
How Two Jail Birds Brought Reformation and Won a Great Victory.

Advertising Angles: Announce that here is Harold Lockwood in a real story. Play him up vigorously. Also use the play-novel for an argument, and give an incomplete synopsis. Play up the "pal" angle by such questions as, "Would you split on your pal?"

Advertising Aids: Four styles one-sheet, three three-sheets, two six-sheets, one twenty-four-sheet. Photos. Slides. Music cue sheets. Special heralds. Special hand-colored lobby displays. One, two and three-column ready made advertisements. Scene cuts.

"THE GOAT"

Jesse L. Lasky Presents Fred Stone in His First Motion Picture Production as the Comedian of the Ironworkers Who Joins Out in a Studio.

Cast.

Chuck McCarthy ..... Fred Stone
Mrs. McCarthy ..... Fannie Midgely
Mr. McCarthy ..... Charles McHugh
Bijou Lamour ..... Rhea Mitchell
The Baby Vampire ..... Sylvia Ashton
Marmaduke X. Caruthers ..... Philo McCollough
Molly O'Connors ..... Winifred Greenwood
Director Griffin ..... Noah Beery
Jimmy Quicksilver ..... Raymond Hatton
Director Graham ..... Charles Ogle
Studio Manager ..... Ernest Joy
Casting Director ..... Clarence Geldart

Directed by Donald Crisp.

The Story: Chuck McCarty is an ironworker who is sent to a studio to do some construction work. Chuck made something of a hit at an undertaker's picnic once as a comedian, and he decides to stay on as an actor. He breaks his engagement with Molly O'Connors and "joins out," to become the goat of the fun-loving players. Because he is athletic he doubles for the hero in a war play. He is seriously injured and the star is promptly sent to the hospital and press-agented while poor Chuck is hidden away in the studio. That discourages him, but the thousand dollars he gets for keeping the secret enables him to furnish a flat for Molly without the aid of the instalment house.

IN THIS ISSUE.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Screen Debut of Fred Stone, Famous Comedian and Dancing Acrobat of Musical Comedy Stage.
Fred Stone, Star of Beautiful "Girl" Shows, Becomes a Screen Actor.
How an Iron Moulder Broke Into "The Movies" and Broke Out Again.
Daring Deeds, Wild Riding and No End of Thrills in Being the Goat.
Here's a New Screen Star to Delight You With His Skill and Artistry.

Feature Fred Stone as Chuck McCarthy and Rhea Mitchell as Bijou Lamour.

Advertising Angles: Fred Stone is too well known as a stage comedian to need much introduction to audiences save in the smallest towns. Tell that he has gone into pictures rather than who he is. Play up his acrobatic ability and say that he does even more in the films than the stage permitted. Work the title for some advance teaser stuff, as "Would you be the goat?", "Who is the Goat?", etc. For the playing date organize a goat carriage parade with a prize for the finest turnout. Also work the angle of the boob in a studio and point out the vast possibilities for fun. Get out a throwaway: "Do you want to act in the movies? Don't. See what would happen to you in The Goat at (house and date)." Do extra advertising for this and you'll make extra money.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. One 24-sheet. Rotogravure one-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.
Released September 22.

"JOHANNA ENLISTS"

Artcraft Presents Mary Pickford, the Darling of the Screen, in a Story Based Upon The Mobilizing of Johanna, by Rupert Hughes.

Cast.

Johanna Renssaller.....Mary Pickford
"Maw" Renssaller.....Anne Schaefer
"Paw" Renssaller.....Fred Huntley
Private Vibbard.....Monte Blue
Capt. Van Renssaller...Douglas MacLean
Lieutenant LeRoy.....Emory Johnson
Major Wappington.....John Steppling
Colonel Fanner.....Wallace Beery
Johanna's Brother.....Wesley Barry
Her Twin Sisters..June and Jean Prentis

Directed by William D. Taylor.

The Story: Johanna is a rather uncouth country girl whose sole love affair has been a long-distance flirtation with a freight brakeman. Then war comes and a regiment camps near her father's farm. Johanna's prayer for a beau is answered by the devotion of hundreds of men. She sets the entire regiment by the heels, but a lieutenant and a private are the chief contenders, and jealousy causes an outbreak leading to a court martial in which Johanna solves her love difficulties by falling in love with the adjutant, and the picture closes with the breaking of camp and Johanna riding off to her wedding on a gun carriage.

Feature Mary Pickford as Johanna Renssaller and Emory Johnson as Lieutenant LeRoy.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Little Mary Returns in the Best Comedy-Drama She Has Ever Presented.
When Lonely Johanna Prayed for a Husband She Got a Thousand.
Quaint Reflections of a Girl's Drudgery and Delights.
Mary Pickford Seen at Her Best in Her Newest Comedy-Drama.
How a Quaint Country Girl Made a Regiment of Yanks Surrender.
Sudden Host to a Regiment of Soldiers, Country Girl Wins Triumph.

Advertising Angles: Announce that this is the last Artcraft made by Miss Pickford and, therefore, will be the last Pickford to be released for many months. Tell that she contemplates a rest for a year or two. You can work up a lot of excitement by going over the various reports of her engagements in the back numbers. For the more direct angle recall that this appeared serially in the Saturday Evening Post and is one of the most human stories of the training camps. Make it plain that it is not a war story, but the story of soldiers in the making and the part a country girl played in the affairs of the regiment.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.
Released September 29.

"THE GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST"

Paramount Presents Mabel Van Buren in Blanche Bates' Great Belasco Success with a Strong Cast of Stars.

Cast.

The Girl.....Mabel Van Buren
Jack Rance.....Theodore Roberts
Ramerrez .....House Peters
Wowkle .....Anita King
Sidney Duck.....Sydney Deane
Ashby .....Billy Elmer
Nina .....Jeanie MacPherson
Castro .....Raymond Hatton
Senora Slim.....Dick Le Strange
Nick .....Tex Driscol
Antonio .....Art Ortego
Stage Coach Driver.....John Ortego
Guard .....James Griswold
Old Minstrel.....Ed Harley

The Story: The Girl is the keeper of a saloon in a California town during the mining craze of '49. She has many suitors, but only the Sheriff, an ex-gambler from New Orleans, appeals to her. The Sheriff is looking for Ramerrez, a stage robber, for whose capture $5,000 have been offered. The Girl chances upon him after one of his robberies, during which he has been wounded, and aids him to bandage the hurt wrist, taking him to her home. Not knowing her to be "the girl," he plans to rob her saloon, knowing it to contain much gold. The jealous Sheriff badly wounds the robber, and the girl plays a game of cards with the Sheriff for the man's life. She wins; but a second time his life is saved by her, and together they seek the hills to begin anew.

Feature Mabel Van Buren as the Girl and Theodore Roberts as Jack Rance.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Picture Version of Belasco's Stage Success Which Brought Fame to Blanche Bates.
One of the Greatest of American Dramas Brought to the Screen.
Vigorous and Vital Drama of a Woman's Overpowering Love.
Picturization of Blanche Bates' Greatest Stage Triumph.
Love and Sacrifice in the Days of the California Gold Rush.
Mabel Van Buren Enacting the Role Blanche Bates Made Famous.

Advertising Angles: Play up the unusual cast concerned in this play, and, even more, play up the story itself, for it has the unusual distinction of having been adapted to the grand opera stage—the only modern American play other than Mme. Butterfly to be thus distinguished. Recall Blanche Bates' unusual sucess in this under the Belasco management and add that the production is carefully modeled on the Belasco version. Make your patrons realize that this is something unusual.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Rotogravure one-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.

"THE EAGLE'S MATE"

Famous Players Presents Mary Pickford in Her Greatest Screen Success, Revived Because of Its Widespread Popularity.

Cast.

Anemone Breckenridge.....Mary Pickford
Lancer Morne.....James Kirkwood
Sally Breckenridge.....Ida Waterman
Mr. Morne.....Robert Broderick
Fisher Morne.....Harry C. Browne
Rev. Mr. Hotchkiss.....Russell Bassett
A Young Clansman.....Jack Pickford

Directed by James Kirkwood.

The Story: The Mornes, of Virginia, are known as "the eagles" because of their fierce natures, and partly because of their home, located on top of an almost inaccessible cliff, known as The Eagle's Eyrie. Lancer Morne, son of the leader, is sent to college by Mrs. Breckenridge, herself a Morne. Her niece, Anemone, is ignorant of the relationship. Lancer's father is arrested for moonshining, and Lancer returns to head the clan and set him free. Fisher Morne, an uncouth cousin, falls in love with Anemone and abducts her. Anemone appeals to Lancer, who announces that he will have her for himself. He fights and conquers Fisher and marries the girl. Anemone declares her hatred for him and he tells her that she must speak the first word of love. He has nothing to do with her, though she continues to reside in the eyrie. But later she is returned to her aunt, but comes back to Lancer, whom she has learned to love, to warn him of an attack by the officers, and to help him beat them off, a true mate for the eagle at last.

Feature Mary Pickford as Anemone Breckenridge and James Kirkwood as Lancer Morne.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Story of a Dainty Girl Whose Lot is Cast Among Rough Mountaineers.
Mary Pickford's Abiding and Greatest Dramatic Screen Triumph.
Little Mary Heroine of Gripping Story of Rugged Mountain Life.
Strong Photoplay of Tennessee Mountains and Moonshiners.
Role of Intense Dramatic Power for "Little Mary" Pickford.
Mary Pickford in "The Eagle's Mate" Has Best Role of Her Career.

Advertising Angles: Most picture patrons will need no introduction to this play. It should sell itself if properly announced. Where it is not known tell that this is one of the most virile stories in which Miss Pickford has ever appeared; far better than most of her recent offerings. Make them realize that it is a play worth while through using every advertising scheme from newspaper work to throwaways.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Rotogravure one-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.
Released September 1.

"THREE MOUNTED MEN"

Universal Presents Harry Carey in a Novelty Story with All the Dash and Fire of the Lawless West.

Cast.

Cheyenne Harry.....Harry Carey
Bill Sparks.....Joe Harris
Warden's Son.....Harry Carter
Lola .....Neva Gerber

Directed by Jack Ford.

The Story: Cheyenne Harry and Bill Sparks are fellow convicts. They have a fight and become bitter enemies. Sparks is pardoned, and the warden's son is afraid that he will tell how he and Sparks doctored the books of the prison. Sparks goes to his home and finds his sister supporting their mother by working in a dance hall. To get money he blackmails the warden's son. The latter offers Harry his freedom if he will get Sparks back into the toils. Harry goes with his two brothers to the town and, while waiting for an opening, falls in love with Lola, not knowing her to be Bill's sister. He warns the warden's son that Bill is about to rob a coach. Bill is caught, but when Harry finds that Lola is related to Bill, the three mounted men ride forth and bring Bill back in safety. Lola is his reward.

Feature Harry Carey as Cheyenne Harry and Joe Harris as Bill Sparks.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Harry Carey, Star of Another Wild Riding, Straight Shooting Drama.
Quick on the Trigger and Eager to Avenge.
Typical Western Drama Reflecting a Passing Era of Recklessness.
Flash-Backs from Frontier Days When Men Fought Their Way Forward.
Skilled Horsemanship, Dexterity and Straight Shooting Bring Thrills.
Love and Adventure Combined in Vigorous Story of the West.

Advertising Angles: Play on Carey's popularity for your chief angle. Three mounted men in Western costumes can be used for street work with advertisements on the saddle clothes the second day, if desired.

Advertising Aids: Two ones, two threes, one six-sheet and one 24-sheet. One sheet of players. Black and white lobby displays. Slides. Player cuts. Heralds. Press book. Ideas sheet.
Released October 12.

"THE LURE OF LUXURY"

Bluebird Presents Ruth Clifford in the Screen Version of a Saturday Evening Post Story by Naibro Hartley.

The cast includes Ruth Clifford, Edward Hearn, Harry V. Meter, Elizabeth Janes, Janet Sully.

Directed by Elsie Jane Wilson.

The Story: Dale Aldis, convent-bred, comes to take possession of World's End, the country home of Lord Aldis who sought to bury memories in a country town in America. The attitude of Lord Aldis and his wife have estranged the country people, and their enmity passes to the orphaned Dale. She falls in love with John Coventry, son of the village drunkard, whose ideal she has been since childhood, and virtually proposes to him. Then comes Philip Leswing, her guardian and administrator of her father's estate. He covets Dale's fresh young beauty and cleverly plans to disgust her with the idea of life as a farmer's wife, but in the end love wins over luxury and Dale proves loyal to her better self.

Feature Ruth Clifford and Harry V. Meter.

Program and Advertising Phrases: How Desire for Ease and Fine Clothes Opened a Girl's Heart to Her Own Understanding.
How Two Lives Were Nearly Wrecked by Girl's Social Ambitions.
Brilliant Photoplay Vizualizes Valuable Lesson in Sociology.
How a Dashing Beauty Chose Between Luxury and Labor.
Making the Choice Between Honest Life, True Love and Luxury.
Tense Drama Reflects a Lesson of Abiding Usefulness.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six-sheets. Stock one-sheet of star. Colored and black-and-white lobby displays. Slide. Heralds. Player cuts in three sizes. Scene cuts one and two columns wide. Press book.
Released October 7.

"MONEY ISN'T EVERYTHING"

American Presents Margarita Fisher in a Diverting Screen Version of Fred Jackson's Novel, "Beauty to Let."

Cast.

Margery Smith.....Margarita Fisher
Franklyn Smith.....Jack Mower
Henry P. Rockwell.....J. Norris Foster
"Diamond Tim" Moody.Wedgewood Nowell
Betty Nan.....Kate Price

Directed by Edward Sloman.

The Story: Margary Smith goes to Franklyn Smith, an impecunious lawyer, for advice on how to gain money. Frank doesn't know or he would have more himself. But he conceives the idea of farming out Margery's beauty, convinced that she has not brains, and manages the "Beauty to Let" corporation. Margery is sought as a guest at teas and dances, but the chief seekers are Henry Rockwell and "Diamond Tim" Mooney. Rockwell commissions Frank to propose marriage to Margery, but Margery wants Frank and not the millionaire, and announces that she prefers "Diamond Tim" if it is a matter of marrying for money. Frank locks her in her apartment to prevent her going to Tim, but over the telephone she learns that Tim has buncoed Smith in a real estate deal and is preparing to leave town. She goes down the fire escape and Frank finds her in Tim's bedroom. Then Tim finds both of them there and sends for the police, and the events that follow convince Frank that Margery has both beauty and brains.

Feature Margarita Fisher as Margery Smith and Jack Mower as Franklyn Smith.

Program and Advertising Phrases: How a Beauty Trust Was Run for Revenue and Went Bankrupt When Dan Cupid Became Manager.
Cleverly Devised Photoplot Leads Through Gripping Episodes.
How a Woman's Heart Was Capitalized for Money Making Purposes.
Cupid Makes a Bad Mess of a Perfectly Good Love Corporation.
When the Head of the Firm Fell in Love, "Beauty to Let" Went Bankrupt.
Pretty Girl Proved That She Had Brains as Well as Beauty.

Advertising Angles: Play up Miss Fisher and work on the title for novelty advertising. Display portraits of the star with cards reading "Money was not everything to this pretty girl. What do you suppose was? You can find out at the (house and date)." Put these in windows and use the same idea, with a cut, for newspaper work.

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, two three-sheets, one six-sheet, one 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 11x14, both in sepia and color; also 22x28. Slide. Campaign book. Cuts.

the life of her mother, who does not know of the girl's disappearance, Peggy Murray, a clerk in a hotel news stand is induced to take her place and cleverly passes off the deception. But Peggy feels uneasy at enjoying the comforts and position that rightfully belong to another and finds relief in welfare work. In the slums she comes face to face with the girl whose place she has taken and after righting the wrong returns contentedly to her former humble station.

Feature Mae Marsh as Peggy Murray and Louise Parke and Rod La Rocque as George Landis.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Mae Marsh in Gripping Story Involving Dual Identity in Righting a Cruel Wrong.

How a Working Girl Entered Society to Appease a Mother's Misery.

Mae Marsh in Dual Role Plays Two Entirely Different Characters.

Working Girl Makes Society Leader Right a Cruel Wrong.

Society Man Gets the Worst of It in Battle with Working Girl.

How the "Lower Five" Showed the "Upper Ten" the Way to Decency.

Advertising Angles: The press sheet offers several good stunt suggestions, but place your main reliance upon the personality of the player and get her name and portrait well to the fore in all advertising. In your press work hammer upon the dual role and the scope it affords the player and add that it is one of the most intensely dramatic plays she has ever been given as a vehicle.

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, two three-sheets, one six and one 24-sheet. Rotogravure one-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Coming and current slides. Advertising and scene cuts. Photographic line-cut copy for ads. Press book. Music cue sheet.

Released October 7.

"ZAZA"

The Famous Players-Charles Frohman Co. Present the Emotional Actress, Pauline Frederick, in a Play Made Famous by Three International Stars.

Cast.

Zaza .....Pauline Frederick
Dufrene .....Julian L'Estrange
Madame Dufrene.....Ruth Sinclair
Cascart .....Mark Smith
Duc De Brissac.....Charles Butler
Dubois .....Walter Craven
Aunt Rosa.....Maude Granger
Louise .....Blanche Fisher
Nathalie .....Helen Sinnott

Directed by Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford.

The Story: Zaza is a music hall star in Paris. She meets Bernard Dufrene and a flirtation develops into an intense love on her part. She is in despair when she discovers that he already has a wife and child. To visit them and announce herself as the mistress of the husband and father is her first idea, but the charm of the child restrains her. She cannot strike the blow and passes off her visit with an improvised excuse. She dismisses Bernard and returns to the stage, where she gains real fame as a dramatic artist. Once more he seeks her, but again the memory of the child saves her to her better self.

Fenture Pauline Frederick as Zaza and Julian L'Estrange as Dufrene.

Progrnm and Advertising Phrases: Mrs. Leslie Carter's Famous Drama Now Screened with Pauline Frederick, the Star.

Famous Player Adapts to the Screen an Immortal Stage Success.

Picturizing the Play That Brought First Fame to David Belasco..

Drama of Another Decade Vizualized in Modern Screen Settings.

"Zaza" Was a Stage Triumph Before the Screen Was Recognized.

Advertising Angles: This is a play in which Bernhardt, Rejane and Mrs. Leslie Carter have made their mark. It created a furore when first presented in this country at the Garrick Theatre, in New York, and has been played thousands of times by stars of all degrees of merit. Make strong emphasis on the play, then add that it is the strongest production Miss Frederick has ever had, though one of her earliest, and add that it has been revived as representative of the best this company has ever done.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.

Fay Larkin.....Ann Forrest
Jane Withersteen.....Mary Mersch
Waggoner .....William Burress
Shad.....William Nye
Ruth.....Genevieve Blinn
U. S. Marshal.....George Ross

Directed by Frank Lloyd.

The Story: The story is taken up some years later than the end of "Riders of the Purple Sage." Lassiter, Jane and Fay are still entombed in the Secret Valley and Fay has grown into a charming young woman. John Shefford, a kinsman of Lassiter, determines to run down the legends of the lost valley. Meantime a landslide has made the valley accessible from without and Waggoner, one of Lassiter's enemies enters the valley and abducts Fay with the idea of making her one of his plural wives. There is a raid and Shefford and Fay meet and go in search of Lassiter and Jane. A rescue is effected, but the quartet are opposed by Waggoner's gang, who have followed, and only the prompt arrival of help saves the refugees.

Feature William Farnum as Lassiter and Shefford and Mary Mersch as Jane Withersteen.

Ethelbert Granger.....Al Lee
Cyrus Baird.....Dan Mason
Doris Kemp.....Ellen Cassidy
Max Rupholdt.....William H. Boyd
Sheriff.....Ed. Begley
Deputy Sheriff.....George Halpin

Directed by Carl Harbaugh.

The Story: Cyrus Baird is trying to force his daughter to marry Ethelbert Granger, wealthy but effeminate. She meets and falls in love with James Morton, nephew of Baird's pet enemy. Ethelbert takes the Bairds to cruise in the houseboat of Max Rupholdt, who has a mine layer concealed in the innocent looking craft. Morton, suspected of disloyalty, penetrate Max's secret and rescues the girl just before the fleeing spy meets extermination through one of his own mines.

Feature Peggy Hyland as Susan Baird and Edwin Stanley as James Morton.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Peggy Hyland, Star of Tremendous Drama Pulsating with Passion and Patriotism.

Every Hundred Per Cent. American Will Want to See This Drama.

Poignant Passion, Powerful Patriotism and Sublime Heroism.

How Miss America Outwitted Hun Traitors and Intriguers.

Our Casualty Lists–
Let's not get used to them—
Let's STOP them—quickly!
HOW? By rolling up an overwhelming subscription to the Fourth Liberty Loan.
After four long, frightful years the tide of battle is turning! The time has come at last when MONEY MIGHT will go far toward hastening the Victory that will stop these dreadful casualty lists and bring our boys home again.
Buy Liberty Bonds—to the very limit of your means! Never mind how many you have bought already—buy more, and more, and more!
Don't think about the money—that will all come back to you with interest. Think about the brave young Americans who are fighting and suffering and dying Over There for you.
Don't make excuses—make sacrifices!

WHITE A.C. SPECIAL

MOTION PICTURE CARBONS
FOR ALTERNATING CURRENT PROJECTION

Silent operation of the arc and flickerless screen illumination is a reality with the use of White A. C. Special carbons on alternating current. Complete elimination of these disagreeable features of the old A. C. arc has made the alternating current arc a much more efficient light source.

White A. C. Special carbons give a pure white light of high intensity so necessary for even screen illumination and perfect definition.

It is absolutely unnecessary to invest a single cent in extra equipment to obtain excellent low cost projection. Simply replace the old A. C. carbons with White A. C. Specials.

SILVERTIPS FOR DIRECT CURRENT PROJECTION
The Silvertip is the standard negative carbon.
It gives a pure white light of high intensity.

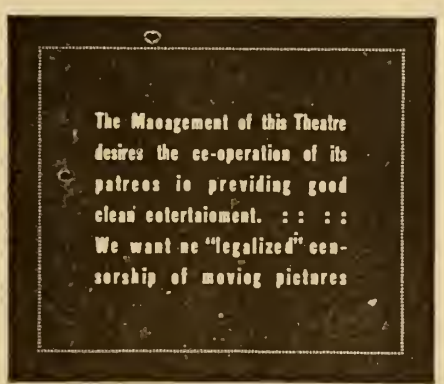
Educate Your Audience to Help Fight Censorship

Introducing a bill providing for the Censorship of Moving Pictures is a favorite indoor pastime in legislative halls throughout the country. Eternal vigilance is the price of the Exhibitor's mere safety if not his success.

Presented in the proper manner, the Censorship of Moving Pictures is just as obnoxious to the Exhibitor's audiences as it is to the Exhibitor. And public opinion aroused in behalf of moving pictures and against their unfair and discriminatory control is the surest weapon to defeat Censorship.



The Management of this Theatre desires the co-operation of its patrons in providing good clean entertainment.
We want no "legalized" censorship of moving pictures

We have prepared a series of nine different stereopticon slides which crystallize the argument against Censorship; one of the slides is shown herewith.

These slides shown repeatedly in any theatre cannot fail to influence public opinion in that locality against Censorship. They will line up the general public on the side of the Exhibitor.

You Ought to Be Showing Them Now!
Legislatures Everywhere Are Convening

Set of Nine Slides, carefully packed, will be sent postpaid on receipt of $1.00.

The New Premier Pathéscope will run the narrow-width, slow-burning film recently adopted by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, as the New Standard for all portable projectors.

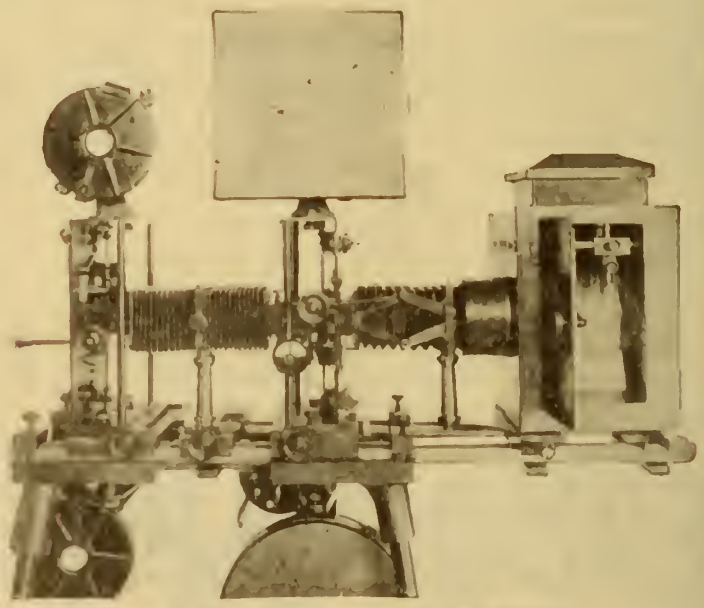
WE MAKE

Pathéscope Prints from Standard Negatives. Pathéscope Negatives from Standard Positives. Standard Prints from Standard Negatives with any new position of frame line.

Motion Picture enlargements up to full standard size from any portion of standard motion picture negative not less than ¼ of its size. (This is particularly applicable to making close ups and enlargements of heads, surgical operations, special industrial details, or mechanical operations, etc.)

Owners of Standard Films can have Pathéscope Prints made therefrom which can then be exhibited anywhere, without booth or insurance restrictions.

Pathéscope Prints of Manufacturer's Industrial Plants and Processes, if of Educational value, will be given wide circulation in Schools, Churches and Institutions through our Pathéscope Film Exchange in principal cities.



A PATHÉSCOPE COPYING MACHINE

We will perforate Eastman Slow-Burning Positive Stock with Pathéscope patent perforation at ¼ cent per foot, in the 28 millimetre narrow width recently adopted by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers as the new Standard for portable projectors, to comply with requirements of the Underwriters' Laboratories for use without enclosing booth or insurance restrictions.

LABORATORY—LONG ISLAND CITY

The use of Pathéscope perforation dispenses with the necessity for any framing attachment, as threading in the projector automatically frames the picture. The patent on this perforation insures protection from possible unscrupulous infringers who might otherwise be tempted by the cheapness of celluloid stock to use it for portable projectors.

Goldwyn Pictures

These productions have built more prestige and good will for theatres in the past twelve months than any pictures the industry has ever seen.

This is but one reason why the nation's best showmen quickly booked them this season.

"This is a Goldwyn Year!"

Published every Wednesday. Subscription Price: United States and Its Possessions, and Mexico, $3.00 a year; Canada, $3.50 a year; Foreign Countries (postpaid), $4.00 a year. Entered as second class matter June 17, 1908, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Mr. Boyd Tells How To Break Box-Office Records

A Stunt That Worked!

THE easiest methods often are the most efficient. Alexander R. Boyd, of the Arcadia and Great Northern Theatres in Philadelphia, tried a simple plan for filling his Great Northern Theatre at every performance.

And it worked! It broke all records!

All he did was to book the Success Series and to advertise them. The public did the rest—crowding his theatre to see these masterpieces.

Mr. Boyd writes to Walter E. Greene, Managing Director, Department of Distribution, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, as follows:

> I want you to know how well pleased I am with the SUCCESS SERIES, now playing at the Great Northern Theatre.
> Paramount Pictures always brought a lot of business but the SUCCESS SERIES breaks the record.
> The Great Northern patrons are Paramount fans and the house is filled at every performance.
> I cannot say too much regarding the SUCCESS SERIES and hope other exhibitors swell their box office receipts by booking these features.

Mr. Boyd is only one of hundreds of exhibitors who are finding that the Success Series pictures are buried treasure, dug up for all the theatres.

Have you got your share yet?

Dorothy Gish Triumphs!

IN Dorothy Gish, the great moving picture public has found a mighty welcome friend—a comic, pert little person as lovable in her Paramount Pictures as she is in D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World."

Read what the conservative New York Times said about her:

DELIGHTFUL Dorothy Gish—the adjective just seems to stick to her name—makes her first appearance as an independent Paramount star at the Rivoli this week in "Battling Jane," and that will be good news to many. Miss Gish has unusual pantomimic ability. She can make a part comprehensible and real without the aid of interrupting lines. Her acting suggests the bit of verse anent the complete death of the little dog Rover—when she acts she acts all over. It is a positive delight to watch her.

In "Battling Jane" she has a part similar to that of the Little Disturber in "Hearts of the World." As a care-free vagabond she appears in a New England village—or a Southern or a Western or any other kind of village—and adopts an abandoned child because there is no one else to adopt it. Her battles follow with the child's brutish father, a crook, and with the deafness of a storekeeper, with a rain storm, and almost everything else that could be assembled against her.

ADVERTISE "Battling Jane!" Her first Paramount Picture will make Dorothy Gish one of the biggest money-makers on your list.

For the FREEDOM

with LADY TSEN MEI
THE SCREEN'S ONLY CHINESE STAR

Conceived and Directed by Ira M. Lowry

It is the verdict of the great Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia, which has never before played any special production of an independent producer.

As proof of its great profit-making powers, this production has been booked for second, third and fourth runs in Philadelphia; at every important neighborhood house in the city, and for first runs in all the larger cities in the entire Philadelphia territory.

"For the Freedom of the East" thrills because it is packed to the brim with action, melodrama, romance, mystery, intrigue and heroism. A picture showing history in the making and revealing the dramatic alliance of America, China and Japan that has crumbled the Kaiser's hopes of conquest through Asia.

Honored by the attendance of China's Ambassador to the United States and his aides at its opening performance.

THEIR CHAIRS AND CHEERED"

of the EAST

PHILADELPHIA PRESS: Opening the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, "For the Freedom of the East" proves a smashing attraction at the Stanley. Love, romance, hatred and strife as the themes and the unusual star, Lady Tsen Mei, were responsible for record patronage.

PHILADELPHIA NORTH AMERICAN: "For the Freedom of the East" lives up to all the things that have been said about it in advance. An unusual star with personality and charm. . . The story is a thriller.

PHILADELPHIA BULLETIN: Rarely does the eye ever see on the screen such an unusual picture as "For the Freedom of the East." As strong a patriotic production as could possibly be conceived.

PHILADELPHIA RECORD: "For the Freedom of the East"—powerful, daring, thrilling—also shows the triumph of Allied arms and the salvation of Russia. A picture exactly attuned to the popular tastes of the moment.

PHILADELPHIA PUBLIC LEDGER: Something brand new in screen drama is "For the Freedom of the East." A really remarkable picture that all Philadelphia seems to be going to see this week at the Stanley.

PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER: A drama of gorgeous coloring revealing the deviltry and stupidity of the German spy system. A tremendously powerful and timely production.

This sensational production should be booked now to enable you to obtain its fullest and greatest publicity values. Directed by the same skilled hand that produced the other great money-maker, "For the Freedom of the World." Write or wire your nearest Goldwyn office at once for playing dates and prices.

All the elements that attract and hold patrons may be found in this first Harry T. Morey Star Series Release. Its leading role is one of sheer virility that could be fittingly portrayed by but few of America's screen stars, and by none with the masterful Morey touch.

This creator on the screen of "Joe Garson" in "Within the Law" and "Paul Strong" in "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation," seems fairly to live the role of Oliver Bennett in the "The King of Diamonds," a rare drama of love, adventure and vengeance.

Supporting Mr. Morey is a cast of exceptional merit including Betty Blythe, Jean Paige, George Majeroni and other Vitagraph favorites.

Little Theatres Have the Same Chance as Big Theatres

Offer Open Until December 30, 1918

A board of experts from the trade papers will act as judges and have full control of awarding prizes

Theatres will be divided into four classes

First class—2,000 seats and over; second class—1,000 to 2,000 seats; third class—700 to 1,000 seats; fourth class—less than 700 seats.

The Subject We Have Chosen For This Test Is

"THE ROMANCE OF TARZAN"

It Affords Unprecedented Opportunities for Exploitation and Will Make Good Any Publicity Statement in Reason

THE FIRST NATIONAL EXHIBITORS CIRCUIT, Inc.

6 West 48th Street New York, N. Y.

Are Exhibitors Practical Retailers?

THE purpose of the contest is to encourage owners of later run houses to give a greater degree of attention to their advertising and retail sales campaigns for the various features they book.

Because a production is three, four or six months, or even a year old, does not imply that its merchandising possibilities are not just as great at that age as on the day of release. Excepting in rare instances, where theatre location is unusual, or normal competition is lacking, the axiom that a feature is only as profitable as its retailer is efficient will apply generally.

Just how capable the average exhibitor is as a retail salesman of motion pictures has been a much-mooted question among manufacturers, exchangemen, and even theatre owners themselves. Limited editorial space makes it physically impossible for the trade journals to publish more than a small fraction of the samples of profitable theatre advertising that are submitted to them, or to treat with more than a slight percentage of the many exhibitor ideas that come to their attention.

For this one reason no trade journal has ever been able to follow any one picture through its various ages to obtain a thorough and concrete idea of just how efficient a retail advertiser and salesman the average exhibitor is, from the first run account to the man who plays it after its first birthday.

For the edification of the industry, as an illustration to other distributing agencies of the possibility for more intimate and practical cooperation with exhibitors by keeping all of them informed of what the comparative few are doing to attain consistent returns on their bookings, and for the particular benefit of those exhibitors who play features after they are ninety days old, and who want a comprehensive illustration of how all earlier run accounts advertise and sell to the public, the First National Exhibitors' Circuit announces this contest, to be conducted with one specific release as a means of more accurately gauging the retail sales capacity of theatre owners, and the variations in method according to house location, class of patronage, competition, and conditions generally affecting the box-office.

Conditions To Be Observed

AN entry blank, correctly filled in, must accompany all matter submitted, from each individual entrant.

Entries of newspaper advertising must consist of at least one copy of each issue of local newspapers in which the copy is published. This is necessary to enable the judges, in scoring the points, to make an accurate mathematical calculation for position, general appearance on the page, and strength of copy and typography.

Entries of publicity material, in story form, must consist of at least one copy of each issue of the local newspapers in which the stories appear.

Entries of stunt publicity matter, if carried out in newspapers, must consist of at least one copy of each issue of the local newspapers in which it is printed; if it consists of special posters, banners, signs, floats, parades of characters, snipes, of lobby treatment, send one print of the scrap book photographs you will have made in the ordinary course of events.

Entries of lobby display matter must consist of one print of the usual photographs you have made, showing the arrangement and a sufficiently complete illustration of the entire lobby, so that the judges can accurately credit points on the basis of general arrangement, harmony, novelty, appeal, contrasts, visibility and its ability to create interest and curiosity in the production.

Entries of stunt presentations must consist of one print of the usual scrap book photographs of stage arrangement, interior decorations, special costumes for ushers and general employees, one copy of the house program containing the musical score, if one is used, and which shows the position on program of singers or novelty interpolations contributing in any way to effective presentation.

To avoid any possibility of error in crediting points, the judges will refuse to pass on any newspaper page, special window card sample, special poster sample, sample snipe, sample slide, copy of house program, or copies of newspapers, containing examples of advertising and publicity matter, or photographs of outdoor stunt publicity or interior decorations or arrangement bearing on presentation, unless each individual exhibit, whether newspaper, house program, sample window card, poster, snipe or photograph has written on it, plainly and legibly, the name of the exhibitor, name of the theatre, street and city address of theatre.

Every exhibit submitted will be returned to you, if desired.

The receipt of every entry will be immediately acknowledged by mail.

The Board of Judges will score the exhibits in each individual instance, crediting the entrants with the points merited by his material, the results will be published in this trade journal at the conclusion of the contest, December 31, 1918.

The awards will be made by the Board of Judges, direct to the winning contestants.

Reproductions of the winning examples of advertising in each theatre classification, and under each sub-division for style and kind of advertising, will be available, in printed form, to every exhibitor in the country, and particularly for those who will not book "The Romance of Tarzan" until after December 30, 1918.

Entry blanks for the contest will be mailed, free of any cost, by exchanges of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, or on application to the Tarzan Editor of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, 6 West 48th Street, New York City, or to the Exhibitors' Service Department Editor of this trade journal.

The only information that is required on an entry blank, which must be attached to, and sent with, the specimens of advertising matter submitted for scoring, is the exhibitor's or contestant's name, theatre name and address, capacity of house, number of shows given daily, number of theatres in immediate neighborhood, how often the program is changed, age of service, and class of patronage to which the theatre caters.

ADDRESS THE ENVELOPE CONTAINING THIS FORM AND YOUR ENTRIES TO THE TARZAN EDITOR, FIRST NATIONAL EXHIBITORS' CIRCUIT, 6 WEST 48TH STREET, NEW YORK, N. Y., AND WRITE YOUR RETURN ADDRESS PLAINLY IN THE UPPER LEFT-HAND CORNER OF THE ENVELOPE.

NOTE

The Board of Judges will credit points to entries only if they are better than ordinary in originality, style, idea and appeal. The judges will determine to exactly what extent they are better than average and award whatever number of points is warranted in their opinion, of the total allowed for each item of decision. Thus, a newspaper ad may be better than average in text and novelty of phrases and catch lines, and still not be extremely unusual, in which case the exhibitor would receive only one point instead of the two allowed for that feature of his newspaper copy. The same principle for determining values applies to each of the items under the subdivisions of the various styles and kinds of advertising.

If, in the summing up of the points credited to entries, before making the final awards of prizes, it is found that two or more exhibitors in any one class of theatres have an equal number of points, and are tied for first place, each will receive from the First National Exhibitors' Circuit a Liberty Bond of the Fourth Issue equivalent in value to the amount of the first prize. The same provision applies in event exhibitors in any of the classifications are tied for second or third prize.

NORMA TALMADGE

NEVER before has any one star succeeded in making a series of pictures so universally popular and so widely successful as has been the First Series of Select Pictures in which Norma Talmadge has been starred. The value of this series to a theatre which has not already played these pictures can hardly be overestimated. Norma Talmadge is acclaimed by critics everywhere, and everyone wants to see her.

"THE MOTH"

"'The Moth' is an intense story of high society life, one that holds undivided attention through its multitude of surprising situations and its many clever character studies." —New York Telegraph.

"SECRET OF THE STORM COUNTRY"

(A Sequel to "TESS OF THE STORM COUNTRY")

"In it Norma Talmadge is at her impulsive, wistful-eyed, tempestuous, affectionate best; and Norma at her best would make any picture."
—Mae Tinnee in Chicago Tribune.

"GHOSTS OF YESTERDAY"

"This will stand as the daddy of them all. There is not a man, woman or child who can leave a theatre where 'Ghosts of Yesterday' has been shown, and refer to one shortcoming." —Motion Picture News.

"BY RIGHT OF PURCHASE"

"The star distinguishes the picture by her radiant personality and clever acting, which is better even than in her past few productions."
—Exhibitor's Trade Review.

"DE LUXE ANNIE"

"Norma Talmadge is at her best as 'De Luxe Annie, the Second.' Her piquant beauty is more noticeable than ever, though she sacrifices it dauntlessly." —Exhibitor's Trade Review.

"THE SAFETY CURTAIN"

"Norma Talmadge brings to this role all those varied capabilities for which she has justly gained fame as one of the greatest, if not the greatest, of emotional actresses on the screen." —Motion Picture News.

"HER ONLY WAY"

"This is the story that men will like and women will praise to the skies. Norma Talmadge is at her best, and her support is perfect."
—Exhibitor's Herald.

Timeliness

You, just as well as Manager Overstolz of the Lyric Theatres of St. Louis, know that it's timeliness that gets the biggest money. And Manager Overstolz says of

"The GEEZER of BERLIN"

A Travesty on "The KAISER, the Beast of Berlin"

AFTER playing it at both my West End houses, the West End Lyric and the Lyric Skydome, it appealed to me to switch to the big down-town house, the Lyric, for an additional day's run. A picture on this order is a wonderful tonic for the patron who is accustomed to see the ordinary week in and week out.

"A picture like 'THE GEEZER' helps all around the house. Its timeliness makes it one of the biggest hits of the day.

"Give us more of 'THE GEEZER' type and we'll all live in a happier atmosphere."

YELLOW DOGS.

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

Somebody has started a Yellow Dog Clubbers Club. It already has a programme, a creed, a button, and everything.

I want to join.

Yellow Dog is an epithet applied to an undesirable citizen. He is otherwise known on the street as a no-account, low-life, bounder, sneak, pessimist, un-American, and moral slob.

He is also known as a crooked stick.

He sneers at the government, shakes his head dubiously over the outcome of the war, and altogether sets himself against the stream of patriotism in this country.

By these marks, some or all of them, you may know him.

He says this is a rich man's war, gotten up by the capitalists to enslave the workingman.

He says it is England's war, and we are merely pulling England's chestnuts out of the fire.

He says Germany is not so bad, and it might be a good thing for the world if she would win.

He sneers at our soldiers, and says a man's a fool to join the army or navy, and that a man of draft age ought to get out of it if he can.

He is not in favor of buying War Stamps or Liberty Bonds.

He magnifies German military successes and hints that things are a good deal worse with the allies in France than the censor will let us know.

He says Food Conservation is foolish.

He eats meat, wheat and fats whenever he feels like it.

He says the administration is deceiving the people and all the present officials want is to keep their party in power.

He finds a sinister motive for every patriotic deed.

He tells you that the men of great wealth and ability who are helping at Washington for a dollar a year are all grafters and are in it for the money.

He thinks the Bolsheviki did just right to lay down their arms and release millions of soldiers for Germany to use in France.

He says France is near collapse.

He says England is as bad as Germany.

He never does a thing to help this government, but does what he can to impede it.

He is a gloom spreader and a calamity howler.

If he is not openly pro-German it is because he is afraid; but he certainly is not pro-American.

If you know any such Yellow Dog, cut his acquaintance. The least you can do is to let him see that you despise him.

"If such there be, go mark him well,
And tell him to go plum to Germany,"

As the poet says.

On The Way

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE

By Sir Sidney Low

The Romantic Life Story of the Great Welsh Statesman

Produced by The Ideal Film Renting Co., Ltd., LONDON

(Under the sole direction of MAURICE ELVEY)

TEN PARTS TEN PARTS

Which allied Statesman, outside America, has most CAPTURED THE IMAGINATION and won the hearts of the world?

Beyond a doubt it is DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, the great little Welshman, who has fought his way up by sheer grit, FROM COTTAGE TO PARLIAMENT, from bootmaker's protege to the Champion of England and the cause of civilization!

Fiction in its most fascinating pages contains no more captivating chapter than the real-life ROMANCE OF DAVID LLOYD GEORGE. The old saying that "Truth is stranger than Fiction" has received no more wonderful exemplification than in Lloyd George's great upward climb to leadership.

AMERICA AND LLOYD GEORGE

To-day the entire world hangs upon his every utterance and in particular no international figure makes so VIVID an APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE OF AMERICA!

His picturesque speech, his freedom from the spirit of caste, his rise to fame from humble origins, his determination to make the common people prevail over TYRANTS IN PURPLE, all give him in especial degree the ear and the heart of the Democracy of the United States.

LIKE ABRAHAM LINCOLN

It is not to be wondered at that the Nation that produced an ABRAHAM LINCOLN should admire such a figure as DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, for there is something wonderfully akin in the characters and careers of the two men.

The "Ideal Film Renting Co.," whose famous masterpieces such as "MY OLD DUTCH" and "MASKS AND FACES" found a warm welcome in America, have been engaged for AN ENTIRE YEAR ON THE PICTURE!—such is their determination to make it accurate as well as realistic!

The life story of LLOYD GEORGE, besides its fascinating romance, will be the most vivid illustration of THE REAL OBJECTS OF THE WAR that has yet been anywhere exhibited.

Through it move such famous Americans as WASHINGTON, LINCOLN, WILSON, etc., and it is, otherwise, PACKED WITH INTEREST FOR THE PEOPLE OF AMERICA.

SHOWING SOON

THE LIFE STORY OF DAVID LLOYD GEORGE will be shown to the Trade in London in October.

Those who may be interested please communicate at the earliest moment with the "IDEAL FILM RENTING CO., LTD.," 76-78 WARDOUR STREET, LONDON, W. 1, and arrange without fail to be represented at the Trade Show.

! A MODEL CINEBIOGRAPHY THE PICTURE THAT ALL AMERICA WILL WANT TO SEE !

Take Things Easier!

Feeling worn out? Headache? Neck stiff? Severe pain in the region of your bank account?

You're working too hard, old man! Take care of your health, or the doctor may have to!

Ease off—it's easy!

How? Why, book pictures that it doesn't take a Somme offensive to put over! Get in line with public opinion! Show productions dealing with subjects the people are talking and thinking about!

Do you imagine William Fox hangs around the front doors of all his thirty theatres every night wondering where the dear public is spending its money? He does not! He knows when he makes his bookings just where 750,000 persons will be at special hours during a whole week! He knows they'll be comfortably seated in his places of amusement enjoying the best entertainment money can provide.

That's why he can count on them every time—because they can count on him!—because they know there's always "a good show" at the Audubon, or the Crotona, or the Terminal, or the Academy of Music! That's why William Fox doesn't have to worry about box office returns.

He Showed "Why America Will Win"

This mammoth production, based on the life of GENERAL JOHN J. PERSHING, played to standing room only through the full list of his theatres! Why? Because it's the best advertised picture ever put on the market; because it's timely; because every human being in America has a keen, personal interest in JOHN PERSHING and in Pershing's boys "over there"; because this production has the color and power, the gripping tenseness and deep sympathetic touch of great and stirring drama! That's why!

He Showed "The Prussian Cur"

But that was a certain winner even before the first lithograph was ordered for it!—one of those "cinches" that come occasionally and which every one promptly recognizes as a friend of the box office! For one thing, R. A. Walsh made it. And it has as a chief character Captain Horst von der Goltz, the most famous German spy who has planned Hun deviltry since the war began. "The Prussian Cur" tells the true story of the Great Conflict and it shows as never has been done before how Germany has implanted deceit and intrigue on the Western Hemisphere—at our very doors!

FOX FILM CORPORATION

BUY LIBERTY BONDS

Book Fox Pictures!

He Showed "Queen of the Sea"

ANNETTE KELLERMAN in Queen of the Sea! Annette Kellerman, most famous of all women swimmers! Annette Kellerman, surrounded by crowds of the prettiest girls in the land—real girlie girls who are proud to be seen in swimming togs—mermaids and sirens and nymphs—airy, fairy girls who personify grace and beauty. "A Daughter of the Gods" went over tremendously in William Fox theatres, but even this veteran record holder moved back and sat down when "Queen of the Sea" strolled into the spotlight! You can't dodge the fact that the dear old public likes Annette Kellerman!

He Will Show "Why I Would Not Marry"

It's a 1919 story—just a little ahead of competition—bigger and better than any strictly romantic production that's ever been offered—unique—a marvelous melting of five great throbbing love stories into one—twenty-five reels of plot and action and heart interest in one-fifth that length—five thousand feet that seem as one—a whale of a picture that is going to make even the biggest first-run managers wish the fireman wouldn't be so fussy about blocked exits!

And He Is Going To Show "18 to 45"

You bet he is! And so are a great many hundred other exhibitors! It's THE outstanding production of the hour!—tangible evidence of the great triumph of democracy!—the vital story of the new draft!—a story that in heart interest and human interest, in power and magnificence, in dramatic portrayal of willing sacrifice, will be ranked with "Les Miserables," "The Honor System" and other great epics of the screen. It is such productions as these that have built up the William Fox chain of theatres. It is such big, timely features as these and such dollar drawing masterpieces of film art as STANDARD PICTURES, VICTORY PICTURES, EXCEL PICTURES, SUNSHINE COMEDIES, and MUTT AND JEFF ANIMATED CARTOONS that are daily making more and more obvious the first rank leadership to which William Fox has won his way.

It isn't masonry that makes a theatre: It's pictures!

INDUSTRY'S DRIVE UNDER FULL SPEED

Subscriptions for Fourth Loan Pouring In at Theatres Throughout the Country—Liberty Specials Making Big Hit—Exchanges Co-operating with National Association

THE first week of the motion picture industry's whirlwind Liberty Loan drive in co-operation with the Treasury Department has definitely established the status of the motion picture industry near the top of the list of Class 1 of the essential war-time industries, according to the flood of reports telling of the tremendous results scored by the Liberty Loan specials received from all sections of the country. The results obtained in the first few days of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign in the moving picture theatres of the country have already exceeded all expectations, and indicate that the motion picture industry will sweep over the top by a wide margin its drive to obtain $1,000,000,000 in subscriptions for the Fourth Liberty Loan.

That this view is entertained not only by the industry's leaders, but by Government officials and the industry at large, is indicated by the flood of congratulatory telegrams from all parts of the country which have poured in upon Adolph Zukor, chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. Prominent exhibitors from coast to coast are telegraphing reports of the immediate and sensational hit scored by the Liberty Loan pictures, and their congratulations to the committee for the co-operation it has extended to the Government. An outstanding feature of these messages has been the pledges of the exhibitors of all classes to go the limit in co-operating with the committee and the Treasury Department.

Master Booking Sheet a Bid Aid.

The telegram sent by Mr. Zukor to the various exchanges aiding in the drive, asking them to get together and arrange a master booking sheet, has brought about a still heartier spirit of co-operation, with the result that all trouble and confusion in the booking of films have been erased, and there is now a smooth and steady flow of Liberty Loan films to all exhibitors. The adoption of master booking sheets in the distribution centers of the country will contribute materially to the committee's efforts to obtain maximum results in the distribution of the Liberty Loan specials, it is expected.

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, who saw the Liberty Loan films on the opening night of the campaign at Keith's theatre in Washington, was so impressed with their high quality that he sent a message complimenting Frank R. Wilson, the national director of publicity for the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, upon the splendid co-operation extended the Government by the motion picture industry. These congratulations have been conveyed to Mr. Zukor by Mr. Wilson.

The tribute paid the motion picture industry by Mr. Wilson on the occasion of the formal presentation of the Liberty Loan films to the Government at Washington on Friday evening, September 27, at a special showing arranged for the National Press Club, is declared to be one of the greatest and most sincere tributes ever paid the industry by a Government representative. This sentiment, which was echoed by many other Government officials in attendance at the special showing, is said by film men to indicate that the motion picture industry has succeeded by deeds and not words in entrenching itself solidly in the favor of the Government as a highly essential part of the great war machine.

More Bonds, Fewer Taxes

THE biggest war loan in the history of the world has been launched by the United States Government. Success of the drive will mean success to our armies in Europe. Failure certainly would mean bitter disappointment to our boys "Over There." It might mean discouragement.

Inevitably the failure of the fourth loan—the "Fighting Loan"—would mean enormously increased taxes and a considerable increase in the cost of living. It will be very poor economy for any American that can pay even dollar installments on Liberty Bonds to refrain from buying them.

As the necessary support to our armies the bonds should be bought.

As a means of ending the war and restoring conditions of peace and pre-war prosperity the bonds should be bought.

As an absolutely safe investment the bonds should be bought.

The dollars saved now when prices are high will buy a great deal more after the war is over and prices go down to normal again. The necessary thing, the creditable thing, the sensible thing, is to buy Liberty Bonds.

Stage Films in Capitol's Rotunda.

That official Washington has been deeply impressed with the importance and significance of the co-operation extended the Government by the motion picture industry is indicated by the big demonstration that followed the screening of a number of the Liberty Loan films on Friday night, October 4, in the rotunda of the Capitol for the benefit of the Senators, their wives and the employes of the Senate. A special musical program was given in connection with the Liberty Loan films, which aroused the greatest enthusiasm and interest on the part of all in attendance. Film men who have been in Washington declare that the hearty response the motion picture industry has given the Government's call for co-operation in the Fourth Liberty Loan drive has done more than anything else to impress members of Congress and Government officials with the importance and essentiality of the industry in war times.

Reports received from all sections of the country indicate that the exhibitors are keenly alive to the importance of co-operating with the special committee of the National Association. Thousands of moving picture theatres have provided Liberty Bond booths or made all arrangements necessary to promote the sale of bonds to their patrons. Each exhibitor has been provided with blank forms for use in making daily reports concerning the amount of subscriptions received in his theatre on each day of the drive. These reports are to be returned to the various exchanges to be used in compiling reports of subscriptions for the use of the Liberty Loan Committee of the National Association. Great stress has been placed upon the necessity of filling out these report blanks promptly in order that the committee may be able at any time to obtain definite information as to the progress made toward the billion-dollar goal which the industry has pledged as its contribution to the Fourth Liberty Loan.

Four-Minute Men Working Hard.

Four-Minute speakers have been given places on the programs of a great majority of the moving picture theatres, and the exhibitors are giving a hearty response to the committee's request that they co-operate with the local Liberty Loan committees in every manner possible.

"When the history of the motion picture industry's co-operation in the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign is written the outstanding feature will be the wonderful co-ordination of the various branches of the industry which has made this great accomplishment possible," said Adoph Zukor, the committee's chairman, in discussing the results obtained in the motion picture drive. "The stars, producing companies, distributing organizations, exhibitors and all allied interests represented in the industry have more than met every demand made of them. Their loyalty to the Government and whole-hearted interest in the success of the industry's campaign have called forth the highest commendation and praise from Government officials, who have realized more than ever the great part played by the screen in the mobilization of the country's resources for the winning of the war."

October 12 Is Zukor Day.

Adolph Zukor Day in the Fourth Liberty Loan drive of the Stage Women's War Relief is October 12, and in New York City will be one of the most important events of Liberty Day, which President Wilson has declared a national holiday.

In the last Liberty Loan drive of the Stage Women's War Relief Adolph Zukor Day broke all records for subscriptions, and because of the great success of that day Mr. Zukor was requested again to take over the Liberty Loan Theatre on the public library steps, Fifth avenue, on October 12, readily anticipated to be the big day of the drive.

Besides the use of the Liberty Loan Theatre in front of the library a complete traveling theatre, with piano and comfortable rostrum, will be turned over to Mr. Zukor on October 12. This traveling theatre will appear on the most prominent corners in the city with film stars, singers and a host of pretty bond sellers from the Famous Players-Lasky studios in Fifty-sixth street and Fort Lee, N. J.

At the library booth a large program of the most famous motion picture and theatrical stars will be presented. Plans are already under way to present a number of novel surprises that will compel the admirers of these favorites to part with their cash and invest in Liberty Bonds. Pete Smith, assisted by Charles E. Moyer, is in charge of arrangements.

New Men for Film Division.

Dennis J. Sullivan, manager of domestic distribution for the Division of Films, reports encouragingly on the organization of his department for the exploitation of "America's Answer" and the other films issued by the division.

James F. McLaughlin of New York City has been appointed to take charge of the St. Louis district, with headquarters in that city; H. J. Marshall, also of New York, will handle the Atlanta district, and Ned E. Thatcher, recruited from the New Orleans Times-Picayune, will be in charge of the New Orleans district. The Chicago district will be taken care of from the Chicago office, of which R. E. Ricksen is manager.

Liberty Specials Limited to Single Day's Showing

ON the eve of the Liberty Loan Drive, Adolph Zukor, chairman of the National Association, issued the following instructions to all the organizations distributing the Liberty Loan films:

"Please wire each of your exchange managers in the United States so that all may jointly check up booking scheme to see that Paragraph 4 of letter of instructions sent to your exchanges has been complied with by all exhibitors. It is essential that no exhibitor book a subject for more than one day and that no exhibitor possess a repeat booking of any subject or book more than one subject on same day in order to obtain the widest possible distribution.

"If it is found that any exhibitor has booked a subject from your manager for more than one day, or has booked more than one subject for the same day, or has obtained a repeat booking of any subject, have your manager arrange for cancellation accordingly, so that Paragraph 4 will be explicitly complied with. This telegram is being sent to all other companies handling Liberty Loan prints, so that all branch managers will receive the same instructions."

West Coast Players Push Liberty Sales

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 7.

THE West Coast Picture Players Liberty Loan selling drive had reached a total of $2,081,950 on October 7, without counting untabulated results from theatres and exchanges. This drive is well on the way to its six-million-dollar quota and ahead of that of any other bond selling organization in Southern California.

The tank Victory in Central Park, Los Angeles, has been the headquarters for the campaign, in charge of the Motion Picture Directors' Association and the Fairbanks, Garrison, Vitagraph, Hampton, Metro, Christie, Hart, Haworth, Brunton and Lasky studios. The first week its subscriptions total more than $875,000.

The tank Liberty, with Mary Miles Minter, and tank Democracy, with Roy Stewart and Josie Sedgwick, making nearby towns, brought in a combined total of over $1,200,000. GIEBLER.

Famous Players Actively Aid Canada's Victory Loan

NINE of the stars and producing units of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation have completed special pictures for the use of the Canadian Government in the 1918 Victory Loan campaign, which begins the last week in October and continues for three weeks. This is more than half the number of pictures which will be distributed under Government auspices as a means of promoting the sale of Victory Bonds, and represents the heartiest co-operation yet given the Canadian government by an American producing organization. Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and chairman of the special committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry which has charge of the American Liberty Loan motion picture campaign, co-operated with the Canadian committee in obtaining the assistance of the American stars in the Victory Loan picture campaign.

The various exchange systems in Canada will co-operate in the distribution of the Victory Loan prints, which will be supplied the exhibitors without charge. A motion picture distribution committee, composed of Jule and J. J. Allen and Claire Hagge, has charge of the arrangements for this feature of the Canadian campaign.

Notable Persons to Attend Industry's Victory Dinner

PLANS are rapidly being completed for the big Victory Dinner to be held Friday evening, October 11, in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Astor under the joint auspices of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc. The time selected for this event, on the eve of Victory Day, proclaimed a national holiday by President Wilson and during both the Liberty Loan drive and the Motion Picture Exposition at Madison Square Garden, when many out-of-town men and Government officials will be visiting here, is most fitting.

That the Victory Dinner may be the most important event in the history of the motion picture industry since its inception is the aim of its promoters. The grand ballroom will only accommodate 1,500 persons, and judging from the manner in which the tickets are being demanded it is felt there will be disappointments among those who wait until the last minute to make reservations. All checks should be made payable to J. E. Brulatour, treasurer, Suite 806, Times Building, New York.

The arrangements in connection with the appearance of notable persons in national life as guests of honor are in the hands of William A. Brady, president of the National Association. The names of these men are said to include the most widely prominent in national and international affairs.

Walter W. Irwin, chairman of the executive committee of the National Association, will preside at the dinner and is in charge of general arrangements. John C. Flinn is acting as secretary. Others on the arrangement committee are Gabriel Hess, Paul Gulick and Charles W. Barrell. On the publicity committee are Paul Lazarus, Paul Gulick and Pete Smith.

The formal invitation which will be sent out to the trade, reads in part:

"It is most fitting that at this time the motion picture industry, united with citizens of international reputation, should gather to voice its eagerness to continue to co-operate with every branch of the United States Government, to make known its unequaled record of self-sacrificing service in this crisis and to pledge everything that it is and has, until final and complete victory is achieved.

"This will be the most important occasion in the life of our industry. The success of the dinner is assured.

"The price of dinner tickets for ladies and gentlemen will be $6 each. Tables will seat ten persons. Reservations should be made at once, as it is expected the applications will exceed the seating capacity.

"Reception 7 o'clock"

Show Portuguese Fighting with Allies.

In the "Official War Review" No. 16, issued by the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, to be released by Pathe October 14, Americans, British, Portuguese, Italian and French soldiers are shown on the fighting front. Americans are pushing forward in new baptisms of fire; British and Portuguese fight shoulder to shoulder; Italian shells fall like hail on the trenches of the Austrians; the Poilus are seen on the Italian as well as on the French front, and in other ways the splendid coordination of the armies of the Allies under General Foch is demonstrated. The presence of the Portuguese on the western front is especially interesting, and gives an angle to the fighting that has hitherto not been familiar to American audiences. In one especially effective scene a Portuguese battery is shown doing unusual work. Anti-aircraft defense and the fast, new "baby tank" which the French sprung as a surprise upon the Huns are also shown.

CAPITAL CITY THEATRES ARE CLOSED

Because of Influenza Epidemic District Commissioners Shut Down All Places of Amusement

Washington, D. C., October 3.

BECAUSE of the influenza epidemic, the District Commissioners have ruled that keeping open motion picture theatres and other places of amusement constitutes a public menace at this time. They have ordered them closed from midnight October 3 until further notice.

Washington, October 1.

LOCAL motion picture theatres and other places of amusement may soon be closed as a result of the epidemic of Spanish influenza, which is now becoming serious in this city. The two Liberty Loan parades have been called off, and all future indoor Liberty Loan meetings are to be canceled.

In addition to canceling indoor meetings the various Government departments have changed their hours of opening so that some open as early as 7.30, others at 8.30, some at 9, as at present, and still others at 9.30. By doing this, it is hoped to relieve the congestion that prevails on the street cars early in the morning and thus lessen the danger of spreading the disease.

So far, no move has been made toward closing theatres, schools or churches, but it is believed that, should the epidemic continue to spread, such action will be taken. It is pointed out by officials that the great amount of very important war work here makes it necessary to take even greater precautions than are taken in other cities, and no effort will be spared to conquer the disease.

A number of theatres, the schools and the street cars have been placarded with posters instructing the public how to protect themselves against the malady. At the present writing the number of cases reported to the health authorities is still low, but it is believed that the larger percentage of cases are not reported, while the number of deaths from the influenza and its accompanying disease, pneumonia, is increasing rapidly.

The great volume of travel toward Washington from other cities where the disease is rampant is believed to be responsible for its rapid progress here. Should it continue to increase in strength, officials believe it will be necessary at once to close all places of amusement and public congregation.

LINZ.

Baltimore Theatres May Close.

There is a possibility that the theatres of Baltimore may be closed if the number of cases of influenza which have broken out in that city spread to a more alarming degree and warrant that action being taken by the Health Department due to it becoming an epidemic. The Liberty Theatre, at Camp Meade, where Griffith's "Heart's of the World" was being shown during the week of September 23, was ordered closed by the authorities on Wednesday, September 25. No entertainments or festivities are being allowed. Two theatres at Sparrows Point, Md., where the Bethlehem Steel Company plant is situated, were ordered closed on Wednesday, October 2. The public school at Sparrows Point was also ordered closed by the Baltimore County Health Commissioners. At the present writing forty-eight deaths have occurred in twenty-four hours, 900 new cases have been reported, the total in the city and state being 2,921. Camp Meade's total has been brought up to 6,300. A general conference was scheduled to be held on Friday, October 4, and definite action by the Health Department officials and medical men will be determined upon.

Influenza Epidemic Closes All Philadelphia Theatres

AN epidemic of contagious influenza and pneumonia having caused the death of 1,191 persons in Philadelphia during the past week resulted in the closing of all places of amusements, schools, churches and liquor establishments. Orders were issued on Thursday, October 3, by Director Krusen of the Department of Health and Charities notifying all motion picture theatres and playhouses that no performances be permitted to take place during that evening and to remain closed until further notice, which is officially understood to mean until Monday, October 14. This, however, seems to be a matter of grave concern as the death rate is increasing at an alarming rate while cases of influenza are rapidly spreading in all parts of the city. Influenza cases in Philadelphia are estimated at between 30,000 and 50,000. Every hospital is beseiged by grip victims desiring beds and hospital care. The death report made Friday, October 4, showed that 171 persons succumbed to influenza in the preceding twenty-four hours, an increase of 32 deaths over Thursday. Owing to the seriousness of the present situation Dr. Krusen declared to-day that when this city's death rate falls to the rate normal for this time of the year, the ban will be lifted, "and not before then."

Late reports received up to the present writing show that the epidemic is also playing havoc with the employes of the motion picture industry, one death having already resulted in the office force of the Stanley Company. Among the exchanges along film row many films had to be laid aside and could not be inspected owing to most of the rewinders having contracted this disease. The same condition seems to prevail in the surrounding country while neighboring cities like Camden, Harrisburg, Pittsburgh and others have had the same restrictions placed upon them by the Board of Health.

Indianapolis' Precautions Reduce Theatre Audiences

ALTHOUGH the danger of a Spanish influenza epidemic in Indianapolis is still apparent, local health authorities are of the opinion that with continued precaution on the part of the general public the epidemic will not threaten any large number of people.

The total number of cases among civilians is 90, and the number among soldiers stationed at the vocational training schools in the city is approximately 1,000.

Representatives of the Indianapolis Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and the Indianapolis Theatre Managers' Association held a conference the first week in October, with Dr. Herman G. Morgan, secretary of the local board of health, in regard to preventive measures to eliminate, if possible, the danger of a serious outbreak of the epidemic in Indianapolis. The exhibitors and theatre managers informed Dr. Morgan that they wished to co-operate in every way with the city health officials in their efforts to save Indianapolis from the epidemic.

Dr. Morgan first suggested having the ticket sellers in the local theatres ask every person buying a ticket if they had a cold, sore throat or other respiratory infection, but as that was rather impractical large signs were exhibited in front of the theatres and slides were thrown on the screens calling the attention of the public to the board's order. As a result of the advice given out by the board of health, asking persons to avoid crowds as much as possible until the danger of the epidemic is over, attendance at the local theatres was materially decreased during the week.

Epidemic Causes Shutdown of Ohio Amusement Places

THE epidemic of Spanish influenza seemed to center at Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, O., where the large cantonment is situated. Many nurses and doctors from other cantonments were brought to Camp Sherman to help fight the disease. All theatres and places of amusement in Chillicothe proper were ordered closed by the camp authorities. Chillicothe has four picture houses that were forced to close as well as one "legitimate" theatre. The New Sherman Theatre, managed by Elmer Redelle; the Star and Queen theatres, managed by Charles Smith, and the Royal Theatre, owned by the Myers Brothers, were the houses closed. Film men say that all the small towns surrounding Chillicothe and nearby have ordered that theatres be closed as well as other meeting places. This includes Frankfort, Washington Court House, Circleville, and many other smaller towns. There are few cases of influenza in the larger cities. At Dayton the Wilbur Wright Aviation field is quarantined. This is a training school for aviators. It is not thought the disease will spread to Dayton in large enough numbers to warrant the closing of the local theatres.

Hits Maritime Provinces, Too.

The spread of the Spanish influenza is undoubtedly the topic of most interest at the present time. Sydney, North Sydney, Glace Bay, Whitney Pier, Sydney Mines, Dominion, St. Stephen and Hillsboro are all closed as well as the theatres in Halifax. The disease has not reached St. Stephen. St. John has several suspected cases, but so far nothing has been ordered regarding the theatres. The fear of the disease is bound to have its effect upon the theatres in the attendance. The film exchanges are feeling the loss badly.

Third Official Production Goes to World Pictures

THE authoritative announcement is made by the Division of Films that the World Film Corporation, which is now distributing "America's Answer," will also handle the distribution for "Under Four Flags," the third United States official war picture, which will have its first showing early in November.

"After very careful consideration," says Mr. Hart in making the announcement, "it was deemed advisable not to open the distribution of 'Under Four Flags' to competition. The World Film Corporation was selected to handle 'America's Answer' because its offer was the most satisfactory. It has thoroughly organized its forces for the work, its campaign is meeting with splendid success, and everything points to a practically 100 per cent. showing throughout the United States. Good judgment suggests that an arrangement that has proved so successful with 'America's Answer' will prove of equal value for the new war picture. Moreover, the two pictures, in the message they convey to the public, follow a natural sequence.

New Subject a Fighting Picture.

"'America's Answer' is largely devoted to showing how America's billions were expended in France in preparation for our full participation in the war and the advent of our boys on the fighting front. 'Under Four Flags,' continuing the story, will be a fighting picture throughout—a picture that will tell with pictorial vividness not only what American boys are doing in the battle line, but will also bring into view the tremendous activities of the French, British and Italians, and show how the armies of the Allies, under the master direction of General Foch, have been coordinated for victory.

"The millions who see 'America's Answer' will naturally want to see 'Under Four Flags,' and their wishes, it is believed, will be met most satisfactorily by continuing the distribution through one company."

Goldwyn Names Four New Branch Exchange Managers

SEVERAL shifts and promotions in the managerial ranks of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation contain elements of interest for exhibitors and for the several hundred employes of the organization in twenty territories of the country.

Announcement is made of the return to the organization of F. M. Brockell as manager of the Goldwyn St. Louis office, succeeding Paul H. Bush, who has taken charge for the time being of the booking of the patriotic Liberty Loan pictures of all companies in that district. Mr. Brockwell was Goldwyn's first manager of its Chicago office, leaving for a marked advancement with Paramount's Chicago office. His return to the Goldwyn distribution organization is gratifying to the company.

Richard Wernick, until recently chief salesman of the Goldwyn Detroit office, has been promoted to the management of the Boston office, succeeding the late M. Ralph Camp, who fell a victim to the influenza scourge. Mr. Wernick is a young Englishman of fine personality and abilities, who has been with Goldwyn since the formation of the distributing company, previously having managed the Fox sub-office in New Haven and at one time being with the Selznick interests in Buffalo.

Oscar F. Bower, the new Goldwyn manager in Cincinnati, succeeding A. J. Pincus, was formerly chief salesman of the Goldwyn Philadelphia office, and has a fine record as a pacemaker in the company's sales organization.

In Philadelphia George W. Smiley has been named as Goldwyn's manager, thus elevating a young man who has strongly established friendships in all of the eastern Pennsylvania territory.

Goldfish Describes Evils of 20 Per Cent. Theatre Tax

SAMUEL GOLDFISH, president of Goldwyn, has written the following letter to the editor of the Evening Mail, New York, in approval of a recently published editorial criticising the proposed doubling of the tax on admissions to theatres:

Your editorial of October 3 states the problem of the proposed 20 per cent. tax on theatre tickets with entire clarity and precision. I think the people who provide the nation's amusements have proved their patriotism sufficiently to be entitled to belief when they say that they protest against this tax not as selfish business men merely fighting against the destruction of their means of livelihood, but as patriotic individuals anxious to help the Government in every way possible. And obviously it cannot help the Government to realize less from the theatre taxes than it did last year.

This proposition is an inevitable result of the unfortunate system that intrusts the initiation of all taxes to men who are no more fitted to make a budget than John McGraw would be to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The reasoning of these men is that if a 10 per cent. tax produced $50,000,000, a 20 per cent. tax must assuredly produce $100,000,000. As a matter of fact the reverse will undoubtedly be the case. The 20 per cent. tax will produce a sum closer to $25,000,000 than $50,000,000. It will also have the effect of depriving a great majority of people of their legitimate amusements; the people, moreover, who are most in need of legitimate amusements. There is a point beyond which people simply will not be able to stand any further drain on their pockets.

Congress Misjudges Theatregoers.

The rustic elements in Congress judge theatregoers by the people who buy their tickets from agencies and pay exorbitant prices. They say, "If people can afford to pay $5 a seat to see the Follies and 'Going Up,' then they can very well afford to pay a little more in taxes to the Government." But the truth is that those people form the most inconsiderable part of the theatregoing public in only one city. If the amusement industry had to rely on them it would be bankrupt in a day. It is not the people who pay $5 or even those who pay $2 and $1.50 who enable the theatres to live. It is those who pay their half dollars, quarters and dimes. It is the people who have to make their weekly budgets with the utmost care, who have to consider every nickel before it goes out. To these people an extra 20 per cent. tax on each ticket is more than a serious matter. It will force them to enjoy just half as much amusement as they have been accustomed to. And does anybody dare to say that it is too much?

The proposed 20 per cent. tax will thus have three most unfortunate results: It will bring in less taxes to the Government; it will curtail the people's amusements, and it will cripple the people who are trying to provide those amusements in the face of increasing handicaps and difficulties.

There is not a man or woman in either the Goldwyn Corporation or, I venture to say, any other organization, who is not entirely willing to sacrifice his or her livelihood if it be necessary to help the Government. But we do protest against being sacrificed to Congressional ignorance in such a fashion as will actually be a detriment to the Government, a fashion that will do the least possible good to the greatest possible number.

CARUSO SINGS TO EXPOSITION THRONG

Tenor Opens Week's Program with Four Numbers —War Angle Looms Large in Display at National Association's Show at Madison Square Garden

ENRICO CARUSO, who had won world renown as a marvelous tenor before he became a star in motion pictures, was introduced to a great crowd at Madison Square Garden Saturday evening, October 3, promptly on advertised time. President William A. Brady, of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, made a stirring speech in presenting Caruso to the multitude simultaneously opening the National Motion Picture Exposition.

Caruso sang four numbers — the American national anthem in English, the Italian national anthem in Italian, and a verse and chorus of "Over There" in both English and Italian. There was an enthusiastic demonstration from the many hundreds who had arrived in time to hear the great singer. During the evening the impression obtained that there were many hundreds more who arrived too late to enjoy the main attraction.

And right here seemed to be the fly in the ointment. The general public (even a great number of people directly concerned in the industry) did not believe that Caruso would sing as advertised at Madison Square Garden as the big feature of the exposition. There must have been something in past experiences with motion picture expositions to lend doubt to the general acceptance of the advertised attractions. Perhaps when the public has been told in times past that certain great stars of the screen would be in attendance, and they appeared not, there arose a disposition to doubt the advertised promises of similar promotions on subsequent occasions.

Caruso Makes Promise Good.

Be that as it may, Caruso made good his promise, and the Italian Red Cross shared in the ticket proceeds. The war tax of five cents required for every admission went to the Government. Because of the presence of Caruso it is to be presumed that the Government benefited considerably from the rush of exhibitors' tickets issued to firms who patronized the exposition by purchasing display space.

Very properly and patriotically the "war angle" looms large in the displays that occupy the vast main floor of the Garden and the balcony that has been stretched above "the arena fronts" of circus-time seating arrangements. The motion picture industry is represented in tastefully constructed booths and pavilions that front on aisles that run lengthwise of the arena. At the Fourth avenue end is a section of "No Man's Land"—trenches, barbed wire entanglements, sand bags and all. Then, too, there is a great French cannon bearing a record for the defense of Paris, and above the militant display hangs a biplane bearing vicious scars of battle.

In the balconies there are exhibits that give an inkling of the great drive for "Ships and More Ships"; the crusade for "Farmerettes," and on the south side of the main floor is arranged a display which is intended to demonstrate the gas-mask enterprise. Saturday evening not all of these displays were in operation, but the gang of riveters in the west balcony were "there" noisily and enthusiastically.

The dominant note on Saturday and Sunday evening (doubtless to so continue throughout the week) was the fourth Liberty Loan. The "drive" was featured at the Morning Telegraph booth and by men and women who roamed the floor and balconies soliciting subscriptions. Elsie Ferguson was the principal saleswoman at the newspaper booth. War was in the air, and the motion picture feature of the exposition seemed to be pretty much in the same direction. Displays of posters were specialized in at most of the booths, and those who went to the Garden expecting to find anything else than co-operation with the battles of democracy must have been bitterly disappointed.

Government's Show Important Factor.

Proclaiming the exposition as representing the industry the message is carried to the Government that motion pictures are heartily joining in the triumphant march toward the goal of a redeemed civilization; and in testimony of the Government's sanction of pictures as an essential there is abundant witness that Uncle Sam is taking the co-operation of the industry in good faith. This is the outstanding angle of the show.

As for the co-operation of the industry with the urge of the exposition it is by no means unanimous. Several of the more active and prominent producing and distributing firms are found among the missing in a canvass of the booths and displays. To be sure the vast expanse of the Garden and all the galleries that might be constructed therein could not accommodate all of the firms that are making or distributing pictures, but there was plenty of room for more displays in the space provided, and there were many firms of prominence who were conspicuous by their absence.

At prominent vantage points in the aisle of display there are attractive arrangements and exhibits. Famous Players-Lasky has a large section of the main display opposite an imposing showing for Pathe. For the most part, however, the producers were lined up in even-sized booths to right and left of the main traveled aisles. In some of the booths on Saturday evening there were stars who have been helped to prominence on the screen by the firms they were then representing as the chief adornment of the "stalls." Sunday night they were all missing; but Sunday night was a different story from the opening session.

Fans who have wondered whether Gladys Leslie was a blonde or brunette discovered in her presence at the Vitagraph booth that she was a pretty girl, although a blonde. The search for Pathe stars might have been disappointing to some, but Cecile De Maine, Miss Neal Corbett and Helen Mansfield compensated to an attractive degree in their picturesque costumes representing Columbia, Brittania and La Belle France.

Harold Lockwood Looks In.

Metro depended upon the social rather than the showmanship side for its display of lovely womanhood. Mrs. W. E. Atkinson, Mrs. C. K. Stern, Mrs. H. J. Cohen and Miss Grace Carstang are better known to the Metro management than they are to the "fans," but they adorned the booth with a grace and sartorial fitness that was decidedly attractive. Incidentally, Harold Lockwood was in attendance, and Viola Dana was momentarily expected when the World reporter picked up the Metro booth.

Theodore Deitrich was lord of the occasion at the Sherry service booth. Vangie Valentine was in attractive evidence, the center of admiring glances from the bashful fans; while at any moment Doris Kenyon was expected to glide into view and round out the fullness of pulchritude that she alone could bring to complete Mr. Deitrich's commercial happiness.

John F. Flinn, Charley Moyer, Jerry Beatty and Pete Schmid were the fixed stars of the Famous Players-Lasky booth, although Marguerite Clark and Billie Burke had accepted Adolph Zukor's very cordial invitation to be among those present. There were several pretty girls whose names may not be known to heralds, helps to exhibitors and gelatine lobby displays in attendance, "pinch-hitting," as Jerry Beatty might say, for the Lasky stars and Famous Players to come later.

Pause must be given here to the very unique manner in which Universal participated. While the other firms were content to confine themselves to inanimate showings of framed pictures and young women to hand out pictures or literature telling just why certain pictures were better than any other pictures, Universal advanced a perambulating, handshaking, smiling and dashing personal representation, entitled P. A. Powers.

World Pictures Booth Has "Gallery."

World Pictures, chaperoned by Lee Kugel, presented an appealing "stunt" with such good effect that the World Pictures was the only booth that was honored by a "gallery." The crowds packed in front of Evelyn Greely as she sold Liberty Bonds, held the hand of the purchaser and shared with him the photograph that was immediately taken of the participants in the patriotic transaction.

To every purchaser of a hundred-dollar bond World Pictures presented a photograph of Miss Greely and the purchaser taken on the spot. A three-hundred-dollar deal won a unique "double exposure" of the purchaser watching himself purchasing, and for $500 a strip of motion picture film was handed over for later developments, either at the purchaser's home, with the wife assisting, or in the picture theatre most frequented by the purchaser, his family and friends.

Shouts of laughter registered every sale, and the crowd of onlookers made the area in front of the World Pictures booth sound like a succession of "high spots" in a Chaplin comedy effort. Lee Kugel was very happy until an occasional thought pressed itself forward that some other exhibitor might "cop" the scheme and snare some of the glory that was, during most of Saturday evening, piling up to the credit of a showman with a happy though well developed.

Moving Picture World Is There, Too.

Having mentioned one of the trade papers it would be slighting our own bread and butter not to indicate that the Moving Picture World booth is located exactly where the paper itself stands in its championship of the industry—right on the firing line, behind the big French cannon and where Caruso could be heard to the very best advantage. The Mirror was increasing its circulation Sunday night by free gifts of its attractive issues; the Exhibitors' Trade Review was on the picket line to the left of the main entrance, and the Motion Picture News was identified only by a sign. There was a rather crude joke going around in "our set" about the "Empy News" being "empty," but we scorn to circulate it further.

Sunday night matters were quiet—exceedingly quiet. Whether or not the general public was convinced that the show would be open in opposition to the churches and moving picture theatres may not be authoritatively here recorded, but either this opposition or something else kept the attendance down to a small and quiet gathering of perfectly decorous ladies and gentlemen. The exposition bids fair to duplicate other expositions in some particulars and to surpass in other particulars any other attempt of its kind.

Every individual concerned in the welfare of the motion picture industry should attend the exposition and draw his own conclusions. If all who rightfully should attend would go to Madison Square Garden as frequently as they can there could be only one conclusion drawn. The exposition in that event would be an unquestioned success.

EXHIBITS FEW BUT OF GOOD QUALITY

Resume of Accessories Shown at Garden—Power, Simplex and Cooper-Hewitt Much in Evidence

THE accessory exhibits of the Exposition were strong in quality but numerically weak. The up-to-date exhibitor who attended the show before the crowd arrived and made a study of the booths in which the accessories were displayed certainly accumulated the value of his admission in ideas as to how a picture could be economically projected.

But the roster of the concerns who came to the Garden to tell the exhibitor what they could do for him in the way of supplies and equipment was lamentably short. There are scores of manufacturers in this country today who are possibly unaware that an appreciable share of their output goes into the making of the motion picture house but who could have shown their products to advantage at the Exposition. Possibly they failed to realize what direct contact with the exhibitor meant, possibly no one has explained it to them.

Nicholas Power Company on Deck.

It required three booths, Nos. 23, 24 and 25, to hold the Power's line of projection machines and several novelties. Among these latter may be mentioned the new combination motion picture and stereo condensers mounted in an adjustable fitting which permitted either being swung into position at the will of the operator.

In the display is a motor-operated mechanism illustrating the Power's and the Geneva movements in action side by side, while just around the corner in the Power annex is a miniature screen, the Attractascope by name, on which pictures and advertisements are alternately thrown and which is automatically operated by a small electric motor.

Precision Springs Two New Ones.

In Spaces 65 to 67 the Precision Machine Company has a line-up of Simplex projectors that reminded one of a battery of allied machine guns. One of these machines has attached a double-acting arc controller which strikes the arc and opens it out to the desired setting by the simple operation of throwing a switch. The distance of carbons may be altered at will by the action of a rheostat. It is claimed by the manufacturers that the securing of proper carbon trim by this device is entirely automatic, that it effects a saving of current and carbons and obviates "freezing."

On another Simplex was displayed a 90 degree magnetic control arc for which a 40 per cent. saving of current is claimed.

In Spaces 1 and 2 the Cooper-Hewitt Company shows a studio model in miniature which is equipped with various types of their lighting systems, while in a central booth the lights are shown in full size.

Albert M. Steinert of Providence shows the Drumola, a combination of drums and cymbals attachable to any pianoplayer or tracker bar instrument without defacing or cutting.

The Stanley Frame Company is exhibiting a pleasing line of plain and illuminated lobby display frames.

The Mogul Company of New York shows its damp-proof, water-proof and acid-proof insulator preservative for all varieties of structural work.

At the time of going to press, the booths of both the Alpha Lithographic Company and the Motion Picture Appliance Company were vacant.

Westinghouse Has Something New.

In space 67 the Westinghouse Lamp Company, of 165 Broadway, New York, shows motor generator sets for operating motion picture lamps, mercury arc rectifiers for converting alternating current and direct current for arc lamp service, adapters for the use of incandescent lamps in all standard moving-picture machines, large Mazda C lamps for exterior illumination of motion-picture houses, and a complete line of standard incandescent lamps for interior and exterior illumination.

The novelty of this exhibit is the demonstration "Fixtfokus" equipment for adapting motion-picture machines for the use of Mazda lamps, which consists essentially of two parts. One part of the equipment comprises a base which fits into the lamphouse proper. This base supports a lampholder which is adjustable in three directions. The adjustable feature is necessary in order that the filament of the lamp may be brought exactly to the optical center of the system of lenses and mirrors which are ordinarily used in the projection machine. Instead of adjusting the lamp filament to this position by trial, it is adjusted by means of a small telescope on a holder outside of the lamphouse, the image of the filament being brought to a definite position on the grounding glass of the filament by means of cross lines. Any movement of the filament away from the optical center will change the position of the image on the screen, and this affords a definite indication of the accuracy with which the filament is positioned. When the filament has been brought to the correct position, as shown by the focusing jig or telescope, the lamp carrier may be placed in the lamphousing and the filament will be brought to the optical center. This scheme enables an operator to always obtain the very best possible illumination on the screen. Lamps can be changed in a very few seconds by merely removing one holder and replacing another holder in which the lamp has been properly adjusted.

For the Westinghouse Mazda lamps, the manufacturers claim the absence of flicker and perfect projection with alternating current, and due to the steadiness of the light a three-wing shutter can be used. A softer and more pleasing tone is also claimed for pictures projected by these lamps.

Three styles of these lamps are shown—600 watts, 20 amperes for screens not over 12 feet in width and projection not longer than 60 feet; 900 watts, 30 amperes for screens up to 15 feet in width and projection from 75 up to 100 feet.

White A. C. and "Silver Tip" Carbons.

The National Carbon Company, of Cleveland, exhibits in Space 41A its White A. C. special carbons and its "Silver Tip." The White A. C. special motion-picture carbon is designed for alternating current and is sold in sets, a combination consisting of two lowers, each 6 inches in length and one upper 12 inches in length.

With 40 and up to 60 amperes alternating current, the carbon diameters should be five-eighth inches; from 60 and up to 75 amperes three-quarter inches; from 75 and less than 100 amperes, seven-eighth inches.

No new housings are necessary in substituting these carbons for the old A. C. carbons, neither is any special lens necessary and the light given is sufficent, the manufacturers claim, for very long throws. Their noiseless operation is one of the great advantages claimed for them, as the roaring noise frequently characteristic of A. C. operation has been eliminated.

The "Silver Tip" carbons shown are for direct current only. The "Silver Tip" negative is less than one-half the diameter of the positive carbon, and when the arc is struck the "Silver Tip" quickly burns down to a point and the arc remains in one place with no tendency to wander. This does away with the shadowy effects on the screen, as the crater is kept centered at all times. "Spindling" or "needling" is also eliminated. In order to carry the full amount of current without heating, the "Silver Tip" is plated its full length with a strong metallic coating. The manufacturers claim that as a general rule this carbon will not need adjusting in the course of a 1,000-foot reel.

A New Projection Lamp and Regulator.

In Booth No. 22, the General Electric Company shows the different control devices for the regulation of current to be supplied to both the arc motion picture machine and the incandescent lamp motion picture machine—making it possible for the projectionist, by the use of accurate current measuring instruments, to see the actual saving that can be made by the use of the more efficient current control devices, and also by the use of incandescent lamp projection.

This exhibit also contains a Mazda projection lamp which has a capacity of 900 watts, and is rated 30 volts, 30 amperes. The overall length is 10 inches, the bulb being in straight tubular form 2½ inches in diameter, with a light centre length of 4¾ inches; the lamp designed to operate tip up.

In its own optical system this lamp can be used for throws up to 100 feet on a 12 by 16 foot screen with reflecting surface, where the current consumption of the arc displaced does not exceed 60 amperes alternating current or 30 amperes direct current.

This is a new lamp, announced for the first time at this show, and in connection therewith is shown the new Fort Wayne, Type 1, Model B, Compansarc, and the Lynn Automatic Mazda lamp regulator (both products of the General Electric Company), in conjunction with the Excelite of the Nicholas Power Company.

The 30 ampere constant current Mazda lamp regulator is similar to devices in general practice used for current control, and maintains a constant current at 30 amperes without the necessity of any regulation on the part of the projectionist, covering fluctuation in the line voltage between 105 and 125 volts.

A small folder distributed from this booth enumerates thirteen ways in which the projectionist can assist the motion picture industry in its efforts to co-operate with the United States Fuel Administration.

Music for the pictures is recognized as an essential factor in the film industry. Daily the exhibitor is demanding greater perfection in the art. This calls for greater perfection in musical instruments, and especially in the organ.

The American Photo Player Company is especially equipped to give the exhibitor service. The Fotoplayer Organ is one that meets his every requirement and was specially built for filmcraft music. Great attention has been paid to the placing of these organs in order that the proper acoustical effect may prevail throughout the entire theatre. Nothing is more unpleasant to hear than a misplaced instrument. The experts connected with the Fotoplayer test out the acoustic properties of a building before each installation and make sure that the exhibitor will be both pleased and satisfied.

During the film exposition at Madison Square Garden the American Photo Player Company installed one of its best instruments in the Liberty Theatre there. The theatre was continually crowded by admiring musicians and interested exhibitors, while all over the Garden the beautiful tones floated to one's ears and made a favorable impression everywhere.

M. J. Samuels, vice-president of the Photo Player Company, officiated at the theatres, welcoming his many old friends and receiving congratulations from those newly made. The performance of the Fotoplayer was most praiseworthy and in every way conformed to the highest standard required for picture playing.

INDUSTRY TO AID LABOR DEPARTMENT

Producers to Co-operate With Government in Showing Importance to Fighter of Home Worker

THE motion picture industry is making plans to extend the work for the Department of Labor, both by increased use of trailers and lobby displays of posters and by the production of a number of films showing how important to the fighting man is the work that is being done by war workers in shipyards, munitions plants, mines, etc.

Portrayal of modern warfare in its true perspective is to be the slogan of the big motion-picture producers this winter. No longer will the "movie" patron be allowed to go away with the impression that heroic battle and sudden death in France are the only factors in the defeat of Germany, for recognition on the screen is very soon to be accorded the indispensable fighters of the second line—the civilian war workers without whose efforts the prowess of the men in uniform would be futile.

At the instigation of the Department of Labor, a dozen of the largest motion-picture producers in America are now evolving a new type of patriotic scenario, which will make its initial appearance on the screens within the next few months. In forceful manner these scenarios will bring home to the American public the fact that every man and woman who is working faithfully on a war job is doing work that is vital to the winning of the war.

Hero Will Be a Worker.

The workman will be the hero of these films, and their setting will be the great war industries of America—the shipyards, the munition plants, the mines, and the farms. Moreover, there will be no "fake stuff" in these war pictures. The films will be made right in the war plants, showing them as they actually are in full operation.

All of the industrial war scenarios will be built around a definite plot in order to give them greater interest. In one now in preparation the dependency of the soldier on the war worker will be graphically brought out. The central figures are a group of middle-aged workmen engaged in different forms of war industry and their sons on the battle front. By shifting from scene to scene the film will show just how the product of war workers protects the lives of their sons in the trenches.

Trailers and Posters.

In addition to these scenarios all motion picture producers who have been approached have agreed to run special trailers to their current productions advertising the work of the United States Employment Service and other branches of the Department of Labor. While this phase of the campaign has been in operation for some time, it will be greatly extended within the next few weeks.

Moving picture theatres are further co-operating by placing in their lobbies, side by side with the posters of their current releases, the various "speed-up production" posters of the Department of Labor, and others carrying calls for war workers and giving the location of the nearest branch office of the United States Employment Service.

Boys Reserve Directors Praise Work of Screen

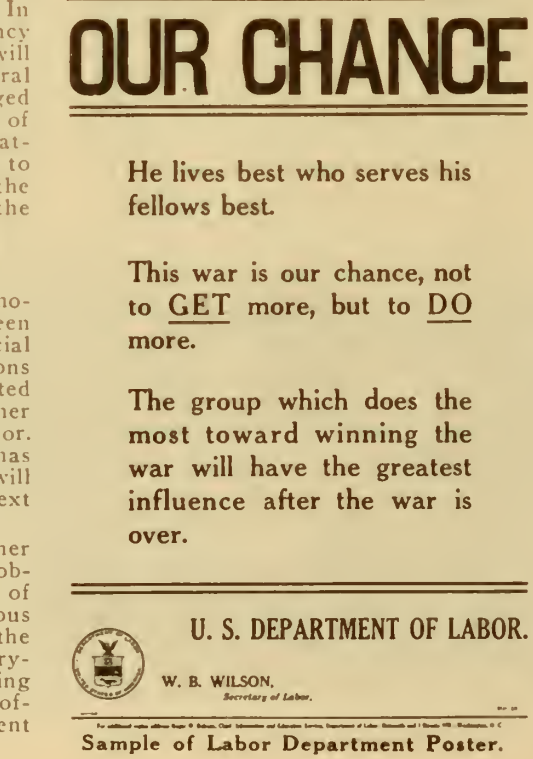
THAT the motion picture industry is truly essential was indicated in Washington on September 20 when the state directors of the United States Boys' Working Reserve gathered for a national conference in the big assembly hall in the new building of the Department of the Interior. The directors were to report how every State in the Union has done its part in training its boys to take the place of the farm and orchard workers who have gone to war. As the climax, there was exhibited a picture made by the Pathe Company from a scenario by the Division of Films, of the Committee on Public Information, called "Solving the Farm Problem of the Nation."

The picture shows how 300,000 city high school boys were rushed through agricultural Plattsburgs and sent into the fields in time to save the harvests. The delegates expressed the opinion that a great nation-wide undertaking has never been more interestingly and successfully presented through the medium of the screen.

"This is one of the most stirring stories of the day," said one of the Government officials, "and this picture gives it to the people in a way that is sure to arouse the deepest enthusiasm and to give us several times three hundred thousand boys for the work to be done next summer."

"Solving the Farm Problem of the Nation," which will be released October 13, is the first of a series of one-reel pictures which Pathe is making under the supervision of the Division of Films. The series is under the general title, "Winning the War." The second release, "Feeding the Fighters," shows where the food for the great army in France is coming from and how it is shipped across the Atlantic. The loading of one of the floating refrigerators that carries more than a million pounds of meat is shown for the first time.

The third of the series, "Making Man Power," gives an insight into some of the most important operations of labor now being carried on, and makes plain some of the problems the Government is called upon to solve.



OUR CHANCE
He lives best who serves his fellows best.
This war is our chance, not to GET more, but to DO more.
The group which does the most toward winning the war will have the greatest influence after the war is over.

Part of Essanay Plant To Do Government Work

GEORGE K. SPOOR, president of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, has turned over a portion of one of the vast Essanay property rooms to Government work. The company is turning out binoculars by the Spoor-Berggren optical laboratory system, a new method of making binoculars just recently patented. The new binocular was submitted to Government officials and approved, and a contract was let for their making at the Essanay plant.

The binocular is so constructed that it is of unusually high power, while at the same time small and compact and easily carried. Under the new process thousands can be turned out daily with but few machines and with little labor.

The making of the binocular in no way interferes with the production of pictures, the three Essanay studios being kept open for this purpose. Beside making special feature productions, Essanay announces it will continue to make its movie marionette pictures and also commercial films.

The latest feature, which now is practically completed, is "Young America," taken from the Cohan & Harris stage success. The release will be announced shortly.

Essanay has just completed its first series of ten movie marionette pictures, which are a distinct novelty, no similar pictures ever having been produced.

Rothapfel Theatres Sell Many Bonds.

That the Rivoli and the Rialto are right behind the Liberty Loan Drive is shown by the fact that the two Rothapfel theatres up to October 4 had already collected over $82,000 in subscriptions. Prominent motion picture stars appear on the screens at both houses every night with original appeals that are particularly effective. On the night of October 3 William S. Hart spoke in person from the stage of the Rialto, and his address resulted in a gratifying brisk sale.

Blackton To Do Specials Only.

According to his recent announcement, J. Stuart Blackton will make no more program feature films to be issued as regular subjects on a routine program of releases. From now on his time will be devoted to longer and more ambitious productions, handled under specially arranged distribution plans. He expects to present four and perhaps six subjects a year.

Frank Smith in First Battle.

Frank Smith, the first son of Hollywood Studio Manager W. S. Smith, to enter Uncle Sam's service, wrote his father last week that he had been in his first battle and had "laughed, sweated, sworn and cried." Private Smith was a member of the 143d artillery and later was transferred to the 19th.

TRAVEL FAR TO "GET" FIFTH AVENUE

Bryant Washburn and Director Donald Crisp of Paramount Make Hurried Hike from West in Search of Correct Atmosphere for "Venus in the East"

By Edward Weitzel

WHEN an author opens his story in Ax Creek, Colorado, and later on sends his hero into a Fifth Avenue jeweler's after a $250,000 string of pearls nothing will satisfy a conscientious director except a trip to New York in order that the exterior scenes shall have the correct local color. That is why Director Donald Crisp, Bryant

Donald Crisp.

Washburn and Margery Wilson stepped off a Limited at the Grand Central Station, one day last week, after a fast trip from Los Angeles, and have been taking scenes in upper Fifth Avenue doorways and on top of lower Fifth Avenue buses whenever it was possible to elude the vigilance of the officer on the beat. Most New Yorkers are still camera shy and object to working as extras in a moving picture, unless they collect union rates. One lynx-eyed member of the police force, who took up his stand at the corner of Tenth Street and struck a pose expressing considerable suspicion and full determination to do his duty if he found that the camera pointing over the windshield of the Crisp-Washburn auto was an infernal machine, will be greatly surprised when his wife comes home from a neighboring picture theatre at some future time and demands to known why he didn't tell her "he'd been actin' in the movies."

Crisp Shoots a Suspicious "Cop."

The cameraman noticed the officer first.

"Do you think that policeman will stop us from shooting a bus?" he asked of Director Crisp. The director studied the officer intently for a moment. "I guess not—but we'll shoot him first—the way he keeps glancing at us fits right into the scene where Mr. Washburn hails the bus. Get him before he moves away." The cameraman obeyed orders.

Wallace Irwin's story, "Venus in the East," had many readers when published in novel form. The adventures of Buddy McNair and Martha Harrison and Mrs. Pat Doubonet and the pearl necklace take Buddy and Martha to a number of the most familiarly known places in New York City. An invitation to accompany the Paramount party on a day's picturemaking was accepted by the writer. The experience proved novel and interesting, as well as a very comfortable method of securing an article.

Crowd Quickly Gathers.

The start was made from the Famous Players studio on Fifty-sixth street. Two autos were used to convey the party, a canary colored Rolls-Royce being utilized for the private car of the wealthy Mr. McNair. The first stop was made at the Plaza Hotel. According to the story, after Buddy discovers supercyanide and comes to New York to spend money, he puts up at the ultra-fashionable hostelry overlooking Central Park at Fifty-ninth Street. Several scenes were made showing young Mr. McNair entering and leaving the hotel by the front entrance, which faces the Pulitzer Fountain. Director Crisp and his assistants worked quietly and quickly, but a curious crowd gathered on each side of the dead line before the first shot was completed.

Unconscious Comedians.

Making moving pictures on Fifth Avenue is sufficiently unusual to attract the passer-by of every type. Most persons show childlike amusement when the actors commence to rehearse the business of a scene. The majority of the onlookers do not seem to understand that it is serious work they are watching, and the expression on their faces indicates that they are wondering how normal human beings can put paint on their cheeks and act so silly in public. To the occupant of a back seat of a limousine drawn up at the curb, they are "as good as a show" themselves, and the number of unconscious comedians to be seen among them is surprisingly large. One of these days a genre painter of the Frost type will take such a scene for a subject, and the men and women who gaze at the actors with smiles that register everything from honest wonderment to supercilious amusement may discover that they are themselves quite amusing—to other people.

Los Angeles Has New Booster.

The next stop was made on one of the side streets up in the Seventies. While the auto was covering the distance, Bryant Washburn was proving that an adopted son of the state of California and a householder in the film city of the West can be as loyal to Los Angeles as the most eloquent of her native born population.

"There is no place like it in the world!" he answered, in reply to a remark about his admiration for the West Coast. "Why, the roses were in bloom when I left. The front porch of my house is covered with them. It didn't take my wife and me but a few weeks to decide that we wanted to make California our home for the rest of our lives. That's the place to bring up children. My boy can play outdoors the year around. I'm homesick already, and I don't care how soon we complete the New York scenes and start back."

"Shall I put what you have just said in my article?"

"Why not?"

"It will be letting the cat out of the bag."

"That I'm married?—I'm more than willing. I have my own convictions on that subject. It will never hurt any screen actor to have it known that he's a family man. I love children and I'm never going to appear in a picture that they will not be permitted to see."

A Portable Dressing Room.

The cross street scenes were taken in the doorway of an English basement house, and among the interested spectators were twin babies in an ivory colored perambulator. Director Crisp stopped to admire them while the cameraman was putting in a fresh film. The director also is a married man.

The English basement house represents the residence of Martha Harrison, and the scenes taken tell of that happy event in Buddy's life when he first walked home with Martha and found out where she lived. Buddy's look of admiration as he gazed after the girl who had disappeared through the doorway and his satisfied glance as he turned and started down town were repeated by a sympathetic housemaid who was hanging out of a second-story window across the street.

As soon as Margery Wilson, the Martha of the cast, was through her part of the scene she took Bryant Washburn's place in the auto which carried the writer.

"Mr. Washburn," she explained, "is using the other machine as a dressing-room. I hope there are no detectives in the crowd around here."

"Why not?"

"If they see him get into the auto, wearing one suit of clothes, and get out again, wearing a different suit, they'll arrest him as a suspicious character. A limousine makes a handy portable dressing-room, but it has its drawbacks."

It must be an odd sensation to be riding down Fifth Avenue and changing one's attire at the same time—even if the curtains are drawn.

Sub-Titles in Screen Drama Give Finish to Subject as Do Draperies to Stage Play

THAT it is important to develop efficiency in an organization created to produce photoplays has long been recognized. It is also true that efficiency methods operate to create a better product at reduced expenses. Still efficiency in the nature of saving money can also be developed to a point where it makes for an output that lacks certain essential characteristic of successful merchandise—successful in the sense that the public see something that unconsciously creates a feeling there is a lack of an indefinable quality, which for a better term we call finish. It is the same feeling one has who is on the verge of purchasing a fine piece of china and, just as we are about to exchange our money for the shopkeeper's merchandise, we detect a rough spot or an almost invisible break in the lacquer.

No effort is made to limit expense, so long as it is in the range of reason, in the making of a picture with a combination of a fine cast and a corking good story. Yet how often have we seen the cheeseparing policy step in when the studio work is finished and utterly destroy the fine work of directors, actors and scenario writers by cheap, ineffective and inartistic decorations used in connection with the titles.

Sub-Titles Part of Stage Decorations.

In the production of a play it is the stage settings that either give distinction to the entertainment or classify it as an indifferent or commonplace presentation. The right sort of furniture, rugs, draperies and bric-a-brac unconsciously please the eye to such an extent that we go away from the theatre feeling that we have seen something that has pleased us, even though the subject matter of the drama was not entirely to our liking. We sum it all up as being in good taste. With screen productions the manner in which the titles and subtitles are shown to us is as much a part of the stage decorations as those actually used in the studio when the story was filmed.

Proper efforts should be expended in not alone working out the decorative effects in the matter of borders and backgrounds for titles, and in addition the lettering should have no little mental energy in creating the atmosphere of good taste.

World Pictures, realizing the tremendous importance of proper titling of pictures has, instead of having this work done on contract by outside artists, created a department consisting of highly talented artists. Instead of waiting until the picture is finished before beginning work on titles and the decorations that go with them, the artists are given the original story from which the scenario is created as well as the continuity, and when the picture is brought over for its first projection after the director has assembled it, they begin to work out the effects and motifs. In this way these artists are as much a part of the production department as the directors, the actors and the continuity writers. Consequently, to this factor World Pictures officials ascribe to their productions that element of good taste so necessary to finished products.

Walter A. Morton Becomes Over-Sea K. of C. Secretary

SOMEWHERE on a well known ocean Walter A. Morton is proceeding to France destined to become a field secretary for the Knights of Columbus, an appointment that will bring gratification to the legion of friends Mr. Morton has made during the years he has spent as an actor and director in motion pictures. His photo-playing activities have been many and varied during the past ten years, and the record of his skill as a director stands in many well-known productions for prominent producers.

About ten years ago Mr. Morton entered pictures as an actor with the Edison forces, playing heavies. Forecasting his present patriotic activities Mr. Morton appeared in a presentation based on the Boston Tea Party, assuming the role of John Paul Jones. Later on he switched to Horsley's producing forces as leading man in western dramas. Then he became a director for Nestor, going to Universal when the amalgamation of Nestor was accomplished by "Big U."

His next engagement was with Pathe as director of two-reelers, Universal again securing his services as a producer on the West Coast. "The Hazards of Helen" series was then undertaken by Kalem, and Mr. Morton was secured as a member of the company. Then he turned his attention to directing comedies for Keystone, at Los Angeles. Mr. Morton later wrote and directed the serial produced by Frank Tichenor for General Film Company under the title, "Daughter of Uncle Sam."

Incidental to these engagements in moving pictures Mr. Morton has given his attention to numerous stage presentations as director and producer, but for the most part his time, during the past ten years, has been devoted to the screen. His personal integrity and force of character are substantially attested in his appointment as a Knights of Columbus field secretary, a position that carries an important evidence of trust and confidence.

Elinor Shows How to Save Sugar.

While the rest of the stars of filmdom were making Liberty Loan pictures, Elinor Field, who plays in Strand-Mutual comedies, made a picture for Food Administrator Hoover. It is "A Tea Time Tip" and has to do with the waste of sugar in the tea cup. The subject appeals to the American public to stir its tea, to use only what sugar it needs and to get the full benefit of all its uses. The film was considered such an effective bit of food conservation propaganda that it was included in Screen Telegram No. 62 released, by Mutual October 1.

Kane Visits Select Exchanges.

General Manager Arthur S. Kane left Monday, September 30, for a week's trip to nearby exchanges. Tuesday and Wednesday Mr. Kane spent in Buffalo, where he took up routine matters with Branch Manager Sherman S. Webster and extended the glad hand to some of Select's contract holders in that city.

Mr. Kane arrived in Pittsburgh Thursday and spent that day and Friday at the Select exchange, where he was in conference with Branch Manager Leo F. Levison.

This is the first of several trips to nearby branches which Select's general manager proposes to make in the near future. During October and November Mr. Kane expects to be able to visit practically all of the branches in the East and Middle West.

Mountain Scenery in Glaum Story.

Most of the beautiful mountain scenes appearing in "The Goddess of Lost Lake," starring Louise Glaum, and distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, were taken 5,500 to 7,000 feet above the sea, and are among the most impressive scenes ever incorporated in a screen play. A company of twenty-six people and eight horses journeyed into the San Bernardino mountains for the scenes. They were conveyed by autos as far as machines could penetrate, an old mountain buckboard carrying them the rest of the distance.

NEWSPAPERS CUT OUT PICTURE NEWS

New Orleans Publishers Order Elimination of Reviews on All but One Day a Week—Exhibitors Protest

FOLLOWING the suggestion from the Government to the newspapers that radical reduction be made in the amount of reading matter used in the interest of the conservation of white paper, the Publishers' Association of New Orleans has ordered the elimination of all reviews and notices of motion pictures, except on Sunday, in all of the papers published in the city. Stage productions fare a little better under advanced rates of advertising, but the reduction has been drastic. The dramatic entertainments get one review each, mid-week, but space is conserved on these. The motion picture exhibitors resent the new rule, and a strong protest is going up against its enforcement.

Both the Times-Picayune and the Item have featured motion picture news for the past two years, and especially on Sunday have elaborate layouts been devoted to the motion picture theatres.

The Sunday "spreads" have also been cut to the lowest requirements of current shows and the situation has developed complications. Close to 50,000 patrons attend the motion picture theatres in New Orleans every day, and on Sunday that number is largely increased. These patrons have been in the habit of looking to the daily newspapers for the local reviews of the shows, and they have taken the newspaper estimates of quality in the selection of their entertainment for the day. Protests were numerous, and the publishers frankly admitted that perhaps a mistake had been made, and methods of modifying the order in such a manner that its drastic features might be mollified were under serious discussion.

The exhibitors made the mistake of attempting to punish the newspapers by reduction or elimination of their advertising, with the result that the publishers suspected an attempt at coercion and were inclined to become correspondingly obdurate. The matter is still a source of contention, but everybody concerned is confident a satisfactory solution will be reached. Meanwhile the publishers are of the opinion that tons of white paper might be saved if the "press matter" which seldom finds its way into the columns of the newspapers were to be curtailed, and the suggestion may be carried to the proper department in Washington.

Hart to Take New York Scenes.

Before the return to California of William S. Hart, who is now touring the principal cities in the three leading Eastern Federal Reserve Districts in the interest of the Fourth Liberty Loan, he will make a number of scenes in New York for his forthcoming Artcraft picture," Branding Broadway." Before leaving Hollywood, Hart had finished all the production work on the new picture except that involving the New York scenes, all the interiors having been completed at the Hart studio.

In the party which accompanied the Artcraft star East are his sister, Miss Mary Hart; E. H. Allen, business manager of the Hart productions; Gerald Duffy, publicity director, and Joe August and Dwight Warren, respectively cameraman and still photographer. Many of the New York scenes will be filmed in the city's most crowded districts, in one instance the westerner asking the policeman at Fifth avenue and Forty-second street to lead him through the traffic at that point.

The star expects to return to Hollywood sometime before November 1.

Tuchman to Institute Economies in Exchanges

AL TUCHMAN, who holds a record for pinch-hitting in all kinds of important business for the Universal, and who is now head of the supply and purchasing department, has left on a tour of the exchanges. His present task is to inaugurate efficiency measures calculated to carry out the Government's desire for conservation of supplies.

Mr. Tuchman is equipped with plans to regulate lobby supply service provided by exchanges for their exhibitors. He will be able greatly to increase the efficiency of this service, while at the same time reducing the waste of material.

Universal is anxious to have the exhibitors taken care of with the most complete supply service possible. At the same time it appreciates that there is room for vast improvement in the transmission, intensive distribution and handling of supplies in the direction of economy.

Mr. Tuchman will be absent from the home office about six weeks. His trip will take him to every exchange in the country handling Universal products.

This is one of the first steps to be taken in the film industry to carry out the recent request issued by the Government for conservation. Previously Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal, issued strict general orders to the production departments of the company requiring the immediate reduction of waste. This has been followed by an efficiency system in the coast studios which has cut the amount of labor and raw materials used in film making to an amazing extent. It is expected that the conservation now under way in all departments of the company will bring about the saving of many thousands of dollars.

Washington Exchangemen Get Together for Keeps

THE manager of the local exchange of the World Film Company, R. B. Smeltzer, was unanimously elected to the presidency of the Washington Exchange Managers' Association at a meeting held in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce on September 30. The election followed a meeting held in the Tea Cup Inn, which proved to be a most enjoyable affair.

The association heretofore has been operating as a temporary organization under the chairmanship of Sidney B. Lust, of Super Films Attractions, Inc. The intention had been, when the organization was formed in this way, to let it run along for some months to see how it would work out. A great deal of enthusiasm has been put into the work; many things for the betterment of the industry have been accomplished, with the result that it was decided to now form a permanent organization.

A summary of what the association had accomplished during its rather brief existence was given by Oscar A. Morgan, manager of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange. No organization can begin to give better service to the industry as a whole, as well as to the individual home offices represented by the managers, than this one.

Smeltzer Is Elected President.

R. E. Wilson, of the Greater Vitagraph; R. B. Smeltzer, of the World, and Abe Dresner, of the Exhibitors' Co-operative Exchange, were appointed a committee to nominate new officers for the association. Good-naturedly their slate was rejected, and Mr. Smeltzer found himself elevated to the presidency; Abe Dresner became vice-president; Oscar Morgan will continue as secretary, and Sam Flax, of Metro, as treasurer.

An executive committee with Sidney B. Lust, chairman; Mr. Rogers, of Fox Film Corporation, and S. E. Kent, of the Triangle Distributing Corporation, as members, was appointed. The duties of this committee are to be many. The president and secretary will be members ex officio. It will be these men who will hold a meeting just prior to the regular meeting of the association and devise a program for the evening that will contemplate saving time. To it also will be submitted all grievances, and it will have power to act for the association in emergencies.

A resolution was adopted thanking the retiring chairman, Mr. Lust, for his splendid work in getting the association into running order.

Edward A. Crane, Washington representative for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, and E. R. Champion, manager of the Pathe exchange, were welcomed to membership.

FILM COLONY LAUNCHES LOAN DRIVE

D. W. Griffith Unveils Victory Tank and Mary Pickford Christens It—Many Big Subscriptions

THE members of the film industry of Los Angeles and the West Coast launched their big Liberty Loan drive on Saturday, Sept. 28, with their usual flourish and enthusiasm.

The big tank in Central Park, that will be headquarters for the drive, was unveiled by D. W. Griffith and christened by Mary Pickford, who broke a bottle of water from the Owens River on the side of the tank with the following words:

"I christen thee Victory. May thy name signify the outcome of the drive."

After this Mary Pickford made a remarkably forcible and telling patriotic appeal to the multitude that packed Central Park to the gates, and the drive was on.

Among the first buyers were D. W. Griffith and Lois Weber, each of whom subscribed $30,000. Mary Pickford took $20,000. Frank Keenan started the bidding for the autographed receipt for the highest subscription which is in the shape of a great volume containing the signatures of the President, many Government officials, and the autographed photographs of all the prominent stars of the screen. It is expected that the book will bring in a very large subscription before it is disposed of.

Mary Pickford and D. W. Griffith signed receipts for bond buyers all afternoon, and at night the Motion Picture Directors' Association took charge of the meeting. The directors were introduced to the crowd and then took their places in booths placed here and there in the park, each booth representing one of the countries of the Allies.

The film people will continue their work until the last day of the drive, and in addition to the tank meetings the work will be carried to the theatres and exchanges. All sales made at theatres, studios and exchanges will be turned in at the central office at the tank Victory, where they will be credited to the efforts of the film people.

The following studios will be in charge of the tank meetings in Central Park for each day and night of the drive.

Sept. 30.—Charlie Chaplin studio.

Oct. 1.—Clara Kimball Young.

Oct. 2.—Vitagraph studio, W. S. Smith chairman.

Oct. 3.—Metro-Hampton studios, Joseph Engel chairman.

Oct. 4.—Hart, Christie and Strand Comedies, and Francis Ford Company, Charles Christie chairman.

Oct. 5.—Famous Players-Lasky studios, C. B. De Mille chairman.

Oct. 7.—Brunton studios, Frank Keenan chairman.

Oct. 8.—Sunset studios, George Fawcett chairman.

Oct. 9.—Douglas Fairbanks.

Oct. 10.—Fannie Ward and Pathe players.

Oct. 11.—Ince studio, Thomas H. Ince chairman.

Oct. 12.—2 P. M., Liberty Day, Triangle and American studios. 7:30 P. M., Motion Picture Producers Association, W. J. Reynolds chairman.

Oct. 14.—Universal and L-Ko studios.

Oct. 15.—Sennett studio.

Oct. 16.—Julian Eltinge and Lois Weber studios.

Oct. 17.—William Fox and Lehrman Comedy studios.

Oct. 18.—Theatre and Film Exchange Men, Laboratory and Accessory Men.

Oct. 19.—2 P. M., Roscoe Arbuckle. 7:30 P. M., closing night, Motion Picture War Service Association.

No Discrimination Against Women.

Charges that City Electrician Manahan is discriminating against women seeking licenses as motion picture machine operators were made at a meeting of the Theatre Owners' Association of Southern California last week. A committee, composed of President Frank A. McDonald of the association, Leo Ryan, who has a school for the instruction of women as motion picture machine operators, and Mrs. Estelle Lawton Lindsey, ex-councilwoman, was appointed to wait upon Mr. Manahan and find out why women who have applied have not been given licenses.

Mr. Manahan replied, that when women make good they will be given licenses as readily as men, and stated that out of nine girls who applied for licenses six showed sufficient knowledge in their written examinations to be given an examination at the machine.

"Three of these girls," said Mr. Manahan, "have been examined at the machine, and probably through nervousness did not do very well, but we are willing to give them another examination. During this same period three men applied for licenses and did not pass the written examination. I think the time has come for women to take up men's work, and my office is not discriminating against them."

Neither Mr. Manahan nor Chief Inspector H. N. Beecher are members of the Operators' Union.

A Liberty Bond Rodeo.

The Douglas Fairbanks studio lot has been the training ground for a regular wild west rodeo, which will take place on the Fairbanks estate in Beverly Hills on Oct. 6. Besides the wild west riding and other rodeo stunts there will be boxing matches between Bull Montana, Walter Miller and other local pugilists. The admission fee will be $1 and a written promise to buy a Liberty Bond. The cash taken in at the gate will go to the National War Camp Community Fund, which organization buys all the athletic equipment for the soldiers, both on this side and in France.

Another New Baby Star.

The latest baby star to be announced by an enterprising producer is little Georgia Bess Pembleton, who left Los Angeles with her mother last week for New York, to confer with Eastern capitalists who have promised to finance the new venture. Two stories, written specially for the little star, have already been secured for production. Georgia was formerly connected with the Orpheum vaudeville circuit, and played a part with Helen Keller in her new film production.

Laemmle in Town.

Carl Laemmle arrived in Los Angeles on Sept. 28 and was met at the train by members of the studio force at Universal City. Mr. Laemmle was taken to the plant in Cahuenga Pass, where he began at once on the business in hand, which concerns a number of new productions to be launched, and which will probably keep the producer in the West for several weeks.

De Mille Called to Fort Sill.

Cecil B. De Mille received an urgent request by telegraph from the War Department last week to go to Fort Sill, Okla., in connection with war propaganda work. De Mille was cutting "The Squaw Man" when the message came, and he dropped the work, which will be resumed on his return, to go and attend to the more important war work. The Lasky Home Guards had planned a big picnic and military drill at the newly acquired studio ranch for Sunday, but the event was postponed until the Sunday following Mr. De Mille's return. The nature of the work to be done at Fort Sill has not been divulged by Mr. De Mille.

Motion Pictures for High School.

The Redonda High School at Redonda Beach, California, has instituted a course in educational motion pictures, which will be mainly patriotic in nature, and will depict the part the United States is playing in the present world struggle. Other general war news, travel and industrial films will be used occasionally. The pictures will be shown in the school auditorium every Friday evening.

Chaplin Preview.

"Shoulder Arms," the new Charles Chaplin comedy for the First National Exhibitors, was given two previews last week before it was shipped to New York. The first showing took place at the Iris Theatre in Hollywood and the second was at the Chaplin Studio projection room. A few invited guests, consisting of newspaper representatives and trade journal correspondents, and the studio employes, formed the audience. This latest comedy has for a theme the great war in Europe, and if there is anything of a humorous nature that could happen in a trench or on the battle field that Chaplin has not put in his new comedy it is because the First National Exhibitors contract with the comedian stipulates that his films shall not exceed three reels in length.

Pallette Plays Atmosphere.

Eugene Pallette, who joined the aviation branch of the war service not long ago, stopped off in Los Angeles on his way to a Texas training camp and visited the various studios in which he had worked during his career as a film actor. At the Metro studio Bert Lytell persuaded Pallette to be "atmosphere" in a scene where his natty aviation suit showed off to special advantage.

Pneumonia Takes Hal August.

Frank T. Hallack, known in the films as Hal August, died of pneumonia at the Great Lakes training school for sailors late in September, and his body was sent to Los Angeles, his home, for burial. Hallack was one of the popular young actors in the film colony of Los Angeles before he enlisted in the Navy several months ago, and both he and his wife have many friends among the West Coast players. He was twenty-eight years old at the time of his death.

Ince Films Soldiers Relatives.

While 30,000 people thronged Balboa Park near San Diego on a recent Sunday afternoon, Thomas H. Ince filmed the first of a series of moving pictures of the relatives of soldier boys in France, which will be shown through the medium of the Y. M. C. A. For nearly two hours a stream of people passed in front of the moving picture camera, while Ince stood beside the camera and exhorted them to smile, wave their handkerchiefs, or hold up the babies so that the young fathers "over there" would recognize their children. The scene was most impressive. And after it was all over it was computed that 11,000 persons had passed before the camera stand.

New Method of Film Tinting.

A new method of tinting pictures has been discovered by the Sanborn Laboratories at Culver City, and one of the first moving picture stars to take advantage of the invention is Julian Eltinge, who will use the process to stint some of the scenes in "Over the Rhine," now being filmed by Fred J. Balshofer.

Stolen Automobile Recovered.

An automobile belonging to Anna Nilsson, which was stolen one day last week, was returned within a few days by Detective John W. Powell, of the theft bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California, after having been traced to Bakersfield, where the thief had abandoned it.

Bought Bonds Early.

To "Over the Rhine" studio, where Julian Eltinge is finishing his first picture, believes in being forehanded in bond buying. The entire studio force, from President Fred Balshofer down, numbering more than fifty persons, registered their patriotism by buying bonds forty-eight hours before the Liberty Loan drive started.

Eastern Film Man Here.

Sidney Franklyn, of New York and Filmland generally, arrived in Los Angeles last week, accompanied by his wife. Mr. Franklyn says that he is taking a sort of vacation, but is open to proposition of the state rights variety, and wants to get in touch with films suitable for export trade.

Studio Shorts

WALLACE WORSLEY has begun production on the Kitty Gordon picture, "The Nurse's Story," from a novel by Adele Bleneau. Worsley has been directing Louise Glaum.

Enid Bennett's mother, Mrs. L. N. Bennett, was hostess at a luncheon given for the British Ambulance Society on Wednesday.

Jesse L. Lasky and Henry Lehrman have the honor of being the first subscribers to the Fourth Liberty Loan in Hollywood. Lasky subscribed $10,000 and Lehrman $5,000. These purchases were made two days before the drive began.

When Priscilla Dean was detained at the studio and had to cancel an engagement to make a personal appearance at the Symphony Theatre William E. Wing volunteered to fill the gap by making a short talk on scenarios.

Olive Thomas entertained three heroes from France, all aces of the French air service, at the Triangle studios one day last week.

Wedgwood Nowell has been cast in the "heavy" role in Kitty Gordon's first picture for the United Picture Theatres.

Mack Swain, George White and Ethel Teare are the leading players in a Sunshine comedy being directed by Fred Fishback, a new director at the Lehrman studio.

Charles Chaplin took a short vacation at Catalina Island upon completion of "Shoulder Arms."

For two hours at the Pin Ton, September 26, Louise Lovely autographed photographs, which were sold for the benefit of the Stage Women's War Relief.

Frank Keenan shared honors with Mary Pickford and D. W. Griffith on opening day of the Fourth Liberty Loan drive in Central Park. Keenan was chairman of the day, introducing the speakers and was otherwise a leading factor in the activities of the Motion Picture War Service Association.

Taylor Holmes has taken a house in Hollywood for the winter, which his family, consisting of himself, his wife and three children, consider far superior to a hotel for comfort and freedom.

Al Christie has ambitions of directing a drum and bugle corps at the Hollywood Officers' Training School, and now each new applicant is taxed a certain amount of money, which is to be applied to the purchasing of bugles and drums.

Frank Lloyd, with a force of assistants, left September 30 for New York, where he will make a new picture with William Farnum, following which star and director probably will return to California for the winter months.

Billie Rhodes and her company will travel with a circus during the next week or two in order that her director may film a number of scenes with circus atmosphere for a forthcoming feature.

William Faversham, who has contracted to appear in "The Silver King," for the Famous Players-Lasky Company, is expected in Los Angeles some time this fall to film the production at the Lasky plant.

Nina Wilcox Putnam, writer for the Saturday Evening Post and other publications, has arrived in Los Angeles from New York, and will make her home in the West for a time, writing original stories for Triangle stars.

Tom Mix and his famous horse, Blue Devil, made personal appearances at the Kinema Theatre during the run of "Mr. Logan, U. S. A."

Cecil B. De Mille was recently elected one of the directors of the Commercial National Bank in Los Angeles.

D. W. Griffith and his company, including Lillian Gish, Robert Harron and other players, have been making scenes for an Arteraft picture at San Diego.

Herbert Heyes is playing the leading male role in the Helen Keller production.

Charlie Pike, Harry Sherman, William Desmond, Harry Garson and Sidney Cohen, Kitty Gordon's manager, have left in a body for New York. Mr. Cohen will take up his commission in the camera service of the Government, and Bill Desmond will look into a few propositions from film magnates and one from a stage magnate.

Harry Hilliard will share leading man honors with William Stowell in Dorothy Phillips picture, "Destiny." Robert Anderson, the Monsieur Cuckoo of "Hearts of the World," is also cast in an important role.

Robert Ellis, recent leading man of the Morosco Stock Company, is to play opposite May Allison in a coming Metro feature.

Florence Reed is expected to come to Los Angeles in December to produce a series of pictures for the United Picture Theatres at the Brunton studios.

Jack Conway, Triangle actor-director, has acquired a mining claim near Bishop, Cal., where he will spend a few months as per advice of his physician to live in a higher altitude than Los Angeles.

Lillian Walker, Julian Eltinge and Anna Nilsson and other film stars visited Red Cross shops, making addresses and entertaining the guests, during the past week.

John Cossar, formerly of the Essanay Company in Chicago, has been cast in a forthcoming Ruth Clifford Bluebird production.

Mary Anderson is Bert Lytell's leading woman in his new picture for Metro.

Hall Returns to Edit Screen Telegram.

Ray L. Hall, who was loaned to the Government for service in the Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information in July, has returned to the Screen Telegram to resume his duties as news editor. While in the service of the Government Mr. Hall organized the department under him as manager of production, and handled the issuance of the Official War Review.

Mr. Hall began his work on the Screen Telegram at the headquarters of the reel at the New York Mutual offices last week. It is said that his successor in the Division of Films will be officially announced later.

Trinity Church-Yard in Metro Picture.

Trinity Church will be one of the many unusual scenes in "Five Thousand an Hour," the Metro play starring Hale Hamilton. The scene in which the church and church-yard are shown was taken from offices situated on the opposite side of Broadway. Permission was given to Director Ralph W. Ince to set up his camera in the broad windows of the offices, from where a wonderful view of the church and the passing thousands on the street below was photographed.

RUBBERNECKING IN FILMLAND

Los Angeles Correspondent Mixes Pathos with Humor in Story of Visit to a Hospital Location

By Giebler

ONE of the reasons that this installment of Rubbernecking is not dished up in the usual style is that Gladys Brockwell said: "I don't see how you can write anything funny about a hospital."

Another reason is that Director Edward J. Le Saint, who believes in realism and wants his movies all gummed up with actual atmosphere, insisted on shooting the scenes in Miss Brockwell's new play in front of a real hospital instead of having the property men build up a fake one on the lot.

When Miss Brockwell doubted my ability to write anything funny about a hospital, her remarks carried the flattering implication that there might have been something funny about previous Rubbernecking, and I got all fussed up with false pride and said I could write funny things about a crutch if I wanted to, and accepted her invitation to go out on location with the Le Saint company with the resolve to dope out something especially hilarious—real rib-tickling stuff.

It looked like a big week for Rubbernecking, too, before that trip; a week especially rich in happenings and ripe in incident, but when I got to stirring it all together, it just wouldn't jell in the usual manner. The shadow of that hospital was over everything.

Shadow Fades a Little Bit Here.

There was the incident of the stage-struck society lady of Hollywood who knew perfectly well that she would make a hit in the movies if she had a chance; and of Casting Director Haskins, of the Julian Eltinge studio, giving her the chance; and of her bringing an onion along in her make-up box in case there might be something of an emotional nature in her bit, and of her getting angry and shedding more tears than the biggest bermuda that ever grew would have produced because some of "them hateful movie people" laughed at her.

And then there was the private showing of Charlie Chaplin's new film that was held at the Iris Theatre in Hollywood at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and a large number of prominent film people attending, including Douglas Fairbanks, John Fairbanks and Mrs. John, Kenneth McGaffey and his wife, Rob Wagner, the writer, and Mildred Harris, Loie Weber and Phillips Smalley, and Billy Keefe, T. L. Tally, Mabel Condon and Bessie Love, John and Mrs. John Jasper, and Edward and Mrs. Edward Biby (Ed is Charlie's new press agent), and everybody pleased to the utmost and saying fine things about the film.

Exclamation Furniture Sounds Recent.

And there was Clara Kimball Young's new dressing room out at the Sunset studio, very fine and filled with Italian period furniture, although I can't understand why, if they want to call that kind of furniture after any of the punctuation marks, they don't call it exclamation furniture, because folks always exclaim "How beautiful!" "How exquisite!" and things like that when they see it.

All of this stuff would have made good copy under ordinary circumstances, and with a little slap-stick business here and there might have got a laugh or so, if it hadn't been for the hospital.

It was not the scenes Le Saint and his company made at the hospital. There was nothing sad in them, just some action with Gladys Brockwell, made up as a nurse, and William Scott as a young medical interne, and Little Francis Carpenter and Virginia Lee Corbin and the clever Messenger kids.

It wasn't the action, it was the location.

Movie stuff doesn't move me to any great extent, anyway. I've watched some of the most heartrending scenes ever made and never turned a hair. I've seen some of the most celebrated heavy guys of the films at their worst. I have heard Frank Campeau hiss his cruel sentences into the shell-like ear of the persecuted heroine; I've seen Harry Northrup's best and most cruel sneer hitting on all cylinders at once; I've seen aged couples turned out of the old homestead by the heartless holders of movie mortgages by the dozen; I've stood right behind the camera when the helpless heroines sank down on the rich man's doorstep while the snowflakes (real snow, sometimes) drifted down like a pitiless white pall on their peroxided curls.

It was not the action being staged in front of the hospital. It was the hospital itself.

Patients May Have Thought Show Funny.

It was a whale of a place, that hospital. One building must have had a hundred windows, and at every window a sick man, or a sick woman, or a sick kid looking out at the movie people full of life and health and happiness, making pictures there on the lawn.

And on a long bridge that connected this house of a hundred sad windows with still another house just like it were wheel chairs filled with the broken, the maimed, the lame and the halt.

And Gladys Brockwell looked up at them and said:

"The poor things. It is the only show many of them have had for months, and the last show many of them will ever have."

How could a chap write slapstick stuff with her making a remark like that?

That sob stuff simply got into everything.

There was the incident of Doug Fairbanks going down to the beach to fill a bottle from the wild waves because a little kid in Vermont wrote him a letter saying that he had never seen an ocean, but as he had some water from the Atlantic would Doug please send him a bottle of ocean water from the Pacific, so he could see if the two oceans looked alike.

That might have been made funny, but it didn't sound funny when I came to think about it. Poor little tyke, there are lots of kids whose parents can't take them to the seashore, and who in the world should a little kid in Vermont ask to do him a favor like that if not good old Doug, everybody's friend?

There was something that happened there at the hospital that would have been funny anywhere else. Le Saint's scenario called for all the kids he had along on the trip to represent patients in a hospital.

Gladys Brockwell as Just a Plain Cross Nurse.

A Thrilling Moment in Mumble Peg.

One child had an arm in a sling; another was bandaged as to leg, and one of the little Messenger girls had the pleasure of sitting in a lovely wheel-chair all the time.

Children Compete for Crutches.

That was awfully hard on the other kids, of course, but they were good little actors and understood that everybody coudn't have a nice part like that. There was only one pair of crutches in the outfit, and of course, sharp competition for them.

Little Francis Carpenter tried for an hour to get possession of them, and finally, when it came his turn, he raised his hands to heaven and exclaimed in a fine dramatic voice, "At last!" Then he grabbed the crutches and placed them under his arms and hobbled away over the lawn, a perfect simulation of a little cripple.

Nurse Alone Is Gay.

Now there was something that might have been funny about a crutch, but it didn't get over with any of us because just at that moment some one —I think it was Mrs. Le Saint, who had come along to watch her husband work—called attention to the fact that the breezes that blew over the beds of poppies and scarlet sage carried the scent of medicine and disinfectant instead of the sweet breath of flowers on its wings.

It was a sad party, and when Miss Brockwell, Billy Scott, Walter de Coucy, Roy Irwin and a hospital nurse—who came out to see why it was that the movie players didn't all wear yellow clothes like she had been led to believe—tried to liven things up by staging a game of mumble peg, it didn't do any good, and everybody, but the nurse, who was used to hospitals, looked as solemn as owls, and I came away from there.

NEW YORK EXHIBITORS MEET.

Thirty members of the Manhattan Local Exhibitors' League met at Wurlitzer Hall, New York City, on Friday, October 4, at 2 p. m. The main topic of discussion was the delivery of films by the Prudential Delivery Company. Heretofore the Prudential has charged the exhibitors $6 a week for its service, but has increased its charges to $7 weekly, with the understanding that the three leagues of the boroughs of New York City guarantee 75 per cent. of their members in the contract. The Prudential has bonded itself for $1,000 for the safe delivery and collection of films. Unless the 75 per cent. of the membership is guaranteed it will cancel the bond. The matter was considered by the meeting, and it was decided that action by the three leagues be deferred to a larger meeting, to be held later this month at the new rooms of the Manhattan local, 729 Seventh avenue, at which time there would be a luncheon and house-warming.

The influenza epidemic which threatens to close the theatres of New York brought forth the expression of much apprehension. It was decided to use every precaution to prevent its spread and to warn the people against any violation of the ordinances suggested by the Board of Health. It was pointed out that already the theatres in other localities had been closed.

World Engages Texas Guinan

WORLD PICTURES announces the engagement of Texas Guinan, the well-known stage and screen actress, for an important role in "The Love Defender," which Tefft Johnson will direct. Others in the cast are June Elvidge, Frank Mayo and Madge Evans.

Miss Guinan, pronounced Guynan, was born in the Lone Star state, and her name was not obtained by theatrical inheritance, but given to her at the altar when she was baptized at the little frame church on the banks of the picturesque Brazos river.

Miss Guinan was born on her father's ranch of 8,000 acres, just outside of Texas Guinan.

Waco, Texas, and at an early age the cowboys on her father's place taught her how to throw a lariat and ride an unruly broncho, just as small children are shown in the East how to play "London Bridge" or "Hares and Hounds."

Her father sent her to a girl's seminary in Denver, and here dates the turning point in her life. At an amateur performance given by the students she showed such marked talent that Peter McCourt, manager of the Broadway Theatre, Denver, who was present at the amateur show, obtained for her a professional engagement. New York saw her for several seasons in a number of successes, and stardom came to her with John P. Slocum's and John Cort's production of "The Kissing Girl." The next season she was identified with the New York Winter Garden, and from then on was sought after by every prominent manager. Miss Guinan created the character of a female gun woman with the Triangle Corporation.

Conecticut's Reel Fellows Meet.

The Reel Fellows Club, of Connecticut, held its regular monthly meeting at its headquarters in New Haven on October 1, at which almost every exhibitor was allowed the open privilege of the club for the occasion. The chief speaker of the evening was the Democratic candidate for Governor of Connecticut, who gave those present an insight into the Sunday opening situation surrounding Connecticut.

In the course of Mr. Spellacy's speech he disclosed the fact that he was for Sunday motion pictures in Connecticut, and said that were he elected he would not only sanction the law for them, but would recommend them in his message. The Reel Fellows Club pledged itself as a whole to see that Mr. Spellacy would be elected.

Among those new members added to the list were Mr. Marks, Metro; Mr. Farber, American; Mr. Laighton, Triangle; Mr. Whalan, Eastern; Mr. Kaplan, Paramount. William Weisfeld, Pathe, presided.

October 6 Attractions At the New York Theatres

RIALTO.—Lila Lee in her second Paramount picture, "Such a Little Pirate," was the screen star at the Rialto the week of October 6. The story is one of buried treasure, and written by James Oliver Curwood. Theodore Roberts is in the cast. Mack Sennett's comedy, "Beware of Boarders"; the Animated Magazine and Topical Tid-Bits of Travel were also shown. The soloists were Annie Rosner and Martin Brefel.

RIVOLI.—Norma Talmadge in a story by George Scarborough, "The Forbidden City," headed the screen program at the Rivoli. The star's role is a dual one. Thomas Meighan and Reed Hamilton are members of the support. "An Indian Village in Mexico," the Animated Pictorial and a comedy completed the pictures. The Rialto Male Quartette furnished the vocal numbers.

STRAND—For the feature picture the Strand presented "The Kingdom of Youth," with Madge Kennedy as the star. This Goldwyn feature was written by Charles A. Logue. A James Montgomery Flagg comedy, "Romance and Brass Tacks," was on the program, also specially selected war, topical and scenic numbers. Alys Michot and the Strand Ladies' Quartette furnished the vocal features.

EIGHTY-FIRST STREET.—First half, "Italy's Flaming Front." Latter half, Dorothy Dalton in "Vive la France."

KNICKERBOCKER.—Griffith's masterpiece, "Hearts of the World," after a seven-months' run at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, has been transferred to the Knickerbocker and commenced its eighth month in New York, Sunday, October 6.

FORTY-FOURTH STREET.—Theda Bara in "Salome."

BROADWAY.—Violet Mersereau in "Together."

Goldberg Makes an Explanation.

Lee Goldberg, secretary and treasurer of the Big Feature Rights Corporation, believes that in twenty years from now a young man named Goldberg will be interested in exhibiting pictures under the titles of "Where the Americans Settled the Kaiser" and "What Is Left of Germany," according to a story published recently in the Louisville Post.

Mr. Goldberg, who is the franchised representative of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit in that territory, declares that what he tried to tell the reporter from the Post was that Mrs. Goldberg had presented him with a son, but that in view of the war-time angle on everything he was willing to give the newspaperman credit for doing his best.

THE CHICAGO CENSORSHIP COMMISSION

Composed of Fifteen Lay Persons and Four Aldermen Begins Work on New Ordinance

IN our Chicago letter, in the issue of August 3, it was announced that the judiciary committee of the City Council had passed a resolution authorizing its chairman, Alderman Otto Kerner, to name a commission of fifteen laymen and as many aldermen as might be deemed necessary, to meet during the summer vacation and recommend back to that committee such suggestions as might be deemed determinative of the censorship problem. The commission, it was expressly stated in the resolution, was to be fully representative of the city of Chicago, so that the vexed question of censorship might be thoroughly met.

It was not until Tuesday, September 24, that Alderman Kerner named the members of the commission. They are Chief Justice O. N. Carter, Adolph Kraus, Miss Harriet Vittum, the Rev. F. G. Dinneen, Anthony Matre, Mrs. Guy Blanchard, Mrs. Albert H. Schweizer, Judge Harry M. Fisher, Anton J. Cermak, Mrs. Hannah Solomon, the Rev. W. S. Fleming, the Rev. James B. Haslam, Martin Quigley, Mrs. Irvin McDowell and Aldermen George Maypole, A. A. McCormick, Frank J. Link and U. S. Schwartz.

Timothy D. Hurley, formerly chief probation officer of Cook county, was appointed chairman of the commission.

The first meeting of the commission was called by Chairman Hurley for Saturday, September 28, in the council committee rooms, and a permanent organization was formed, the Rev. W. S. Fleming being appointed vice-chairman and Martin Quigley secretary.

A committee to formulate rules for the commission was also appointed, the members being Judge Harry Fisher, the Rev. F. G. Dinneen and Mrs. Guy Blanchard. This committee will select committees on films, advertising, posters, moral conditions, health, ventilation, etc.

During the meeting Chairman Hurley read a report made by a similar commission in London, which showed that that body, after an investigation of six months, had recommended laws which were accepted by the moving picture industry and by the advocates of censorship.

The chairman announced that every well-known producer will be invited to appear before the commission to state his grievances, if any, and to make recommendations. William A. Brady was the first to receive an invitation.

Civic, religious, juvenile, reform, negro and other organizations will also be invited to come before the commission.

"We propose to make an exhaustive study with the view of submitting the best ordinance possible," Chairman Hurley stated during his remarks. "We begin our work unbiased, and are ready for opinions and advice."

Chief Justice O. N. Carter, of the State Supreme Court, announced to the commission that he preferred to abstain from participating in the drafting of the laws, as he might be called later to pass on them. He agreed, however, to attend the meetings of the commission in an advisory capacity.

The Riviera Is Opened Under Favorable Auspices

THE Riviera, Broadway and Lawrence avenue, this city, was opened Wednesday evening, October 2, under the most favorable auspices. The weather, the great throngs in attendance, the program, the beautiful light effects, the handsomely decorated interior, the inspiring music, the well-trained ushers under whose skilful guidance the great crowds melted into the 2,500 seats of the big theatre, the attractive banks of floral pieces that marked the good will of the many friends of Messrs. Balaban & Katz, directors of the new venture in Chicago's amusement field, all combined to make the event pleasing and memorable.

Those of us who have visited the Rialto and the Rivoli in New York could see at a glance that the Riviera management has been influenced largely by the Rothapfel plan and art of presenting moving pictures, and of creating pleasing light effects. And no better exponent of the art of making moving picture entertainment interesting, delightful and dignified can be found than Samuel L. Rothapfel, so that Directors Balaban & Katz are to be heartily congratulated.

The music is one of the great features of the Riviera entertainment, and great care must be taken in the selection of the moving picture program so that the music shall be the handmaiden of the pictures and not the mistress. In this instance the feature was Lina Cavaliera in "The Woman of Impulse" (Paramount), and this was supported by a Strand comedy, the Riviera War News (assembled by the management from official Government films), the Riviera Screen Magazine (weekly news edited by the management), and a Pathe scenic, "Along the Riviera." Four operatic singers were also assigned places on the program, and, by the way these singing numbers should always be good—not mediocre. One of the numbers under consideration was really good.

Two presentations of the program were given—from 7 to 9 and 9 to 11 p. m., and every seat was occupied. Among the large assemblies could be seen well-known men from every department of the industry. Never before on North Broadway was there seen at one time such an assemblage of autos as was parked in the vicinity of the Riviera the night of the opening. Some competent judges of such matters say that 2,000 machines at least were there.

Regarding the number of people in the house at one of the presentations, a good joke has been fastened on Bill Hershberg, owner of the Shakespeare Theatre, Forty-third street. Bill was out in the lobby talking to a friend.

"Why there must be 1,500 people in the lobby alone," said the friend to Bill.

"Are you crazy?" replied Bill. "Why, man, there must be over a thousand."

Well, here's to Balaban & Katz! May they have many such thousands in attendance at the Riviera, and may the thousands grow still larger.

Washburn Talks Briefly About His Present Work

BRYANT WASHBURN stopped over in the city a few hours Friday, October 4, on the trip from New York to the Coast. He was entertained at luncheon in the Hotel Sherman, Max Goldstein, district manager in the Middle West for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, acting as host. The daily papers were represented for the occasion and quite a number of Mr. Washburn's Chicago friends were also present.

Mr. Washburn informed me that he had been accompanied to New York by Director Donald Crisp and Marjorie Wilson, to take certain exteriors in the production of "Venus in the East," in which he plays the part of Buddy McNair. In order to present these on the screen faithfully, the journey to New York was made, although they occupy only 250 feet of film. The interiors of "Venus" will be immediately engaged in as soon as the party arrives in Los Angeles. Anna Q. Nielsen, as well as Marjorie Wilson, is in Mr. Washburn's support and plays a strong role.

Following "Venus," Mr. Washburn will begin work on "Mr. Man," a serious comedy, based on the story of that title by Frank R. Adams. "The Poor Boob" will be, next. It has been adapted from the story by Margaret Mayo.

Mr. Washburn mentioned, by the way, that his leading woman, under his present management, is usually changed for each picture, but that Donald Crisp will be his director all the time. He also made it a point to say that in no case does the length of any picture in which he appears run over five reels. "It takes a mighty good story, too, to fill that length satisfactorily," he added.

"The Way of a Man with a Maid," finished by him about three weeks ago, is considered by Mr. Washburn as being fully equal to "Skinner's Dress Suit," of which he is still proud. It will be released in the near future.

Mr. Washburn has finished three productions within the last three months. His yearly contract only calls for eight, so that he will have ample time to bestow on the remaining five.

Herbert Washburn, a brother of Bryant, is now assisting Mr. Hill, who has charge of the publicity department in the Artcraft-Paramount Chicago office.

Director Crisp and Miss Wilson arrived in Chicago from New York on the afternoon train and left with Mr. Washburn by the Santa Fe, for Los Angeles, Friday evening.

Chicago Industry Backs Liberty Loan Strongly

PETER J. SCHAEFER, Chairman of Chicago's Liberty Loan Committee for the Department of Amusements, expresses himself as being much pleased with the progress made during the opening five days of the campaign in this city. The quota fixed for amusements is $1,250,000, and on Friday, October 4, fully 30 per cent. of that amount had been raised, Mr. Schaefer informed me. He was specially pleased with the showing from moving picture sources.

Joseph L. Friedman, president of the Celebrated Players Company, was next seen. He has been alloted the task of soliciting the purchase of Liberty Loan bonds from producers, distributors and supply houses in Chicago, also of keeping a record of all Liberty Loan films and trailers in the Central States. Mr. Friedman was much encouraged over the purchases of Liberty bonds from these sources.

"Everybody is coming across splendidly," said Mr. Friedman. "For the first three days over $58,000 was received from producers and exchange men alone." Mr. Friedman also spoke enthusiastically of the assistance being rendered by the Liberty Loan films and trailers. He had just received a letter from Ben F. McCutcheon, director of publicity for the Seventh Federal Reserve District, advising him that Liberty Loan trailers and films should be discontinued in cities or communities which had already reached their quotas and sent to others which had not yet done so.

One of the paragraphs in Mr. McCutcheon's letter reads: "The films are of very great assistance in getting the people to back the Government in its financial operations, and I believe they should be used to the best possible advantage at this time, and that means in communities where the 'going' thus far has not been of the whirlwind type."

Duffy and Wallick Dead as Result of Grip Attack

Harold Wallick, whom I have known for eight years past and just in the thirties, was seized by an attack of the grip while at Bluffton, Ind., traveling for Metro's Chicago office. He died Wednesday night, October 2, and his body was brought to the city the following day. Mr. Wallick was well known to the trade in Chicago. He formerly was traveling representative of the World Film Corporation and of Goldwyn, and was an exhibitor in the early days. Many friends mourn his loss.

While writing the above I learned by phone that Eugene Duffy, manager of Mutual's Chicago office for the past year, died Friday night, October 4, from an attack of grip which he has been fighting for nearly a week. Mr. Duffy was held in high esteem as an alert and able man in the distributing department of the industry. Before taking hold of Mutual's Chicago office he filled a similar position with the organization in Montreal. Prior to these connections he had been manager of one of the Triangle Exchanges and held for over a year, during his career, the position of district manager and special representative of the World Film Corporation. Mr. Duffy was widely known and numbered his friends in the business by the hundreds. He had not yet reached his prime, which makes his death still more regrettable.

F. M. Brockell Joins Goldwyn Forces.

F. M. Brockell, manager of the Chicago office of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has resigned that position to become manager of Goldwyn's Los Angeles office. Mr. Brockell left for St. Louis Friday morning, September 27, where he will spend about four weeks, whipping into shape the Goldwyn office there. Accompanied by his wife and boy, he will then proceed to Los Angeles.

Mr. Brockell came to Chicago about three years ago to take charge of the Famous Players office. He resigned that position in the fall of 1916 to become associate manager of the Central Film Company, this city, with Harry Weiss. In September, 1917, he opened Goldwyn's Chicago office, and early in the present year he took hold of the position just resigned.

W. R. Scates to Famous Players-Lasky.

W. R. Scates, one of the oldest and best known exchange managers in the country, has succeeded F. M. Brockell as Artcraft-Paramount's Chicago manager. Mr. Scates has been one of the most prominent exchange managers of the General Film Company, having had charge of the Chicago office for many years and also of the Boston office for a shorter period. His many friends will be pleased to learn of his recent preferment. He took charge of his new duties October 1. He resigned the position of Chicago manager of the General Film several months ago to take a well-earned rest.

American Stars Grow in Favor.

Joseph Hopp, American's Chicago representative, tells me that the latest productions of that brand, in which Mary Miles Minter, William Russell and Margarita Fisher are starred, are meeting with markedly increased favor. The work of the last-named in "Money Isn't Everything" is making quite a hit here in Chicago, Mr. Hopp says. Reports from American salesmen, from outside points, regarding Mary Miles Minter's "Rosemary Climbs the Heights," show that liberal bookings are being made; also that William Russell is meeting with marked favor from exhibitors in "Hobbs in a Hurry," his latest picture.

Film Saleswoman Gains Honors.

Rose Tapley, special representative of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has been honored by the Board of Managers of the Women's Association of Commerce, of Chicago, who have elected her chairman of the association's Motion Picture Committee. The work of the committee lies along the line of encouraging and furthering the distribution in Chicago of worthy film production and discouraging the circulation of the unworthy.

John B. Mockler Dies of Influenza.

John B. Mockler, who had charge of the shipping department of Pathe's Chicago office for some time past, died Tuesday night, October 1, from an attack of Spanish influenza, after a few days' illness. Mr. Mockler, who was only thirty-five years of age, leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss. He owned his home and carried $2,000 insurance, which will provide in a measure for his family. Mr. Mockler was very popular with his co-workers, who expressed their regret by sending a handsome floral piece to the Mockler home. The funeral took place Friday morning and was attended by several friends from the Pathe office.

Italian Red Cross Benefit.

Merle E. Smith, general manager of the George Kleine System, has returned after a week's vacation at Mount Clemens, Mich., where he was accompanied by Mrs. Smith. He spent a few hours in Detroit and visited Manager McGee of the Majestic Theatre. "Behind the Lines in Italy" was run during the week ending Saturday, October 5, at the Majestic to big business. Five thousand tickets were sold in advance through the Italian Red Cross, and the organization was given 25 per cent. of the week's gross receipts.

GOLDWYN LEASES TRIANGLE'S PLANT

Takes Immediate Possession of Los Angeles Property—Practically All Work to Be Done in West

AS a prelude to the largest and most ambitious production plans of the company's entire career, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has leased in its entirety the Triangle studios and producing plant in Los Angeles. The negotiations and contracts for this big deal were made by Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn, and Harry Aitken, of the Triangle. Goldwyn acquires immediate possession of what is rated physically as one of the finest motion picture studios anywhere.

Already Tom Moore and his director, Harry Beaumont, are in California completing the third of his star series productions, this one having been begun in Fort Lee.

All future Geraldine Farrar, Pauline Frederick, Mabel Normand, Madge Kennedy, Mae Marsh and Tom Moore pictures will be made on the coast, as well as the Rex Beach pictures, which means that there will be an almost immediate Goldwyn exodus of celebrities for the land of the sunlight.

"This decision," says Samuel Goldfish in making the announcement, "marks the greatest expansion thus far attained by Goldwyn and indicates, too, that our organization has reached that stage of successful internal operation that I can devote a good deal of my time to production in California.

"I have always intended when Goldwyn's organization had reached a certain point that I could be spared from purely office and executive duties to have the majority of our productions made in California. I began my picture career there, and the advantages of location are immeasurably superior to any other locations. It has temperature and climate in its favor, natural light as against artificial light and much more beautiful scenery.

"Our going to California does not mean we will not make further pictures in the east, for whenever the environment of a story calls for eastern surroundings we will make such pictures here. For instance, Tom Moore's next picture, 'Go West, Young Man,' was begun here, and we obeyed the injunction of the title by taking him to Los Angeles, where the remainder of the picture has been made. Madge Kennedy's next production likewise calls for an eastern beginning and a western finale, so she will be among the next stars to depart westward.

Hawks Goes to Goldwyn.

"The main part of our scenario organization will be on the coast, as I have always believed that director, star and author should be together during all the stages of production. I am glad to announce that J. G. Hawks, long with the Ince forces, now comes to Goldwyn and will be at our coast plant. He has done originals and continuities for many of the most successful productions of the past four years. We shall also have a scenario organization here in New York and our stories will be purchased here.

"Goldwyn, in its operating and managerial phases, has reached that stage of success where I feel able to have our productions made at a distance of 3,000 miles from the home office and where I shall be able to spend a good deal of my time in California. The Triangle plant we have taken is admittedly the finest studio in the industry and we have the complete and exclusive use and control of it during the tenure of our lease."

"Hearts of the World" Moves to Knickerbocker

THE determination to end the New York City run of David Wark Griffith's "Hearts of the World" was revised after announcement had been made that the super-feature would end its run at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre Saturday evening, October 5. The movement from that theatre was necessitated by William Fox opening the run of "Salome" at the Forty-fourth Street Sunday night, October 6.

When an opening at the Knickerbocker was obtainable through a shift in dramatic attractions, Mr. Griffith immediately availed himself of the opportunity to continue the local run of "Hearts of the World" by moving to the location directly on Broadway Sunday evening, October 6, when the engagement was resumed for an indefinite period. Should the popularity of "Hearts of the World" remain at previous averages, there is every likelihood of all film-run records being broken before Mr. Griffith evacuates the Knickerbocker.

Exchange Men Join Commercial Clubs.

Universal exchanges report having found considerable advantage from joining the Boards of Trade in their towns. This idea was suggested by the Universal several weeks ago. As a result the heads of the various exchanges at once made themselves members of the commercial clubs in their towns. There is always either a board of trade or a chamber of commerce or a commercial club of some sort in every city of importance. Membership in these organizations at once places the exchangeman in touch with all the important business and civic affairs of his community.

Farnum Sells $164,000 in Bonds in Two Nights

WHAT is declared to be a record in Liberty Bond sales in theatres was made by William Farnum at two personal appearances Friday and Saturday nights. The William Fox star sold $120,000 worth of bonds to a wildly enthusiastic audience Friday night at the Fox Audubon Theatre, 168th street and Broadway, and Saturday night he swelled his total to $164,000 by writing subscriptions for $44,000 more of bonds at the Academy of Music. At this latter appearance he was assisted by Mr. Fox, who made a personal subscription of $10,000 and then subscribed for $25,000 worth more as president of the Fox Film Corporation. Each of Mr. Fox's two little daughters helped their film idol by buying $500 worth.

The appearance of Mr. Farnum at the Audubon was the occasion for a great outburst of enthusiasm. This enthusiasm reached its greatest height when it was announced that the $100,000 mark had been passed. Hats and caps were tossed into the air and there were prolonged cheering, culminating in the spirited singing of "The Star Spangled Banner." Mr. Farnum occupied the stage for about an hour, and most of the subscriptions he obtained came in small amounts.

Mr. Farnum expects to speak for the Liberty Loan every night for the rest of the campaign, his schedule calling for appearances in most of the principal film theatres of the city.

Universal Loan Theatre Raises $30,000.

Workers from the headquarters of the Universal distinguished themselves the first week of the loan by performing most of the task of promoting the biggest Liberty Loan Theatre in New York. The structure, the stage of which is an exact replica of the White House front, stands at the entrance of Central Park, at Broadway and Fifty-ninth street.

Funds for the enterprise were largely contributed by the Universal in cooperation with the Liberty Loan committee of the twenty-sixth precinct.

Those who directed the project were Captain C. H. Carr, chairman of the district committee; H. M. Berman, sales manager for Jewel; M. Kashin, manager of the Broadway Theatre; George Kann, secretary to Carl Laemmle, and Nat Rothstein, Universal's advertising manager.

A total of $30,000 in subscriptions was taken at the theatre on Saturday, the opening night.

Mrs. H. M. Berman was in charge of the canvassers, most of whom were young women from the Universal. Manny Goldstein led the loan boosters on the stage.

Miss Fried Goes to Universal City.

Miss Eleanor Fried, who has been acting as film editor at Universal headquarters, 1600 Broadway, for the past four years, left Thursday of last week for Universal City. She will establish a finishing department there. Miss Fried is very competent in her line of work, being one of the most skilful film editors in the business. She was formerly connected with the United and Warner's.

FOX'S "SALOME" IS BIG PRODUCTION

New York Opening of Eight-Part Spectacle Fills Playhouse with Deeply Interested Spectators

By Edward Weitzel

THE long-heralded screen production by William Fox of "Salome," as embodied by Theda Bara, reached New York Sunday evening, October 5, and was greeted with a full house at the forty-fourth Street Theatre. The star herself occupied one of the boxes, and Geraldine Farrar and her husband were present. Other persons prominent in the moving picture world attended the premiere, the entire body of spectators following the unfolding of the story with close attention. At the finish of the first part and also at the end of the showing the picture received generous and well deserved applause. The story of the Judean vampire has been told in various forms since her history was set down in the chronicles of Flavius Josephus. Massenet's opera, based on Gustave Flaubert's novel, "Herodias," with "Salome" as the central figure, has been produced at the Manhattan Opera House under the management of Oscar Hammerstein, with Mary Garden as the Lady of the Seven Veils. The American singer also sang the title role when the Richard Strauss "Salome" was given at the Metropolitan Opera House, and the audiences were permitted unobstructed views of the celebrated Mary Garden back.

Oscar Wilde's dramatic version, which contains some of the best examples of his hectic poetry, is familiar to the reading public, and was produced at one of the New York theatres last season.

The Screen Version.

Theda Bara, who has already impersonated the "Serpent of the Nile" and other vampires, with and without reputations, was the logical representative of Salome on the silent stage. The William Fox version, prepared by Adrian Johnson and directed by J. Gordon Edwards, provides the star with a pictorial background that could not help but stimulate all her artistic faculties and spur her on to her best endeavor. To begin with "Salome" is a better production than the "Cleopatra" picture made by the same company. Its story is more compact. Mere bigness of space and numbers is not permitted to obtrude itself on the human interest of the theme, and the action grows steadily in mental force until the climax is reached—the quick and dreadful punishment of the sensual and abhorrent woman.

Such a tale of lust and horror, although having the warrant of history, could have no valid excuse for being if it were dominated by physical action or scenic display. A more unlovely character than Salome never lived. There is no glossing over of her vices of mind and of body. She is drawn in all her hideous imperfection of heart and brain and thrown into sharp contrast with the stern virtue of the Christian prophet. It is this strict adherence to the psychological truth of Salome's nature that is the chief merit of the picture on its ethical side.

Pictorially the story has much in its favor. It reaches its most impressive moment when Herod asks John the Baptist to give him a sign that the God he serves is greater than Jove of the Romans, and the statue of the heathen deity is consumed by fire. The lighting of this scene, the artistic perfection of the grouping in the great audience chamber of the palace, and the power of the incident to seize and hold the imagination of the spectator transcends all the other situations.

There are other fine moments from a dramatic standpoint, and the reproduction of the street scenes and historical structures of the city of Jerusalem has been accomplished on an imposing scale. The Gate of Jaffa, Salome's apartments, the front of the king's palace and its lofty and gorgeous throne room are among the principal settings; and the human beings who people these places and swarm by the thousands in the great square or up the steps of Herod's grim and forbidding abode lend verisimilitude to all the ensemble scenes. Director Edwards has maintained an excellent average in his handling of the mobs. There is no overwhelming effect created at any one time, and some of the flashes seem unnecessarily brief, but on the whole this phase of the production blends into the unfolding of the plot smoothly and in the right proportion.

The Story.

Salome will always hold her place among the arch vampires of history. Her love of evil is shown in the picture very distinctly before John the Baptist appears. Herod Antipas, the ruler of Judea, is under the sway of his kinswoman, the Princess Salome. Knowing that the people of Judea hate Herod because he holds the throne by helping Rome to oppress them, Salome contrives to have Prince David, the queen's brother and direct heir to a rival line of rulers, put out of the way. She then makes Herod believe that the queen has tried to poison him, and does not stop plotting until the king gives orders that his wife be beheaded. Salome now expects to share the throne with Herod. The arrival of the prophet turns her evil mind into a new channel. She goes to hear John preach and conceives an unholy passion for him. He repulses her and is cast into prison.

The night of a feast in honor of Herod's birthday she goes to John's underground cell in the center of a stone courtyard and implores him to kiss her. Again he refuses. The maddened woman returns to the feast, and Herod asks her to dance. The infamous bargain is made. The dance of the Seven Veils follows, and Salome demands the head of the prophet. It is brought to her on a charger. As she is about to kiss the dead lips a great storm strikes the palace. Herod, overcome with fear, orders the Roman soldiers to kill the wanton. Salome's punishment is quick and sure. The storm effect is most realistic. The stark realism of Salome's final act of degeneracy will offend many persons.

The Cast.

Theda Bara as Salome presents a figure that is without glamor of any kind. She seems a creature of evil from her birth, and the only redeeming argument that can be advanced for her is that she appears to typify the world's need of a new religion and the coming of the prophet. The actress reflected this conception of the character from the screen—the only one that a rational mind would accept—with varying degrees of success. Great tragic power is not yet hers, but her work is always interesting, and her tricks of mannerism help to give Salome the stamp of her time and environment. Artistic costuming and an evident desire to meet every requirement of the part counts materially in the star's favor.

G. Raymond Nye as Herod contributes a finely rounded characterization. Albert Roscoe is a striking figure as John the Baptist, and acts with earnestness and feeling, but lacks something of the spiritual nature of the prophet. Bertram Grassby as Prince David, Herbert Heyes as Sejanus, Genevieve Blinn as Queen Marian, Vera Doria as Naomi and Alfred Fremont as Galba deserve praise for their impersonations. The photography by John W. Boyle is another admirable feature of the production.

Risks Life to Get Amboy Blast.

James Goebel, a cameraman of the Universal Current Events staff, was the only photographer to get actual pictures of the explosions last week at the munition plants in South Amboy so far as is known in the offices of Universal.

STATEMENT.

OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., required by the Act of Congress of August 24, 1912, of Moving Picture World, published weekly at New York, N. Y., for October 1, 1918.

State of New York }
County of New York } ss.

Before me, a Notary Public in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared John F. Chalmers, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the business manager of the Moving Picture World and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management, etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 443, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor and business managers are:

2. That the owners are:

Chalmers Publishing Company, 516 Fifth avenue, New York, the stockholders of which are James P. Chalmers, John F. Chalmers and Eliza J. Chalmers, all at 516 Fifth avenue, New York.

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent. or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: None.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders and security holders if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company, but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statement embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which the stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

FACTS AND COMMENTS

THE National Motion Picture Exposition is under way as we go to press. The measure of its success will have been determined before this issue reaches our readers. President Brady's speech, introducing Caruso as a dedicating feature of the show, sounded a note of patriotism that rang true and gained enthusiastic response. In its display of war activities the Government is giving lively assurance of its co-operation and gives visible sign of its indorsement of the motion picture industry as an essential to victory on European soil. In every activity that it may possibly enter the industry is co-operating with the Government, forming a combination that may best be illustrated in the pulsations of well ordered and smooth running mechanism.

Apart from the general benefits of such an Exposition there will be an interesting sidelight disclosed in the manner the show is "put over." Here is a show promoted by the best brains of the picture industry. These same interests have been telling picture showmen how to get the best results from film-shows in press work, advertising aids, lobby displays and general advertising producers are helping the exhibitor to "put across" the individual film. We should be interested, if we were an exhibitor, in watching how the big showmen "put over" their own "big show."

THE rapid spread of the so-called Spanish influenza is giving occasion for much concern on the part of exhibitors in many parts of the country. Already a number of municipalities have ordered the shutting down of all places of public amusement. The reports to the army authorities in Washington covering all home camps for October 4 show an aggregate of 12,975 new cases for that day, against 12,004 for the day before. The total number of cases to that date is 127,975. Pneumonia has stricken 10,429. There have been 2,869 deaths, or a number equal to more than 25 per cent. of the total of Americans killed in action since the beginning of the conflict. Exhibitors and film men generally have been commended for the part they have played in all activities looking to the rapid winning of the war. There is every reason to believe they will continue to earn approbation by their ready acquiescence in all decrees aimed at the preservation and protection of the public health, that where the occasion warrants it they will take the lead in the adoption of necessary measures to these most essential ends.

THE desire has been expressed this past week by the president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry that all sums subscribed to the Fourth Liberty Loan through any motion picture agency shall be immediately reported to Chairman Adolph Zukor at the offices of the big organization in the Times Building. It goes without saying that it is to the interest of every one connected with the industry that a complete record be kept of the work of the men and women in the trade. Exhibitors are spending money and giving their valuable time to push the loan—doing it without thought of compenstating credit to themselves. This is fine, and, from the personal viewpoint, is the right thing. There is, however, a larger aspect of the situation.

Not yet are all of the antagonists of the screen convinced of the great usefulness of the photodrama and its related topical and educational subjects. Not yet are politicians certain that well-laid plans for the creation of salary drawing censorship boards will come to naught. Not yet is the industry itself sure that in its membership there is no one man or numbers of men whose activities always will be on the side of the best interests of the trade as a whole. The request of Mr. Brady is a natural one. The industry has been asked to raise one-sixth of the loan, to get subscriptions of a billion dollars. That sum may not be reached—a little calculation would indicate that it is a tremendous job—but whatever may be the size of the large amount raised the spokesmen of the industry have a right to know what it is and to be able to quote it when the occasion justifies that course.

THOSE CROWDED HOUSES

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

SUCCESSFUL exhibitors are good showmen, and they may have a lot of artistry in their makeup, but they are primarily business men, and they have to be in order to get good service themselves and give the best possible to their public. The scientific and purely mechanical departments of fine picture presentation are now so perfected that the exhibitor is turning his attention more and more to filling his house and keeping it filled. How to do it is the present-day problem.

One essential point of view of a picture is "Does it pay?"

Let us consider some exhibitor's comments on one play.

"Good picture, but title hurt."

"Catchy title, talk of the town."

"Not generally liked—no punch to ending."

These criticisms are not idly made. They come from men in close touch with audiences and the box-office receipts, yet each comment, though undoubtedly sincere and founded on good information, is a direct contradiction of the other. The easiest explanation is the old one long established that no two audiences think the same of a product.

Let us see if that is true.

In one case all the comments are favorable along these lines.

"Extra big. Return engagement."

"Pleased all, a sure money-getter."

"Repeated back ten days after running a week."

As all the comments agree on audience satisfaction, it can be fairly suspected that the difference is not in audiences, but in the quality of stuff presented for popular approval. There are principles here involved which make for crowded houses and help the industry.

The real stuff pleases all audiences.

Publicity is too often mere camouflage of poor drama.

Poor stories injure the good will of any house.

The exhibitor's viewpoint is deeply interesting as to that most perplexing problem, the "star system," just now in vogue. There is no doubt that the real screen star is an important factor not to be overlooked.

The genuine screen star is an undoubted attraction.

High class interpretation of low class stuff doesn't go.

Success is reached through combining the best elements.

These are well-proved principles in all other arts of expression, and long experience has confirmed that they apply to moving pictures just the same as they do to other artistic products. In evidence are actual comments by exhibitors on one star in one play.

"This star's most interesting offering."

"Star not popular."

"Will help Miss Blank."

"They do not like Miss Blank here."

"Good picture, pleased all patrons."

"Not up to standard, did not please my crowd."

The conviction cannot be resisted that Miss Blank was not much of an asset in her "most interesting offering," "a good picture" "not up to standard" for some reason, most probably because "they do not like Miss Blank here," "the star not popular." There is even cause to affirm that some of the manufactured stars, made prominent through the camouflage of publicity, are a detriment to the pictures, especially when they are miscast or carried astray in dull vehicles.

Those crowded houses come from good stories well told through the right types for each character and strong personality in the leading roles, the whole directed with intelligence and good taste.

Exactly this the Moving Picture World has long advocated.

There is nothing to be gained for anybody in the "splash."

No crowded houses come from fooling the people

No crowded houses come from critics jollying the producer.

An ounce of plain truth is worth a ton of false publicity.

Twinkling stars are beautiful to look at on clear nights, the brighter they are the more appealing, but they can never illumine our way to any great extent except by what they reflect from other sources.

The stars we know best reflect the light of the sun.

The sunlight of truth makes all things grow.

Can we not harmonize and have the light of truth so nourish our development as to crowd every motion picture house in the land?

THE SCREEN IN WARTIME

By Robert C. McElravy.

A GREAT many people no doubt still wonder just why it was that the Government so quickly pronounced moving pictures essential to our conduct of the war. Which only goes to show that the public naturally enough as a whole does not fully grasp the scope of the film industry and how vital a part it has played in the war program up to date.

It is pleasing to note that both producers and exhibitors are beginning to do a little missionary work in behalf of the films. This is a necessary step, for it is only by constantly affirming these truths that they are finally definitely lodged in the public mind; once implanted there it will be something of permanent value to the industry. This of course should not be done in a boastful way, but it should be permissible to state the facts for what they are worth.

We wish the recent address of William A. Brady at the Chicago convention, in which he eloquently pleaded for a closer union of the film interests, were not of so technical a nature. Certain paragraphs of this speech ring with a fervent conviction worthy of the times. He addressed the gathering as a direct representative of the Government of the United States, as one appointed by President Wilson. At one point, alluding to the tremendous work of our film products abroad, he said:

> There is some reason why the American Cinema Commission is rushing millions and millions of feet of film every week into Russia, Siberia and the Balkans. It may be that a projection machine and a few hundred feet of film, scientifically placed on the eastern front, may do a lot more good than guns and soldiers. We may be able to reach those people on the eastern front and back in Russia, Siberia, Serbia, Bulgaria and Turkey by the one thing that speaks the universal language—the screen. And the camera cannot lie, and all German propaganda can be stopped through the eye and not by the head or the ear.

The whole address by Mr. Brady, which was published in the Moving Picture World of September 21, is alive with the spirit which animates the industry today.

About the most comprehensive thing we have seen, demonstrating the war labors of the screen, is a list of twenty items compiled by Samuel Goldfish, head of the Goldwyn company. The list, which first appeared in the New York Times, is one that exhibitors might do well to display in their lobbies, or if possbile, have reproduced in their local papers. It is as follows:

1. It has properly depicted the United States, its people and American life for the populations of neutral nations as an offset to anti-American propaganda conducted by enemy nations.

2. Revealed the living conditions of American labor and the middle classes in neutral and allied nations; notably in Russia, where German propaganda had minimized the extent of American preparation for full co-operation with the Allies.

3. Made possible the photographic portrayal of all major and minor military operations; the major portion of the important aerial operations; depicted to the fullest extent naval operations and manoeuvres.

4. Been turned into a creator of national patriotism and recruiting stimulant under its privately owned sources, and converted under the Government's own ownership and direction into the Federal exploitation of our armed and allied resources, as evidenced in the Creel Committee's presentation of "Pershing's Crusaders," "America's Awakening" and other similar pictures to come

5. Been made an active parallel of the daily newspapers through the pictorial portrayal in news reels of the actual operations and the men engaged in them.

6. Been made to introduce to America the rulers, military, political and civil leaders of all allied nations, and to clearly define their activities in co-ordinating allied co-operation.

7 Used as an industrial stimulant, notably in the support of the shipbuilding program, to drive the workers at one shipyard at a still harder pace by showing the work accomplished by the workers in other yards

8 Been linked directly with all three of the previous Liberty Loan campaigns and being linked with all future campaigns, both through the use of trailers and special films made and contributed by the picture manufacturers in which pictures appear the popular screen personalities whose identities and reputations have been used in the fullest measures in stimulating bond sales.

9. Been similarly linked with the War Savings and Thrift Stamp campaign.

10. Being used through the medium of trailers and other screen inventions and devices to aid the various governmental agencies in the recruiting of labor of all kinds; the reaching of stenographers, craftsmen and artisans needed for departmental work for the Government.

11. Being actively used by the medical division of the army and the navy for the recording via pictures of surgical progress.

12. Used in all of the earlier campaigns to enlist men in various branches of the service, including many of the more highly specialized branches.

13. Being used at all army camps and at the Liberty theatres for the furnishing of wholesome and healthy amusement for soldiers, sailors and marines. And similarly used at labor camps and at all points where Government labor has been concentrated.

14. Called upon daily not only to awaken and sustain patriotism, but to maintain the home morale, especially among the women of America.

15. Served as a teacher of current history for the school children of America, giving them the most vivid and vital presentation of the personalities and activities of combatant nations.

16. Obtained the conclusive and damning evidence upon which, later, the German Government will be convicted upon charges made provable beyond dispute with the aid of animated photography.

17. Been called upon to drive home the demand for national home and domestic economies, and served as an enlightener to wipe out opposition to the necessary programs, such as the Hoover Food Administration.

18. Motion pictures of all kinds are actively and regularly projected and used on board virtually all of the larger battleships and transports.

19. Pictures are shown in virtually all field hospitals, in the rear of the firing line in France and Belgium; in the base hospitals abroad and in the American hospitals. For the more seriously wounded men ceiling projection has been made use of to show pictures on the top walls of hospital wards for men still confined to their cots.

20. Virtually all Red Cross huts in France and Belgium are equipped for the presentation of pictures.

THE WORLD DO "MOVIE"

By Edward Weitzel.

A COPY of the article, "Democracy and the Movies," in the May Bookman, by Herbert Francis Sherwood, should be mailed to all persons whose mental vision is so defective that they cannot get a proper focus on the status of the moving picture. The article is brief, scholarly and comprehensive, and gives the standing of the screen in all its phases and its importance to humanity, without bias of any kind. After pointing out that "A motion picture comes nearer to being the universal language than any other medium of communication," and that "For the first time in the history of the world, a means of expression, which furnishes large opportunities for artistic development, has been brought to the door of the burdened wage-earner," the article recalls the many forms in which the picture is useful to mankind. Its value in the present war is made clear. One sentence reads: "It is helping to mobilize the various points of view of the Allied countries and marshal them into a single front."

The main point made in the article is the power of screen fiction to educate a class that is able to learn little or nothing from books, either from not knowing the English language or other causes. A paragraph of critical comment on the lack of originality in plots and the difficulty in overcoming this condition is followed by these words of wisdom:

> The pictures, in all their crudity, from the beginning have gone straight to the hearts of the humble classes, who have wept and smiled over the lurid plots and characters and been generous with their tears and laughter. All great art springs near the soil from the emotions of the toiling people, the workers. Reformers of the drama in their efforts to make their work popular, subtle and refined, have forgotten this. Their appeal has been to the dilettantes, the specializers in emotion, the moneyed, the blasé and the hypercritical. These types are the less desirable to whom to make an appeal.

Grading Screen Fiction.

The solution of the problem indicated in the quoted paragraph is proper classification for the product of the screen. No publisher of the novel expects to reach the literate and the illiterate with the same class of books. The stage long ago learned to adapt its output to the different "kinds and conditions of men." The screen will have to follow the example of its sister arts, and the result will be to its advantage. Masterpieces of fiction that have an almost universal appeal are not made every day; but one grade of intelligence may find both entertainment and uplift in the story that a more highly educated mind will reject as dull and uninteresting. To set a single standard for all classes of screen fiction and criticise each class from the lofty peak of a fully developed mentality is to serve only a select number of superior persons. The screen is the most democratic means of educating the people that exists, as Herbert Francis Sherwood contends. A man is not benefited mentally by something he does not comprehend. The schools throughout this country are graded. The moving picture theatre will one day undergo the same treatment.

SOLDIERS PATRONIZE PICTURES MOSTLY

World's Seattle Reporter Finds This To Be the Case with Khaki Clad Lads at Camp Lewis

AT Camp Lewis, Washington, the largest of the National Army cantonments, both in point of acreage and in numbers of men accommodated, motion pictures are keeping up their reputation as the leading amusement, for of all the local establisments for the entertainment of the soldiers the theatres showing motion pictures are the most frequented. This camp is situated eighteen miles from Tacoma and fifty miles from Seattle, and a trip to either means a big slice out of the savings of the soldier who must rely entirely on his own pay for spending money. Thirty dollars a month with all expenses paid sounds big enough to admit of several trips a month into town for amusement, but by the time half has been sent back home to dependents and life insurance policy and Liberty Loan installments are paid there is usually only about $10 or $12 left. So the poor soldier relies for regular amusement on camp establishments.

It is only those who do not know the variety and the excellence of these, however, who call the soldier who must rely on them "poor." They consist of a shooting gallery, two billiard rooms with fifty tables each, the Y. M. C. A. huts, the Liberty Theatre, where road shows and soldier attractions are given; the Hippodrome and the Victory. In Green Park, where all the concessions are, there also will soon be added a $25,000 swimming tank, a carousel, or merry-go-round, and a skating rink, which will also be used for regimental dances.

With a soldier in training who is hard at it all day amusements that necessitate his being on his feet all day are not popular. He likes to get a little rest if possible while being amused. This is one of the reasons why the theatre is his favorite. Another reason is the fact that the show takes his mind entirely off the monotony of his daily training.

One Theatre in Camp Proper.

Of the three theatres at Camp Lewis two show motion pictures, one of these presenting a combined bill of vaudeville and pictures. The Liberty, the only theatre in the camp proper, is one of the string of big Liberty theatres built by the Fosdick commission at all the cantonments. It was the first theatre at the cantonment, and motion pictures were at first shown there, but it is not well constructed for the proper projection and viewing of pictures, and as a photoplay house it was never a success. After the erection of the Liberty Theatre, to whose managers the concession for motion pictures was sold, the screen drama was no longer booked for the Liberty. This house has excellent stage equipment, however; large enough for the biggest road attractions, and its bench seats can accommodate an audience of 2,300.

The Hippodrome, which is owned by Orville Billings and managed by C. W. McKee, former manager of the Tacoma Theatre, plays Hippodrome Circuit vaudeville and a two-reel screen comedy. The music for the show is furnished by an orchestra. The house has a seating capacity of 1,400, and the admission charge is twenty cents, with the war tax added.

The Victory Theatre was opened last winter by the Casady & McKee Amusement Company, Inc., the motion picture concessionaire of Camp Lewis. C. W. McKee, who manages the Hippodrome, is treasurer of this company, and C. M. Thall is vice-president and general manager. H. W. Casady is president. Both this house and the Hippodrome are located in Green Park, across the high road from the soldiers' quarters.

The Victory is built of wood, as are all the buildings on the reservation, at a cost of $65,000. Its architecture is of the Swiss chalet type, made very effective with rough finished boarding stained brown and yellow panels in the doors. It has a seating capacity of 2,000, with a large balcony for the use of the officers. The auditorium is spacious, neither too wide nor too narrow for the best viewing of the pictures, and the seats, which are the regular opera chairs, are placed at a comfortable distance apart. Loge chairs are used in the balcony. The chairs were furnished by the Andrews Chair Company of Chicago.

Camp Houses Well Ventilated.

The rules for ventilation of the buildings at the camp are very strict, and in order to adhere to these the builders of the Victory had the entire ceiling done in lattice. This gives the full benefit of the air vents in the roof and at the same time effectively hides them with a screen that is very attractive.

Safety from fire has also been planned for by providing an unusual number of exits, there being four on each side of the building as well as the entrance doors.

Although the wooden construction suggests a temporary structure the equipment is of the most permanent kind. The projection room is 12 by 12 feet, with the wiring entirely concealed in the zinc lining of the room, and two Simplex machines for projecting the picture. Music is furnished by a Beethoven organ, manufactured by the American Fotoplayer Company.

The service contracted for is as good as any in the finest theatres of the largest cities of the country. The best productions of Artcraft-Paramount, Fox, Metro and Select are shown, with the big state-rights specials added. Four changes are made each week, the admissions being 15 cents and 25 cents. For the last few days in September Mr. Thall has booked "Hearts of the World."

Thall's Name Means Much.

To those long familiar with the amusement business this name preceded by the title of general manager means a well managed theatre. The name of Thall has been known among showmen since the days of the early nineties, when Mark Thall owned and managed the old Alcazar in San Francisco, where David Warfield and so many other now famous actors first made their names in stock. Mark Thall's son, Charlie—or C. M., as we dignify him when writing of him—entered the business at the tender age of three, when he took a non-speaking part on his father's stage, and he has never been out of it since. As a manager he made his debut at another of his father's theatres—the Central, San Francisco—in 1902. Then for several years he managed road shows for such prominent producers as William A. Brady, Harry Doel Parker, Joseph Gates and George H. Singer.

Finally he gave up the amusement business to go on the staff of the Chicago Examiner, where he remained for three years. Then the lure of the picture business called, and he went to Minneapolis as manager of George Kleine's exchange, holding that position also for three years.

When he came to Camp Lewis to manage the Victory Theatre he was welcomed by the managers all along film row, many of whom had known him and worked with him in other cities, and old-timers in the theatrical business in Seattle accepted him as one of themselves. ANDERSON.

Garson Story To Be Syndicated.

"The Unpardonable Sin," in which Blanche Sweet will be starred by Harry Garson, and which is now in the making under Marshall Neilan, will be syndicated as a serial in more than one hundred of the principal newspapers throughout the country by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, simultaneously with the releasing of the picture. When the story ran as a serial in the Red Book, so great was the demand that every edition was wiped off the newsstands almost as soon as it appeared. Harper & Brothers, who have published the story in book form, report the largest sales in the shortest space of time in their history. It is almost impossible to find a book in the libraries anywhere, so great is the demand.

The picture will be released about October 15.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Be Comfortable.

YOU cannot do good advertising unless you have your plans laid right. Get a special desk. If your office is small rig up a desk that will drop down when not in use so that you and others cannot pile things on it. Get a smooth piece of lumber, soft pine is good, with enough surface to give you plenty of room. Thumb tack your paper to this and lay out your advertisement, roughly lettering in the big lines with a hard lead pencil and filling them in with ink when you see how it looks, then you can erase the pencil marks with artgum. Keep all your advertising material handy to this desk and you'll be surprised to find out how easy laying out an advertisement becomes. It will help if you have paper ruled to column widths and lightly marked off in inches, but this is not necessary. Perhaps you can get your local paper to run some sheets through the press with only the column rules on. They won't like to do it because it will mess up the rollers, but they may tackle the job just before the rollers are rewet. The main point is to have plenty of room in which to work.

Steve Stunts.

We've shown several of the campaigns used by Steve Farrar at the Casino, Eldorado and the Orpheum, Harrisburg, Ill. Now he gives us a look at his general advertising for the latter house. Steve has Eldorado trained, for he had that house alone until the war took his manager at Harrisburg, and he had to do double duty and become a trolley manager. In Harrisburg, he has the Grand for opposition, and they take plenty of space as these three sixes show. Steve, we think, gets the better lay out, but the advertisements are pretty much alike. It will be intelligent for the newspaper to give them different positions. Steve gets in a cooling line under the head (it is a summer advertisement) and gets a better display for star and title at the slight cost of cutting down his small type. He also makes a gain by doubling up his secondary titles, both of which show well without needing so much space. But when Steve has something he wants to make a fight on he runs more to cross-page spaces from three to five inches deep. The second illustration show a pair of five-inch cross-page spaces, one a "coming" and the other a "tonight." It will be noted that the former carries the greater amount of matter. He starts in then to prepare his patron to buy the picture and uses less selling talk as he goes along. He always changes his copy whether he advertises one or a dozen times. We like the second advertisement better than that at the top. The house signature on a cross page rides better at the top of the space than below. This is not so important on spaces deeper than they are wide, but it is always well to run the signature to the top. But Steve does not always use so much space, especially for a tonight or last day. Here are two six-inch spaces, one three and the other two columns wide. He figures that he has already sold the possible patrons and merely wants to remind them to come and get the goods. Even a two sixes cannot be called small, save in comparison, but relatively it is a let down. In a small town the patron does not decide to go somewhere tonight. He decides in advance that he does or does not want to see a certain feature, and the best time to sell him is before the goods are on display. But Steve knows that he needs to be kept reminded, so he often takes a double display. One example gives four sixes for the coming attraction and a single column of the same length for the current bill. This is a much better arrangement than combining them into a single advertisement. There is less confusion and each announcement stands out by itself. Another arrangement gives a two fours to the coming and two fives to the current offering. Here the current show is The Yellow Ticket, and more effort should be used to sell this since the argument can be kept up. Steve is not one of those managers who takes a set space for all his announcements. He takes the space he needs for each attraction and realizes that some shows will sell easier than others, and plans his displays accordingly. This is the essence of good management. No fixed space can ever give the same results as space apportioned to the value of the attraction and the nature of the advertisement. Steve takes the space he needs, and if he can get along with a two fives he does not run clear across the column, but if five fives will give better results, he is willing to pay for that, for he knows that the money put into newspaper work, if spent intelligently, is bound to yield an ample return. Newspaper rates are probably low, but the houses are small, and it takes just as much nerve to plunge in the small town as it does where rates are based on line and not inch measurement. He uses everything from liners to half pages, and he doesn't use half pages where liners can be made to do the work.

Maine Advertising.

Waterville, Maine, doesn't seem to be doing much more in the advertising way than it did a year ago when the Haines was still in the contractors' hands. Now more space is taken than before, but no more is said in the additional space. The Two advertisements from Waterville, Maine, which talk without saying much.

City Opera House merely remarks that it has Barbara Castleton in Heredity and a News Reel and asserts that it is a "special extra feature," and the Haines tells that Missing is "one of the finest features ever presented on the picture screen," but neither house offers the slightest word of argument or seeks to tell why the offering is a special extra or the finest ever. There is not a line in this pair of two eights to give the reader the slightest desire to go and see the show. We know that the Opera House management thinks that the reading notice is what counts and at first merely took its space to get the reader, advertising "Moving Pictures Tonight," but even if the reading notice is what counts surely with a sixteen-inch space at command it would be worth while using a little brain work to get some selling talk into the advertisement. If that much space is worth paying for, it is worth using. The Silver is a bad third with a two twos or threes. There is not enough advertising in the entire town to work for a single house, let alone three, and this condition seems to be typical of most houses in that section. A good advertiser could get into almost any Maine town and tear the place wide open.

Make 'Em Chirp.

Get in line with the rest on the Community Sings. All over the country the idea is being taken up, following the example set by the Army leaders. Dig out the old favorites, the war songs of the sixties, the more recent favorites and get your patrons humming. It may be a little trouble to get started, but once the idea takes hold you'll be surprised at the results. Don't sell out to any one music publisher and let his "pluggers" run the show. Keep control in your own hands and teach them all the good songs.' Try it for one night a week, at first, if you want and you'll soon have them singing every show. And teach them to sing The Star Spangled Banner, but don't overwork it. Get several of your friends to write the local paper lamenting the fact that so few persons know the words of our national anthem. Then after a couple of days come out with a letter announcing that you will teach it to the public. It might even pay to give a free sing some Sunday afternoon —if you are not allowed to open Sundays— and hammer the words home. If the idea makes a hit, have a sing every Sunday. It won't cost much and it will be worth more than it costs to get the public used to the open theatre on Sundays. If you try it, please report results. We know what the results will be if you work it right, but we want your testimony.

Raleigh's Way.

A. C. Raleigh, of the American, Butte, Montana, sends in some samples of his new work. Now and then he runs scatter ads to hook up to his main advertisement. In the examples shown the printer has left out the folio number of the advertising page in a couple of instances, but the third example gives the proper folio as page 2. These scatter advertisements are useful when you are afraid your advertisement will be hidden, or to direct attention to a special attraction, but as a rule it is better to put your money into a single display, unless you can buy plenty of space. The main advertisement is four tens, so that space could be spared for the scatters.

Mr. Raleigh runs more to drawn designs than to half-tone reproductions, and in most cases he probably gets more out of the drawing since so few stills mean anything. Here the ambulance works with the title, though we do not recall that an ambulance has anything to do with the story. It does, however, suggest a story, and that is the main point. The copy is well written, but a little too formal in its layout. In the space at command some-advertisements all carry different copy though the design may remain the same. It happened that the circus used in the picture was one which had played Butte and this fact is brought up in the text. An example of one cut with a change of copy is found in these two displays for Shark Monroe. The cut is the same, but one space is three and the other four columns wide, the extra space being given to the frame. There is nothing particularly characteristic in the cut, but it serves as an attractor, though at rather a large cost.

Don't Let It Slide.

Be neat in your preparation of slides. In these days you can get out good slides at home. Don't be content with smeary ones. Make them neat. For standing announcements you can get fine results by using a new inking roller, running over the inked type and then on the glass. It beats slide inks.

For Dull Nights.

Ever try laying off your dull nights to clubs and charity organizations? Now that there are so many drives for the Red Cross, the Liberty Loan and similar war movements, the church aid societies and similar organizations are having hard roads to travel. Offer to split 50-50 with the local societies if they'll sell tickets for special nights, and pick dull nights for these affairs. Let them put their own representative at the gate and help them to advertise. Get good features for these nights, and in time you'll find that the night is no longer dull. From another angle, this is a good way to get the women coming alone after the boys have gone. They might feel a little timid about coming alone the first time, but if that first time is a church affair they will have greater confidence. Do not be content to break even on dull times. Don't be content until you fill your house every show every day. But make your societies turn in the deadwood and acount for tickets sold, but not used, or they will make a far better thing of it than you do.

Dropping Into Poetry.

A recent program of the Hill Theatre, Newark, shows Johnny Mack dropping into poetry. Most of the four-liners are purely local, but here is one that can be transplanted:

When we count the nickels,
The pennies and dimes,
We know our patrons
Have had good times.

Mr. Mack is getting ready to take up community singing, and announces a Song Fest. It mighty be catchy to call it a "Big Sing." In the issue following the draft Mr. Mack announced that "Eighteen to 45 means nothing to us. We get them from 9 to 99 and they all enjoy the good shows the Hill provides." Timely hits are doubly good because they sink in deeper.

Longer Runs.

A. L. Middleton, of the Queen, Ark., is the latest to give up the daily change in favor of the three changes a week. He announces that few of his patrons attend more often than three times a week, and therefore he points out he can get better pictures if he has fewer changes. It has been a very long time since most theatres got the same audience night after night. Three times a week is a generous estimate, and by getting better pictures, the second nights will profit by the approval of the first night audience. It is a move for the better and Mr. Middleton of course makes capital of the change in policy in a four twelves which tells of the

He makes his patrons realize that he is making it over for their benefit. He does not advertise tiresomely, but he always puts in a word when he sees a chance. He did not make much of a flash for "My Four Years in Germany" because he knew that a half page would be enough to tell everone in and around town that he had the picture. It will be noticed that he arranged for excursion rates and a special train to bring in the crowd, and whooped it up, but we don't believe that Mr. Middleton meant it just that way when he said that the picture would make "even" an American want to fight. It sounds worse than was probably intended, but it shows the great need for scanning copy carefully. Apart from this the copy will pull business, we think. It is not loud, but it gets interest. Mr. Middleton is using a new style program just half the size of the old one, but we think it will work just as well. It doesn't matter whether you set in ten point solid or in six point leaded. You can use as much stuff and have only half the paper cost. The only slight drawback is that few offices have display faces in the eight and ten point sizes. At that it will pay to buy your own display faces. Even now you can get a lot of type for ten dollars. The old program was 6 by 10 and the new size is 5 by 6, getting two programs to one. If you have been using a 6 by 9 or even a 5 by 7 think it over.

other exchange advertisements appear on following pages, it is probable that this is also an exchange advertisement, though it may have been worked in combination since the chief cut advertised the current attraction. The frames, house name and star and title in the centre are in red. It is an exceptionally attractive layout with full information and yet not too much type. Had the press work been a little better it would be a page to be prescrved, but the cuts come up flat and uninteresting. The News had the same page in one color.

ly. It is to be presumed that the local patrons are trained to understand. Evidently the house takes a spread space on the even of a change of program, considering the current attraction already well advertised. This is the proper theory, but the playing dates should be made more pronounced. The display for the "Submarine Eye" is not as good as that for "Tarzan." The layout is striking, but the punch lines are much weaker. There is none of the direct appeal to be found in the "Tarzan" lines. The combination house advertised the film attraction only with a cut. This is a Goldwyn, and we note that Goldwyn is numbering its cuts in the margin of the frame. The only excuse for this is that someone is too darned lazy to mark the cuts properly and puts the number where it will deface the cut, which is unusual for Goldwyn. Numbers and exchange marks should be kept off the face of the cuts and away from the public.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be indorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Lens System Up to Date.

John Griffiths, Ansonia, Connecticut, who is, in my opinion, the best posted man of today on the lens system of the projector when it comes to practical work, sends in the following review of optical data, with the remark that said data stands in need of revision to bring it up to date; also that will be of practical benefit and interest to practical projectionists. The need for revision of data is because many things published in the earlier stage of investigation and experiment are now known to have been in error, as was but natural. Griffiths says, "Inasmuch as this data is designed to benefit and serve men for the most part unfamiliar with optical terms, we will endeavor to present it in such manner that they will be able to grasp the entire argument."

The optical system of the projector is divided into two principal parts—the condenser, or collecting part, and the projection part. Over the latter we have little or no control, except insofar as we may be able to so guide the rays of or from the collective or condenser system that natural laws will be interfered with to the least possible extent, and the recognized limitations of the projection lens taken into account so that we will not be trying to compel that part of the system to perform impossibilities. The greatest problem in connection with the projector optical system is to so combine the two above named optical systems that they will become in effect a single system, and exactly in proportion to our success in so doing will be the economy and the relative perfection of results. (Up to date the theoretical opticians have made relatively little progress in the elimination of waste in the projector optical system, which same is frequently enormous, because they apparently bend their entire effort to the perfecting of a unit which ought to and will produce ideal results when working under a certain condition, whereas the unit seldom does work under that ideal condition. They absolutely refuse to take into account that little item "practice," hence they fall down so hard their teeth rattle.—Ed.)

The primary object of the condenser system is to collect the greatest possible amount of the total illumination supplied by the light source, and to deliver it to the projection lens with a minimum of waste. The chief difficulty encountered in this is the fact that it is necessary to pass the total light through a relatively small aperture situated a considerable and varying distance from the projection lens. It is this condition which makes the projection of motion pictures so different from the projection of lantern slides; also it is largely due to the ignoring of this condition that many able theorists on projection have failed in the attempt to discover the correct solution of the motion picture projection optical system.

Up to date we have had little or no choice in the matter of condenser lens diameter. The 4.5-inch diameter condenser lens is an inheritance from the days of stereopticon projection. Unfortunately we are unable to utilize for motion picture projection the full diameter of the 4.5 condensing lens, though we do get the disadvantage of the full diameter of the front lens of the combination. This is due to the use of two lenses instead of one. It is impossible for the front lens to collect all the rays from the arc lens, because the ray from the arc lens forms a diverging beam, hence there is loss of light as soon as the rays pass the first lens. Incidentally this loss increases as the two lenses of the condenser are further separated. But we nevertheless must not condemn the two-lens combination, for the reason that even with its inherent loss it still has collective power superior to the single lens, because the arc distance (distance from lens) is made shorter than would be possible with a single condenser lens giving the same degree of enlargement of crater image at aperture.

In view of the fact that it is not possible to utilize the full area of the arc condenser lens the idea suggests itself that the rays which pass the arc lens, but which do not reach the front lens, should be prevented from reaching the arc lens at all, since their only effect is to heat the lens and its mount; also to heat the entire condenser mount unnecessarily. This could be accomplished by means of a screen located in the lamphouse, but not connected with the front wall of same, this screen to have a suitable aperture in the shape of a slide carrier if one is used. This aperture should be reduced until it begins to cut light from the aerial image of condenser in front of the projection lens. (Granting that your contention as to the undesirability of the non-useful rays reaching the arc lens is correct, it seems to me the plan for stopping them would be difficult, not to say impossible of application, Brother Griffiths, by reason of the fact that every variation of distance of arc from lens would necessitate a change in size of screen aperture, or else a change of its distance from the arc.—Ed.)

The next problem we are confronted with is the passing of the maximum amount of light from the front condensing lens through the aperture and into the projection lens. This is not an optical problem, but purely a physical one, yet it has an important bearing on the question as to where the beam should be focused. It is apparent that the greatest amount of light will pass through the aperture, with a given spot diameter, when the plane of greatest concentration is at the aperture. To remove the plane of greatest concentration from the aperture plan in either direction will operate to reduce the amount of light passing through the aperture.

The next problem is to cause the projection lens to collect the entire beam and to pass it on to the screen.

The point of greatest concentration of the condenser beam is at or very close to the aperture, hence it follows that beyond that point it begins to diverge. The real problem is, therefore, to see to it that the beam does not diverge beyond the limits of the projection lens diameter. The importance of passing all or nearly all the light coming through the aperture to the screen through the projection lens is apparent from the viewpoint of economy in operation, but where the entire beam or nearly the entire beam is not collected by the projection lens there is not only waste, but also uneven distribution, with which we will deal later on.

There are various methods of reducing the spread of the ray beyond the aperture, among them the following: Increasing distance from the condenser to aperture, which, however, must not be carried to an extent which will unduly enlarge the spot. True the spot may be reduced where this happens by lengthening the focal length of the condenser, but this operates to reduce the light collecting power of the condenser, because it removes the crater further from the lens, and, the arc being an open light source, the intensity of light flux decreases rapidly as the distance from lens to light source is made greater. The law is that it decreases inversely with the square of the distance. This method, therefore, makes for light loss, but has the merit of giving an even illumination of the screen.

Reducing condenser diameter also acts to reduce divergence of the ray beyond the aperture, but this also entails serious light loss.

Advancing the plane of greatest concentration of the condenser ray beyond the aperture also reduces the divergence of the ray at the projection lens, but has the double disad-vantage of loss of light and tendency to ghost on the screen.

Still another and seeming logical method of solving the difficulty is by the use of a large-diameter projection lens. Here, however, we encounter the problem of the revolving shutter blade. If the lens diameter be increased beyond certain limits it will compel the use of a cutting blade of greater width, with consequent loss of light, and a poorly balanced shutter which will add to any flicker tendency there may be.

We thus see that there are very real problems to be encountered at several points, also that their solution in such way as to produce excellence in result without serious impairment of economy in operation is extremely difficult, calling for careful attention to detail, as well as expert knowledge of the various problems we have named.

With an optical system planned to fit the local conditions under which it will work a projection lens of moderate diameter will be found sufficiently elastic to care for every ordinary condition, and there are special remedies for unusual cases, which need not be dealt with in this article.

Having thus dealt broadly with the general requirements let us consider some of the more important details in a way which will give the practical non-optician projectionist an intelligent idea of what is taking place in the light beam of his own projector.

First, to what extent does spherical aberration affect the performance of the condenser system, insofar as applies to the collection and delivery of the maximum amount of light to the projection lens? Most diagrams drawn to illustrate spherical aberration deal with its effect on the light beam by taking a ray emanating from one point of the light source only. These diagrams merely show the inability of the uncorrected lens to focus all the rays at one plane, or at one distance from the lens, those rays passing through the marginal part of the lens being focused nearer the lens than those passing through its central part. Such diagrams are mostly intended to show to the student the futility of attempting to use an uncorrected lens where sharp definition is desired at all parts of the image. In the case of the projectionist, however, he is more deeply interested in spherical aberration from the viewpoint of its effect on the concentration of the light ray as a whole. Considering each point on the surface of the front condensing lens as a minute lens, which, in effect, it really is, as we recede from the centre of the lens the points of its surface, having more acute angle to the light rays, are stronger lenses than are those closer to the lens centre, and the rays passing through them will be focused closer to the lens. It therefore follows that the point of greatest concentration of the beam, as a whole, will be at the point at or near where the marginal pencils of light meet the pencils of light from the central portions of the lens. This is because of the fact that, from each point of the condenser, comes a diverging pencil of rays. Remember we are ignoring the actual focus of the crater. As a matter of fact there is an image of the entire crater carried by each of these diverging pencils, or cones of light, at any stage of its passage exactly the same as there is through a pinhole, but the image only becomes visible when the rays all meet at one plane. Now it is evident that if the pencils of light from the marginal portions of the lens have focused at the axis, the pencils from the more central portions of the lens have not focused, hence the pencils of rays from the central and intermediate portions form the margin of the spot, they not yet having been reduced to their smallest area. In this way we get a good idea of the composition of the spot at the cooling plate. It is really composed of a multitude of smaller spots, each carrying a complete image of the crater and each spread over an area somewhat greater than the area of the crater itself. (Brother Griffiths last statement is correct, but is in seeming conflict with the former one, which says the margin of the spot is composed of pencils of light from the marginal area of the condenser, with the word "only" added by inference, making it marginal area of the condenser only. The seeming conflict of statements is, however, really not a conflict at all. What he means is that the pencils of light will each make a complete spot, but that those pencils from the centre of the lens will make a slightly smaller one than those at the margin. This, however, is only true, it seems to me, when the spot is at the plane [plane means point of the ray with regard to distance from lens] where the marginal rays are focused. Anyhow the difference in diameter will be, I think, but comparatively little, and if in practice this area be confined within reasonable limits by the use of a reasonable amperage no loss of light will occur through spherical aberration. On the other hand we, by reason of the presence of spherical aberration in the condenser beam, obtain a much more even density of light flux in the beam at the spot than we could have were the rays all focused at one point, which would give us a sharp image of the crater at the aperture. (This is a theory evolved by Brother Griffiths himself. I can see the base of his argument, but am neither, as yet, prepared to deny or accept it as conclusive evidence that a corrected condenser would give us no advantage. That spherical aberration would and does act as he says there can, I think, be no doubt, but whether the same evenness of density of beam could be had with a corrected condenser and the crater image focused somewhat in front of or behind the aperture I do not know.—Ed.)

Let us next consider the light in front of the aperture, first observing the effect of the projection lens of too small diameter. From each point of the film there is a diverging cone or pencil of rays which goes forward. (Um, Brother Griffiths, your meaning is probably correct, but the cone does not, I think, begin at the film, but at the point of focus of the crater image.—Ed.)

Brother Hallberg on Fuel Saving.

In another issue of this magazine my good friend J. H. Hallberg submits certain recommendations for the conservation of fuel through proposed current saving, with some items of which this department is compelled to take very serious issue. First and foremost, he proposed the use of greater K. W. for projection where the distance is above 125 feet, without taking the picture size into consideration. Well, this may be allowed to get by, because in ordinary practice the picture is usually of such size that the economical handling of the projector optical system is rather impractical, hence more or less waste is inevitable. But when he recommends less current for projection where the throw is less than 75 feet then when it is between 75 and 125, I would respectfully ask him where he gets his basis for such recommendation. As a matter of fact I would, if I made any difference at all, want more current for a commercial size picture at his minimum distance of 40 feet than I would for a similar size picture at 100 or even 125 feet, unless the picture happened to be unusually small—say ten feet. This because of inevitable lens and revolving shutter trouble where very short focus length lenses are used.

Then, too, Mr. Hallberg sets the maximum allowable picture for class A and B theatres at 22 feet wide. Now see here, Friend Hallberg, why under heaven do you set a maximum allowance for conservation which is too large under any condition even in peace time? There is no valid reason for the projection of anything in excess of a twenty-foot picture in any theatre or airdome that I have ever seen, and in nine cases out of every ten where a twenty-footer is used a very much better result would be had by a reduction of at least from one to two feet. His recommendation with regard to screen is entirely correct. Painted, calcimined or a cloth screen are excellent from the viewpoint of artistic results, but they are all of them consumers of light.

But Mr. Hallberg's recommendation with regard to current consumption under varying conditions of distance are to me entirely un-understandable, even allowing his assumption that distance plays an important part. He says the maximum shall be a certain number of K. W. Umph, rather vague, is it not? All houses want the privilege of equal screen brilliancy, don't they? Well, suppose A to be using 50 amperes D. C. from 110-volt lines through a rheostat. That is 5.5 K. W., is it not? Now A cannot materially reduce the total cost of operation or even very largely reduce his K. W. consumption by means of a motor generator. He must, therefore, reduce his amperage, if he is to meet Hallberg's recommendation for long distance projection, and if he is to meet the condition for short distance (K. W.) he must reduce it to 36 and a fraction amperes. But B, who has A. C. available, and uses an economizer or a motor generator set, may use pretty close to 100 amperes at his arc before reaching Hallberg's limits. Also, if B has his own generating plant, generating D. C. at say 60 volts, he is at liberty to use amperage far in excess of what A can use.

Hallberg's recommendation that theatres purchase economizing machinery (transformers, motor generator sets or mercury arc rectifiers) is good, provided there is A. C. available. But this is modified by the fact that the Government not only wants as little consumption of machinery (iron, steel and copper) as possible; also the obtaining of machinery is at present increasingly difficult.

But the crowning criticism I have to make on this whole matter is the fact that Mr. Hallberg dismisses the tremendous waste in the optical system, which often amounts to more than any saving his recommendations could possibly effect, with the brief statement that lenses should be kept clean and in proper adjustment. Shades of our ancestors!!! Yes, so they should. That much is certainly fact.

Mr. Hallberg recommends that lighting companies modify their rules to the extent that where current of a certain ampere strength is now delivered from one side of a three-wire system for use in a rheostat the same number of amperes will be delivered from one side of the system if a motor generator or current transforming device be installed. Um, why install the device if the same amperage is to be delivered from the lines?

Conducted by GEORGE W. BEYNON

The Art of Picture Presentation Cannot Afford the Abuse of Silence or Semi-Silence

SINCE we have dwelt extensively upon the subject of the use of silence in picture playing, it seems only right that the abuse of silence receives some consideration.

Frequent silent moments in the changing from one number to the other detracts from the picture and creates a sense of piece-meal artistry that is both distasteful and displeasing to picture patrons. No matter how quietly you may finish a selection, no preceptible delay should occur before proceeding with the next number. A silence at this point will break the smoothness of accompaniment and divert attention from the feature.

Should the music finish in arpeggio style, with closing chords separated by rest signs, it is quite permissible to lengthen the duration of the rests until they become moments of silence. The chords must of necessity be six-fours, dominent sevenths, or repeated tonics, and, as the first two classes need resolution, the ear will hold the tone with expectation for what is to follow. This is done subconsciously and will detract in no way from the scene depicted upon the screen. The repetition of the tonic chords after pause rests must be done with a change of volume, either crescendo or diminuendo to make the finale effective, and immediately upon the completion of the last chord, the new number should begin.

All good speech makers understand the value of the rhetorical pause which usually signifies expectancy of a denouement or gives time for the auditors to absorb and digest the last emphatic statement. This silence can only be effective when the speaker chooses the proper psychological moment to continue his address. If he delay too long, the entire speech will "fall," and he will lose the attention of his listeners.

Music for the pictures may be emphasized and enhanced materially by the use of a rhetorical pause. The sad music slowly dies away as the scene, showing the unhappy heroine, slowly fades out. Behold! the next scene depicts the vile and violent villain hurriedly groping his way out of the darkness of a tunnel. Barely discernible in the distant and dim light is the sputtering fuse that will blow up the mine, endangering the lives of many toilers deep in a new shaft. The scene opens silently, as far as the music is concerned, while the villain hastily runs away. The sputtering fuse is shown again now, almost reaching the powder cap. Every eye is strained, every heart beats faster, every nerve is tense with expectancy. Bang! the explosion occurs, tearing up the earth, and hurling debris. At the same instant, the music with a crash of cymbal and double forte chord, reinforces the dramatic episode.

This silence might be called the rhetorical pause of expectancy. It promises something big to follow, and makes more emphatic the explosion by its sudden volume, perfectly synchronized with the screen action. To prolong the silence until after the explosion would be suicidal, and would make the dramatic value of the scene farcical. Nevertheless, it has been done and will be done again, so long as musicians refuse to sleep in bed and take their naps in the orchestra pit.

Some orchestras still persist in allowing the opening title and introduction of the principal roles to be screened in silence. Their argument is to the effect that they must begin when the first scene is shown. They think they are fitting scenes, when they should be setting the picture in part and as a whole. The audience believes the leader is unprepared and the accusation is somewhat accurate and well founded.

This preliminary silence is not only an abuse of a dramatic factor, but the loss of a great opportunity for truly effective music. This spot should always be utilized to play a number that embodies the dominant emotion of the play, or to firmly establish the atmosphere of what is to follow. If a feature is worthy of a setting, it surely merits ushering in; if fit for presentation, it calls for a proper introduction.

While treating with the abuses of silence, let us note the misuse of what, for a better name, we call semi-silence —those interludes where one instrument plays a few bars alone.

During the running of "The Hypocrites," a few years ago, the orchestra played "Il Guarany" to accompany a scene of riot, where a priest was stoned to death by the mob. Just at the height of the turmoil, when they were about to pounce upon their victim, the clarinet plaintively performed a cadenza. This was too much for the taut nerves of the assembled people and a roar of laughter spoiled the balance of the otherwise good program. It also spoiled the evening for the orchestra and especially for the careless conductor.

Cadenzas must be used sparingly in picture playing for they create a noticeable absence of sound that must be in keeping with the spirit of the scene to be permissible.

Small orchestras in suburban or small-town theatres are usually very painstaking in their musical program to an extent that sometimes gets them into difficulties. Desiring to obviate unpleasant harmonic changes of key, they allow their pianist to throw in a few chords of modulation as a solo between numbers. If a leader could only sit "out front" and hear those modulations every few minutes until his ears ached with the monotony of it, until he found himself listening in dread for the next one, he would never perpetrate such an abuse of semi-silence again. Choose the lesser of two evils if need be, but leave the pianistic thump-thumps out of your setting.

The semi-silence of trumpet calls must be used only after careful thought. A cornet suddenly breaking into brassy exclamation is not the most pleasing sensation at best and, if at every opportunity, the approach of our soldier boys is heralded by a blatting bugle, it becomes tiresome, shoddy, cheap, and good ground for changing one's patronage.

There is another form of semi-silence that, when used occasionally and under the proper conditions, becomes most effective. Recently, while enjoying a bill offered at the Rialto Theatre, New York, the writer was shown a scenic dealing with "Tales from the Tall Timbers." It was educational in its mission and delineated the history of the tree from stump to saw mill. At a point where the log began to slide down the mountain side via a special chute, the orchestra stopped playing. Nothing was heard but a low rumbling of the timpani. This increased in speed and volume as the log rushed faster and faster toward the base of the mountain, and, as it plunged into the lake below, the mighty roaring suddenly ceased with the crash of cymbals, and the swish of sand blocks.

This form of semi-silence can only be used when the element of surprise is needed. Continual recourse to it would naturally bring it down to the level of all clap trap effects and ruin its usefulness as a dramatic factor or unexpected innovation.

Animated Song Sheet of Broadway Strand Theatre, Detroit.
There Were Sixty Girl Singers, One for Each Note. The Drop Measured Twenty-four by Thirty-four Feet.

FEW cities in the country are doing as much, none more, than Detroit, Michigan, to show their patriotism in a practical manner.

Detroit has many theatres successfully conducting community singing and was one of the first cities, if not the first, to start a movement of giving free theatre tickets to soldiers and sailors in uniform.

But the week of September 22 marked a radical and charming departure from the usual music program at the picture houses. It was inaugurated at the Broadway-Strand Theatre and was planned to start off the Fourth Liberty Loan selling campaign. It was called an "Animated Song Sheet" and consisted of a drop curtain twenty-four by thirty-four feet in size. On it was printed a reproduction of the chorus from the patriotic song, "For Your Boy and My Boy." Eddie McGrath sang the first verse and chorus. When he came to the second chorus, the drop was exposed. Through the round black part of each note was a girl's head—there were sixty of them—and they joined Mr. McGrath in the chorus. Naturally at each performance, this innovation elicited such tremendous applause that the encores were practically limitless.

The animated song sheet is not exactly a new idea, as it has been presented in vaudeville and with the big shows, but it is probably the first time it has been carried out on such an elaborate scale at any motion picture house.

The total expense, including salaries to the singers, came to nearly twenty-five hundred dollars. But the Broadway-Strand Theatre considers the outlay well spent to boost the Fourth Liberty Loan through its official song.

"There Is No Hyphen in My Heart."

In 1916, a poem, under the above caption and written by Mrs. Josephine M. Fabricant, appeared in the New York Herald and The Globe. It was reprinted in the newspapers all over the country.

The poem took New York by storm and was read before over two thousand teachers during Liberty Week. Mrs. Fabricant recited it for six thousand people at the College of the City of New York, recently.

She has in her possession letters from many prominent people praising the poem. Colonel Roosevelt acknowledged it and wrote "That is the real American doctrine."

It was published in July, 1918, by Lockhardt & Belder, being set to music by Mrs. Adriane Holmes Edwards, composer of the famous "God Bless You, My Dear." This latter song, Guiseppe de Lucca, the Metropolitan baritone, is using on his programs.

"There is No Hyphen in My Heart" has been sung very successfully at the camps by Raymond Ellis, the baritone of the London Opera Company. It is being sung at the patriotic gatherings for the Fourth Liberty Loan.

Audubon Picture Presentation Pleases.

It was Sunday evening at the Audubon Theatre at 165th street and Broadway, New York City. The feature for that last portion of the week was "Why America Will Win," being the life story of General Pershing filmatized. The orchestra consisted of twelve men and an organist, all fair material individually, the ensemble of which was splendid.

After a rather strenuous gastronomical exercise at the trenchant board, we repaired thither for lighter diversion of the mind. Mr. Fox surely knew we were coming and must have guessed our condition, for the soothing atmosphere of the Audubon settled upon us, and lo! we were content.

The feature had just commenced and the organist softly portrayed the picture musically. No clap-trap bells nor tin whistles annoyed us; no pomposity of tone marred the serenity of the occasion. Later, the orchestra took up the work and continued quietly but thoroughly to accompany the swift changing scenes. Beautifully balanced in tonal quality, always subdued, in volume well under the picture, it played music which fitted every foot of the picture as though a part of it. We were pleased.

Here, in a semi-vaudeville theatre, we found the true art of picture presentation flourishing like the green bay tree. Here we found perfect synchrony, perfect suitability, and perfect interpretation. 'Tis well, for this is an abundance of proof that fitting features must receive careful consideration, tedious thought and be well directed, to draw capacity houses in these days of fine filmcraft.

"Maryland" a Challenge for Secession.

When we are becoming intimately acquainted with the patriotic songs of America, we must not neglect the one poem which is of the South, for the South and by the South in a peculiar sense which isolates it from all others and leaves it standing on an eminence quite by itself.

When the great struggle between the North and the South had reached the crisis where the dissatisfied states were declaring their independence and, one by one, had begun to secede from the Union, James Ryder Randall, a native of Baltimore, was a young man twenty-two years old. Being engaged in newspaper work in Louisiana, at the outbreak of the Civil War, he had an opportunity to follow the course of events, and his heart was, naturally, with his mother state. In April, 1861, he read the grim statement that Northern troops had been fired upon while passing through Baltimore.

Mr. Randall had been greatly distressed and chagrined because Maryland did not cast in her fortunes with the new forming confederacy. But now he felt assured of her loyalty to the South and this unexpected act of rebellion seemed indicative of the future stand. The inspiration of this hope fired his imagination. It was midnight, but he responded to his emotions and, at a single sitting, produced what is, next to the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," the finest poem of the Civil War. Mr. Randall made the application more direct by its simple title "Maryland," and the lyrics had an appeal that was irresistible. The poem was published in the New Orleans "Delta" and attracted immediate attention.

It was first introduced as a war-song by Miss Jane Cary, a popular society girl of Baltimore, who sang it as her contribution to the festivities at a serenade given her by a division of Beauregard's army. She also had the honor of selecting the music for it, using the old German folk melody, "O Tannenbaum." This was an original Westphalian Folk Song, which assumed its present form in 1819, being adapted by August Zarnack, to whom we are indebted for the change from 4/4 to 3/4 time. Longfellow made a free translation of the lyrics of the song and called his poem, "O Hemlock Tree."

"Maryland," like many other songs born at the same period, has had its sectional appeal swallowed up in a national appreciation. In our time, there is as much enthusiasm evinced at the playing of "Maryland" before a New York audience as could be possible for one in Baltimore over this song, the "Marseillaise of the Confederacy."

"American Music Optimists" Greet Us.

Musical artists and composers of America, who have grown somewhat pessimistic over the future of their art, will be glad to know that there is a flourishing society in New York City which was organized and lives to further the interests of deserving American musicians.

The society is called "The American Music Optimists." Miss Mana Zucca, of 4 West 130th street, New York City, is the "fairy godmother" of the enterprise, and this gifted young composer ideally acts the part for which she has cast herself. She is an idealist and a firm believer in finding and helping the talented person who cannot just find himself.

With this end in view, compositions, either in manuscript or published form, can be submitted to the judges of the society. They will pass upon them. Those accepted will be presented at the concerts given at stated intervals. It is not necessary to be a member of the society to obtain a hearing, nor is any expense attached to these performances, as far as the composer is concerned.

The society has the indorsement of many people of prominence in the musical world, including Enrico Caruso, Gatti-Casazza, Daniel Frohman and Oscar Saenger.

STUPENDOUS INSPIRING

A SINGING SLOGAN

Come on! Come on! Come on across the Sea,
To fight for Liberty,
To set the whole world free.
Come on! Come on! We're going to see it through,
With honor to the Red, White and Blue.

WHAT DO THESE WORDS MEAN TO YOU?

To thousands they recall

An Inspiring Patriotic March Song

There Is No Hyphen In My Heart

Words by JOSEPHINE M. FABRICANT Music by ARIADNE H. EDWARDS

CHORUS

There is no hyphen in my heart—
It can't be cut in two;
O flag of bars and silver stars,
I've given it all to you!

FOR THE MOVIES

STAR-SPARKLE, Trevertl. Just bubbling over with melody. Written in 4/4.
ZENITA, Lloyd. A dainty Mazurka Caprice. A real novelty in 3/4.
FAIRYLAND, Lloyd. A bright, sparkling Intermezzo in 4/4 rhythm.
ETERNELLE IVRESSE, Lloyd. One of those dreamy Waltz tunes always sure to please.
ROYAL EMBLEM, Blon. A March full of spirit and go. In 2/2 rhythm.
DANCING MASTER, Vose. A lilting Waltz that just seems to drift along.
VACATION TIME, Lloyd. A very happy little number written in 4/4.

Used with much success for the pictures. 25 cents per copy. The above seven numbers sent postpaid upon receipt of $1.50. May be obtained through your local dealer.

The Fourth Liberty Loan is on, boys, and the opportunity has arrived to show the patriotism and thrifty enthusiasm of the picture player. Don't let it be said that the musician shirked his duty. Don't let it be said that he made no attempt to aid in the great fight for Democracy. Now is the time to show that we have a real live profession that interests itself in the civic life of the community and the state. Obscurity should not be our portion for will it be, if the musician playing pictures grasps this opportunity—it really is a privilege—to buy bonds to his utmost and sees that his fellow players do likewise.

Draft your Music

Recruit your orchestra and meet the appeal of the hour

The FOTOPLAYER

performs patriotically by releasing musicians needed in war service

The FOTOPLAYER furnishes the necessary musical appeal in a real human way. The reed and string tones are faithfully reproduced — the drums and traps complete a full orchestral equipment. . .

The FOTOPLAYER may be played manually or by roll. The double tracker device permits the operation of two rolls — optional in tune and tempo — to fit the mood and action on the screen. . . .

The FOTOPLAYER is built simple and strong, lowers the "up-keep" of the Pit and banishes the worries of an orchestra.

Hundreds of enterprising exhibitors are convinced that the FOTOPLAYER is a successful substitute for an orchestra.

LEADER'S SERVICE BUREAU.

Suggestions Offered. Questions Answered.

Q. WILL you kindly tell me through the Leader's Service Bureau the name of the national song of Italy?

A.—The official national air of Italy is the "Marcia Reale," but the "Garbaldi Hymn" is the most popular and universally used song of that country.

Q.—I am looking for a new supply of music for the piano. Would it be possible for you to notify some of the music publishers to send me catalogues that I may select what I need?

A.—You will find in the advertisements run in the department "Music for the Pictures" of the Moving Picture World, a considerable number of publishers who would be glad to hear from you. We suggest that you write to the Music Service Exchange, 567 Fifth avenue, New York City, as they seem to be especially fitted for supplying a library of all classes of music, from all publishers. Anything we can do to help you, rest assured will be done.

Q.—Who is the author of the now very popular song, "Keep the Home Fires Burning?" Can you tell me any thing about its origin?

A.—The writer of the lyrics of "Keep the Home Fires Burning," Mrs. Lena Guilbert Ford, was killed in a German aeroplane raid on London in March, 1918. Ivor Novello was the composer of the music for Mrs. Ford's words. He tells the story of the birth of the song in this way: "I do not know what inspired me, but I had in mind the keeping of as many homes as possible happy during the absence of the soldiers. The phrase, 'Keep the home fires burning' kept running in my mind. I called up Mrs. Ford, whom I knew for a good writer of lyrics, and talked with her about it. She came in and wrote the words in ten minutes. I did the music in about the same time and the whole thing was fixed up in about half an hour." That is the history of a song that sells millions of copies.

Q.—Can you tell me anything about Jan Sibelius. We read that he had perished by order of the Red Guards?

A.—We infer by your question that you mean the Finnish composer, Jan Sibelius. As a matter of fact, he was sentenced to death by the Red Guards a short time ago. But he escaped, and after hiding for days in a cellar, eventually reached Stockholm, where he now is. It seems that to save the life of Sibelius, a friend of his had to appeal to the war minister of Finland. This man was a liberated felon and a one-time cornet player. He knew the Sibelius compositions and favored them, hence his kindly offices were not difficult to get.

"The Legend"—A Grand Opera by Breil.

Who was that musical scoffer who loudly told us we had no musician in the picture industry? Have him paged that he may hear the glad tidings that brings refutation to his calumnies.

Signor Gatti of the Metropolitan Opera Company has announced, among the great operas to be presented during the coming season, one called "The Legend," composed by our old friend, Joseph C. Breil, of the "Birth of the Nation" fame. He also wrote the music for "Intolerance" and a series of exceptional photoplay hurries published by Chappell & Co.

With evident satisfaction, Signor Gatti says: "Mr. Breil's opera is entitled 'The Legend,' book by Jacques Byrne. It is a dramatic episode, the locale of which is a remote district in an imaginary Muscovite country. The author, I understand, has written a number of moving picture scenarios. Mr. Breil is the composer of several successful popular songs and has learned his technique as an operatic composer by writing incidental music for big cinema productions."

We congratulate Mr. Breil and wish him a wonderful success in his new musical field. We shall certainly be on hand to hear the opera and hope that the aforesaid scoffer sits in the adjacent seat.

The American Flag.

By Mayor L. C. Hodgson.

It is no fabric of silk or bunting—no mere beautiful cloth woven by human hands. It is a living thing, pulsing with the throbbing ardors of humanity, glowing with the fervor of immortal hopes, leaping out in ecstacies of love and dream. It is a song—the song of upward looking men. It is an altar fragrant with sacrifice. It is a garden wherefrom a nation grew, watered by the pure blood of heroes. It is a Heaven wherein the sanctified are gathered. It is the home where freemen dwell. It is the battlefield whereon honor strikes its blow for the cause of God. It is a flame springing up to consume injustice and wither the hosts of wrong. It is a voice that speaks with the eloquence of graves where sleep those who died to make it mean purity and righteousness. He who looks upon that flag with ransomed eyes beholds within its fold the valor and the faith of Lexington and Gettysburg—the blazing eyes of the embattled farmers at Concord Bridge—the fierce splendors of the ocean that was the cradle of Paul Jones—the clarion death cry above the ruined Alamo—the prayer of Washington at Valley Forge—the agony of Lincoln as he paced the midnight hours—and, crowning all, the wind swept faces of boys who die today along the thunder smitten hills of France. The flag of the United States is the Glory of God shining in the faces of those who dream of a world made clean enough to be the dwelling place of God. It turns our sorrows into exultation and our sacrifices into melody of service. For such a flag true men will always gladly die—for such a flag good men will always nobly live.—The International Musician.

HONOR ROLL

FELICIA

By

Perhaps no waltz has sold so well in phonographic records as "Felicia." It is bright in melody, treated in a masterly fashion and should prove a big acquisition to the library of the leader.

Harris Brings Out Several Song Hits.

A manager of one of the best known minstrel companies recently called at the Charles K. Harris offices in search of songs.

For an end number he chose "If You Hear Them Calling Clancey," "He's My Boy," and as a ballad, "Smile When I'm Leaving, Don't Cry When I'm Gone." Several other selections gave equal satisfaction; particularly, "Under the Blue Skies of France," and the new heart ballad, "Why Did You Come Into My Life."

The latest march number, "One, Two, Three, Boys, Over the Top We Go," is counted a big success, as is also the novelty ballad, "Bring Back Those Bygone Days to Me."

In the leading vaudeville houses, "Hello, Girlie," "Liberty Glide," "Sweetness, Honeysuckle of Mine," "At the Allies' Flower Garden Ball" and "Break the News to Mother," are making a decided impression.

Mr. Harris now has a number of manuscripts ready and they give promise of equal popularity with his already published musical successes.

THE WINDJAMMERS.

By Harold Willard Gleason.

They sing the praise of infantry
Which messes up the Huns,
An' also of artillery
That works the bloomin' guns;
The engineers an' cavalry
An' aviators, too,
All get their share of glory—
An' they earn it, very true—
But there's one branch of the service
They never think to praise,
Though deservin' it, by Pershing!
In a hundred different ways:

Chorus.
It's the windjammers, the windjammers,
The regimental bands!
An' it's many men are thankin' God
For some bass drummer's hands!
For they help to carry wounded
When the bearers ain't about;
When you get yours in No Man's Land
It's "blowhards" pulls you out!

They're a scraggy lookin' outfit
Of all sizes, sorts and shapes,
An' their mouths are mostly puckered
Like they're eatin' sour grapes.
But they cheer us to the trenches
Through the shrapnel, mud an' rain,
An' when our bit is over,
Sure, they play us back again!

Chorus.
Oh, the windjammers, the windjammers,
The regimental bands!
You can see the shoulders straighten
As we pass the "blowhards' stands.
They may not snipe the Fritzies
An' they may not cross the top,
But when "cheero" stuff is needed
They keep playin' till they drop!

Flammer Secures Sidney Homer's Latest.

It is seldom that a composer writes lyrics in every way equal to his music. It is all the more gratifying, then, to discover a song to which the composer has contributed a beautiful poem.

Sidney Homer has just written a song called "Homeland," which, not only his friends, but many musicians, not personally interested, consider the best he has ever done. It has a message for the whole world:

There's a homeland, a true land,
Across the sea,
Where they watch and wait,
And trust in me.
I'll go back to that land
When my task is done;
I'll go back to that land
When my fight is won,
And say to them that mourn;
"God's peace is yours forever more."

This song has just been published in two keys by Harold Flammer, Inc.

Toronto's Strand Theatre Bars Weepers During War

IN so far as the policy of the theatre is concerned the Strand Theatre, one of Toronto's large downtown film palaces, started a new régimé on Monday, September 30. On this date Manager Clarence Robson announced that the Strand would provide "entertainment only" during the forthcoming season and also that all but the brightest, happiest and cleverest photoplays would be barred. Manager Robson declared that he would have "no sex pictures, no propaganda and no weepers" and nothing unpleasant or questionable.

Chintz decorations gave place to velour trimmings, and the house was brightened in several respects. The projection at this theatre, under the capable direction of Charles Dentelbeck, president of the Toronto Moving Picture Operators' Local, was never any better than at present—probably never so good—and other details were also in ship-shape order. In other words, Manager Robson has done a great deal during the past three months or more to elevate the standard of the Strand.

The new season started off with a week's presentation of Geraldine Farrar in "The Turn of the Wheel." Other pictures on the program included the Universal Screen Magazine, Billie Rhodes comedy, "What Will Father Say?"; the current release of the Screen Telegram and the second chapter of the Canadian Government serial, "Re-educating the Returned Soldier." An orchestra overture completed the bill.

For the week of October 7 the programs were changed twice, the attraction during the first half of the week being Mabel Normand's "Peck's Bad Girl," and for the second half Constance Talmadge in "Good Night, Paul." Announcement was made that Geraldine Farrar and Rex Beach features would be shown for a whole week during the season, but otherwise programs would be changed twice weekly.

The Strand also has a printed program now, and names and addresses of patrons are being taken for a mailing list. No change has been made in prices, the top price for evening performances being 25 cents.

Strand Institutes Usherettes.

In keeping with the Government request to release for war work all male employees who can be replaced by women Harold Edel, managing director of the Strand Theatre, New York City, has instituted the usherette at his house. There are eighteen usherettes at the Strand trained with military discipline and in command of a captain and two lieutenants. Their uniforms are designed along the lines of the motor corps uniforms. All have been trained in first aid treatment under the direction of Dr. J. Victor Wilson. In their house duties they have been drilled by Mr. Edel himself.

Cameraman Gaudio Battles With Old Atlantic's Waves

EUGENE GAUDIO, "boss" cameraman of the Nazimova productions, will have reason to remember his work in connection with "'Ception Shoals," the picture version of the H. Austin Adams stage play, which has been produced in seven acts, and will be presented as a super-feature by Richard A. Rowland and Maxwell Karger. Not only has Cameraman Gaudio had unusual feats of photography to perform in connection with the picture, but for two weeks he was drenched to the skin in a chill wind while the sea scenes were being taken off the bleak New England coast. At the end of a human chain he succeeded in obtaining some thrilling "shots" of wreckage and monster waves. Superb health and the best of precautions warded off any ill effects from the experience. On one occasion the camera was washed away by the high waves after a heavy storm, and had to be recaptured by boatmen from the shore.

One of Gaudio's most difficult tasks in connection with "'Ception Shoals" was the reproducing within a Government lighthouse of the effects of the storm outside—the alternate shadows and blinding flashes as the tempest rages. Mme. Nazimova appears in these scenes, her dramatic ability adding to their interest and value. Pictures taken through the fog have also contributed to the difficulty of Cameraman Gaudio's work.

Eugene Gaudio has long been acquainted with danger. "At that," says "Gene" himself, "I don't take the foolish risks now that I did when I first began to handle a motion picture camera. My screen career began in Italy. One of my first jobs was to photograph the blowing up of a castle. In my zeal I got so close to the scene of the explosion that a big piece of the debris hit me and I was unconscious for the rest of the day. Since then I have at least tried to shoot my scenes before they shot me."

Gaudio was the chief photographer of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea."

Moss Contracts for Selects.

To take effect immediately, a contract has been drawn up between B. S. Moss and Select, whereby Moss' Hamilton Theatre, 148th street and Broadway, will have prior and exclusive neighborhood rights to first run Select releases.

Southern Theatre Men Combat Rumor Mongers

SEVERAL of the country theatres of Kentucky have undertaken publicity campaigns in their local papers to dispel quiet rumors which have spread through the rural districts to the effect that the Government is opposed to amusements during the war. These sort of rumors, which haven't any foundation or basis whatsoever, and which probably grew out of the attitude of the newspapers toward organized baseball, have threatened at times to throw a monkey wrench into the not over-sensitive machinery of the moving picture industry.

Jack J. Jourdaine, of the Union Theatre, at Central City, Ky., recently came out with the following announcement to the people of his district, most of whom are miners, farmers and mill hands.

"We have people who believe all forms of amusement should be stopped during the war. The Government says we should have plenty of amusement, especially good picture shows, during these trying times.

"A man in Texas was preaching against picture shows telling his people they should not spend their money for such things. This same man was ordered to leave the picture shows alone and talk on something else.

"Some people condemn the picture show and they never enter the theatre. The Union Theatre has received the Victory Screen Pledge from the Government, showing it has enlisted its screen in the service of the United States; also it has agreed to play all Government pictures no matter what the cost may be.

Visit Theatre and See for Yourself.

"Our Government says we should have moving pictures in these terrible times. If you do not believe in the movies be careful of your talk. Our Government backs them strong. If you talk against them you are going against the wishes of your Government.

"Do not remain at home and condemn a picture show. Visit the theatre and know what you are talking about."

A newspaper just over the line at Clarksville, Tenn., has come out with a similar editorial. This concern says: "Some people take the sufferings of war so hard that they feel that all amusements should close up. They regard it as unfeeling to continue dances and theatres while so many families have lost sons and so many are anxiously reading the casualty lists. Some towns are going so far as to close up places of amusement for the war.

"The Government has not, however, recommended any such policy. It recognizes the fact that people must have light diversions or we shall all get overstrained and morbid.

"National efficiency depends upon clean living. We can't have strong striking power and we can't turn out large industrial product unless our young people live decently and honorably in good homes. Any play or picture or theatre that can't make money except by belitting and undermining these principles is not fit to be shown in war time or any other. Let us have every possible diversion for these sad days, but let our diversions not counteract our national purposes."

NAZIMOVA WILL LEAD METRO'S EXODUS

Russian Actress Will Be the First to Start for California—Practically Entire Company To Go

THE exodus of the stars and directors of the Metro Pictures Corporation to the Pacific Coast will begin at once. Richard A. Rowland, Metro's president, recently made a trip to California to study producing conditions, accompanied by Joseph W. Engel, treasurer of the corporation; James D. Rhodes, of Pittsburgh, and Count di Cippico. While in the West he completed arrangements for the removal of the eastern plant to Hollywood, Cal., and the erection of extensive, new studios at the West Coast location. By the end of fall most, if not all, of the Metro and Screen Classics, Inc., organizations will be making pictures in California. Maxwell Karger, at present managing director of the eastern studios, will go to California to supervise the entire Metro output.

Mme. Nazimova will be the first to go, as her production, "The Red Lantern," will be begun in California in a few weeks. The Russian actress will be preceded by her director, Albert Capellani; June Mathis, of Metro's scenario staff; Henri Menessier, art director; E. J. Shulter, technical director, and Eugene Gaudio, cameraman, who will constitute themselves a company of pioneers to get everything in readiness for Nazimova's arrival and the beginning of the Nazimova production. Charles Bryant will go to California to play opposite the Russian star in "The Red Lantern."

Two other stars—Viola Dana and Hale Hamilton—will soon leave for California. Miss Dana will go at the completion of "Diana Ardway" John H. Collins will both adapt and direct it. Miss Dana will be accompanied to the coast by her mother, her director and John Arnold, her cameraman, and perhaps by a few players of her present cast.

Hale Hamilton will next produce one of three important stories which have been purchased for his use by Metro Pictures Corporation. His director and company for the West will not be chosen until he arrives in that location. Introduced to Metro patrons by means of leading roles in two subjects, he is expected to attain favor as a star in his own right in "Five Thousand an Hour," a screen version of the George Randolph Chester novel.

Harold Lockwood will also be an early arrival in California. Mr. Lockwood will move his entire working organization to the Pacific Coast. The journey will be taken as soon as the star completes "The Great Romance."

Emmy Wehlen will leave after she has completed "Sylvia on a Spree," by E. Forst, under the direction of Harry L. Franklin, and after she has finished her work for the fourth Liberty Loan campaign. Miss Wehlen has offered her services to the Government to use in any way the loan officials see fit, and will sing or make speeches, as they deem wise, whether in the East or the West, North or South.

Ethel Barrymore, Emily Stevens and other stars to be announced later will follow these at the conclusion of plans already made.

Mr. Baker, now production manager of the West Coast plant, will remain to work in co-operation with Maxwell Karger. A. S. Le Vino, recently "loaned" to the eastern organization by the western, will return to the Pacific Coast at an early date.

Alice Brady on Stage Has Stirring Evening

TO show their appreciation of Alice Brady as a screen and stage star, 300 members of the F. I. L. M. Club September 30 attended in a body the performance of Miss Brady's new stage success, "Forever After," at the Central Theatre. The party was given in honor of both Miss Brady and Miss Brady's father, William A. Brady. Inasmuch as Miss Brady is still making pictures for Select the F. I. L. M. theatre party was unusually appropriate. Included in the audience were about fifty employes of Select's New York exchange and home office.

William A. Brady was present and spoke from the stage, admitting that Miss Brady's work was noteworthy even if she was his daughter. Miss Brady responded and twitted her well-known parent with the fact that this was the first time he had ever given public approval to any of her stage efforts.

Mr. Brady aroused the big audience to enthusiasm when he announced that his daughter had just informed him that she had pledged herself to buy a thousand dollars' worth of Liberty Bonds every night during the three weeks of the fourth Liberty Loan drive.

Thrill and Pathos Abound In Short Story from Texas

"ANOTHER bit of Yankee Grit" flashed the Universal Weekly film caption, and patrons of the Dallas Hippodrome Theatre saw a sturdy American infantryman receiving the Croix de Guerre from a French general, who ceremoniously kissed him on both cheeks.

Back in the audience an old man stood up and cheered while the people near him glanced around curiously.

"That's my son. That's my boy Bernard," he shouted.

The soldier in the picture was Corporal Bernard B. Gooch. His father, B. P. Gooch, of Olive Branch, Miss., was spending a few hours in Dallas en route to his home.

This happened some weeks ago. When the elder Gooch reached Olive Branch he wrote to the Hippodrome management, telling them he had seen his son's picture on the screen. Since he had no picture of the boy he asked that a print from the Universal Weekly be sent to him.

The letter was turned over to Manager Ned Depinet of the Dallas branch of the Consolidated Film and Supply Company. He cut ten or twelve feet from the reel and sent it to the Mississippian with his compliments.

"I have received the film carrying the likeness of my son, Bernard," B. P. Gooch wrote back. "In the same mail I received notification that the boy had been killed in France. I learn that he was decorated for rescuing his wounded lieutenant under a hail of machine gun bullets. Some while later he was killed while leading a charge against a German machine gun nest."

Manager Ned Depinet has caused an enlargement to be made of the Universal picture and has forwarded it to the soldier's father. FOX.

DEDICATE YOUR SCREEN TO THE NATION

A. W. Ballenger Suggests a Practical Design for Houses Using the Government's Service

A. W. BALLENGER, of the Sun Theatre, York, Neb., makes the sound suggestion that houses dedicating their screens to the service of the Government give emphasis to this fact through the use of a special design. As he puts it:

DESIGN SUGGESTED FOR USE IN NEWSPAPER AND SCREEN WORK BY ALL HOUSES WHICH GIVE THEIR SCREENS TO GOVERNMENT SERVICE.

"This design will assist the industry to keep before the people the fact that the theatre is a part of the Government's organization for the quick and successful execution of war aims. The industry needs every bit of help it can get from the people in these times, and the easiest way to secure that help is to show the people that we are with the right side all the time and all the way."

To this end he had a drawing made, which he sent to George Creel, of the Committee on Public Information, with a request for comment. He received in reply this letter from Charles S. Hart, Director of the Division of Films:

"Your letter of August 27 addressed to Mr. Creel has been referred to me for attention, and in reply would say that the sketch which you submitted for advertising purposes meets with our approval in every way, and we hope that you will use it extensively.

"I wish to take this opportunity to thank you for your interest and spirit of co-operation."

Will Accommodate Other Exhibitors.

Mr. Ballenger's idea is a decidedly useful one. Theatres using the weekly release of the Bureau of Information are employing the trade-mark design, but this has a broader meaning and covers all services to the Government. It is simple in design, well worded and covers the ground thoroughly. Mr. Ballenger has had a sample cut made up, and is preparing to have a quantity made. He writes that he can add to his own order for any exhibitor desiring to obtain a cut and who will send his order in at once. The cost is 57 cents, which covers the postage. Mr. Ballenger does not make any profit on the cuts at this price, but is willing to give his time and trouble to help gain fresh recognition for the theatre. The price applies only to quantity lots, so the order should be sent in at once to reach Mr. Ballenger before he sends in his own order.

If the cut is inked before it is run on the press and a clean roller is passed over the surface and then over the glass of a slide the design will transfer sharply if not too much pressure is used.

Hodkinson to Release Initial Sunset Nov. 11

THE W. W. Hodkinson Corporation announces that it will distribute a series of six Frank Powell pictures produced for the Sunset Pictures Corporation of San Antonio. An adaptation of Ridgewell Cullom's book, "The Forfeit," co-starring House Peters and Jane Miller, the initial Powell production, will be released November 11.

Mr. Powell will produce his pictures in San Antonio, as already has been announced in the Moving Picture World, having chosen this section of the country because it is his intention to produce only outdoor stories of American life in the Southwest. Mr. Powell aims to picture the adventure and romance of life as it really happens.

An open-air stage, 80 by 100, provides floor space that permits interior sets to remain up until the picture is completed, permitting interior scenes to be photographed in some semblance of continuity. The Harlandale Sulphur Baths have been leased for a studio site, the buildings being used for dressing rooms and executive offices.

The Frank Powell productions are not a star series. The play, not the star, is to be the thing. House Peters and Jane Miller were chosen for "The Forfeit" because of their suitability for the roles. "Good Indian," the second Powell picture, adapted from B. M. Bower's book, features Jane Miller and Robert Elliott.

These pictures promise something new in the way of a feature series, and Mr. Hodkinson considers them a distinct asset to his program.

Metro Flag Has Gold Star.

A service flag with twenty-five stars—one of them of gold—has taken its place with three other patriotic emblems that are an ornament to the administration building at Metro's West Coast studios in Hollywood. These emblems consist of the national colors, a War Savings Society banner and the triple-barred flag, given to 100 per cent. subscribers to the third Liberty Loan.

The Stars and Stripes fly in front of the studio from a steel staff fixed in a concrete base, which was the personal gift of George D. Baker, manager of productions. On the same halyard, but beneath Old Glory, flies the War Savings insignia. The Metro studios were the first in the country to organize and have a War Savings Society regularly chartered by the Government at Washington.

The service flag just hung out from the studio eaves is for Metroites of east and west who have answered the call of the colors. The Hollywood plant has sent eight.

Theda Bara in New York.

Completely recovered from her recent illness and looking the picture of health, Theda Bara, the William Fox star, arrived in New York last week from Hollywood, in ample time to attend the premiere of her super-production, "Salome," at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre.

Miss Bara was enthusiastic about getting back to New York, and expressed her pleasure at being once more among her friends in the East. She was gratified at the splendid reception which her "Salome" has received wherever it has been shown.

There were ten persons in Miss Bara's party, including her sister, Miss Loro Bara. J. Gordon Edwards, Miss Bara's director, and Mrs. Edwards also made the trip, which was over the southern route.

DEVISES PLAN FOR LOAN INSTALLMENT

Universal's Assistant General Manager Puts Into Operation "Stamp System" for Employes

THE Universal has put into effect a new Liberty Bond plan which abolishes bookkeeping from the records of subscriptions by its employes. The system was invented by C. H. Macgowan, the assistant general manager. The officials of the Liberty Loan Committee have pronounced it better in many details than any process previously devised for the taking of individual bond subscriptions.

By Mr. Macgowan's method the corporation may enlist the subscription of all its employes, no matter how large the number, without the necessity of keeping a single written record. This overcomes the greatest difficulty that has been encountered by big institutions in their subscription efforts.

The task of taking subscriptions of employes on the installment plan has been one fraught with the greatest difficulty in previous loan drives. They were required to keep cash books and ledgers with progressive entries of every payment by every employe. Under the Macgowan plan not a single ledger account or cash book is needed in the entire operation of the subscription payments.

The Macgowan plan rests upon the use of the duplicate cards. The company keeps a file of master cards, each one bearing key number to correspond with the number of a card held by the employe. When the first installment of 10 per cent. is deducted from the employe's wages, he receives his card in lieu of the first payment on his bond. Thereafter one dollar for each fifty dollar bond or two dollars for each one hundred dollar bond is deducted from his pay envelope, and he receives the stamp as his receipt.

The master record held by the company consists of duplicate forms. The upper sheet is in the form of a block of forty-five stamps perforated so that they may be torn off individually. The duplicate form is a card and bears numbered squares, which correspond to the stamps on the other sheet. The two sheets are clipped together, the stamp sheet on top. The numbered square under each stamp shows the total amount that has been paid when the stamp is removed. When an employe receives the stamp he pastes it into its proper place on his own card, which is similar in form to the War Savings Stamp cards.

Plans were undertaken by the Universal last week, immediately after its system was perfected, to place it at the disposal of other corporations. The distribution department of the Liberty Loan Committee reported that many big establishments had been making frantic inquiries for some such system. The committee is equipped with a punch card system, providing for subscriptions on the twenty-three-week basis, and is supplying these cards to all applicants.

The Universal has about two thousand employes who will make their subscription directly through the company on the forty-six-week basis. It is expected that the Macgowan plan will make the installment task so simple and easy that neither the company nor the subscribers can ever make a mistake or lose a penny in the undertaking. Even if the employe should lose his duplicate card he would still be protected by flawless records in the cashier's hands.

The banking system provides easy financing of the plan, even though the Government allows only a ninety-day credit on direct subscriptions. The corporation, through banking accommodations, is able to extend its credit for financing the subscriptions of its workers for four times that period. The credit is extended three times after the expiration of the first ninety days, by the payment of one-half per cent. increased interest on the Loan above the interest allowed by the Government. This extends the installment period to a year, just as was provided for by previous Loans.

One of the chief advantages of the Macgowan plan, aside from extending the installment period and eliminating bookkeeping, is that it requires no special contact between the cashier and the subscriber. With the card system provided by the Liberty Loan Committee the cashier is required to handle every card every time an installment is made. He has to punch the company's card and also the employe's card. The Macgowan plan requires him only to clip out a coupon stamp from the master card and insert it in the pay envelope the same as a dollar or two-dollar bill, as the employe's receipt.

New Orleans Has Its First Woman Booker

NEW ORLEANS Film Row has its first woman booking clerk. The war requirements have made heavy drafts upon the dependable male employes in the exchanges, and the prevalent idea that the motion picture industry has been declared an "essential" industry has made others of the employes well nigh worthless because of their belief that they are under the protecting wing of the American eagle. They sometimes gave evidence of their indifference to the interests of their employers and a change became imperative.

Catherine Carroll.

Manager Harry Peebles, of the Consolidated Film exchange, was the first to try the experiment of intrusting the routing of films to a woman employe of his office. Miss Catherine Carroll was given the position of booking clerk, and she proceeded to demonstrate that she could make good. She has been an employe of the Consolidated for more than two years, and has proved herself efficient in every position to which she has been assigned. She has made good as a booking clerk, and the percentage of miss-outs and complaints has materially decreased since she took the job. She is obliging, alert and is a great favorite with exhibitors.

Edwin Arden, Screen Star, Drops Dead.

At the moment he had called for his wife, to accompany him to their home in Forest Hills, Long Island, Edwin Arden dropped dead at the door of the apartment of Elsie Riser, where Mrs. Arden was visiting while Mr. Arden was in attendance upon the rehearsal of a stage production in which he was engaged to appear. Heart disease was attributed as the cause of the well-known screen star's death.

Mr. Arden was born in St. Louis, February 13, 1864, and attained great popularity as a star upon the stage before he turned to films for his more recent activities. "The Eagle's Nest," "Barred Out," and "Raglan's Way" were plays that will be recalled as popular with theatregoers two decades ago when Mr. Arden was at the height of his stage vogue. Later he appeared as a principal player in numerous stage offerings without being starred. In pictures he achieved increasing success until his last appearance before the camera was marked during the production of "Ruling Passions," an offering lately reaching distribution.

World Buys "We Are Seven."

Eleanor Gates, the celebrated dramatist, has sold to World Pictures the motion picture rights to her successful play, "We Are Seven." Miss Gates is well remembered as the author of "The Poor Little Rich Girl," which marked her successful debut as a dramatic writer. It is the intention of the World Corporation to use this play as a vehicle for Louise Huff.

Four manuscripts of "We Are Seven" were sent out by Miss Gates, and as the quickest offer came from the World Company, who gave it a reading within twenty-four hours, this company was the fortunate one to secure this play, which by reason of its subject matter offers wonderful opportunities for picturization.

Ray Smallwood Going to Coast.

Ray Smallwood, head of the camera and photographic departments of New York's Metro studio, has been notified by Maxwell Karger, director general, to hold himself in readiness to leave at at any moment for California, to install the new photographic equipment at the firm's West Coast studio, where future productions will be made. Mr. Smallwood will have charge of cameramen, cameras, "still" photography equipment, and laboratory work are concerned. He will take a part of his present staff with him to the coast.

Motion Pictures as an Aid to Selling Trade-Marked Goods

THE following interesting address was delivered by Camilla Donworth, president of the Films of Business Corporation, before the Rotary Club of New York, on September 19. Miss Donworth is the first woman who has addressed the Rotary Club, and it must be admitted that she put her subject over in fine style:

America has put her shoulder to the wheel with a "Win the War" slogan or trade-mark. After the war is won we are going to face commercial conditions that will call for the best that is in us, and when people buying goods marked "Made in the U. S. A." read that trade-mark—the father of all American trade-marks—it must mean to them not only goods made in America, but the kind of goods for which they have asked.

Individuality—that most precious asset—became a part of every day business before we realized it. Yet it is amazing how difficult it is to get various businesses to realize that many of the operations used in making their various commodities are enthralling, inspiring, and would be business getters if consumers could see them.

The trade-mark that has become a slogan—and it isn't valuable until it has—is the most prized asset of the manufacturer selling goods under it. And a trade-mark does not have to be registered as a trade-mark to be one. It may be the name of the company, driven home so that when one thinks of something to be purchased the name of the company selling that commodity or service will flash into the mind. The things that we see remain in our memories much more distinctly and recur to our mental vision more frequently than the written or the spoken word. I shall never forget the morning that I was called on deck to see Gibraltar. There we were looking up at that wonderful old rock, but I missed something. Of course you all know what I missed—the name of an Insurance Company. I had so often seen that company advertised with the strength of old Gib, that when the actual physical fort came to view I expected to see the painted letters.

When a manufacturer applies a trade-mark to the article he makes he does so because he believes in his merchandise and wants to guarantee it. Does the consumer need to remember where he bought the trade-marked article? No, because the trade-mark itself is his protection-right through the jobber and the retailer, and he feels that personal contact; subconsciously if you will, but felt nevertheless.

Methods are decided upon, the trade-mark is given and now for making that trade-mark a tangible selling asset. The advertising manager gets busy with copy for newspapers, magazines, trade papers, and makes his plans for billboard and other outdoor display. I want to stop right now and remind you of the many times that you have been at the mercy of a behind-the-counter-salesman. Would this great army of salesmen be so indifferent to their work, so inclined to be ashamed of working in shops, so lackidaisical in their methods of handling customers, if they knew the romance of merchandise? Here is an avenue that the manufacturer has neglected. For these people are interested in life; they want to know that sheep are fleeced, yarn is spun and that articles that they sell over the counter are the finished product. Most of these people have had very little education so far as going to school is concerned; but think how they would boost if the manufacturer would take them into his confidence. No merchant can afford to send his selling organization to school where they would listen to long dry talks. Even if he felt such education would be an investment from his point of view, the salesman would not be willing. On the other hand, if the manufacturer would provide a motion picture actually showing how his commodity is made, giving through the picture enough of the history of that commodity to hold, entertain and instruct, they would not talk over the heads of their audiences, nor would they commit that unpardonable sin of patronizing. After the salesmen had seen how the commodity was made, don't you think goods bearing that particular trade-mark would be what they would offer their customers? I hate the word shop-girl just as much as the girl in the store. These girls would welcome a point of intelligent contact between themselves and their customers, and when they had been privileged to actually see the goods made, they would impart a considerable amount of this knowledge to the customer.

When an advertising manager writes copy, revises it, submits it to the powers higher up for maltreatment, gets it finally O. K.'d, and sees it in cold print, he is all through and ready to start for the next piece of copy. One of the pitfalls of selling the industrial motion picture has been the attempt on the part of the people making these pictures to get the advertising men to see this medium and treat it as they have been in the habit of treating printed copy.

"What is your circulation?" is the first question that the advertising manager wants answered when he is considering copy for a newspaper or periodical. He has become so accustomed to asking that question that he says to the man trying to sell him a motion picture, "What distribution can you guarantee?" This is not the correct mental attitude. Industrial motion pictures are not a by-product of play-pictures. They open up, on the contrary, a hitherto unknown appeal to the imagination. It is not a question of "How many people will see my picture?" but "Where can I show this picture to promote sales?"

The distributing of the industrial motion pictures promiscuously through theatres does not sell merchandise in proportion to the money expended. Apply the same amount of money, time ,energy and intelligence to reaching selected audiences and you create a demand in the minds of consumers of your own commodity for your goods, and where you can show the pictures of how you do things to the people actually, physically selling goods to the consumer you attach to yourself the strongest army of boosters possible to obtain.

The motion picture is really the party frock in the advertising wardrobe, and as such should be worn on state occasions and for the benefit of people actually and vitally interested.

I want to leave just this last thought with you—pictures need no translation. Through the eye we all speak the same language, and our modern American methods are now interesting and often amazing to the foreigner. This point is well worth considering right now when we are getting ready to meet post war conditions. The American manufacturer furnishes all kinds of selling helps to his dealers, whether they be domestic or foreign; and the motion picture is capable of showing the slothful dealer just how the more up-to-date man handling the same goods in a different territory uses the window displays, silent salesmen, posters and various other helps from the factory. The commerce of America must not be unprepared to care for foreign business after the war has been won.

Third of Burlingham Series at Strand.

The third of the Frederick Burlingham travel series being presented by the William L. Sherry Service is entitled "The Pilatus Railway," and was exhibited at the Strand Theatre, New York City, during the week of Sept. 29. The famous cog-wheel railway runs from the shores of beautiful Lake Lucerne to the Alpine peak known as Pilatus, and from the summit of which a wonderful panoramic view of the Bernese Alps can be had. Far below is a feast for the eye where the lake nestles in the valley and mirrors the eternal shows of the mountain tops. The Pilatus railway is the steepest in the world, so we are told; and we are not slow to believe the statement after we have followed its course up the mountain, through tunnelled passages to the summit. The picture is beautiful and cannot fail to please.

SWEET STORY TO BE SYNDICATED.

"The Unpardonable Sin," in which Blanche Sweet will be starred by Harry Garson, and which is now in the making under the direction of Marshall Neilan, will be syndicated as a serial in more than one hundred of the principal newspapers throughout the country by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, simultaneously with the releasing of the picture. When the story ran as a serial in the Red Book, so great was the demand that every edition was wiped off the newsstands almost as soon as it appeared. Harper & Brothers, who have published the story in book form, report the largest sales in the short space of time in their history. It is almost impossible to find the book in the libraries anywhere, so great is the demand.

In speaking of the story Colonel Roosevelt says: "'The Unpardonable Sin,' is a very, very strong book. It teaches just the lesson our people should learn. I am mighty glad Captain Hughes wrote it, and I hope it will be most widely read."

Captain Hughes, since writing the story, has become a major. The picture will be released about October 15.

Opening New Possibilities for Magnates to Ornament the Screen They Have Served

(Contributed by Vox Populi Cinematographi.)

WHAT'S to happen to the film industry if a horde of imitators follow up Robert C. Bruce's new scheme of making a real, honest-to-goodness "fillum executive" the leading figure of a picture? I allude to Mr Bruce's newest Educational classic, "'Tis Tough to Be Tender."

Honest, I'm not kidding—but Bruce is "'Tis Tough to Be Tender" picturizes a Bruce-personally-conducted trip to the Yosemite by Marion H. Kohn, the esteemed head of the Consolidated Film Corporation, of San Francisco.

Mr. Kohn was pretty well "steamed" as well as esteemed before he got back. A few of the titles indicate the "third degree" that Brother Kohn experienced at the hands of Bruce and Mother Nature.

After a few hours in the saddle the top of a granite boulder was soft in comparison—at least it didn't jiggle.

Oft repeated doses from the "Joys of Journeying on a Jouncing Jackass" strengthened our hero.

He camped by the side of a swift, shivering, slippery stream, and cooked by the sense of smell.

After a week in the woods his reflection made him homesick.

Even a river running backward failed to interest him.

Softan Tender never really mounted his noble steed, he just sorta wished himself on.

The "Call of the Wild" shrank to an extremely weak whisper.

With infinite care he pressed his trousers and packed the mule.

Moral.—It is far easier for a cow to fly than for some men to flirt with Nature.

Now the point I make is: What's to happen to the magnates generally if other producers follow Brother Bruce's example and make them the heroes of picture stories? A suggested list of such titles might thus star the peerless leaders of our noble art:

Creeling: A romance of government in the film business.

Fuel Conservators: A lay of heatless, lightless workers.

Million-Dollar Stars, by Adoph Zukor.

From Watch Chains to Selects: The life story of a film magnate.

Fillum: Featuring the Eastman Kodak and Jules Brulatour.

Hrady, the Harmonizer: A story of the N. A. M. P. I., the M. P. E. L. A. and the A. E. A. in three parts.

Cooking the War Menu: All-star cast, including "To Hell with the Kaiser," Rowland; "Official War Review," Brunet; "Under the Red Triangle," Laemmle; "America's Answer," Hart, "Battle Cry of Victory," Blackton; Liberty Loan, Chief Zukor, and American Red Cross, Captain Fox.

Do you see the possibilities?

Let the lid be clamped down firmly and tightly while there be yet time.

Beware of this strange innovation, for if the dramatized executives should become the popular rage what would become of the blonde-haired, blue-eyed lassies and Apollo-like male stars of the screen and their regular jobs?

Film Finishes Seen and Unseen.

THE low-down on film finishes comes in pictures we present to right and left of this explanation:

Here we have, in one illustration, Barbara Castleton in a touching finish—just the kind you have been waiting for and expecting through five reels of film entertainment. Now you can all go home.

Good night!

Then again there is the finish that Johnny Bowers is mean enough to wish onto the play. Miss Castleton is not so barbarous as the snickery-sneer she wields would make her appear.

Lamp the expression on her fair face. It don't match the sizzling hate that registers on the gun-man's map.

Exploiting an Essential Industry Located on the Virgin Islands.

PRESIDENT Shallenberger, of the Arrow Film Corporation, walked into his office one day last week at peace with all the world. Meditating silently, he lifted his sterling silver letter opener and proceeded to expose to the glare of his amber-colored desk light, the day's correspondence.

Sufficient to disturb his equanimity for the rest of the day was the following letter from the C. C. Hite Attractions of Cincinnati:

"It is impossible to use the print of 'The Deemster.' No doubt this print was in good condition when you shipped it to Akron, but when Akron shipped it here, they failed to send us the sprocket holes, and as we have no extra sprocket holes on hand, we could not make a new print out of this."

Dr. Shallenberger immediately replied as follows.

"We have instructed our laboratory to send you five thousand feet of sprocket holes at once, as they probably have a large supply of these in the perforating room. We have sent along a sufficient quantity so that you could make up several pictures if you care to.

"You should know that adjustable sprocket holes are hard to procure on account of the marshy lands in the Virgin Islands."

It is expected that the C. C. Hite Attractions will become less sprockety in their future correspondence.

ARTHUR H. JACOBS, general manager for the Norma Talmadge Film Corporation, sent a belated contribution to the Red Cross the other day as the result of a discovery he made while going through an old safe at the studio. He found an envelope marked Red Cross with $134 in currency in it.

Upon investigation it was found that this amount had been collected from studio employes during the Red Cross drive last spring and through some oversight had been left in the old safe instead of being remitted to Red Cross headquarters. Mr. Jacobs sent a check for the amount to the Red Cross and pinned a slip to the check reading:

"From the employes of the Norma Talmadge Film Corporation. Better Late Than Never."

MANAGER LeROY BICKEL, Metro's Dallas branch, has discovered a little Texas town where the high cost of living irks not and the value of small change has not perished from the earth.

Driving down from Oklahoma in his touring car, Bickel arrived at the town of Plano in Collin County, where a wheel flew from his automobile, luckily in front of the village garage. Figuring that the machinists had an hour's hard work he went to the village inn, where he was served with an excellent country dinner for thirty-five cents.

Back at the garage an hour later he found mechanics toiling manfully with his car. The wheel once adjusted, promptly flew off again. After four hours labor the repair men reported the machine in running order. Bickel reached for a "yellow back" to foot the bill.

"How much?" he asked with a sad, expectant smile.

The garage crew consulted among themselves.

"Would twenty-five cents be too much?" hesitated the foreman.

The film man paid a dollar, and escaped rejoicing.

Vitagraph Pushing Its Blue Ribbon Production

ALICE JOYCE, Vitagraph star, soon will be presented in a de luxe production of "The Lion and the Mouse," most famous and successful of the plays written by the late Charles Klein. It will be released as the third Alice Joyce production on the Blue Ribbon feature program during the present season, and it is promised by Vitagraph that the production will be the most important in which the star has been presented since her memorable appearance in "Within the Law." Miss Joyce will be surrounded by a strong cast, and the production will be directed by Tom Terriss under the personal supervision of Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company.

Another exceptional production for Miss Joyce to follow on completion of "The Lion and the Mouse" is "The Cambric Mask." This is one of the series of stories bought by Vitagraph from Robert W. Chambers. "The Cambric Mask" will be the fourth Chambers story in which Miss Joyce appears as heroine, and, like the others, will be made under the direction of Tom Terriss.

Earle Williams, who has been on the coast since last Christmas, returned to New York about a week ago to make one production in this section before the cold weather sets in, and upon its completion will return to California for winter work. "A Gentleman of Quality," by Frederic Van Rensaelier Dey, was selected as the picture for him to work on in the East, and he has already started on it. Mr. Williams is being directed by Wilfrid North. He has been provided with a splendid supporting cast, which includes Agnes Ayres, Florence Deshon, both of whom have attained popularity in Vitagraph Blue Ribbon features. "A Gentleman of Quality" will be third in a series of eight productions in which Mr. Williams will be presented on the Blue Ribbon program during the ensuing year.

Harry T. Morey, who will be seen in nine productions during the year, is engaged in naming scenes for a play which bears the working title of "Dan La Roche." Mr. Morey, who has Paul Scardon for his director, has recently completed "Hoarded Assets," which will follow his "The King of Diamonds" on the Blue Ribbon program.

Corinne Griffith is now engaged in making a Blue Ribbon feature written by "Bud" Fisher, which has the working title of "The Green Gullabaloo." In this picture she will be under the direction of Kenneth Webb. The play is a drama, with a keen vein of comedy embedded in it, and it will be the second Corinne Griffith feature on the Blue Ribbon program, being released about six weeks after "Miss Ambition."

Gladys Leslie

Who Plays the Part of Nancy, and the Old Mammy Who Portrays Mammy in Vitagraph's Blue Ribbon, "The Mating."

Gladys Leslie, who has a new director in the person of Joseph Gleason, has started on a new feature, the working title of which is "Betty's House Party." This will be her second picture in the series of nine in which she is to be presented on the Blue Ribbon program, the first, "The Mating," having been released on October 7. In her second picture, Miss Leslie will have as her leading man Huntley Gordon.

Bessie Love, newest of the Vitagraph stars, has completed "The Dawn of Understanding," in which she is to make her debut on the Blue Ribbon program November 4, and she has now started work on her second feature, which will have the title of "The Enchanged Barn." Miss Love has for her director David Smith, and she is to be seen on the Blue Ribbon program in nine productions during the coming year.

Three More Releases in Outing Series.

Three subjects have been added to the series of Outing-Chester adventure pictures released through the exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation.

"A Jungle Joy Ride," "Unblazed Trails" and "A Tropic Melting Pot" are announced as releases No. 13, 14 and 15 of the series. They were scheduled for September 22, 29 and October 6. The three additional pictures are productions distinctly of the same type as the original twelve releases—unusual camera journeys to strange and out of the way spots.

"A Jungle Joy Ride" portrays the cameraman's trip down the rapids of the River Potaro, British Guiana. It is a sequel to "Kaieteur," one of the earlier releases. "Unblazed Trails" is a trip to the ice field and peaks of the Canadian Rockies, pictures of the unexplored, unknown wilds of the frozen north. It presents a wide range of scenic beauty, and portrays the magnificent beauty of the snow-clad range of Western Canada.

In "A Tropic Melting Pot" there are pictured the many types of humanity who have drifted from the corner of the universe to the South American continent. The gay cities and unknown villages of the Latin-Americans are perhaps the most cosmopolitan settlements in the world.

In "The Law That Divides," Kathleen Clifford's newest Plaza picture for distribution by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, this star is first seen as a fourteen-year-old street child whose vocation is selling newspapers and whose avocation is picking pockets. Several years later finds her the adopted daughter of a wealthy society woman and a much sought after debutante.

"The Belle of New York" Is Coming.

Marion Davies and her director, Julius Steger, have taken the first scenes for her Select picture, "The Belle of New York." This is a film adaptation of that famous Broadway musical comedy of years gone by in which Edna May created the part of the Salvation Army lassie. Miss Davies' leading man will be Robert Walker, an actor prominent both on the speaking stage and screen. Other important parts will be played by L. Rogers Lytton and Etienne Girardot. Miss Davies will have the part of the Salvation Army lassie.

The plot of the story is built around a young and fickle spendthrift who meets his fate in this fair member of the Salvation Army after he has been turned out by his parents. The "lassie" takes him in charge, and before she completes the young spendthrift's reformation she herself becomes "the talk of the town."

Exchange Men Rewarded for Hustling.

The Universal last week announced the awarding of prizes to exchanges who make the best showing in handling Universal business. There was a prize to the office showing the best results on special attractions; a prize to the one doing best with Bluebirds and "short stuff," and a third prize to the office making the best collection for the month of August.

After carefully figuring out the showing of the various exchanges the company announced the awards as follows: Prize on special attractions to Des Moines; prize on Bluebirds and "short stuff" to Milwaukee; prize of collections to Portland.

Brabin Grabs Unexpected Background.

A romantic scene will be shown in "Little Miss Moneybags," the Metro play in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne will shortly appear as co-stars. This particular effect was gained when the two players, out riding with Director Charles Brabin, dismounted and stood beside a wayside pool where they saw their reflections mirrored in the waters below. The alert director at once caught the unsual beauty of the suggestion and worked it into his picture.

Farnum to Make Picture in East.

After a brief rest, William Farnum, the William Fox star, will begin the production soon of a Standard picture at one of the William Fox studios in Fort Lee.

The picture bears the temporary title, "Freedom," and is based on an original story by E. Lloyd Sheldon, which, it is understood, has to do with the war and profiteering, and details the regeneration of a criminal through the great conflict.

Frank Lloyd will stage the production, being now on his way East from Los Angeles.

"The Road Through the Dark" Is Nearly Finished

WITH the entire cast complete and two weeks' work behind them, Clara Kimball Young is making great progress on "The Road Through the Dark," which will be the first of Miss Young's second Select series.

The leading man will be Jack Holt, who played opposite Miss Young in "The Claw," while the others in the east are Henry Woodward, Eleanor Fair, Bobby Connolly, John Steppling, Lillian Leighton, Elmo Lincoln, E. M. Kimball and Eugenie Besserer. In this production Miss Young again will be under the direction of Edmund Mortimer. J. M. Voshell is technical director, Nat Deverick is assistant director and Arthur Edeson is the photographer.

"The Road Through the Dark" is a story of the early period of the war. The scenes are laid in American and European cities. Miss Young has the part of a French girl who has been living in this country, that of Gabrielle Jardee. Jack Holt plays His Highness, Duke Karl of Strelitz. The first few months of the big war find Gabrielle a captive. She has become the companion of Duke Karl in order to save her younger sister from the hands of the Prussians. It is the girl's associations with the officer and the events that lead up to America's entry into the struggle that furnish the plot for the story. It is described as a thrilling tale and one in which Miss Young will be seen to good advantage.

Emil Chautard Delivers His Initial Paramount

THE first of the series of Paramount pictures, "A Daughter of the Old South," which Pauline Frederick recently completed under the direction of Emile Chautard, has been scheduled for release October 20. This release is also the first made by the French producer under his present contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

The authors of "A Daughter of the Old South" are Alicia Ramsey and Rudolph de Cordova, whose stories have recently gained popularity in magazines and periodicals. They have provided the ground work for many picture successes. In this one they are said to have builded a plot of unusual interest, in which is woven the manners and customs of the Creoles of the old days. Margaret Turnbull adapted the story to the screen.

As Dolores Jardine, a young Creole, Miss Frederick is said to delineate in captivating style the character of a girl reared in the South, who has strong American ideals, and who rebels against being married off without her consent to a man not of her own choosing. Pedro de Cordova, in the role of a wealthy Spaniard, appears as Miss Frederick's leading man, and in the supporting cast are Vera Beresford, Mrs. T. Randolph and Rex MacDougall.

"The Kaiser Bride" Will Be Gail Kane's Next Picture

AFTER several weeks of intensive search for a story for Gail Kane, during which time a large number of scripts and books were read, a script was especially prepared by John Colton.

"The Kaiser Bride" is the title. It touches lightly on the war, but its main theme is centered on conditions as they existed in Berlin previous to the war, and their influence on certain circles in America at the present time. It is a serious study, highly dramatic in its nature, and carries a strong message.

Mr. Colton is a student of sociology and a writer of experience. "The Kaiser Bride" is the first story of a series he will prepare for Miss Kane, which will show the effect of the war on various phases of life. The production might be termed a war picture of a different order from what has been issued up to this time.

Schenck Again Is Crown Prince.

Earl Schenck, who has received scores of flattering comments on his impersonation of the German Crown Prince in Ambassador Gerard's production of "My Four Years in Germany," again plays the part of the Kaiser's recognized son in the new eight-part state rights feature, "The Kaiser's Finish," which was made by S. L. Warner, with his brother, A. Warner, in charge of sales.

In this latest Warner production, Mr. Schenck has a dual role. In the early part of the story he appears in the character of Robert Busch, an American-reared youth, who does not become aware of his actual parentage until he is about to enlist in the American Army.

Later he is seen as the Crown Prince, masquerading as that self-styled dignitary in the midst of German Imperialism. His likeness to the Kaiser's son is said to be equally as effective as it was in the Gerard production.

Dougherty Is with L-KO.

Charles Dougherty, the clever Sunshine comedian, is now at work with the L-KO. His line of humor is decidedly original and different from the usual movie comedian's. The L-KO also has secured Merta Sterling to play opposite. Miss Sterling is well known in the comedy field, having been featured with L-KO before. The title of the first picture has not been decided upon. Vin Moore is the director, with Park Reis at the camera.

Alice Brady in "Her Great Chance." Constance Talmadge in "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots."

Picking Strong Cast for "Wilson or the Kaiser?"

"EVERY member a star" is the slogan of Director Charles Miller in regard to the big multiple-reel Screen Classics, Inc., patriotic production, "Wilson or the Kaiser?" now in process of production, under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger, its author. One of the two name-parts has already been chosen, as Henry Kolker will play the Kaiser, and an agent of attainments and ability to play the part of President Wilson is now being sought.

Henry Kolker is one of the well-known actors of the American stage. He has recently been associated with Albert Capellani in the direction of productions starring Mme. Nazimova. The management of Creighton Hale as the young Alsatian hero, Conrad Le Britt, has already been announced.

Earl Schenck, who did such a brilliant piece of work as the German Crown Prince in the Screen Classics supercreature, "To Hell With the Kaiser," has been selected to play Lieutenant Ober, the arch villain of "Wilson or the Kaiser?" The part is a difficult one, portraying the worst side of the Prussian autocrat. Mr. Schenck has made a specialty of Prussian roles, and his skill in achieving the appearance of the Crown Prince is almost uncanny.

Florence Scott is one of the important players chosen by Director Miller for "Wilson or the Kaiser?" Miss Scott will play Edine, a Belgian woman, a role of powerful dramatic opportunities.

A player well known to every American theatregoer is Joseph Kilgour. He will play the part of the hated Von Bissing, who will go down to history not as a great general but as the murderer of Nurse Edith Cavell. Still another celebrated player already engaged is E. J. Connelly. Mr. Connelly occupies a distinct position on the American stage by reason of having scored heavily both in the gayest of musical comedies in humorous roles and in vitally dramatic parts on the stage and on the screen. Baby Ivy Ward will be seen as a tiny Belgian, the little daughter of Elaine.

Margaret Aston, a grandniece of the original Margaret Aston, who was a nurse associated with Florence Nightingale at the time of the Crimean War, will play Edith Cavell. Miss Aston has been chosen for the part on account of her resemblance to the martyred English nurse, and the sympathetic quality of her treatment of such roles.

Maggie Weston will play Kaiser Wilhelm's mother, Charles Edwards will play Rev. Joseph Wilson, father of the President of the United States. There will be numerous other parts, all of which will be intrusted to players of known worth. Leander De Cordova and Edward Lawrence are asociated with Charles Miller in the direction.

Lees Will "Tell It to the Marines."

Under the direction of Arvid E. Gillstrom, who recently completed "Swat the Spy!" Jane and Katherine Lee, the diminutive Fox stars, have begun what is described as a new fantastic comedy of today entitled "Tell It to the Marines." The story was written by Mr. Gillstrom. On the conclusion of filming this picture, Mr. Gillstrom will go to the Fox studios at Hollywood as the vanguard of the Fox producing forces' movement to the Pacific Coast this winter.

Duncan Working Fast on His Next Serial.

William Duncan, Vitagraph serial star and director, is now engaged on his next serial, "The Man of Might." It is scheduled for release January 27 next. Duncan began work on this fifteen-episode story, which was written by Albert E. Smith and Cyrus Townsend Brady, around September 1. By October 1, he had completed the first four episodes, and was starting on the fifth. This is producing at the rate of about two reels a week, and if he maintains his pace he will have the entire serial finished about the second week in December. As in "A Fight for Millions," Duncan will be supported in the new serial by an all-star cast, including Edith Johnson and Joe Ryan.

Dorothy Dalton Completes "Quicksand" for Paramount

DOROTHY DALTON has completed "Quicksand," her latest Paramount picture, and is all ready to embark on a new one at the Ince Studio under the same director—Victor Schertzinger. "Quicksand" is the story of a wife's devotion and loyalty in the face of disaster. The new picture will be from a story by Jean Lynch.

Fred Burnett is on the last lap of "Fuss and Feathers" for Paramount, and will take a brief rest before starting work on her next wherein she will again be supported by Douglas MacLean and directed by Fred Niblo. Just what the story will be is as yet unannounced.

Charles Ray is to be a blacksmith soon in a Paramount picture. The young Thomas H. Ince star is putting the finishing touches on a new Paramount film called temporarily "The Dreamy Dub." The next production will show Ray as a stalwart young horse-hoer in a country town. Whether there will be a spreading chestnut tree is as yet unknown. Jerome Storm will direct.

Henry B. Walthall has completed "The False Faces" under Irvin Willatt's direction, and has returned to the speaking stage. Thomas H. Ince, very naturally, believes "The False Faces" will be a great picture. As this will probably be Mr. Walthall's last screen appearance for some little time, great interest will presumably attach to the production, which will be released as a Paramount-Artcraft special.

"Caught in the Act" Is Hyland Story.

"Caught in the Act" has been chosen as the title for the production which Peggy Hyland, the William Fox star, has now under way. It is a picturization of a magazine novelette by Fred Jackson, the playwright and magazine writer. Miss Hyland is working under the direction of Harry Millarde. The picture is full of delightful comedy situations of the kind which Miss Hyland has a peculiar talent for enacting. Mr. Jackson has won an enviable reputation for writing fast comedy, and in this story, it is said, he has exceeded all previous efforts.

Select to Release Three Subjects During October

THREE releases of Select's star series are announced for October. These will be Constance Talmadge, who is presented by Lewis J. Selznick in "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots"; Alice Brady in "Her Great Chance," and Clara Kimball Young in "The Road Through the Dark." Norma Talmadge, in "The Forbidden City" was released September 30, and therefore virtually becomes an October release also.

"Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots" is one of this star's comedy plus drama stories, this being a description of the plight in which Mrs. Leffingwell discovers herself when Mr. Leffingwell suspects his wife of leading a double existence. The story is by Augustus Thomas. The scenario is by Edith Kennedy. Walter Edwards directed the production.

"Her Great Chance" is a film adaptation by Charles Maigne of Fannie Hurst's novel, "Golden Fleece." Mr. Maigne has combined the offices of scenarioist and director, and reports from Select's projection room are to the effect that the result has more than justified the attempt. Miss Brady plays the part of a young shop girl who is in love with Broadway's "million dollar kid." The "kid" is a wild sort who takes Lola (Miss Brady) on evening joy rides to a famous road house. Often he proposes to her, but Lola refuses. Later she learns that the "kid" has lost his fortune, and then, with her chance come to make the man she loves a real man in the sight of the world, Lola asks him to propose again. The picture is quite different from anything Miss Brady has hitherto done.

"The Road Through the Dark" is based on a magazine story of the same name. The story is that of a French girl who becomes the companion of a Prussian officer in order to save her younger sister from disgrace. This picture will be the first of Clara Kimball Young's second Select Series.

McGowan Is Not Superstitious.

Jack McGowan must have been conspicuous by his absence when the gods handed out superstition, for that Universal director who is creating Eddie Polo's new serial of the sawdust ring, "The Lure of the Circus," defied fate on Friday, the thirteenth of September, by starting in on episode thirteen, which bore the official number in the Universal accounting department of 3013. And just to show that he didn't care what happened, he used stage No. 13 and shot thirteen scenes and then stopped.

"A Jungle Joy Ride" (Mutual).

"A Jungle Joy Ride," the next Outing-Chester release through Mutual, was filmed on a twenty-mile trip on the rapids of Potaro River, in British Guiana. The trip starts from the beautiful falls of Kaieteur, which were recently pictured in detail in an Outing-Chester subject, and extends to Georgetown. This release will be followed by pictures of the Canadian Rockies under the title of "Untraveled Trails," showing that primitive country in all its natural beauty.

Jewel to Release "Borrowed Clothes."

Jewel Productions has arranged to circulate a feature picture which was formerly called "Orange Blossoms," in which Mildred Harris is starred. The title has been changed to "Borrowed Clothes." This picture will be released November 4.

Gloria Joy Winning.

Now that all of the current series of Oakdale Productions, six in number, have been released an estimate of these feature dramas containing the juvenile note uppermost is possible from the response notes at General Film exchanges. Branch managers of the company pronounce the exhibition worth of the Oakdales thoroughly established, it being reported that exhibitors showing one of the picture have run all six.

The winning personality of the little girl star, Gloria Joy, is credited by exchangemen as providing the main element of appeal, while the consistent cleverness of the stories provided for her, and the excellence of the adult casts surrounding her, insured the wearing quality of the series. Being comparatively a new star, little Gloria Joy had to win entirely on her merits.

Morey Featured in Drama of Vengeance.

"The King of Diamonds," the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature scheduled for release the week of October 14, presents Harry T. Morey in the first of the nine productions in which he is to appear on the Blue Ribbon program during the coming year. It is a swift-moving drama of love and vengeance which gives him exceptional opportunity for foreeful acting. In succession he is seen as a wealthy business man, a castaway and a Diamond King, each change being a link in a chain of amazing situations leading to a powerful and thoroughly logical conclusion.

Mr. Morey is supported by Betty Blythe, whose fine work as Mme. Arnot in "Over the Top" is recalled; by Jean Paige, star in many O. Henry two-reelers, and by George Majeroni. The scenario is by Edward S. Balloux, and the picture was produced at Vitagraph's Brooklyn studio under the direction of Paul Scardon.

Bessie Barriscale, Cowboyette.

Bessie Barriscale's latest production shows the star in a down-to-the-minute Western role, as may be surmised from the title, "Two-Gun Betty." It is so modern that it includes that latest of American war products, the farmerette, and the star appears as something entirely new—the cowboyette.

Disguised as a boy, the heroine applies to her chum's brother for a job as cowpuncher. The ranchers and his riders see through the masquerade at a glance, and proceed to serve for her delectation some of the regular old wild and woolly West, with its shootings, sprees and hangings.

Howard Hickman, Miss Barriscale's director, is the author of the story, which was put into screen version by Jack Cunningham. It is being filmed at the Brunton Studios and will be released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Thomas Ince Will Show "Home Folks" to Soldiers

THOMAS H. INCE, producer of Paramount and Artcraft pictures, has conceived a patriotic plan to place on the motion picture screens in American training camps and at Y. M. C. A. huts overseas close-up pictures of the home relatives of the boys at the front. This idea will be carried out by Mr. Ince himself, assisted by a complete motion picture organization from his studio, and will comprise another patriotic "bit" by this well known producer.

The plan was tested at San Diego, Cal., and was found to be a success. At Balboa Park many thousand relatives of boys "over there" formed in line before the camera and presented their best smiles to be shown to their loved ones overseas. Newspapers, military and civic officials gave the project enthusiastic co-operation. Among those who gave their assistance were Rear-Admiral W. F. Fullam, commander of the Reserve Force, Pacific Fleet; Brig.-Gen. Peter W. Davison, temporarily in command of the 16th Division at Camp Kearny, and Capt. W. D. Brotherton, commander of the naval training station.

In addition to taking pictures of the relatives and friends of those in service, Mr. Ince filmed many scenes that will cheer the boys at the front. These will be edited with the close-ups, so that the entire picture will be of great interest to those who view it. C. Gardner Sullivan, chief of the Ince scenario staff, is writing the subtitles, and Bert Lennon is in charge of general arrangements. J. Parker Read, Jr., has charge of distributing the films among camps, theatres and Y. M. C. A. huts behind the lines abroad.

At San Diego, out of a population of 90,000, 30,000 turned out for the camera. The idea will be worked in other cities, including the largest in the country. The scheme has been generally indorsed, and the films will be donated absolutely free, even to expressage to New York and the Y. M. C. A.

After the war Mr. Ince will ask that films be returned so that he can donate them to the cities in which they were taken for preservation, record and showings in years to come.

Dillon Making Initial Walsh Picture.

Having played young patriots, newspaper reporters, live young business men and pretty nearly every other conceivable male role, George Walsh is now going to play the part of a crook—one, however, who has seen the error of his ways and reformed. In a play in which he is working under the direction of Edward Dillon, a new William Fox director, Walsh portrays the role of a high-class cracksman, a sort of super-craftsman who wouldn't stoop to breaking into anything less than the sub-treasury. The story, which has "The Splendid Malefactor" as its working title, was written by George Scarborough.

In making the picture, Mr. Dillon has planned several exceptionally striking sets. Mr. Dillon, who is one of the best known comedy directors in the country, has long been an admirer of George Walsh, and has definite ideas as to the kind of a play for which this actor is best suited. In his opinion the present production is that kind of a play, and Mr. Dillon promises the speediest and best George Walsh picture yet released.

Demand Everywhere for Educationals Reported

DEMANDS for Educationals are increasing both in America and abroad, according to E. W. Hammons, vice-president and general manager of the Educational Films Corporation. Several important foreign deals were put through in the Educational's offices last week.

Through the Windmill Film Corporation, Reginald Warde, managing director, prints of the Bruce "Scenics Beautiful," Ditmars' "Living Book of Nature" and Wright's "Mexico Today" were sold to twelve foreign countries, ally or neutral. Besides Great Britain, for which Mr. Warde's company is the regular channel of Educational sales, the customers included firms in France, Holland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Japan, South Africa, Australia and Brazil.

The most remarkable feature of the domestic situation is the rapidly increasing vogue of the company's product in the Middle West. For example, no less than 150 houses in the Chicago district are using Bruce, Witmars and Wright short-reelers and International cartoon comedies. That record is the record of less than three months since the R. C. Cropper Exchange at 220 South State street, Chicago, was put in charge.

Proportionately encouraging results are being achieved in Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis and Kansas City.

"It is only a question of speedy organization," says Mr. Hammons, "for Educational subjects to be used in all the better theatres of the United States. The Educational Distributing Corporation, Charles A. Dean, president, is now actively engaged in this work, so that the West and the Southwest will be as strongly represented in our distribution as the East or the Pacific Coast."

Evelyn Nesbit Begins New Picture.

After a week's rest following the completion of "The Woman Who Gave," Evelyn Nesbit, the new Fox star, has begun work on her second production for William Fox.

This picture is entitled "I Want to Forget," and is described as a powerful drama in which a butterfly redeems her soul in the United States Secret Service. James Kirkwood wrote the script, and is directing the picture.

"Such a Little Pirate." "When Do We Eat?" "The Man from Funeral Range."

Fourteen Directors Are Now on William Fox Staff

WITH the acquisition of James Kirkwood, Charles J. Brabin, Edward Dillon and Arvid E. Gillstrom, William Fox now has fourteen directors on his staff.

Mr. Kirkwood is engaged on his first Fox production, starring Evelyn Nesbit. It is entitled "I Want to Forget."

George Walsh is the star who will work under the direction of Mr. Dillon. Mr. Dillon and Mr. Walsh have already begun work on "The Splendid Malefactor," written by George Scarborough.

Mr. Gillstrom is at work on his second Fox picture, another Jane and Katherine Lee feature, entitled "Tell it to the Marines," and on the conclusion of that will go to Hollywood as the vanguard of the Fox productions forces' movement to the Pacific Coast this winter.

The veteran for the William Fox directorial forces is J. Gordon Edwards, who, before his return East last week, finished his thirtieth production for Mr. Fox.

R. A. Walsh is another wizard of screencraft on the Fox staff. Director of "The Honor System," "Woman and the Law" and "The Prussian Cur," he is one of the mainstays of the Fox producing organization.

Another newcomer to the Fox forces is Charles J. Brabin, who is engaged on his first Fox subject, an Excel picture starring Virginia Pearson.

Director of "Les Miserables," "Riders of the Purple Sage," "The Rainbow Trail," and other Fox successes, Frank Lloyd is another Fox director who stands in the front rank of the producing profession.

Richard Stanton, who directed "Why America Will Win" and other big Fox pictures, also is a veteran of the profession.

Edward J. Le Saint, who has directed Gladys Brockwell in all of that well-known star's most recent pictures, has established an enviable reputation for turning out pictures that succeed.

Youthful, and possessing originality and a unique ability for injecting speed into a picture, Lynn Reynolds, director of Tom Mix, has come rapidly to the front in the recent years.

Kenean Buel, long the director of Jane and Katherine Lee, is another veteran on the Fox staff.

Edmund Lawrence, who has directed Virginia Pearson in some of her best plays, is one of the pioneer directors of the film industry.

"Bonnie Annie Laurie," with winsome Peggy Hyland as its star, is the work of Harry Millarde, Fox director, and is a criterion of the fine, wholesome and clean-cut which this director does.

A slapstick comedy genius of the films is Henry Lehrman, the creator of the successful Fox-Lehrman Sunshine comedies.

Paramount Lists Its October Short Subjects

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's October list of short subject releases, which includes four two-reel comedies, has each of the three brands issued under the Paramount trademark represented, there being scheduled two Paramount-Mack Sennett comedies, and one Paramount-Arbuckle release.

The release for October 6 is the Paramount-Mack Sennet comedy, "Beware of Boarders," in which Chester Conklin, Ford Sterling and Mary Thurman are featured. The release date of the third Paramount-Flagg satirical comedy, "Tell That to the Marines," in the exploitation of which the U. S. Marine Corps is co-operating with the producers, is set for October 13.

In "Whose Little Wife Are You?" the Paramount-Mack Sennet release for the 20th, one of the biggest casts of Mack Sennet favorites ever to appear in a single comedy will be seen. In the final comedy of the month released the 27th, "Fatty" Arbuckle appears as "The Sheriff" in a burlesque of the usual type of Western movies.

The subjects of the four Burton Holmes Travelogues for the month are as follows: October 6, "Sights of Suva"; 13, "Methodized Cannibals"; 20, "Fifi Does Its Bit"; 27, "Fire Walkers of Bequa."

The Bray Pictograph releases are as follows: October 6, "Big Men Wanted—Perilous Occupations — Cartoon, 'Von Leon's Non-Capturable Balloon';" 13, "Taking the Terrors Out of War—Our New Possession—Cartoon, 'Bobby Bumps' Incubator';" 20, "A Machine That Thinks—A Finley Nature Study—Cartoon, 'The Greased Pole';" 27, "How Movies Move——Scenic—Cartoon, 'Goodrich Dirt'."

Vitagraph's 1918-19 Booking Chart Ready.

The Vitagraph Company this week has available for exhibitors the 1918-19 edition of the Exhibitors' Booking Chart. For several seasons past Vitagraph has provided these film record books for the exhibitors of the country, giving them out at the beginning of each year. This season they have advanced the distribution date to October 1, which marks the inauguration of the company's new Blue Ribbon Booking plan and policy, so that exhibitors may start keeping tabs on their features now and carry them in the one book until next fall.

The chart is a compact book of pocket size, and plenty of space has been provided for the exhibitor to mark in each day's program during the year. The book is printed on a high-grade, ruled paper, and carries spaces for the exhibitor to mark in prices, receipts and weather data on each day's program, so that at the end of the year he can tell at a glance what he did on any given day or with any specific feature.

Vitagraph gives these booking charts away free to all exhibitors who apply for them, and during the coming week large supplies will be on hand for distribution at all Vitagraph exchanges.

Hunt for Young Actors on Coast.

The lack of young actors was never more keenly felt at the Jesse D. Hampton studios, where J. Warren Kerrigan pictures are produced, than when they came to select the cast for "Three-X Gordon." Fully a dozen good looking, well dressed young men with stage or screen experience were needed, and there is hardly this number of young film actors in Southern California that are not wearing khaki or navy blue.

Ernest Warde, who directed the picture, almost exhausted his patience before he corralled a sufficient number to complete the cast. Mr. Warde hopes Kenneth B. Clarke, author of this picture, and any author of future Kerrigan pictures, will build their stories around fewer young men.

Included in the dozen of young fellows in "Three-X Gordon" are Jack Gilbert, Jay Belasco and Stanhope Wheatcroft. Other members of the large cast are Lois Wilson, leading woman; Walter Perry, Charles French, Gordon Sackville and Leatrice Joy. "Three-X Gordon" will be released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation on October 28.

May Allison Starts "Thirty Days."

May Allison has started work in her fourth picture to be produced at Metro's West Coast studios in Hollywood. It is called "Thirty Days," and as the title would imply, is a comedy that finds the basis of many merry moments in the imposition of a jail sentence.

"Thirty Days" is a motion picture version of an original story written by Luther A. Reed, now in the Army. It was adapted for the screen by George D. Baker and Tom J. Geraghty. Mischief is the motif and high speed the tempo. The scenes are in a small town. Miss Allison's leading man is to be Robert Ellis, recently of the Morosco Stock Company in Los Angeles. Webster Cullison will direct the production, with William E. Fildew at the camera.

Triangle's "Pretender" Shows Desmond as Cowboy

"The Pretender," Triangle's release for October 13, offers William Desmond in the role of a rollicking cowboy. Mischievous, and with the reputation of a loafer, his future looks anything but promising. For Bill is never able to keep a job. But his friendly attitude and a willingness to help a pal in distress lead him into an adventure where his unusual ability is recognized, and he reaps a rich reward.

Desmond is Bob Baldwin, and he has just been fired from the Diamond K ranch. As he rides away over the plains he meets Percy Longstreet, who has been thrown from his horse, and learns that Percy is the new schoolmaster for Frelos Beanos. His sister, Dolly, is on her way to join him, and they now face starvation, since Percy is unable to proceed with his job. Bob volunteers to run the school for Percy, obtaining his credentials. And when Dolly arrives she is willing to help the pretender until her brother's recovery.

The cowboy's original methods of disciplining the children win the admiration of the town officials, and they are disinclined to believe the accusation which Otheloe Actwell makes toward Dolly and Bob. Bob severely punishes Otheloe for annoying Dolly. And Bob, who finally wins a place in the world, makes Dolly his wife.

One Year's Activities in Filming Industry

THE effectiveness of the industrial picture has been brought home to many of the nation's manufacturing enterprises during the past year by the industrial department of the Universal, established just a year ago by Harry Levey. From a small beginning the department grew rapidly until it now occupies considerable space, and has a complete staff of cameramen, scenario writers, traveling representatives and a full office force.

Pictures have been made for the Agricultural Department of the United States Government, American Jersey Cattle Company, American Tobacco Company, Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, Associate Advertising Clubs of the World, Boy Scouts of America, City of New York, Colts Arms and Machine Guns, Curtiss Aeroplane Company, Henry Disston & Sons, Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, Fleischmann Company, B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company, Korry Krome Leather, H. R. Mallinson Company, Mutual Service Corporation, National Cash Register Company, Pyrene Manufacturing Company, Smith Brothers, Typhoon Fan Company, Bernhard Uhlmann Company, United States Red Cross, United States Shipbuilding Board, E. & Z. Van Raalte, Westinghouse Manufacturing Company, Western Electric Company, Warner Brothers and others.

Every feature of human interest in great manufacturing industries, all of the complex processes of many industries, are brought to the screen by films made by this department of the Universal.

Action Aplenty in "The Canyon Holdup."

Plenty of action with a background of mystery and romance is promised in the next release of a Wolfville Tale in the October program of Broadway Star Features. "The Canyon Holdup" again brings favorite characters of Alfred Henry Lewis' books into a clash of motives. Patricia Palmer, who has been heroine in so many of the Wolfville Tales, is one again as the daughter of an old gold prospector, Otto Lederer taking the latter role.

Great interest is being worked up in the Wolfville Tales, which are made at the Western studio of Vitagraph for Broadway Star Features. A happy combination of action, characterization and story is accomplishing the design of making these Western tales worthy of release alternately with O. Henry Stories. General Film Company is meeting success in placing both series of production in the same theatres.

The next subject on this program will be an O. Henry story, "The Ghost of a Chance," a society comedy-drama with Agnes Ayres and Edward Earle.

Binney Working on "Velvet and Rags."

Harold J. Binney is working at full speed on the Vangie Valentine production of "Velvet and Rags," an original scenario written especially for Vangie Valentine by George Edwardes-Hall, who is confident of the merits of this theme and states that in his estimation it is the best ever written by him.

Romance, the eternal question of true love's course, humor and a strong dramatic theme runs through the story. The love interest, which is very strong, and the outcome of which leaves the onlooker in doubt until the final scene, is handled in a very unconventional manner. The scope of the production lends impressiveness to Vangie Valentine's first offering.

The subject is receiving justice in the capable hands of Harold J. Binney, who is personally directing.

The offering is presented by Harold J. Binney Productions, Inc., and will be released through the W. L. Sherry Service in November.

Star Cast Supports Mary MacLaren in "U" Special

MARY MacLAREN'S latest Universal special attraction, "The Vanity Pool," which will be released November 4, is advertised as a six-star photoplay, for, instead of having merely a group of stock actors and actresses in her support, the cast for Miss MacLaren's newest production includes five really prominent players. Franklyn Farnum, formerly a Bluebird star, shares leading male honors with Thomas Holding, who has been featured in productions.

Marin Sais, former Kalem star; Anna Q. Nilsson, former Metro star, and Virginia Chester, former Biograph and Mena star, all have important roles in the support. "The Vanity Pool" was based on the story by Nalbro Bartley, and has been turned into a screen offering by Ida May Park, Universal's woman director.

The photoplot portrays the intrigues of political life, and points out how scrupulously clean a would-be office seeker must keep his public linen. The star is seen as a tenement girl who finds that love is but a hollow mockery, when she discovers the man of her heart has a socially ambitious wife.

The release of "The Vanity Pool" on November 4 represents a rearrangement in the special attraction schedule. This picture was to have been released two weeks earlier. "Kiss or Kill," featuring Priscilla Dean, will be released October 21. November 18 will be the release date for "Danger—Go Slow," featuring Mae Murray. The current special attraction is "Three Mounted Men," featuring Harry Carey.

Y. M. C. A. with "Around the Clock."

The Y. M. C. A. is conducting some unusual activities to put over the "Around the Clock" series. The pictures reveal war service activities. They are distributed by Universal. The first subject was "Around the Clock with a Rookie." The second one just out is entitled "Around the Clock with a Sailor," and the third one entitled "Around the Clock with a Marine" will soon be issued.

Y. M. C. A. secretaries and workers in all cities are co-operating with Universal exchanges in getting the pictures a wide circulation. In several cities the secretaries have arranged with the telephone company to call up every home in the city and notify the residents that the picture in question will be shown at a certain theatre on a certain night.

Goldwyn Star Breaks Her Rule Against Face Powders

MUCH against her wishes, Madge Kennedy has had to go back to paint and powder properly to portray her role in her newest Goldwyn picture, "A Perfect Lady," from the Rose Stahl stage success by Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf. For the star is Lucille Le Jambon, performer-in-chief of the Merry Models Burlesquers; and everyone knows that powder is as essential to a burlesque queen as it is to an American doughboy fighting the Hun.

Shortly after the completion of "Nearly Married," her second Goldwyn picture, Madge Kennedy, then but a comparative newcomer among motion picture stars, announced that thenceforth the public would see her as she really is—sans paint or powder, stipulating only that there would be a dab of artificiality here and there to keep the camera from making her face look ghastly white. So when Miss Kennedy began work on "Our Little Wife," make-up was conspicuous by its absence. And ever since she has refrained from using the artifices without which other screen notables would be lost.

In "A Perfect Lady," Miss Kennedy is required to use gobs of paint and powder—probably twice as much as is used by any other star in a single production. It isn't the paint and powder, however, that gives Madge Kennedy a strikingly different appearance. A little beauty spot on her cheek is responsible. All of which makes Madge Kennedy as pretty a leading woman as ever graced the boards of a burlesque house.

"When I found I had to go back to the make-up," said Miss Kennedy, "I decided to give myself a real burlesque touch with a bit of plaster on my cheek."

Though "A Perfect Lady" compels her to use rouge and enamel, the Goldwyn star is enthusiastic about the story. She finds the role of a burlesque star even more interesting than her Ruth Betts in her recent Goldwyn success, "The Kingdom of Youth."

Select Expects Much from Dixon's 'The One Woman'

SPECULATION is rife among exhibitors as to the trend of public opinion that will greet Select Pictures' special attraction, "The One Woman," by Thomas Dixon. Although the picture has not been shown, it is generally conceded from advance reports that it will prove an exceptionally strong box office attraction, inasmuch as it adroitly handles the question of free love in connection with the growing socialistic spirit.

Frank Gordon (Lawson Butt) is the pastor of a fashionable church. He becomes imbued with this socialistic spirit to such an extent that the trustees demand his resignation. His wife is heartbroken, but Kate Ransom (played by Clara Williams) urges him forward in his new ideas and furnishes the capital with which Gordon establishes the Temple of Man. In the meantime Gordon and Kate Ransom realize their love for one another. When Gordon's wife demands an explanation and urges him to give up the other woman and remain true to her and his children Gordon asks, "Would you have me live with you, loving another woman?"

"The One Woman" is described as a masterly piece of photographic art which holds the attention to the last inch of film; as a tense, gripping and cleverly directed story, and one that furnishes a direct appeal to every class of patronage. The picture was produced by Mastercraft.

The story has been skillfully handled from every angle by Reginald Barker.

Big Things After the War Are Seen by World Pictures

THE glorious news that is filtering back from "Over There" of the succession of victories to the Allied arms clearly indicates to the officials of World Pictures that any moment the German resistance will crumble. There is no gainsaying that the effect of the Bulgarian surrender is so tremendous that it has affected the morale of our enemies. Cable reports received by way of Amsterdam tell of a speech of the Kaiser wherein he prays his people to have faith in him. He pleads with his subjects to stand by for a little longer. The war is going to be over sooner than any of us in our wildest hopes imagine, and then——

What are we here in this country going to do now and for the next month or so to keep pace with the tremendous demands made of us for supplies of all kinds to refit those countries devastated by four years of rapine, destruction and demolition? Raw products as well as finished necessities for rehabilitating and rebuilding will be asked of the United States. There will be such an avalanche of prosperity here as has never been equaled or will possibly ever occur again. The theatres will be packed and jammed with people anxious for entertainment and to take care of the seething masses clamoring at the box office for admittance, will tax the resources of the exhibitor. Keenly realizing all the future has in store for the motion picture industry, World Pictures is even now preparing to meet this wonderful situation. Raw stock, plays, stories, in fact every essential of the motion picture business is being collected so that nothing will be lacking to answer the call of the theatre owners not alone of the United States, but also of the world.

Victrolas Used to Boost Geraldine Farrar Film

THAT exhibitors of America have waged a persistent and intelligent advertising campaign for Geraldine Farrar in her Goldwyn Star Series triumph, "The Turn of the Wheel," is evidenced by the various novel and effective exploitation plans which have been sent to Goldwyn's service department. Several good ideas have developed.

Manager Joseph Grossman, of the Standard Theatre, Cleveland, employed a Victrola stunt in conjunction with the presentation at his house of "The Turn of the Wheel." The leading Victrola dealer of Cleveland furnished, without charge, a handsome new model Victrola. The instrument was placed on the stage of the Standard, and two of Miss Farrar's records were used. The organist accompanied the Victrola rendition, which multiplied the volume and created the illusion that Miss Farrar, herself, was singing on the stage of the Standard.

Three of the Victrola dealers of Cleveland arranged very artistic window displays, using the 22x28 action picture and a complete set of the 11x14 colored photographs. A neatly lettered card was also displayed announcing that "The Turn of the Wheel" was playing a week's engagement at the Standard. Mr. Grossman reports the complete success of this unique plan.

Advertising Aids on "Wives of Men."

In order to assist exhibitors in properly exploiting "Wives of Men" the Pioneer Film Corporation has prepared attractive advertising material together with posters, consisting of twenty-four sheets, two styles of six sheets, two styles of three sheets and two styles of one sheets, all in full color and depicting some of the most dramatic scenes in the play. It is claimed to be "paper with a punch." In addition, there are press sheets outlining campaigns of various kinds, heralds, one, two and three column cuts and thumb nail electros, window cards, slides, music cue sheets and several styles of lobby photographs.

More Normand Funmakers Coming.

Mabel Normand's announcement that she will be seen only in broad comedy until peace is proclaimed was good news to her admirers, judging from the patronage given her first Goldwyn comedy, "Peck's Bad Girl." Her second broad comedy, "A Perfect 36," by Tex Charwate, also author of "Peck's Bad Girl," is said to be even funnier than that one, which gave her the sparkling role of Minnie Peck.

Miss Normand's request that she be seen only in broad comedy received ready response from Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn. Immediately he communicated with several of the best-known comedy writers, with the result that he has received excellent material for four more productions that are certain to bring out every angle of Mabel Normand's wholesome store of comedy.

Klein Completes Blackton Score.

Manuel Klein, composer and musical director, has completed the musical score for J. Stuart Blackton's "The Common Cause." During its production Mr. Klein has been one of the most interested visitors at the Blackton studios in Brooklyn. He declares he finds his greatest inspiration for the musical arrangement of a photoplay in watching the scenes rehearsed and filmed and meeting the players who, for the time, are the characters in the story. The propaganda theme of "The Common Cause," which is to be distributed by Vitagraph, has an unusual appeal for Mr. Klein, and his musical setting will reflect his enthusiasm.

Many "Beats" Claimed for Animated Weekly

THE Universal Animated Wekly No. 44 is showing pictures of President Wilson drawing the first draft number in the great lottery which effects the service order of thirteen million registrants for Uncle Sam's armies. This is the first time that President Wilson has personally taken part in the drawing. He consented to do so in view of the fact that Secretary of War Baker is in France with General Pershing. Immediately after the President and other Government officials, including Vice-President Marshall and Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives, had drawn numbers the Universal cameraman leaped into a waiting automobile and caught a train for New York.

In the same reel are shown pictures of the opening of the Fourth Liberty Loan in New York, Baltimore, Chicago, Milwaukee and other cities. Almost all of these events occurred on the same day, and it was only through the Universal's widespread organization that it was possible to get them into the laboratory in time for current issue. Included in this subject are pictures of President Wilson in New York, Vice-President Marshall dedicating the Altar of Liberty in Fifth avenue, temporarily renamed the Avenue of the Allies; Secretary Daniels in loan activities in Chicago; Milwaukee's remarkable demonstration of loyalty; Colonel Theodore Roosevelt greeting Cardinal Gibbons and delivering a Liberty Loan speech at Baltimore.

One of the features of this issue of the Animated Weekly is a flight over the city of Baltimore by J. C. Brown, Universal staff cameraman. These pictures show the city of Baltimore from several thousand feet in the air, and include dozens of other airplanes flying with the machine from which the cameraman worked.

Pro-Germanism Aids Anti-Hun Feature.

When "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," was shown recently at the Star Theatre, LeSueur, Minn., it caused the revelation that the town was pretty well sprinkled with sneaking pro-Germans. These persons tore down posters advertising the picture, and sent letters through the mail denouncing it.

Mrs. Henrietta Starkey, manager of the Star, gave an exhibition of grit by issuing circulars proclaiming the outrages and daring perpetrators to let themselves be known. Her circulars announced that pro-Germans were not wanted at the theatre. The result was a record-breaking attendance for the two-day showing.

Mrs. Starkey wrote a letter of appreciation to the Jewel Exchange. She declared the pro-Germanism has proved the best kind of advertising.

"The Spender" Bert Lytell's Next Metro.

"The Spender," by Frederick Orin Bartlett, will be Bert Lytell's next Metro picture, his sixth starring vehicle under the Parrot brand. "The Spender," a short story, appeared in the Saturday Evening Post several months ago. It has been made into a photoplay scenario by Albert G. Kenyon and George D. Baker, Metro's Western manager of production.

"The Unpardonable Sin" as a Book Caused Furore

WITH work on "The Unpardonable Sin," Harry I. Garson's second big independent production with Blanche Sweet nearing completion at the Sunset Studios in Los Angeles, moving-picture people are wondering whether the photoplay version of the story will cause the same furore as did the original fiction narrative in the Red Book Magazine and later in book form as published by Harper Brothers.

"The Unpardonable Sin," latest of the Rupert Hughes' novels, written after the author had become a captain in the United States Army, has "got the country by the ears." Protests against its circulation have been made by thousands of volunteer censors of what the American public should read, see, or be told. Officials, supposedly speaking with authority, have said that "it was not the intention to have the book there (in libraries) or to asist in its circulation." And rushing to the support of the publication and to the important principles involved prominent daily newspapers, among them the New York Times, and such international characters as former President Theodore Roosevelt have come out flatfooted in commendation of the story and in equally strong criticism of those who have been opposing its circulation.

Because of this agitation the status of the story in its printed form has already been pretty well established, and "The Unpardonable Sin" is a "best seller." Big libraries everywhere have placed it on their shelves and the public is reading it with avidity. Through one comparatively small branch of the New York Library 500 copies are in circulation—and in such active circulation that requests for the book are being honored only on three weeks' advance application. The moving picture people's great interest is just what is going to happen when the picture story is offered, first to the various censor boards throughout the country and then to the public, is therefore very natural. It would seem that "The Unpardonable Sin," transferred to the screen in a manner which would guarantee it the same support that the book is receiving, bids fair to be a genuine box-office sensation.

The Rupert Hughes' story is one of the strongest pieces of anti-Hun propaganda which has been released since the World War began. An incident based upon facts as disclosed in reports of the Bryce Commission and in reports of the French and Belgian governments and given a fiction dress which makes it a lot more mild and inoffensive than the reports themselves has been taken as the foundation of the story, and on this foundation has been erected a recital of fact-fiction which brands the German militaristic system as the most damnable creation of all times.

Another phase of the story is represented by some bitter denunciations of the pacifists of this country, but supporters of the story think it inconceivable that any objection to this at this particular time would have any weight against the story.

In the screen version Blanche Sweet appears as Dimny Parcot, a young American girl who, impelled by one of the strongest conceivable motives, battles her way through Belgium in search of her mother and sister some time after the Germans had overrun the plucky little country and had begun their horrible campaign of atrocities.

Mr. Garson will handle his film affairs from his office in the Aeolian Building, New York.

Novelty for "A Perfect 36."

The service department of Goldwyn has announced to exhibitors the preparation of an original exploitation campaign for "A Perfect 36," Mabel Normand's second Goldwyn Star Series production, to be released October 28. The title and subject of this play—another broad comedy—offers opportunities for unique exploitation.

An advertising herald in the shape of a corset—a "perfect 36" model—is the stunt conceived for "A Perfect 36."

The herald is printed on white stock, with attractive hand-lettering in black. The circle at the top of the herald—the section that shows the head of Mabel Normand—is cut to permit of hanging the heralds on doorknobs.

The plan for the distribution of the corset heralds is simple. Boys may be engaged to place them on the doorknobs of every home. Several days prior to the showing of the picture ushers or box-office attendants should distribute them as hand-bills. The heralds also may be inclosed in envelopes and used for direct-mail campaign.

"Wolves of Kultur" Serial Begins Week of October 13

THE Pathe program for the week beginning October 13 is headed by the opening episode of the patriotic serial, "Wolves of Kultur," featuring Leah Baird, with Sheldon Lewis. It is called "The Torture Trap." The interest of the spectator will be held from the beginning, and the first episode impressively gives a forecast of the stirring quality and intense action to follow.

Harold Lloyd appears in a most laughable creation, "Why Pick on Me"? With Mr. Lloyd appears Miss Bebe Daniels.

The Official War Review, in its variety of scene, its movement of men and operation of guns over a wide area of Europe, gives a most comprehensive idea of the magnitude and tragedy of the great struggle.

The Post Travel Series takes us in an odd and thoroughly interesting trip to Barbadoes, British West Indies.

The Ninth episode of "Hands Up," called "A Leap Through Space," has a big thrill, and ends in a quiet, dark scene full of dramatic suspense, with a grim menace awaiting Echo Delane.

The seventh issue of "The Far Flung Battle Line" released on October 13 is a war story in human colors titled "The Egyptian Contingent Behind the Lines." It shows the descendents of the Pharoahs, thousands of quick-moving workers, in Egypt and in France, on shipboard and land, all doing their bit in helping along the great cause.

World Picture Shows How Uncle Sam Has Made Good

THAT the release of the recent World picture, "The Road to France," in which Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley are starred, means much, not alone to the people of the United States, but also to the citizens of the neutral powers, is appreciated by a number of influential men connected with certain activities of our Government. Isaac Marcosson, writing in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post, dwelt on the activities of the German Government in consolidating all of the film companies of that country in order more efficaciously to disseminate propaganda favorable to the Central Powers. Special effort was being made to create favorable comment in Holland.

The principal purpose of "The Road to France" is to show clearly without a possibility of doubt that we will and are doing all that we said we would do in order to win this great war; that we could create a marvelous amount of shipping in a space of time that borders on the miraculous; that not alone could we transport three or more million men to France, but in addition keep them abundantly supplied with food, clothes, and every known implement of warfare in such quantities as to render victory sure. That all of the much vaunted and tremendously advertised efficiency of the German war machine was a pigmy when compared to the Yankee "treat 'em rough" methods.

"The Road to France" will be shown in every allied and neutral county in Europe. It carries Pershing's message in its answer to his call for ships. Speaking the universal language of sight it permits no misgivings on the part of the man, men or countries that Uncle Sam is able to go through to the bitter end to Victory.

Tarzan Publishers Aid in Film Exploitation

THE First National Exhibitors' Circuit and the publishers of the Tarzan books have completed the details of a joint arrangement whereby exhibitors who show "The Romance of Tarzan" will receive maximum local advertising cooperation from the dealers who will take direct advantage of the present publicity accorded to the sequel of "Tarzan of the Apes" as a sales stimulus for the entire library of Tarzan works by Edgar Rice Burroughs.

The sudden revival of public interest in the character of Tarzan, immediately following the release of "Tarzan of the Apes" as a special motion picture production, brought orders to Mr. Burroughs' publishers from scores of book sellers throughout the country who previously had not carried a stock of Tarzan volumes. This intensified the distribution of the books and added a great number of new dealers, making the retail representation throughout the United States nearly 100 per cent. complete.

As a result of the first campaign there is now at least one dealer in practically every city and town in the country who handles the Tarzan books.

With this representation as a basis from which to work, the publishers are sending out this week to every local retailer an announcement of the details of the co-operative arrangement between them and the First National Exhibitors' Circuit. This first notification recommends to the dealers that they prepare immediately for a special window display of Tarzan books to begin simultaneously with the first announcement by the local exhibitors of the presentation dates for "The Romance of Tarzan." It is also suggested to them that they supplement their own window displays and interior store advertising with copy to be run in the local newspapers concurrently with the theatre copy on the Tarzan sequel, thus obtaining a double tie-up between the production and the books.

On the theory that many exhibitors will use window displays of their own, the publishers will suggest to their retailers that they endeavor to effect a co-operative arrangement with the theatre owners to share the outside window space, so that the production and the books can be advertised simultaneously in this way.

The books to be advertised as popular priced editions are "Tarzan of the Apes," "The Return of Tarzan," "The Beasts of Tarzan," "The Son of Tarzan" and "Tarzan and the Jewels of Opar." This latter book is one of the newest Tarzan works by Mr. Burroughs, and will be marketed this month in the higher priced editions only.

"Gypsy Trail" Well Fits Washburn's Native Talents

IN selecting "The Gypsy Trail" for Bryant Washburn's premiere picture on the Paramount list rare judgment was exercised, it is declared, because in it he has a role which fits him like the proverbial glove. The feature has been scheduled for release October 20.

This character, which Washburn is said to clothe with the habiliments of reality, is a youth with splendid traits, but lacking in aggressiveness. He loves devotedly a wealthy girl, but his lack of the ability to win her by forceful means keeps him always a laggard in the race for her hand. A fine cast was selected to support Mr. Washburn, with Wanda Hawley as leading woman. Walter Edwards directed, and the screen version of Robert Housum's play is by Julia Crawford Ivers.

Gaumont News Reels Boost Liberty Loan

TO assist in making the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign doubly successful, the Gaumont News and Graphic are featuring news subjects of how the campaign is being conducted all over the United States. Distributors and exhibitors are enthusiastically cooperating, and it is believed that picture-goers will be pleased with what might be called the Liberty Loan issues of these two independent news reels, as no expense has been spared to make these numbers even more attractive than usual.

Gaumont News No. 28 shows the opening of the campaign by President Wilson, who visited New York for that purpose; the dedication of Liberty Altar by Vice-President Marshall and the Belgian Ministers, and a rousing demonstration in Baltimore, where Col. Roosevelt helped raise more than half of that city's quota the first day of the campaign are also pictured.

The Gaumont Company also prepared for this issue of the "News" an attractive Liberty Loan subject. This was posed by well-known beauties of the Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic. The selection of the numbers in the 18 to 45 draft by the President, Vice-President and prominent Government officials is another timely item among the other subjects, which include the first football game of the season, saving rubber for the Red Cross, an outing for marines, etc., etc.

Gaumont Graphic No. 28, released on Friday, October 4, continues the newsreel campaign to stimulate subscriptions to the Fourth Liberty Loan and includes what so far as is known is the largest Liberty Loan poster, made of cement on the side of a mountain, and visible many miles away. Other items include battle scarred Italian soldiers who will tour the United States, a reproduction of the battle of Vimy Ridge, by the Michigan State troops, etc.

From abroad come pictures of a Red Cross colony in Italy, where homeless persons from bombarded towns are clothed and fed; and many views from the front. A crash on the New York subway, where two cars telescoped killing two and wounding thirty others and other timely topics complete the reel.

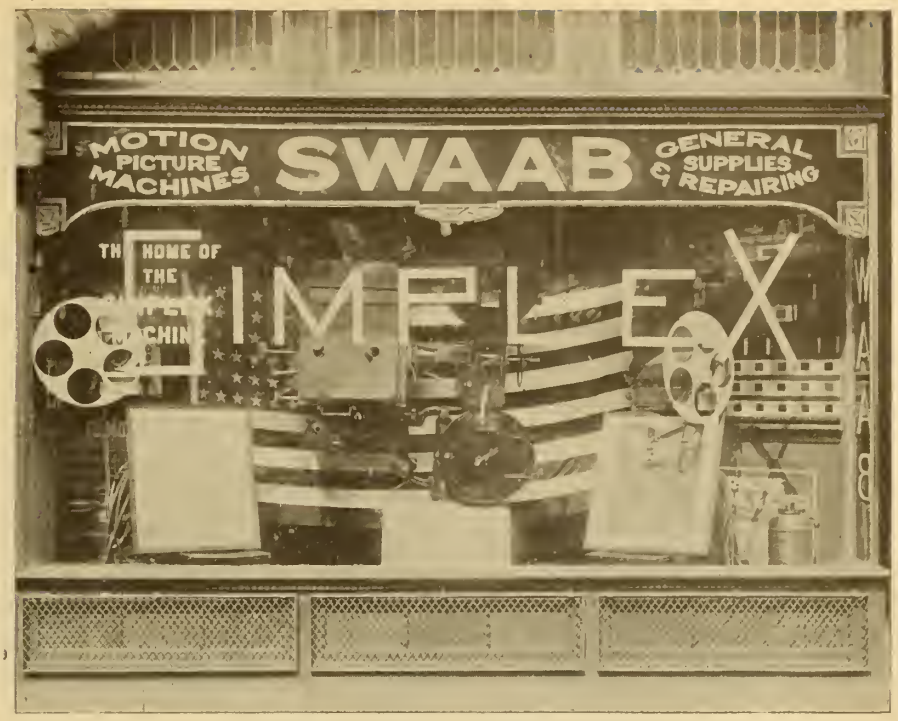
New Arrangement of Bluebird Schedule.

The Bluebird schedule has been rearranged a trifle in order to give Violet Mersereau's latest picture entitled "Together" an earlier release. In this picture Miss Mersereau has a dual role as a beautiful little heiress and as a wandering youth recently freed from Sing Sing. It is the current attraction at the Broadway Theatre, New York.

The rearranged schedule for the Bluebirds is as follows: Ruth Clifford in "The Lure of Luxury," October 7; Violet Mersereau in "Together," 14; Monroe Salisbury in "Hugon, the Mighty," 21; Priscilla Dean in "She Hired a Husband," 28; Edith Roberts in "A Romance for Roma," November 4, and Ruth Clifford in "The Cabaret Girl," 14. It is expected the titles of the two last named pictures will be changed.

"The Zero Hour" Is New Title.

As being more appropriate to the big motivating force of the new June Elvidge World Picture, the title of the production has been changed from "The Love Wraith" to "The Zero Hour." Though not a war picture in any sense of the word, "The Zero Hour" is an apt description of the hour at which the climax of this unusual and fascinating picture occurs. In connection with this change of title it is interesting to know that in "The Zero Hour," Miss Elvidge plays one of the longest dual roles ever seen on the screen.



Swaab's Simplex Window Display.

Unique Window Display Well Worth Reproducing

THE window of Lewis M. Swaab, 1327 Vine street, Philadelphia, the exclusive distributor for Simplex products in Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware and Southern New Jersy, was recently the point of attraction for the visitors to the film section of that city.

A Simplex, Type "S" lamphouse, occupied the centre of the display against a large American flag as a background. Three framed reproductions of Simplex advertisements which appeared in the trade papers were also shown.

The word "Simplex," in conspicuous letters on the window, consists of imitation film on paper which has been pasted on the glass. Although too small to be seen in this reproduction of the photograph, there appear at short intervals two small black figures, which can be readily distinguished by pedestrians passing the Swaab window. These figures, known as the "Simplex Twins," show the artist's humorous conception of the machines, to which have been given the droll traits of two lively youngsters. On these paper strips are the words, "Let the Simplex Twins do your work," and on the other side, "Simplex makes projection profitable, and the Precision Machine Co., Inc., 317 East 34th street, New York, makes the Simplex." Each strip of paper is one foot long and the exact width of a standard film whose sprocket holes are indicated on the paper by a series of printed dots spaced at regulated intervals.

One hundred thousand of these imitation films—a novel form of advertising never before attempted in the trade—were sent to be used as envelope inserts by all of the distributors and dealers handling the Simplex projectors.

When the package designed for Mr. Swaab reached him, his fertile imagination grasped another advertising method, hence the word "Simplex" displayed on his window in this unique way, as plainly shown in the photograph which is reproduced at the top of this page.

World Buys Second Halsey Story.

Forrest Halsey, the well known novelist, playwright and short story writer witnessed a picturization of his story, "The Grouch," which World Pictures made, with Montagu Love as the star, last week in the projection room of the company at its home office. So favorably impressed was Mr. Halsey by the treatment given his original story by Oscar Apfel, who directed the making the photoplay, that he has given World Pictures first call on all his stories even before their publication in magazines.

Mr. Halsey had come to the city from his home in Virginia to deliver to a prominent magazine a new story which bears the title of "The Mark of the Beast." He sold the picture rights to this story to World Pictures, and it will be used as a vehicle for Montagu Love, and will have its first screen showing contemporary with its publication as a magazine story. Harry O. Hoyt will make the continuity.

Serial Star Has Two Leading Women.

Besides possessing a supply of daredevil stunts, "The Lure of the Circus," Universal's new serial, which will be released November 4, has a distinction in the fact that two leading women take turns as heroines of the production. Molly Malone appears in the first four episodes as the chief feminine player. In the fifth episode Eileen Sedgwick enters.

Eddie Polo, who passed twelve years of his life in the sawdust ring as stunt puller, equestrian performer, bareback rider and general circus adept, is the main star throughout. The picture will be virtually completed before the first of its eighteen episodes is released. J. P. McGowan, who formerly directed Helen Holmes in railroad dramas and serials, is directing Polo's new serial. In the supporting cast are Charles Hill Mailes, Noble Johnson, Fred Montague, Duke Lee and Harry Carter.

Death-Defying Leap in Pathe Serial.

The ninth episode of the Western serial, "Hands Up," featuring Ruth Roland, and released by Pathe, October 13, show two feats performed by actors which outclass any "death-defying daring" of the big circus. It is called "A Leap Through Space," wherein Killman, the bandit, who has stolen the Inca jewels, leaps from a tall cliff to the bank. "Two-Gun," the cowboy protector of Echo Delane, without an instant's hesitation, follows. Then there is some record swimming across the river.

Charlie Chaplin in "Shoulder Arms."

Here's the Story of Chaplin's "Shoulder Arms"

THE second million dollar Chaplin comedy to be released by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit under its contract with the famous comedian for a total of eight productions, "Shoulder Arms," will have a pre-release presentation for one week at the Strand Theatre, New York, starting Sunday, October 20.

The actual release date, throughout the country, to all exhibitors holding first run contracts with First National for the Chaplin productions, will be October 27, one week later.

"Shoulder Arms" was made in an atmosphere entirely new to the Chaplin type of funmaking. The humorous possibilities of life in the trenches, with the thousand and one little events that go to make up the average doughboy's day, have been thoroughly contorted by Chaplin to obtain the maximum in burlesque.

The story of "Shoulder Arms" begins with Charlie's introduction to army life as a rookie. Early morning reveille finds him hours away from any desire to get out of his tent. He goes through the preliminary training, and is sent abroad for immediate duty in the first line trenches.

There his troubles begin. Stories of trenches and dugouts infested with rats suggest to Charlie the practicability of a rat trap. This he wears on his shoulder. An effort to salute his colonel gets his hand caught in the trap. Soundly upbraided, he is sent to inspect his new military home—a neglected dugout. The Germans unkindly select Charlie's supper hour to begin strafing, and appetite takes hasty flight under the constant pounding of the big guns and innumerable explosions of shells near the dugout.

A heavy rainstorm floods the trenches and Charlie's dugout. Bunks are inundated with water. A phonograph horn offers a solution to the problem of sleeping in a bunk below the water line. With the small end between his teeth Charlie sinks from sight, to his first night of rest.

After a series of startling experiences with his Buddies, receiving packages from home, mean tricks on the German sentries and raiding parties, a first-rate meeting with zero hour, exciting reconnoitering expeditions wherein his feet and curiosity get him into countless predicaments, he lands in a tree-top behind the Hun lines, in the capacity of a spy. Charlie has to resort to prompt work to prevent the Germans from cutting down the tree for firewood. In the melee he captures a German ,and trades uniforms. A combination of circumstances enables him to rescue his sergeant—made a prisoner by the Huns—and then go to the headquarters of the Kaiser and Crown Prince.

There, disguised as a German military chauffeur, he proceeds to play havoc with the iron discipline of the Imperial Hun, completely upsetting the staff and outclowning the "Clown Quince" at his own game.

The outcome finds Charlie in possession of the Kaiser and his son, bound for the Allied lines at breakneck speed in a high-powered car, with the comedian at the wheel.

The numerous incidents in the story are humorous angles on the ordinary, daily happenings in military life, treated to bring out the serious side in a manner that does not detract from the dignity of soldiering, but rather embellishes that dignity with a new viewpoint.

Patriotic Goldwyns Sound Appeal for Liberty Loan

AN IMPORTANT factor in the motion picture propaganda which is being conducted during the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign is the exhibition throughout the United States of patriotic plays produced in recent months by various organizations. Many exhibitors are featuring patriotic programs during the period of the drive, in addition to the short Liberty Loan Specials distributed under the auspices of the Liberty Loan Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Among these appropriate features are four Goldwyn pictures, three of which were produced far in advance of the flood of war dramas selected and especially recommended by the committee for exploitation in connection with the drive. It is not to be wondered that the fourth should have been suggested, for it was produced at the most critical time of the present emergency.

Mae Marsh's "Fields of Honor" was the first production made by Goldwyn with a war background. It was released after "For the Freedom of the World," because it was reckoned that the latter, a straightforward war play, would strike a stronger note and stimulate enlistment.

Mabel Normand's "Joan of Plattsburg," in which the versatile Goldwyn favorite made her first appearance in a serious role, is also underlined by the Liberty Loan Committee. Appearing as a modern reincarnation of the spirit which carried Joan of Arc to victory, Mabel Normand, in "Joan of Plattsburg," carries a definite message to every American woman.

Madge Kennedy's "The Service Star," also on the list of selected productions, was made by Goldwyn precisely for the purpose designated by the committee. With this inspiring contribution to the current literature of the screen, Goldwyn feels that it has given appreciable impetus to the great drive now at its height.

Lucas Reports Installations.

The Lucas Theatre Supply Company, 158 Marietta street, Atlanta, reports many Simplex installations for the month of September. The Lucas Theatre Supply Company acts as the exclusive distributor for the Simplex products in the states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, and Southern Virginia.

R. H. Cochrane Sponsors Jewel's "Yellow Dog" Film

IT was R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of the Universal, who conceived the idea of filming the story of "The Yellow Dog," written by Henry Irving Dodge for the Saturday Evening Post. This fact came to light when the title editors of Jewel Productions got busy on polishing the print of the picture for its regular release.

These persons found that it was advisable to state in the titles precisely who was its sponsor. They discovered that Mr. Cochrane had promoted the venture, and that he did it in the face of considerable difficulty. There were many advisors on hand when he proposed it who believed such a picture was impracticable.

In the light of results, Mr. Cochrane's idea was an important one. "The Yellow Dog" has not only been filmed, but is declared to have been filmed "big." The picture has passed the test of inspection, and will be released November 4 as one of the Jewel features. This is the second time in Mr. Cochrane's motion picture experience covering twelve years that he has permitted his name to appear as sponsor for a film. The previous occasion was similar in circumstance to that of "The Yellow Dog."

The picture was "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin." It is asserted that in proposing that film Mr. Cochrane braved skeptical warnings. He rejected criticism, and persuaded Universal to ride at the project lance down. The result was a crackerjack picture that has won acclaim far and wide.

Mr. Cochrane recognized in the story of "The Yellow Dog" another possibility as big as that of his earlier good judgment. He met again the skeptical opinions of others.

After seeing the finished product the other day he expressed the highest confidence that it would make record for itself. "I know that the picture will go over big," said Mr. Cochrane. "I know that it will prove a tremendous power for good in America. I believe it will be a mighty help in guiding the public against the Huns and real "Yellow Dogs" that lurk about the country."

Gladys Brockwell Begins New Play.

Having completed "The Sneak," described as a powerful story of gypsy life and the open road, Gladys Brockwell, the Fox star, has begun work at Hollywood on a new play under the direction of Edward J. LeSaint. This play has not yet been named, but it is said it gives Miss Brockwell an opportunity to portray a character new to the films. The story was written by Julie Burham, and the scenario by Dennison Clift. Besides Miss Brockwell, principals so far chosen include William Scott, Charles Clary and Nancy Caswell.

Quick Sales by Warner on "The Kaiser's Finish"

WITH short-time purchase options on "The Kaiser's Finish" for several of the largest state rights territories granted and applications being received for every state, A. L. Warner, sales agent, anticipates that another week will mark the completion of his work of disposing of the American and Canadian franchises.

Hiller and Wilk, in charge of the foreign rights, announce that they have offers from New York resident buyers representing distributing agencies in six foreign countries.

Considering the brief time that has elapsed since the first advertising offering "The Kaiser's Finish" as a state rights production was published, it is said by Warner Brothers to be one of the quickest national sales campaign that has ever characterized the distribution of a special feature. The entire New England territory has been sold to Gordon and Mayor, one of the largest independent exchange organizations in Boston. It is said that their application was made several weeks ago, their interest being prompted by the statements made to Mr. Gordon on a recent trip to New York.

The State of Michigan has been sold to John Kunsky, of Detroit. In closing the agreement of purchase, Mr. Kunsky advised Warner Brothers that he intended to give "The Kaiser's Finish" its premiere in Michigan with an indefinite run at his new million-dollar motion picture palace in Detroit.

"We had sufficient inquiries and ordinarily satisfactory bids for the various territories," said Mr. Warner, "before we made our first trade journal announcements to have sold the country without any campaign, but as we look at the results of the past two weeks of advertising we are glad that we kept our original determination to give every buyer in the country a chance in his territory. Not only have we been offered higher prices for certain territories than we expected to get, but some of the biggest and most reputable of the independent exchange interests have sent special representatives to New York to look at 'The Kaiser's Finish,' with the result that they have bought. All commented especially on the unusual advertising possibilities in the title and the story. The suggestions for unique stunts are coming so thick and fast that our press sheet for the feature contains, as it was originally written, only about a third of those now available.

"It seems that every day there is something in the news from the front that reacts to the benefit of 'The Kaiser's Finish'."

Novel Premiere Planned for "Lafayette, We Come"

IT is said that the plans for the initial presentation by the Affiliated Distributors' Corporation of "Lafayette, We Come," which will be announced in the next few days, will be an innovation, and that they do not embody a Broadway showing, which is considered to be inconsistent with the platform of this organization quoted below:

"1. To insure exhibitor management and control in fact, as well as promise. 2. To in no way disturb existing booking organizations, but rather to encourage them. 3. To keep the capital of each association in its own depository and under its own control. 4. To maintain the benefits of 'open booking,' and at the same time provide a consistent and dependable schedule of releases. 5. To secure not only all the concessions in rental prices which the combined buying power of exhibitors will earn, but the major share of all excess profits. 6. To distribute the cost of each production on a fair and business basis to each booking association or unit, and to every member of each association or unit. 7. To regulate expenditures according to sound business methods, and to protect exhibitors against excessive salaries, extravagant advertising and pretentious executive offices. 8. To arrange on behalf of the booking associations now existing, and such others as shall be formed, for an affiliation with a national or central clearing house upon terms that are just and equitable to all concerned."

"Under the Affiliated plan," says one of the officials, "a more than reasonable amount of bookings is guaranteed by theatre owners before the production is released. In other words, Affiliated is operating with a ready-made market, since each production is first approved and accepted by its members."

New Distribution Method Devised by Shallenberger

WHAT is said to be a new method of state rights selling has been devised by Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, President of the Arrow Film Corporation. As a test, this plan, outlined below, was submitted to two out-of-town buyers, who immediately voiced their approval.

Realizing that the number of productions handled by this company would require a large force if each attraction was separately exploited, Dr. Shallenberger determined to "bunch" all of similar grade and to deal with one exchange on each set of such attractions.

In other words, an exchange, instead of buying one attraction, would purchase all the productions of the same grade, at one time, delivery to be made at stated intervals. This required but one deposit on the entire series of productions and the release dates were sufficiently far apart to permit the exchange to secure advance bookings on the entire series, so that the exchange would be advancing for the first release and the deposits together with the moneys realized when the first production plays, would be sufficient to take up each subsequent production.

This first consolidated purchase was made by the Strand Features for Michigan and the Arrow Film Corporation now announced the second "consolidated" contract with the C. C. Hite Attractions of Cincinnati for the state of Ohio.

This method of distribution not alone cuts the overhead but is said to afford advantages to the exchange since each series or set of productions will number a minimum of six. This plan for the present applies only to the feature attractions of five or six reels.

Showing of First Cinema Song Recital.

Hopp Hadley announces that a trade showing of his initial cinema song recital, "The Vow," will be held at Wurlitzer Hall on October 10, at noon, and that the well known baritone, Raymond Ellis, will sing the songs of "Eliland," with violin obligato by Miss Adi Duam. "The Vow" is a picturization of the "Eliland" song cycle, the screen time being thirty minutes, and the scenes are sung at intervals during the showing of the picture. The words of the singer appearing as subtitles, and the action of the drama suiting the words.

H. B. Segal Here Looking for Features.

Word has been received from H. G. Segal, general manager of the American Feature Film Company, of Boston, that he will be in New York on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, October 10, 11 and 12, and will make his headquarters at the Hotel Astor. Mr. Segal is in the market for state rights productions, and would like to have manufacturers and produeers, or their representatives, call on him.

Woman's Effect on History Is Subject of Film

ALTHOUGH the subject and title have been kept secret until within the last few days, Maurice Tourneur completed his second independent production, "Woman," a short time ago and believes that it will be one of the unique productions of the screen. It will trace the development of woman through the centuries, show her effect upon history and trace the evolution of her foibles.

It is said that this production will not be a mere spectacle but that Mr. Tourneur has endeavored to make a psychological study of womanhood, and the result is claimed to be daring in its realism, and embraces the result of Mr. Tourneur's years of experience in creating noteworthy film productions.

"'Woman' will treat—pro and con—of the various observations of the philosophers, poets and novelists anent femininity," explained Mr. Tourneur. "I am trying to bring out some of the varying phases and subtle gradations of femininity; I hope to make the people think, although I do not hope to solve the problem of women. The two great riddles of the universe are women and death. 'Woman' will attempt to show the influence of woman upon history, and I promise one thing, I have been relentless in presenting woman as I think she is."

An announcement of the first public showing will be made within the next few days, and shortly after it will be released throughout the entire country. This picture is being handled by Hiller & Wilk.

Many Well-Known Names in Plunkett-Carroll Picture

A PICTURE with an array of names is "The Woman the Germans Shot," the spectacular photodrama produced by Joseph L. Plunkett and Frank J. Carroll based on the shooting of Edith Cavell, the English Red Cross Nurse.

The star is Julia Arthur, and much interest has been created in the picture by the fact that this is the motion picture debut of this celebrated dramatic artist who has held a high position on the American stage for many years. Her latest stage appearance was in "The Eternal Magdalene," which ran in New York and later on the road during the past theatrical season.

The author is Anthony Paul Kelly, author of many screen successes, and author also of "Three Faces East," a melodrama, at present showing in New York. Mr. Kelly has built up a stirring and dramatic story on the Cavell case, without departing in even the most minute details from the actual facts. Like all of his stories, "The Woman the Germans Shot" contains a wealth of dramatic intensity, lightened by many human interest touches.

Leading in support is Creighton Hale, who has the role of a young English officer. The director is John G. Adolfi, who is responsible for many of the Fox pictures. His most recent spectacle is "The Queen of the Sea," the new Annette Kellerman feature.

The cast is practically an all-star one, including George Majeroni, Paul Panzer, J. W. Johnson, Joyce Fair, Sarah Alexander and scores of others, besides hundreds who are used in the many spectacular scenes.

The picture has been completed, and will shortly be given a pre-release showing.

State Rights Sales Reported This Week

ARROW FILM CORPORATION announces the sale of ten Warren Kerrigan reissues and four Allison-Lockwood reissues for Northern New Jersey and New York to I. E. Chadwick, 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York, and twelve two-reel Anna Little reissues to Equitable Film Corporation, Kansas City, and to Variety Pictures Corporation, Baltimore.

C. C. Hite has purchased from Arrow Film Corporation, Ohio rights to the following: "The Web of Intrigue, "Human Shuttles," "The Shadow of Fear," "The Fire of Hope," "The Sunset Princess," "Her Aviator," "The Woman's Law," "The Perfect Model."

Graphic Film Corporation have disposed of the following rights on "Ashes of Love": New England, to Gordon & Mayer Film Company, 35 Peidmont street, Boston; Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey, to Quaker City Film Company, 1325 Vine street, Philadelphia, and Illinois, Indiana and Southern Wisconsin, to Silee Films Exchange, Chicago.

The following rights have been disposed of by Warner Brothers on "The Kaiser's Finish": To Gordon and Mayer, for New England, and to John Kunsky, for Michigan. See announcement on another article in this issue.

Jesse J. Goldbury announces the sale of entire foreign rights on "My Husband's Friend," a reissue of "The House of Mirrors," to the Interocean Film Corporation.

"Hand of Vengeance" Breaking Records.

The Gaumont Company announces that reports received from all parts of the country indicate that the drawing power of "The Hand of Vengeance," their twenty-reel ten-episode serial showing the novel stunts of a daring adventurer, has exceeded even their expectations and the forecasts of the state rights buyers who secured various sections of territory. In several sections, buyers report that their booking records are being broken, and additional prints are being ordered. The fact that this serial is only in ten episodes, reducing the length of time necessary to exhibit, is said to be a strong point in its favor.

Several Offers for "Ruling Passions."

It is expected that within the next few days the Schomer Photo-Play Producing Company, of 1440 Broadway, will announce the manner in which "Ruling Passions," its first production, will be handled. Numerous offers for the play are now being considered by the board of directors, all of whom are more than pleased by the splendid propositions that have been submitted by distributing companies.

"Ruling Passions" has been declared to be an unusual and novel play. It is the first of a series of special features to be produced by the Schomer Company. All will be written and directed by Mr. Schomer. Edwin Arden never did finer work on stage or screen than in the part of John Walton in "Ruling Passions." Julia Dean was incomparable in the part of Eveline Roland. Claire Whitney was winsome and tender, while Earl Schenck was upright and manly.

"The Seven Deadly Sins" Reissued as Two-Reelers

McCLURE PRODUCTION INC. announce that the "Seven Deadly Sins" series, issued several years ago in six reel lengths, will soon be re-issued in two reel lengths. The leading figure in the new version will be Shirley Mason, who appears in congenial roles in each of the episodes. Other prominent players in the cast include H. B. Warner, Holbrook Blinn, Nance O'Neil, Ann Murdock and Charlotte Walker.

In deciding upon this innovation, it is said that care has been taken to preserve only the most exciting episodes of the original offerings, and that as a result this series of two-reel subjects will rank high as examples of action, "punch" scenes and entertainment. A staff of cutters has been busy for several weeks going through the entire footage of the original productions and securing desirable portions for use in the condensed versions.

"The Seven Deadly Sins" series was originally successfully distributed through the exchanges of the Triangle Film Corporation, and later re-issued through the General Film Company, and it is claimed that with the second re-issue in two-reel lengths, which will also be distributed through the General Film Company, this establishes a unique record.

An extensive advertising and exploitation campaign has been planned in connection with this series.

Rapf Films Successful in New England.

Herman Rifkin, manager of the Eastern Film Company, Boston, reports big business with the two Harry Rapf productions, "The Struggle Everlasting," starring Florence Reed, and "The Accidental Honeymoon," with Robert Warwick and Elaine Hammerstein. He announces that both of these productions have been booked by the principal circuits throughout New England, and that Florence Reed is a favorite in his territory, while Robert Warwick also has a big following.

SOLVES FILM TRANSPORTATION PROBLEM

Film Transfer Company Formed to Take Pictures from Seattle Exchanges to Trains, Boats or Theatres

By S. J. Anderson, 424 Seaboard Building, Seattle, Wash.

THE problem of film transportation in the city of Seattle, which has been the cause of much trouble among the exchanges of late, has been solved by the establishment of the Film Transfer Company at 2016 Third avenue, which is on film row. Leon Bories, an old time film man of the Pacific Coast, is responsible for the working out of the plan, and will manage the business.

A new Chevrolet express van has been bought for carrying the film from the exchange to the train, boats or theatres, and in cases of emergency the Transfer Company will send the film to nearby towns by auto. This will render the exchanges independent of the consolidated express companies, which have been getting film shipments very much mixed up of late, causing several exhibitors in neighboring towns to miss their shows. Nothing but film will be handled by the new express company.

Mead Boosting Smileage Fund.

The Smileage Fund is reported to be growing rapidly in the State of Washington by W. A. Mead, Seattle Universal manager, who is enlisting the support of the exhibitors of the state. He has a long list of the theatre managers who have agreed to give 10 per cent. of their box receipts one day a month for the fund, and he has promised, when the campaign is a little farther advanced, to turn over this list to the Moving Picture World correspondent for publication in these columns.

Chorus Singing at the Liberty.

The plan of the audience chorus originated by Ralph Ruffner at the Rialto Theatre, Butte, has been adopted by another Jensen & Von Herberg house, i. e., the Liberty in Seattle. These nightly song-fests are proving popular among patrons of the Liberty. They are held at the beginning of each show each evening.

Rosebaum Distributing Loan Films.

H. G. Rosebaum, manager of the Seattle Artcraft-Paramount office, has been appointed chairman of the district board to distribute the Government pictures made for the Fourth Liberty Loan drive. Mr. Rosebaum and his publicity manager, A. J. Kennedy, are working overtime to put these over in the proper way.

The Butte office of Artcraft-Paramount has been closed, and the business taken over by the Seattle office. Manager Rosebaum expects to see a great deal more now of his Montana exhibitors, for they will undoubtedly come to Seattle to close their bookings at least once a season.

Spokane Trade Letter

By S. Clark Patchin, E-1811 Eleventh Avenue, Spokane, Wash.

Clemmer Collects Pits for Army Masks.

MORE than 3,000 children of Spokane contributed 2,500 pounds of peach pits to the Clemmer Theatre for admissions on September 20 as Dr. H. S. Clemmer inaugurated the plan of helping the Government in getting pits to get the necessities for making gas masks. The theatre was taken by storm, and traffic was so blocked that it was necessary to call the police to help maintain order. The pits gathered are sufficient to make carbon for 750 gas masks. It was estimated that 150,000 pits were gathered, and free admissions were given for each pint, or 50 pits. The Clemmer management is reported to be the first in the west to hold a peach matinee. Their expectations were far exceeded by the outpouring of peach pits.

Seven barrels had been placed at the curb in front of the theatre, but they were filled early in the afternoon, and dry goods cases and crates were hurriedly obtained to hold the pits. The vestibule was filled with a large pile of pits before they could be placed. The harvest was seven barrels, four dry goods cases and two crates filled to overflowing.

Some were sent by mail by persons saying they did not know where to send them, and others were received by express by persons who had noticed the announcement in the papers. The pits were sent to the Red Cross headquarters to be disposed of as the Government requires.

BUSINESS PICKING UP IN NEW ORLEANS

Cooler Weather Brings Increased Patronage to Picture Houses—Draft Closes Small Theatres

By N. E. Thatcher, 3801 Canal Street, New Orleans, La.

UNPRECEDENTED attendance has marked the advent of the cooler weather at all of the motion picture houses in New Orleans, and reports from the country are that business is showing a marked increase in operating theatres. Of course, there has been a number of smaller theatres which have been compelled to close on account of the diminution in patronage on account of the war and labor drafts upon the younger men in the communities, but those houses that are running whole or part time have no reason to complain of the patronage. Especially on Sundays is the attendance large. In New Orleans managers have found it impossible to handle the immense Sunday crowds, and it is not an uncommon sight for hundreds to stand in line awaiting admission. The elimination of the use of automobiles for pleasure on Sunday has a good deal to do with the increase in attendance.

Boehringer Takes Over the Ivy Theatre.

Ernst Boehringer, general manager of the Liberty Theatre, has purchased the Ivy Theatre in the downtown section of the city from Emile Garnier, and has already taken possession of the property, placing P. E. Blankenship, one of the oldest house managers in the city, in charge. The Ivy is a "neighborhood" theatre, and has an immense patronage. It has seating capacity of about 1,000, and operates only in the evenings. The new owners have made many improvements in the theatre.

Hirsh May Assume Control of the Gem.

It is reported that E. N. Hirsh, who formerly operated the Gem Theatre in Hattlesburg, Miss., and later passed it to the management of A. J. Xydias, will again take charge of the property when the present lease expires on April 1. Manager Hirsh is proprietor of the Magnolia Theatre in Gulfport, and he declares his intention of forming a chain of theatres in Mississippi towns, with Gulfport and Hattiesburg the principal locations.

Plan Distribution of Loan Films.

Exchange managers for the New Orleans territory have perfected what they believe to be adequate arrangements for the distribution of the films to be used for boosting the Fourth Liberty Loan. Several meetings have been held to discuss the most practical manner in which to keep the films working to the full measure of efficiency, and it is believed that the organization of the work is the best that could be attained. Harry Peebles, manager of the Consolidated, will supervise distribution for all of the exchanges, and by this method it is believed that every day will be a working day for the Government film subjects.

Junet Now In Pathe's New York Office.

Raoul Junet, who for more than three years has been the manager of the Pathe Exchange in New Orleans, has been transferred to the New York office of Pathe, and J. B. Dumestre, who has been Manager Junet's chief clerk, has been promoted to the position of branch manager. He already has the organization of his office in good shape, and the business is moving smoothly. He is a young man with a wide circle of friends, and he doubtless will prove a valuable addition to the Pathe official family.

New Orleans News Notes.

A. J. Xydias, manager of the Lomo and the Gem theatres at Hattiesburg, Miss., has just returned from an extended trip to Washington and other Eastern cities in the interest of motion picture affairs in this section.

Miss Marguarite Sullivan, of Cincinnati, has been sent by the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation to this city to take the position of chief clerk to Manager Karl A. Bugbee.

Lewis S. Collier, formerly with the Select Pictures Exchange, has been appointed manager for the American productions for New Orleans territory, and has taken offices with the Pathe Exchange.

Leon H. Grandjean, who for the past several years has been identified with the Boehringer Amusement Company as publicity director, has taken a position with the Saenger Amusement Company in the same capacity, and commenced his duties there on September 23.

Manager J. C. Briant, of the Metro Film Exchange, is still receiving the congratulations upon his winning of the $500 prize offered to the exchange manager who should make the greatest percentage in the booking of "Lest We Forget."

WORLD'S CORRESPONDENT VISITS SYDNEY

Is Personally Conducted Through the Strand and the Casino, Two of the Largest Picture Houses There

By Alice Fairweather, Standard, St. John, N. B.

VISITING in Sydney, Cape Breton, your correspondent had a personally conducted tour of the two largest theatres of that town.

First, the newly opened Strand Theatre was seen. Here I found H. L. Beaman, formerly of Halifax and later assistant manager at the St. John Opera House. The Strand Theatre was built for J. M. Franklin. It is on Charlotte street, the main street of Sydney, and is entered through a seventy-eight-foot long marble-tiled lobby, decorated in crimson and green.

The auditorium, which seats 700 persons, has painted walls in a color scheme of deep rose and cream, the arched beams being cream, dividing the rose into panels. The pretty lights are amber, the large cluster in the centre having seven lamps.

The stage is large enough to take care of any stage production and is equipped with a complete set of scenery. Alex McDonald, of the Strand Theatre, Halifax, looked after the scenery, stage effects and lighting. Fred Mack, manager of the Strand, Halifax, came to Sydney for the opening of the New Strand. Dressing rooms downstairs look out on the street and are commodious and well lighted.

The seats of the auditorium are upholstered in dark green leather except for the first seven rows, which are wooden. The boxes have three divisions and are to be completed with brass rings and plush curtains. All seats face the centre of the stage.

A seven-piece orchestra plays in the pit, except on Friday and Saturday, when they are on the stage. This orchestra is to have Mr. Bragg as first violin, formerly of the Imperial Theatre, St. John.

The picture program is as follows. Vaudeville is used the first four days of the week, a special picture on Friday and Saturday. Films booked are Superfeatures, World, Goldwyn, Metro, Drew comedies, Pathe, etc. No serial is shown. "My Four Years in Germany" is booked for October.

The business offices are upstairs and are well fitted up. The operating booth has modern improvements and is in charge of Robert McKay, formerly with the Mutual and Famous Players at St. John.

For ushers a patriotic society of girls, called the Business Girls' Club, have been engaged. They give their salary to War Relief funds and are proving satisfactory. They wear white dresses with a badge of Allies' ribbon.

From personal experience I must speak of the excellent ventilation of this new theatre as I went in on a Saturday evening to witness a picture, ("The Eyes of the World"). Crowds were waiting in the lobby for the second performance, and as we entered the auditorium from which 700 persons had filed out by the four exits, the building was splendidly fresh and airy. Mr. Franklin and his manager, Mr. Beaman, are to be congratulated on the fine start they have made with the new enterprise, in which every success is wished for them.

Crossing the street to the Casino, owned by R. J. McAdams, of Halifax, I found E. R. Lynn in his office and was made very welcome. The Casino is at present an upstairs house, but a site for a downstairs theatre has been planned for in a central block nearby.

The decorations of the auditorium are dark green wedgewood, the chairs of the anti-panic style.

"The Eagle's Eye" is just being finished and "Hands Up" (Pathe) is booked. All big specials are also booked in conjunction with the Casino at Halifax. The ushering is done by a club of girls called the "S. O. S." They wear khaki skirts and pongee waists with S. O. S. in black on the sleeves. Their earnings go to patriotic causes.

The Casino has a seven-piece orchestra, and Manager Lynn tells me he expects two additional players from Boston shortly. Music is featured as no vaudeville is booked.

Other houses in the vicinity are Ackers—the Palace it is called. It is managed by Mrs. Gates. Here four acts of vaudeville are given the first three days of the week, with pictures and one act for other performances.

The Russell Theatre, at Glace Bay, is under the management of Mat Nolan. This seats between 500 and 600. John Kattar's Theatre at Whitney Pier, Matthew McPherson's at North Sydney and William Cozner's temporary house at Sydney Mines. A new theatre is being constructed for William Cozner which it is hoped will be completed shortly.

Dayton News Letter

By Paul J. Gray, Dayton Theatre Building, Dayton, Ohio.

Three Houses Show Paramount First-Runs

SINCE the opening of the new Dayton Theatre there have been many discussions as to the division of the Paramount-Artcraft service and its distribution among the first-run houses. In the past the Columbia, seating 1,000, and the Strand, seating about 1,800, divided the program. With the signing of new contracts, however, comes the news that the Dayton is to figure on the Paramount-Artcraft productions, for they have signed for Lila Lee, Enrico Caruso, Ethel Clayton, Fred Stone, Pauline Frederick, Mason and Truex, also part of the Paramount-Artcraft specials and some of the D. W. Griffith productions. The Dayton opened with Fred Stone in "The Goat," Sunday, September 29, and to say the public liked this new star in pictures is to put it mildly.

"America's Answer" at Memorial Hall.

The second Government film, "America's Answer," played for a week at the Memorial Hall under Government auspices. Leading manufacturers supported the engagement, and also contributed for the advertising campaign. The different industrial plants all had "nights" for their employees, and Memorial Hall was packed for the entire week.

Work on Auditorium Going Ahead.

Contractors are at work on the Auditorium Theatre, recently destroyed by fire, and Gil Burrowes says that as much progress is being made as could be expected. The Auditorium was at one time one of Dayton's most popular theatres.

Dayton Changes Name of Universal Film.

When a picture is booked for the Dayton Theatre which measures up to the required standards and the name does not seem suitable a name is found that will register with a better appeal than the original. After screening "Bread," a Universal production, Mark Gates, of the Dayton, booked it, but changed the name to "Innocent Eyes." This has been done on numerous occasions, and frequently much better names are found for pictures than are originally given.

TO CREDIT FILM TRADE FOR LOAN WORK

Efforts of Picture Men in the Northwest to Make Drive a Success Will Be Wired to Washington

By William Edward Mulligan, Minneapolis Journal, Minneapolis, Minn.

WASHINGTON will be unofficially notified what the moving picture industry has done and is doing to make the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign a success in the Northwest and full credit will be given for its efforts, A. R. Rogers, chairman of the Central Liberty Loan Committee of the Ninth District, has promised.

When the final results are known they will be wired to Washington, he said. F. D. Fox, of the Lochren Film Corporation, and T. E. Mortenson, editor of Amusements, were selected to head a squad covering all of the different exchanges and moving picture theatres in Minneapolis soliciting subscriptions. And the moving picture men are "going over the top" 100 per cent., they say.

With the status of the moving picture industry still to be determined, Northwest members of filmdom state that it will be ranked among the most essential of industries if other territories in the country make as strong and united a showing.

Mr. Fox took pictures of the Minneapolis Liberty Loan parade for Pathe under the auspices of the Civic and Commerce Association at the opening of the campaign.

Moving picture men of the Ninth District generally were reported making liberal donations.

Phenomenal Run Under Way.

"Hearts of the World," the famous Griffith production, now in its fifth week at the Minneapolis Shubert, is making perhaps the most phenomenal run of any moving picture ever seen in this city, with the possible exception of "The Birth of a Nation."

It is estimated that during the first four weeks of its showing here nearly 50,000 persons witnessed this extraordinary picture. Packed houses have been the rule at practically every performance. With a heavy advance sale, tickets went like wildfire at prices ranging from 50 cents to $1.50. Long lines at the box office were a daily spectacle.

"The Birth of a Nation" had a run of four months in Minneapolis, and from present indications Ernest Fisher, manager for "Hearts of the World," hopes that his picture will equal this record. Mr. Fisher has not announced what his plans are for the future distribution of "Hearts of the World" in northwest territory.

Theatres Cut Out Male Ushers.

Twin City moving picture theatres have practically all dispensed with the services of men and boys as ushers, replacing them with girls. And now many of the downtown theatres have employed members of the fair sex as "door men" and ticket takers, releasing their male attendants for war industries and military service.

Film Men Organize Bowling League.

With the organization of a "Midnight Sons' Bowling League" perfected, Minneapolis moving picture men have found a pleasant diversion to chase away their cares after the day's, or rather night's, work is done. The league is composed of four-men teams from the Minneapolis Strand and New Garrick Theatres and the Universal and Metro exchanges.

The Universal team, in the first week of competition, led with three victories and no defeats.

The Strand team is known as "Branham's Bowling Bandits." The members are Charles Branham, Henry Lochman, Henry Groeskopf and George Guise.

The Universal bowlers call themselves the "Coenettes." They are L. H. Coen, J. L. Johnston, George Fordisk and Newton Davis.

The Garrick team has been named "Julius Johnson's Joy Killers," the members being Julius Johnson, Wood Smith, Timothy Murphy and William Koch.

The Metro team has taken the name of "Metro Manglers." A. J. Fisher, Fred Bennett, Joe Conner and Louis Blumberg are the members.

Another team will soon be added to the league by the Calhoun Theater, and it is anticipated that still others will get into the game.

The highest individual score, at latest reports, was 220, made by Julius Johnson. Universal made the record score of 723 points in one game. The league plays twice a week, beginning their games at midnight after the evening performances.

Making Great Indian Film.

The "Y-O" Ranch, one of the greatest show places in the Missouri valley of North Dakota, near Bismarck, may become as famous in the motion picture world as is the Miller Brothers' "101" ranch in northern Oklahoma.

C. P. Burnstad, owner of the "Y-O," which comprises 40,000 acres of grazing and alfalfa land, will complete at the Standing Rock Indian Fair at Fort Yates, a 6,000-foot picture which is believed to be the most elaborate piece of pictorial publicity the northwest has ever been given.

For this picture Mr. Burnstad has utilized the services of his own outfit of rough riders, and succeeded for the first time in securing the consent of the full-blooded Sioux Indians to perpetuate on the film their tribal dances and domestic, political and military life.

Soldiers to See Films.

The Minneapolis Home Folks' Association is making arrangements to send to local boys in France films of the various military and naval units stationed in this city. The first of these, which was taken last week by the Lochren Film Corporation, is of Battery F of the New First Minnesota Infantry Regiment at drill.

Instructing Sailor Mechanics.

O. A. Peterson, in charge of the repair department of the United Theatre Equipment Corporation of Minneapolis, has been appointed instructor in machines at the Dunwoody Naval Training School here. He is dividing his time between Dunwoody and the United office.

To Distribute Ford Weekly.

The Standard Film Corporation of Minneapolis has made arrangements with a representative of Henry Ford to distribute the Ford News Weekly in Northwest territory. Harry Muir, manager of the Minneapolis Standard Exchange, announced that Ruben & Finkelstein have booked this weekly for first-run business in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

United Officials Banqueted.

E. J. O'Donnell and D. G. Rodgers, representing the United Picture Theatres of America, were guests of St. Paul exhibitors at a luncheon recently in the St. Francis Hotel of St. Paul. Among the exhibitors present were H. J. Andrews, E. N. Carter, Joe Freidman, Joseph Gilosky, Clyde Hitchcock, H. Breilein and Messrs. Marks, Ellsworth and Reisman. The plan of the United Picture Theatres of America was explained in detail by Mr. O'Donnell, who left last week for Dallas, Texas, where he will install the United office in the quarters of the General Film Company.

Makes "Killing" on Range.

George W. Malone, Minneapolis Mutual representative, returned last week from northern Minnesota, where ne made a "killing" on the iron range. He booked "The Planter" and "The Hoosier Romance" so solid that, to use his own words, there is nothing left open for months. Mr. Malone made one of the best business trips on record in this territory, according to Manager Dan Donnellan, of the Minneapolis Exchange, who, spurred by his coworker's success, left on a tour which will take him through the territory from here to Butte, Mont.

LOUISVILLE THEATRES AID LOAN DRIVE

Captain Travers and His "Foreign Born Squad" Appear at the Majestic and Keith's

By Ohio Valley News Service, 1404 Starks Building, Louisville, Ky.

THE Liberty Loan campaign has had every other issue backed off the map in Louisville during the past few days, and the theatres have been coming to the front in fine style in order to help the movement along. Four-Minute men have been busy at all of the houses, while much material has been flashed on the screen. The campaign has secured an excellent start in all of the Falls cities and throughout Kentucky and Indiana.

One of the interesting features of the campaign in Louisville has been the work of Captain Richard C. (Dick) Travers, former picture star, now an officer at Camp Taylor. Captain Travers has secured a squad of men, known as the "Foreign Born Squad," which while equipped with gas masks and full trench equipment, have appeared at the Majestic Theatre, B. F. Keiths, the Board of Trade, Transportation Club, Ha-wi-an Gardens, and elsewhere. Some excellent singing is part of the entertainment, besides an excellent talk by Captain Dick. The Majestic has booked a number of Liberty Loan pictures.

Grippe Order Keep Soldiers from Theatres

One of the interesting features of the week in Louisville was a sweeping order issued by the Commanding Officers at Camp Taylor under which all soldiers were barred from theatres, restaurants and crowds in all public buildings, this action being taken on September 27, in an effort to prevent further spread of Spanish influenza.

Anderson Theatre Reverts to Vaudeville.

After a successful run of pictures throughout the summer months the Mary Anderson Theatre has returned to vaudeville. This season the Keith National Theatre maintained vaudeville throughout the summer and did well, it being about the first season that a house has managed to keep going all summer with vaudeville in Louisville.

Sunday Closing Agitators Form New Body.

Lexington, Ky.—Representatives of the various churches interested in the enforcement of Sunday closing laws and putting Sunday theatres on the hummer has formed a new organization, representing a committee upon which there are representatives of every white church in the city of Protestant denomination. A committee representing a member of each church has been assigned the task of drafting by-laws.

Manring Theatre Being Overhauled.

Middlesboro, Ky.—The Brown Amusement Company, owners of the Brownie and Manring theatres, is overhauling the stage at the Manring, installing new scenery and a new screen and has secured a new orchestra.

Louisville Theatres Boost Loan.

Eight Louisville theatres, namely the Mary Anderson, Alamo, Strand, Majestic, Keith, Gayety, Macauley and the Ha-wi-an Gardens, handled a full-page advertisement in the Louisville Courier Journal on September 28, in order to boost Liberty Bonds, this full page being devoted to the cause.

Negro Theatres Doing Big Business.

Business with the negro theatres of Louisville has picked up materially as a result of the large number of negro soldiers quartered at Camp Taylor, Louisville, these houses being packed every night by soldiers, civilians and feminine colored people, as well as plenty of youngsters. Wages are high, ordinary laborers making $3 a day and better, with the result that the negro houses are doing the best business in their history. Chattanooga parties recently took over the old Ruby Theatre, which is being remodeled and added to the list of houses for negroes only. The demand for pictures at Camp Taylor has picked up materially within the past few weeks. There are now a dozen Y. M. C. A. buildings at the camp, and pictures are being run every evening in the majority of these houses.

Ada Meade to Run Feature Pictures.

The Ada Meade Theatre, Lexington, Ky., which for several years has played stock and vaudeville, has arranged to run feature pictures and vaudeville. William James, of Columbus, Ohio, is owner, and J. Neal Neth is manager. The house was recently redecorated and opened with new fittings, hangings, lighting, etc. The prices are fifteen and twenty-five cents.

Levy Returns from New York Trip.

Col. Fred Levy, head of the Big Features Rights Corporation, has just recently returned from a trip to New York, having been gone for several days on combined business and pleasure.

Fix to Manage Strand Theatre.

Arthur Fix has become manager of the Strand Theatre, succeeding Tom Davis, formerly of Lexington, who recently entered Uncle Sam's service.

Frish and Robbins Drafted.

The Big Features Rights Corporation has recently lost two men in the draft, including Dave Frish, who formerly traveled Kentucky and Indiana and Tennessee. He is now in the Radio Service at Cambridge, having been transferred from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. Carl Robbins was recently drafted, and when last heard from was at Ft. Thomas, Ky.

Princess to Open in About a Month.

M. L. Stockley, of Hopkinsville, Ky., manager of the Princess Theatre, recently motored into Louisville from the far western section of the state. He reported that the new Princess Theatre would be in operation either in late October or early November. Shortage of labor has held back work on rebuilding the burned house.

Bleich and Masters Pushing the Loan.

George Bleich, manager of the Empress Theatre, of Owensboro, Ky., and J. P. Masters, of the Crescent Amusement Company at Bowling Green, Ky., were recently in Louisville in connection with laying out the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign. Each man is chairman of the Liberty Loan committees of their respective counties.

Prices Go Up at the Highland Theatre.

The Highland Theatre, operated in the Highlands of Louisville by the Broadway Amusement interests, has recently announced that prices will be raised to fifteen cents for adults and ten cents for children, including war tax. Most of the suburban houses are planning to increase prices to take care of the increased operating costs.

Switow Transfers the Dream Theatre.

Michael Switow, of Louisville, head of the Switow Amusement Company, recently transferred the Dream Theatre property in Jeffersonville, Ind., to the Jeffersonville Amusement Company, of which Mr. Switow is one of the principal stockholders. The sale read for $1 and other considerations, but forty dollars' worth of attached revenue stamps indicate a transfer of $40,000.

BIG WAR PICTURE BREAKING RECORD

Atlanta Exhibitor Doing Heavy Business with Universal's "Crashing Through to Berlin"

By Linton K. Starr, Atlanta Journal, Atlanta, Ga.

SPLENDID showmanship employed by Manager James J. Jackson, of the Tudor Theatre, Atlanta, in his presentation of the Universal special, "Crashing Through to Berlin," during the opening week of the Fourth Liberty Loan drive, has started the production off to a run which gives promise of becoming a record-breaker at advanced prices.

Manager Jackson secured the public endorsement of Forrest Adair, chairman of the Atlanta loan campaign, and has used as much as half-page newspaper displays in advance and current ads. He turned loose seven thousand "fake" war extras through newsboys on the downtown streets at a busy Saturday afternoon hour.

A remarkably impressive lobby display was the final touch that has been "standing 'em up" at the Tudor at almost every showing. Extending clear across the upper arch of the theatre's spacious front is a monster cut-out from a twenty-four-sheet showing many doughboys rushing pell-mell into action. Below this is strung the picture's title in individual block letters. Behind the cut-out and concealed by bunting, the upper lobby is illuminated by red lights. Even on "lightless nights," the silhouette effect produced by the glowing background presents a strikingly realistic illusion.

On the floor of the lobby Manager Jackson has rigged up an ingenious device in the shape of a three-sheet board, centered by a foot-square hole, through which stills from the film may be seen passing on an endless belt. The opening is illuminated by a red bulb, and the belt revolves on two spools driven by a small motor. More small cut-outs and artistic hand-lettered one-sheets complete the display.

The Tudor is having no trouble in drawing capacity at an advance from its usual prices of 5 and 15 cents net, to 12 and 28 cents.

Atlanta Association Holds Weekly Dinners

The Atlanta Theatre Managers' Association, the organization effected recently and representing every house in the city, has inaugurated a regular custom of holding Thursday luncheons in a private dining room of the local Chamber of Commerce.

Exhibitors and Musicians Compromise on Wage Matter.

A compromise was reached this week between local exhibitors and the Atlanta musicians' union in connection with their demands for increased pay. The musicians receded somewhat in the advance requested, and a rearrangement of shifts in some instances solved the problem satisfactorily.

The managers are now facing a new increase in operating costs, however, in notification received Monday from the operators' union that a raise in their salaries would become effective in two weeks. The amount of the advance is to be determined within the time named through conferences between the union and the Atlanta Theatre Managers' Association.

"America's Answer" at the Atlanta.

Packed houses greeted the first two presentations of "America's Answer," the second of the United States Government official war films, which opened Monday for a week's run at the Atlanta Theatre, the local first-class house, at a twenty-five and fifty-cent scale.

All three of the daily papers followed with special reviews praising the production highly as a patriotic, as well as a technical marvel, and the engagement promises to be a most successful one.

Preluding the initial evening presentation, Governor Hugh M. Dorsey and Mayor Asa G. Candler delivered addresses in the interests of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign.

Show Slides on "America's Answer."

At the request of the Government every picture theatre in Atlanta ran advance slides for a week announcing the coming of "America's Answer" to the Atlanta Theatre.

Freeman Off for a Rest.

O. L. Freeman, manager of the accessories department of the S. A. Lynch Enterprises, local distributors of Paramount-Artcraft productions, has left for a two weeks' vacation in North Carolina.

Novel Advertising Stunt for Goldwyn Film.

The Strand covered the town with "Reward" tackcards in pushing "Laughing Bill Hyde," the new Goldwyn introducing Will Rogers, who starts off a splendid action drama in the role of an escaped convict.

Atlanta Association Holds First Meeting.

The recently organized Atlanta Theatre Managers' Association, representing every theatre in the city, held its first meeting on Saturday.

An added attraction at the Forsyth this week is "The Cook," and as a popular success this new Paramount-Arbuckle bids fair to surpass its predecessor, "Goodnight, Nurse." Aided by consistently effective vehicles the heavy-weight funmaker is apparently growing stronger here with each release.

BUSINESS BOOMING IN ARKANSAS

Dallas Exchanges Covering That Territory Report Exhibitors Are Enjoying Prosperous Times

By Phil Fox, Times-Herald, Dallas, Texas.

ARKANSAS, flowering, green and prosperous with bumper harvests, unprecedented demands for lumber, crowded pleasure resorts and banks fairly bulging with deposits, has taken the place of drouth-stricken Western Texas as a virgin field for motion picture exploitation.

Dallas film exchanges report that the Arkansas business this season is breaking all previous records and is making up to a great extent for the paucity of business owing to arid conditions in the plains country to the west. Salesmen from film houses here are covering Arkansas as it was never covered before. Many new motion picture theatres have been opened in all parts of the state during the past six months, and exhibitors generally, even in the smaller towns, are beginning to demand the very best screen attractions procurable.

In western Texas drouth conditions still prevail. Some vicinities have not had rain now for almost four years. Relief is being afforded through public subscription.

Rush Routing of Loan Films.

Brisk work for Uncle Sam was done by Dallas film exchange managers and their forces in getting out and routing the Fourth Liberty Loan special releases. There was keen rivalry among the local exchanges in regard to the efficient performance of this patriotic work. Some of the film men worked to midnight to expedite the reels which did so much to boost the loan and bust the Huns.

Of the thirty-five Liberty Loan releases in this territory it is estimated that each of the 700 motion picture theatres in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas showed an average of eight of the films. Many theatres of course showed more than this number.

Film men report the hearty co-operation of exhibitors in handling the bond films. Reports are coming in showing the sales of bonds made at the various theatres.

In Dallas itself no bond sales were made in local theatres, owing to the working out of the Dallas Liberty Loan plan, whereby the selling was placed on a scientific basis and no independent sales of bonds allowed.

Permit Building of Theatres During War.

County Councils of Defense in Texas, which pass on all permits for the erection of buildings during the continuance of the war, are generally inclined to allow the remodeling or construction of motion picture theatres since the industry has been placed in the essential class. Quite a few requests for playhouse improvements have been filed with various councils. Members of the councils consider the important work done by Texas playhouses in boosting War Savings, Liberty Loans, and all other forms of patriotic endeavor, and are inclined to be liberal in their rulings.

W. O. Williamson, of Galveston, has been granted permission for the remodeling of his Star Theatre on Market street at a cost of $5,000.

Griffith's Film Breaks Records.

"Hearts of the World," the Griffith masterpiece, broke all records at Huisey's Hippodrome during the last week in September. Over ten thousand Dallas people saw the picture during the first few days of its short run here. Local critics were enthusiastic.

Herschel Stuart, of the Huisey interests, through the press arranged a competition to see which residence block in Dallas had sent the most soldiers and sailors to the service. The mothers of soldiers in the winning block were guests of the Hippodrome at a box party to see "Hearts of the World."

The attendance from Camp Dick, the aviation officers' concentration camp and from the two local aviation fields broke all records for military attendance on a motion picture show in Dallas. Men in khaki outnumbered the women in some of the matinee rushes.

Committee chairmen of the Fourth Liberty Loan drive viewed the picture in a body as the guests of E. H. Huisey.

McCruskey Opens the Allied Theatre.

C. H. McCruskey, of Dermott, Ark., bought the Majestic Theatre there late in September. He hoisted the flags of all nations fighting the Huns to the top of his flag pole and rechristened the playhouse the Allied Theatre.

Folly Theatre Opens with Griffith Film.

The Powell-Croak Amusement Company, of Oklahoma City, late in September opened their new Folly Theatre featuring "Hearts of the World." Tom Boland is manager of the new playhouse. The Folly before being remodeled played vaudeville. Now it is exclusively a motion picture theatre.

Eastland to Get New Picture Theatre.

C. C. Ball, millionaire oil man, is going to build a new motion picture theatre at Eastland, Texas. The playhouse is going to be one of the finest in the West Texas oil district. The Dreamland Theatre, at present the only Eastland playhouse, has been sold to M. C. Ellis, by H. C. Collins. It is now operating under the new management.

Approve Charter of S. & S. Film Company.

The charter of the S. & S. Film Corporation of Dallas has been approved by the state department at Austin. Capitol stock is $20,000. Tris Sneed, Currie McCutcheon and Joe Schwartz are incorporators. The company will handle the business formerly taken care of by the Cressy Film Company and operations will be considerably enlarged.

Italian War Film at the Queen.

Andrew Zuccara, an American of Italian parentage, who operates the Queen Theatre at Fort Worth, has made a creditable record through his work in boosting all patriotic campaigns and enterprises. His featuring the official Italian war pictures at the Queen aided to swell the enthusiasm for the Fourth Liberty Loan in that city. Jimmy Kelly, of General, reports an unprecedented booking of the Italian official films.

Exhibitors Who Visited Dallas.

Among exhibitors visiting Dallas film row during the last week in September were the following: Charles Kimball, Pope Theatre, McKinney; S. E. Dean, Palace Theatre, Plano; J. A. Lemke, Crystal Theatre, Waco; B. C. Bell, Gem Theatre, Palestine; John Fanning, Crazy Theatre, Mineral Wells; Billy Batsell, King, Sherman; Miss E. Johnson, Liberty, Houston; J. Holmesby, Crystal Theatre, Pittsburg; O. H. Brannon, Opera House, Mexia; J. B. Wilson, Gem Theatre, Sherman; Theodore Polemanikus, Opera House, Greenville; J. Clemmons, Jefferson Amusement Company, Beaumont; Hoyt Kirkpatrick, Joie Theatre, Fort Smith, Ark.

Dallas Brevities.

Jules Benedict, of Dallas, has received an honorable discharge from the United States Army and is now with the Imperial Film Company of Dallas.

Carl McDougal and F. E. Hendon have purchased the Ideal Theatre of Dallas. The Ideal is one of the best suburban playhouses in the city.

R. D. Lewis, of Oklahoma City, has opened a new film exchange in Dallas. Miss Elizabeth Tennery will have charge of the offices.

Short Texas Items.

The date for the opening of Louis & Andreas' new Ellenay Theatre at El Paso has been set for October 19, when Geraldine Farrar in "Turn of the Wheel" will be featured. The Ellenay cost $138,000 and is the finest motion picture house on the Mexican border.

Jack Lilly, owner of the Hippodrome Theatre, Commerce, Texas, is now in the officers' training camp at Camp Pike, Ark. His brother is running the show for him while he is in khaki.

John Saeg, of the Grand Theatre at Ennis, is back at his business after a lengthy illness. John Saeg, the exhibitor's cousin, was recently reported killed in France.

The Queen Theatre, at Sweetwater, Texas, has been purchased by J. H. Snell.

The Queen Theatre, Denison, is now being operated by Peoples & Campbell. They bought the playhouse from Frank Mamolo late in September. Peoples & Campbell also own the Denison Arcade.

The Crystal Theatre, of Eudora, Arkansas, has been bought by Jack Nailor. The new management opened with "Four Years in Germany."

D. A. White, of the Cozy Theatre, Hobart, Okla., has sold the theatre to Burns & Burns.

Sam Brunck has been appointed Oklahoma City manager for Metro. He succeeds John Muchmore, who has gone with Paramount. Manager Le Roy Bickel, of Metro, paid a visit to the Oklahoma City branch late in September.

Claude Ezell, of the Select, is spending a few weeks organizing business in the border country.

Mrs. M. L. Parrish has bough the Queen Theatre at Yoakum from F. C. Patten.

The Deeandi Theatre at Amarillo has been closed for repairs by E. R. Sullivon, its owner. It will resume business soon.

E. R. Russell, formerly with Vitagraph, is now associated with the Dallas Paramount offices.

LABOR INFLUX BOOM FOR EXHIBITORS

Arrival of Many Thousands of War Workers Will Help Swell Receipts at San Francisco Theatres

By T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO exhibitors are interested in the request of the Federal Government that this city provide accommodations for thirty thousand men who are to be sent here at once to work in war industries, and to be prepared to handle fifty thousand more by the first of the year. Thousands of skilled workers have been brought here during the past few weeks. The Federal Employment Service is recruiting men in California, Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, Montana and Colorado for work in local shipyards, and the outlook is that every vacant room will be taken before the first of the year. This great influx of population is expected to mean much to the moving picture business, and the best fall and winter season on record is looked forward to by the trade. Many theatres are even now breaking all former records for attendance, and even the small houses that threatened to fall by the wayside a few months ago are doing a good business.

Theatres in the country districts are not enjoying prosperity in the same measure as is the case in San Francisco and its suburbs. Population there has been diminished by the draft, and skilled workmen have migrated to the Bay region to secure employment at high wages in the shipyards. Crops have been fair, with prices high, and general conditions are prosperous, but the falling off in population is affecting the amusement business. Conditions similar to these prevail throughout the Hawaian Islands, according to Joe Cohen, of the Consolidated Amusement Company. "The Islands have been bled white," he said, "both in regard to men and money. The regular soldiers stationed there have been taken away, together with the National Guard and those of draft age. Tourist travel has been cut off, no new labor is coming in and business of all kinds is suffering. The amusement business is extremely quiet with no relief in sight."

Clement Joins' Select Organization.

Van B. Clement, who has been connected with the Portola Theatre, San Francisco, for the past two and a half years, and who has been filling the position of house manager since the opening of the California Theatre last year, has resigned to accept a post with the Select Pictures Corporation in the Northwest under district manager H. H. Hicks. He will be stationed at Portland, Ore., and will not only act as Oregon representative, but will cover a part of Idaho and Washington. When the California Theatre was erected doubt was expressed in some quarters as to whether the Portola Theatre, which is almost adjoining this big house, could be conducted with success, but under the management of Mr. Clement it has had a highly successful year, and its owners have been so gratified with the results that improvements were recently made at a cost of more than $10,000.

Mr. Clement is fully conversant with the merits of the Select pictures, having used many of these at the Portola Theatre, and enters upon his new duties with experience and enthusiasm that insure immediate success. He will assume his new position about the middle of October, after a conference with Mr. Hicks, who maintains headquarters at Seattle.

Film Women Tender Delightful Affair.

The Motion Picture Auxiliary of the Stage Women's War Relief entertained enlisted soldiers and sailors at a dance given at American Photoplayer Hall on the evening of September 21, about two hundred persons being present. The affair was arranged by Miss Irene Cohn, of the Vitagraph office, and Miss Sadie Litzenstein, of Triangle. One of the novel features of the gathering was a matched dance, at which time those in uniform were each presented with a pass for one of the local theatres. This was made possible through the courtesy of Harry David, of the California; Van B. Clement, of the Portola; Edward Morris, of the Hippodrome and Casino; Leo Weinberger, of the Strand; J. L. Partington, of the Imperial; J. J. Cluxton, of Pantages; M. L. Markowitz, of the Alhambra; Messrs. Oppenheimer and Levy, of the Royal and Polk; H. Gosliner, of the Edison, and Kahn and Greenfield, of the New Mission and New Fillmore Theatres. The hall decorations were arranged for by Louis Reichert, of the Metro, and both hall and music were donated by the American Photoplayer Company. This auxiliary meets each Tuesday to do sewing work and all women connected with the film industry are asked to attend these meetings.

William Citron Goes to United.

William J. Citron, who has been in charge of the local branch of the Fox Film Corporation since this was opened about four years ago, has tendered his resignation and has accepted a position as manager of the branch of the United Picture Theatres of America, to be opened at once in the General Film Company building. Lee Ochs, one of the organizers of the new concern, and William Alexander, Pacific Coast division manager, spent the past week here, and through their efforts Mr. Citron was added to the list of branch managers. George Mann, district manager for William Fox, is here to look after the business of the local office until a successor to Mr. Citron is selected.

Film Men Join Masons.

Several San Francisco film men have heard the call to "meet upon the level and to part upon the square," and have joined the order of Masons. Among those recently initiated have been Morris L. Markowitz, manager of the Universal; Dan Markowitz, of the Western Feature Film Company; Leon Shane, with the M. & R. Feature Film Company; Reuben Cohen, of the E. L. C. Company, and Henry Friedman, chief operator of the Maie Biograph.

Exchange Men Attend Theatre Opening.

Several local film exchange men attended the recent opening of the Garden Theatre at Burlingame, Cal., among those being Marion H. Kohn, of the Consolidated Film Corporation; Ben F. Simpson, of Triangle; William J. Citron, of the Fox Film Corporation, and Newton Levi, of the Mutual. The new house is one of the most beautiful in the suburbs of San Francisco.

Acme Theatre Makes Improvements.

Several improvements of note have been made of late in the Acme Theatre, Stockton street, near Broadway, including the installation of a new organ. This house is the first one in the North Beach district to install a complete force of girl ushers, and these are proving to be very satisfactory. Ralph Marks, of the firm of I. L. Marks & Sons, which conducts this theatre, is serving his country in France.

Community Singing at the Strand.

Leo Weinberger, manager of the Strand Theatre, San Francisco, says that the patrons of this house like community singing and that many of them come to this theatre because of this feature. He has some idea in regard to community singing, just as in the presentation of pictures, and one of these is that a leader is not needed or wanted. People look upon a leader as a professional, he says, and quit singing when one appears. He has the words of the songs printed on slides, with some catch phrases to keep everyone in good humor, and there are but few who do not avail themselves of the opportunity of making themselves heard.

Asher Did Not Sell "Crusaders" Film.

The publication of the photograph of E. M. Asher in a recent issue of the Moving Picture World, as one of the hustlers who sold "Pershing's Crusaders," was misleading, as this film is handled in California by the State Council of Defense, and not by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, as is the case in other parts of the country. W. G. Holcombe is the man who did most to place San Francisco third in the contest for the Pershing trophy, an excellent showing for a new-comer in the film business. As a film salesman Mr. Asher takes a back seat for no one, but this was a case where he had no opportunity to display his ability as the film in question was handled by others.

Wounded Heroes See Griffith Film.

Through the courtesy of Sol L. Lesser wounded soldiers at the Letterman General Hospital at the presidio were recently treated to a private showing of Griffith's "Hearts of the World," the showing being witnessed by about four hundred persons. A volunteer orchestra furnished music exactly as at the regular theatre. The run at the Alcazar Theatre will come to a close at the end of the fifteenth week, owing to other bookings at this house.

Theatres Change Hands.

Several sales of moving picture houses in the San Francisco district have been effected of late through the United Theatre Exchange, among these being the following: Shanghai Theater, Kearney street, San Francisco, from Samuel Frankel and P. Dito to Mr. Mamlar; the New Sixteenth Street Theatre, San Francisco, from S. Smith to A. Templeton; the Lincoln Theatre, Sixth and Clement streets, San Francisco, from Abe Markowitz and Dan Lebo, to B. Liebman; the Haussler Theatre, Fillmore street, near Sutter, San Francisco, from G. Blowers to S. Smith; the Haywards Opera House, Haywards, Cal., from Fred A. Lahm to E. Rosenthal, and the Bell Theatre, Livermore, Cal., from G. F. Madsen to George Bush. The Gem Theatre at Colusa, Cal., has also been leased to L. Holt.

San Francisco Briefs.

C. H. Christie, of Christie Comedy fame, was here from Los Angeles recently on his semi-annual business trip.

Joe Dietch, manager of the branch of the Consolidated Film Corporation at Seattle, Wash., is here for a stay of a few weeks.

I. Oppenheimer, of the Royal Theatre, has been on the sick list of late, but has recovered sufficiently to visit Film Row again.

Joe Merrick, Pacific Coast division manager for the Mutual, made a short stay at the local office recently, following a visit to the Northwest.

The name of the Cort Theatre has been changed to that of the Curran Theatre.

Syd Chaplin, of Los Angeles, was here for a few days recently.

Harry Oviatt, former Pathe manager here, but more recently with the Turner & Dahnken Circuit as house manager, has been placed in charge of the Bluebird department of the Universal exchange.

Joe Brandt is expected here from Los Angeles shortly and after a brief stay he will leave for the Northwest.

C. W. Deming, of New York, has arrived on the Coast and will work out of the Los Angeles branch.

J. L. Frazier, for some time with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, but who has been in other lines lately, has joined the road staff of the Mutual.

George Roudy, former booker for the World Film Corporation, has enlisted in the service and his place has been taken by Charles Sprinke, former shipping clerk.

Walter White, with G. A. Metcalfe, has enlisted in the tank service.

WEEK'S FILM NEWS FROM THE DOMINION

Women Ushers Now Employed by Grand in Peterboro—Gaumont Serial Imported by Regal Films, Ltd.

By W. M. Gladish, 33 Wineva Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

Grand Adopts Women Ushers.

A NUMBER of Toronto theatres have had women ushers for a number of years, and they have been found quite suitable for the purpose. An out-of-town theatre which has adopted the woman usher is the Grand in Peterboro, Ont., recently rebuilt, and now managed by William Dineen, formerly of the Strand Theatre, Toronto. The women in this theatre are dressed in white uniforms. The Grand also has a six-piece orchestra under the leadership of Rupert Gliddon. This is going some for a town the size of Peterboro. E. Graham, a Toronto operator, who was in charge of projection at the Strand Theatre, Camp Borden, Ont., during the summer of 1916, has supervision over the projection room of the Grand.

Hemings Building $60,000 Theatre.

H. Hemings, of North Battleford, Sask., announces that a $60,000 moving picture theatre is being built for him in North Battleford, where he already has the Empress Theatre.

"Berlin" Film Shown in Canada.

Roland Roberts, of Toronto, formerly manager of the Regent Theatre, Toronto, and the St. Denis Theatre, Montreal, has branched out as a show manager. He is promoting the presentation of "Crashing Through to Berlin" at Massey Hall, Toronto's largest auditorium, for seven days starting Saturday, October 12. This run will include two Saturdays and Canada's Thanksgiving Day, Monday, October 14. This will be the first run of the war review in Canada. For the presentation in Canada the special feature has been thoroughly revised, and it has been brought up to date also. Several thousand feet of Canadian military views have replaced various sections of the original print, while recent Palestine and Saloniki war views have been added.

Canadian Exchange Notes.

J. Ruck, formerly Western Ontario traveler for the Canadian Universal, has joined the latest Canadian film exchange, the Exhibitors' Distributing Corporation.

L. A. Curry, salesman at the Toronto headquarters of the Canadian Universal, has been transferred to the Detroit office of the Universal.

Charles Stephenson, general manager of the Exhibitors' Distributing Corporation, Toronto, recently visited Winnipeg, Man., for the purpose of establishing the Western Canadian office of the new company. The Winnipeg branch will be under the management of Bert Hill, who is a former Winnipeg exhibitor.

Regal Films Import Gaumont Serial.

Regal Films, Limited, Toronto, did the unusual when all ten episodes of "The Hand of Vengeance," the Gaumont serial, were imported from the States in one shipment, and the complete serial was presented to the Ontario Board of Censors for examination. This was done so that there would not be the possibility of a break in the continuity of the story or an extra lapse between episodes through the condemning of an episode.

Elliott Goes to Famous Players.

Reg Elliott, formerly with Regal Films, Ltd., has become service manager of the Famous Players' Film Service, Ltd., Toronto, in succession to S. Taube, who has become Montreal branch manager of the company. Mr. Elliott is a brother of O. Elliott, chief inspector of moving picture theatres for the Province of Ontario, and also of Mr. Elliott, who is in charge of the Military Y. M. C. A. at Niagara Camp, Ontario.

Theatre Changes Its Name.

The Flower Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, which is a part of the circuit controlled by the Paramount Theatre Company, Ltd., has become the Strand Theatre. The change is one in name only, however, as Herbert Jennings, formerly of Toronto, continues as manager. A recent attraction was Fox's "Cleopatra," which was shown at 10 cent and 15 cent prices. The Paramount Theatre Company is affiliated with Regal Films, Ltd.

Peter Pan Has Its Own Little Paper.

Messrs. Reed and Dunlop, of the Peter Pan Theatre, 1969 Queen Street East, Toronto, have become the publishers of the "Peter Pan News," a tiny four-page newspaper which is attractive in both make-up and phraseology. For instance, a program for a week is listed as "Bill-'o-the-Play," and there is a line that there is a "comedy, of course, as the wind-up after the big picture." We are also told that the paper is "issued from the place of publication—The Peter Pan Theatre. The paper is called "The Peter Pan News."

Palace Theatre Reopens.

The Palace Theatre, Queen street east and Greenwood avenue, Toronto, has been reopened under the management of G. F. Taylor, who has adopted methods that will probably make the house "go." One of his first moves was to become a member of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario. He is booking on the open market.

Operators Represented at Labor Congress.

W. P. Covert, business agent of the Toronto Local Moving Picture Operators' Union, represented the local at the Dominion Labor Congress which was held at Quebec this year.

Allen Theatre Holds "Milkman's Matinee."

Manager Oral Cloaky, of the Allen Theatre, Calgary, Alberta, arranged a stunt with school children that gave him special advertising for two different features. To the first 275 children who presented themselves at the Allen Theatre for a "milkman's matinee" on a Saturday morning for a presentation of "The Kaiser's Shadow" he gave a free ticket for a ride in one of Calgary's sight-seeing trolley cars and also a free pass for a special children's performance at the theatre on the following Saturday morning for "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The special street car that carried the children bore banners advertising the coming Marguerite Clark attraction, and the kiddies did all that was necessary in providing noise to attract attention.

Spencer Pays Toronto a Visit.

A recent visitor in Toronto was J. G. Spencer, one of the best known exhibitors in the Maritime Provinces. Mr. Spencer controls a large chain of moving picture theatres in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, his houses being located in St. John, Fredericton, Woodstock, Amherst, Truro and Charlottetown. The latter city, in the tiny island province of Prince Edward Island, has but two moving picture theatres, and Spencer has one of them. His visit in Toronto was a periodical inspection. He also controls "Damaged Goods" in Canada, which has been passed by all provincial censors except those of Ontario and Quebec.

Aliens Providing Shows for Soldiers.

The convalescing soldiers at the Whitby Military Hospital, Whitby, Ontario, are securing their chief entertainment through the presentation of moving picture features, which are sent to the hospital from Toronto by Messrs. Jule and J. J. Allen. It is only occasionally that a stage company visits the institution, so that moving pictures are the bill of fare almost every night in the week, including Sundays. The very latest pictures are shown, too.

The man in charge of recreation at the Whitby Hospital is Gunner J. H. Dufton. He is the theatre manager, booker, advance agent, manager of the four bowling alleys, promoter of prize fights, projection machine operator and what not. The Whitby Theatre has a soldiers' symphony orchestra of twenty pieces.

Not long ago the Allens were presented with a handsome silver shield for the magnificent manner in which they have been supplying all the latest pictures to the Whitby institution without charge.

Horsfall Working for Uncle Sam.

B. Horsfall, the Eastern Canadian manager of the Mutual Film Company, has left Montreal for Washington, D. C., where he has taken up war work for Uncle Sam. Mr. Horsfall was in direct charge of the Montreal branch of the Mutual for about one year. He has been succeeded by Ray Peck, of Toronto, formerly service manager with the Canadian Universal Film Company. James Travis, Toronto manager of the Mutual, will have charge of Mutual interests in Eastern Canada in future, it is understood.

LaMarr Is Manager of Allen's Majestic.

H. C. LaMarr, formerly of Toronto and Brantford, Ontario, has been appointed manager of the Allen's new Majestic Theatre, Montreal, which was opened on September 16 with "Hearts of the World." Announcement has also been made of the appointment of Walter Greene as manager of the Allen Theatre, Toronto.

Luigi Romanelli, director of the Allen Theatre Orchestra, Toronto, recently visited Montreal for the purpose of organizing a large permanent orchestra for the new Allen house there. Mr. Romanelli, incidentally, has become the supervising director of all Allen theatre orchestras in Canada.

Taube Appointed Famous Players Manager

Sid Taube, service manager of the Famous Players Film Service, Toronto, has been appointed Montreal manager of the Famous Players. Mr. Taube was the Montreal branch manager of the Canadian Universal for a long time. Reg. Elliott, of Regal Films, Limited, Toronto, has succeeded Mr. Taube as the Toronto service manager of the Famous Players.

Coliseum Has New Manager.

Manager T. Coulson, of the Photodrome Theatre, City Hall Square, Toronto, has taken charge of the Coliseum Theatre, Toronto, which is owned by the Modern Theatres, Limited, Toronto. Mr. Coulson succeeds Mr. Stonge, formerly of the Oakwood and Garden theatres, Toronto. D. Siegel, a former projection machine operator, has become manager of the Photodrome, which is now presenting both pictures and vaudeville at 15 cents and 25 cents.

Dominion Raises Admission Prices.

The management of the Dominion Theatre, Montreal, has announced an increase in admission prices following the decision of a number of other Montreal exhibitors to raise their prices. Night prices will be 10 cents for a balcony seat and 15 cents, including war tax, for orchestra floor seats. Matinee prices are 5 cents and 10 cents, not including war tax.

Movement Afoot for Earlier Closing.

There is a general movement in Calgary, Alberta, for the closing of theatres at 11 p. m. each evening in place of 11:30 and 12 p. m. On account of the late evenings in Calgary it has always been customary to prolong proceedings so that the de luxe evening performances generally start well after nine o'clock. Theatre employees, Board of Trade, Rotary Club, patrons and even some of the exhibitors themselves have protested against the custom, and the newspapers have been giving some considerable space to the subject. The statement is made that the theatre managers are willing to co-operate, providing the public will do its part by turning out to the shows at an early hour.

ACTIVITIES OF DETROIT FILM MEN

Goldstein Buys State Rights on Two Rapf Productions—Scott Made Manager of Madison Exchange

By Jacob Smith, 719 Free Press Building, Detroit, Mich.

Opera House Reverts to "Legitimate."

THE old Detroit Opera House, which has been run as a picture theatre since last May, has finally passed into the hands of E. D. Stair, who, in turn, has made an arrangements whereby it will play Shubert "legitimate" attractions exclusively, starting October 21. R. E. Olds, who owns the property, stipulates in the lease that the former name must be retained. "The Hearts of the World" played a thirteen weeks' engagement there, while "The Prussian Cur" had a very successful two weeks' run.

Buys State Rights on Two Rapf Pictures.

Harry Goldstein, who promoted the Majestic Theatre, Detroit, and the Oakland Theatre, Pontiac, has purchased the Michigan rights to two productions by Harry Rapf—"The Struggle Everlasting" and "The Accidental Honeymoon." He has not yet decided just how they will be released.

Want Sunday Shows.

The owners of the three theatres in Highland Park, Detroit's wealthy suburb, have secured petitions for the repeal of the present ordinance prohibiting picture theatres from opening on Sundays. The people living in that section are now friendly towards the theatres, and it is believed that at the November election the exhibitors will win out.

Scott Manager of Madison Exchange.

Harry Scott, formerly occupying an important eastern position with the George Kleine System, has taken full charge of the Madison Film Exchange in Detroit. He arrived on the job October 1. The Madison distributes the First National pictures in Michigan and is owned by John H. Kunsky.

Important Short Notes.

C. W. Perry is no longer Detroit representative for Paralta pictures.

C. E. Shurtleff, of the Hodkinson Corporation, was a Detroit visitor recently.

"Shoulder Arms" goes into the Madison Theatre, Detroit, for week of October 20.

Backed by a tremendous advertising campaign "Crashing Through to Berlin," in co-operation with the Detroit Free Press, opened an indefinite engagement at the Washington Theatre, Sunday October 6.

W. S. McLaren, managing director of the Majestic and Colonial theatres, Jackson, Mich., is now in complete control, having taken over the interest of his associate, W. F. Phillips.

Will M. Elliott, for the past year manager of the Washington Theatre, Detroit, has resigned, taking effect October 6. He will assume on October 14 the management of the Regent Theatre, Toronto, Can.

C. A. Mead, formerly with Pathe and Vitagraph, and for four weeks house manager of the Regent Theatre, Detroit, has resigned. He is succeeded by Harold Marsden, of Philadelphia, who will also handle the pubilicity.

W. A. Kent, former special representative for Select, has been appointed assistant manager of the Detroit office, and he will also do the booking.

G. C. Jefferson, former publicity manager in Detroit for Paramount, was recently promoted to lieutenant, and he is now stationed in the Ordnance Motor Instruction School, Camp Raritan, Metuchen, N. J.

W. A. Haynes, representing the Producers Distributing Corporation, has opened offices at 201 Film Building.

James Couzens, the Republican candidate for Mayor of Detroit, has written a letter to the Moving Picture World correspondent, in which he says he has always considered the motion picture theatres of great benefit to the community, and that he has noticed a big improvement in the quality of productions.

And now Victory singing has spread to the New Family Theatre, Adrian, Mich. Elwyn M. Simons, manager, has put new life into the feature by inviting people from the audience to hit the "sawdust trail" and sing from the stage. It has made a big hit.

Dave Mundstuk, of the Strand Features, is back from New York, where he purchased many new pictures for Michigan. Included are eight new features, sixteen two-reel western dramas, and thirty two-reelers of Bronchos and Kay-Bees.

Joe Optner, of the Jewel and Olympic theatres, Detroit, has purchased the Tillman Theatre, Michigan and Tillman avenue, having already taken possession.

John H. Kunsky has placed an order for a Hilgrane-Lane organ for his Adams Theatre, which will be the same type as is now in the Madison Theatre.

Cleveland News Letter

By M. A. Malaney, 206 Sloan Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

Ohio First National Holds Convention.

THE first annual convention of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, of Ohio, was a big success in attendance and results accomplished.

About 150 members were present. The convention ended with a banquet at the Winton Hotel, Wednesday evening, September 18. The speakers were Judge W. C. Keogh, E. Mandelbaum, of Cleveland, toastmaster; Henry Lustig, president of the Exhibitors' League; George Schade, of Sandusky; C. A. Barbian, Akron; C. A. Smith, Chillicothe, and John Kunsky, Detroit. Music was furnished by the Knickerbocker Theatre orchestra.

Officers elected were E. Mandelbaum, Cleveland, president and treasurer; A. Friedman, Cleveland, vice-president; W. E. Luck, Cleveland, secretary and general manager; C. A. Barbian, Akron; C. A. Smith, Chillicothe, and I. Libson, Cincinnati, members of the board of directors.

Runs Show Until 3:05 A. M.

The Park Theatre, Millersburg, Ohio, showed "Over the Top" one night recently, the last show ending at 3:05 a. m. "The people just kept on coming, so we kept on grinding out the films," said the manager.

Ohio Dailies Run Picture Sections.

Many Ohio newspapers this season are putting out special motion picture editions for the purpose of stimulating the business—and incidently their own. The idea was started by the Cleveland Plain Dealer, but before that paper got a good start all the other papers in town followed suit. Other cities, such as Toledo and Columbus, then followed up the idea. The Toledo News Bee got out a very nice section. In each of the sections some of the big film companies took considerable space.

No doubt these sections helped the picture business somewhat, but the main complaint by exhibitors was that they contained too much advertising and not enough news of the picture productions and the theatres.

Must Not Show Labor Slides or Films.

Cleveland theatre managers received notice that they are not allowed to display slides or films advertising for labor. This notice came direct from C. F. Arndt, examiner in charge of the United States Employment office.

2,000 NEWSIES SEE JEWEL'S WAR FILM

Management of English's Theatre, Indianapolis, and Universal's District Manager Are Hosts to Newsboys

By Indiana Trade News Service, 69 Lay man Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

A SEVERE case of heavy-heart must have attacked every Hun sympathizer if any dared to invade the theatre—at English's Theatre in Indianapolis last week during the exhibition of the Jewel Productions' big war spectacle, "Crashing Through to Berlin," which packed the house to overflowing at every performance. The subject is released by the Universal Film Company. The accompanying picture shows how the crowds were lined up awaiting their turn at the box office at one of the performances.

At the initial showing of the picture, Messrs. Barton & Olsen, lessees of the theatre during the summer season, and Joseph I. Schnitzer, district manager of the Universal Company, had as their guests about 2,000 newsboys and newsgirls. Chaplin Huston, of the army, led the youngsters in a series of patriotic songs, and the pep they put into it made the old walls of the theatre rattle.

As an added feature at some of the performances, Mayor Charles W. Jewett and Russell B. Harrison, secretary of the Marion County Council of Defense, made inspiring patriotic addresses, and the audience sang the "Marseillaise" and other patriotic songs. In fact no community singing ever had more patriotism in it than that manifested by the crowds attending the exhibition of this picture.

Exhibitors Get Influenza Orders.

Vigorous steps to prevent a general outbreak in Indianapolis of the Spanish influenza epidemic have been taken by Mayor Charles W. Jewett and Dr. Herman Morgan, secretary of the city board of health. They have sent out a series of orders to be observed in connection with the effort to prevent the epidemic, and have asked the co-operation of the public in the enforcemnt of the rules.

Theatre managers have been ordered not to admit persons into the theatres if they are suffering from any form of cold, and ticket sellers are ordered to inquire of every person asking for tickets whether they have a cold. The order also provides for the immediate fumigation and cleansing of all theatres, street cars and public places.

The exhibitors of the city are co-operating with the authorities, and are doing all in their power to aid in preventing a general spreading of the disease.

The American to Reopen October 5.

The American Theatre at Terre Haute, which was closed recently for improvements, is scheduled to be formally reopened on Saturday, October 5, according to an announcement made this week by Shannon Katzenbach, manager. By that time, Mr. Katzenbach says, the army of decorators now engaged in beautifying the interior of the theatre will have completed their work. For the benefit of those who are "built for comfort instead of speed," Mr. Katzenbach has ordered a number of new chairs to take the place of the old ones, which were a bit stingy as to width.

Kokomo's New Theatre to Open Soon.

The new motion picture theatre which is being constructed at Kokomo, Ind., will be opened some time next week. Decorators, carpenters and painters have been at work on the structure constantly for the last few weeks, and the result of their labors will soon be one of the most cheerful and attractive film houses in the city. A seating capacity of about 600 has been arranged, and in the front a deep foyer with large wide entrances and exits have been constructed. Merrill Moore, the manager of the new house, says he has contracted for Paramount and Artcraft pictures. The name of the theatre will be selected later through a contest promulgated by the management.

Conner Has Temporary Quarters at World

J. G. Conner, formerly Indianapolis manager of the Mutual Film Corporation, who recently resigned to take up his duties as a representative of the Government in the distribution of war films, returned to Indianapolis this week from New York, where he received instructions as to his work with the Government. Temporarily he will make his headquarters with the World Film Corporation, through which the latest Government picture, "America's Answer," will be distributed.

Crowd Attending "Crashing Through to Berlin" at English's Theatre, Indianapolis.

Rhodes Takes Over the Orpheum.

The management of the Orpheum Theatre at Elkhart has been taken over by Ezra Rhodes, of South Bend, who also controls the lease of the Jefferson Theatre in Goshen and the LaSalle Theatre in South Bend, and, according to Mr. Rhodes, the Orpheum will be opened for business early in October. The theatre is now undergoing extensive improvements. He says a five-piece orchestra will be installed in addition to the large pipe organ.

Dismiss Injunction Suit Against Fox.

Judge John J. Rochford, of the superior court, in giving his decision in the suit for a temporary injunction against the Fox Film Corporation by William Meloy, an exhibitor at Shelbyville, granted the motion of the defendant's attorney to dismiss the injunction petition, saying he thought the proper remedy was by a suit for damages. The suit was brought by Meloy to try to compel the Fox Company to exhibit "Salome" at his theatre, after, it is alleged, the company had notified him that it did not intend to fulfill a certain contract with him.

Rochester Trade Letter

By L. B. Skeffington, 61 Main Street, East, Rochester, N. Y.

The Loan First with Rochester Film Men.

JUST now the Liberty Loan is the principal feature in all of the local theatres. "Nothing else counts" is the saying of the theatre managers, and this has become the generally adopted slogan. An energetic committee is in charge of the campaign in the theatres. It is noticeable that a moving picture man, William A. Calihan, of the Regent, again heads the committee. Other members are: John J. Farrem, Victoria; John H. Finn, Temple; William R. Corris, Lyceum; Howard W. Shannon, Piccadilly; Albert A. Fennyvessey, general manager of the Theatres Operating Company; Fred J. Sarr, Fay's; John H. H. Fennyvessey, Family; Joseph H. Stoffel, Grand; Irving M. Salyards, Lyndhurst; Henry Kutz, Lyric; Mr. Calihan went to New York and arranged to have an extra supply of Liberty Loan films sent here, so that every theatre might run one film every day. He also arranged to have some stars make personal appearances here.

Alexander Culley to Retire.

Alexander Culley has decided to discontinue the management of the Park Theatre at Avon, about November 1, in order to make his residence in Rochester. Mr. Culley is seventy-six years old and feels that he is entitled to retire. During the past week he observed his golden wedding anniversary, the principal feature of which was a dinner tendered to him and his wife at the Hotel Rochester. Mr. Culley was born in Ireland and came to this country when he was nine years old. His family settled on a farm, near Avon, which Mr. Culley still owns. Some years ago he built the Park Theatre and has continued to personally conduct it ever since. His five children are all living.

Runs Gerard's Film as Loan Feature.

The Rialto Theatre is showing "My Four Years in Germany" as a special Liberty Loan feature. The lobby and front of the house are appropriately and strikingly decorated, the national emblem and patriotic effects being the outstanding features of the scheme.

Florence Fennyvessey Managing Strand.

Rochester is not a bit behind in progressiveness, or whatever you may call it, when you refer to the women folks crowding in where only men used to tread. Two local theatres are managed, personally directed, and otherwise run by members of the gentler sex. Florence R. Fennyvessey is the guiding genius of the Strand, a large downtown picture palace. The Jefferson, one of the larger neighborhood houses, has been managed by Mrs. Briggs for a long time.

ALL EXCHANGES COMBINE ON LOAN FILMS

Capital City Film Men Form Committee to Handle the Short Subjects Boosting Liberty Bond Sales

By Clarence L. Linz,. 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—All of the Fourth Liberty Loan prints in this territory are to be handled through a central booking agency. Oscar A. Morgan, manager of the Famous Players Exchange in this city, is responsible for this plan. Mr. Morgan, live wire secretary of the Washington Film Managers' Association, found that some little confusion was being experienced in the individual exchanges in the handling of these prints. The managers of the other exchanges were called upon, and it was agreed that the simplest method would be to appoint some of the bookers to a committee to handle the whole problem.

"Jerry" Payne and Albert C. Eckhardt, bookers for the Famous Players Exchange, and Arthur Van Dyke, of the Greater Vitagraph, volunteered their services. To this committee will probably be added others, for the co-operation of all of the bookers in Washington is desired. Meetings of the bookers have been held, and at these was presented the information necessary to the placing of the films from the various exchanges without confusion and doubling up of prints.

In speaking of this plan those interested declared that handling the films through a central booking committee would insure the greatest possible amount of publicity to each. The Liberty Loan Committee is anxious to show as many pictures in as many houses to as many people as it is possible to reach. The exchange managers and theatre men of this territory are going to do their utmost to meet the wishes of Uncle Sam in this respect.

Fruit Pits Will Help Win the War.

The Council of National Defense has enlisted the services of all state councils of defense in the campaign which the National Association of Motion Picture Industry is about to institute to bring about a fruit pit and nut shell saving to help provide material for the manufacture of charcoal for army gas masks. This information is contained in an official announcement of the United States Food Administration which has been informed that motion picture theatre owners in the Middle West have been giving "Peach Stone Matinees" that have resulted in the collection of such material, one house in Indiana obtaining four barrels of peach stones at one afternoon performance.

Takes Desk Space at General's Office.

D. F. O'Donnell, representative of the United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., and E. A. Crane, representing Hodkinson, have taken desk space at the local offices of the General Film Corporation, the latter having some time ago taken over the actual distribution of the pictures handled by these two organizations.

Phillips Takes Over the Florida Theatre.

Lawrence Phillips, of the Staunton Theatre, has again taken control of the Florida Theatre, at Fifteenth and H streets, Northeast. For some time the latter house has been operated by Morris Strunsky.

Payette Presented with Military Watch.

John Payette, former member of the film fraternity here, is the proud possessor of a handsome Waltham military watch, equipped with a khaki nonfuss strap, presented to him by the managers and office executives of the Grandall Amusement Company. Private Payette was one of the most popular of film men, and the Grandall outfit worked up this little surprise for him. A second surprise was the presentation speech by Mr. Grandall. It is declared that he practiced this bit of oratory for a week before trying it out on Payette. This latest recruit to the army is acting as sergeant major at the engineer camp, Camp Humphreys, Va.

Cummins Buys "The Submarine Eye."

Samuel Cummins, 811 E street northwest, announces that he has purchased the Williamson Brothers' underwater picture, "The Submarine Eye," for this territory. This feature will be put out as a road show at top prices, Mr. Cummins says. The price for "The Submarine Eye," Mr. Cummins reports, is in the neighborhood of $6,000, and will open in his territory after a big advertising campaign. He controls Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia and North Carolina. Mr. Cummins also controls "Enlighten Thy Daughter" and "Birth."

$100,000 for Liberty Theatres.

The War Department has authorized the expenditure of more than $100,000 in the erection of Liberty theatres at Camp Wheeler and Camp Hancock in Georgia, and Camp Wadsworth in South Carolina. The Construction Division of the War Department has the matter in charge, and will erect theatres, similar to those previously built in other camps, at a cost of $38,700 each. Instructions are to begin the work on the theatres at once.

Influenza Orders Affect Bookings.

The motion picture business in this territory is in a state of great excitement due to the prevalence of Spanish influenza and the consequent quarantines established in a number of cities and towns. Quite a number of telegrams have been coming into the local exchanges canceling bookings, and the industry is suffering a considerable loss.

Newark, Del., Fredericksburg, Va., Camp Meade, Md., and Wilmington, N. C., are a few of the many places sending out "stop shows" notices. In many instances no dates are set for the reopening of the houses. The order closing the theatres closes also the schools and other public places of assembly.

Cincinnati News Letter

By Kenneth C. Crain, 307 First National Bank, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Theatres Aid in Checking Influenza.

WHILE the influenza epidemic which has secured such a lamentable hold in some of the Eastern and Northern cities has not yet done much harm in Cincinnati, local authorities are doing everything in their power to forestall the appearance of the disease in force. The moving picture houses, both for their own protection and as a measure of co-operation with the health authorities, are flashing on their screens warnings to persons suffering with grip or from any symtom of Spanish influenza to remain away from the theatres . and other crowded places, isolating themselves voluntarily in their homes as far as possible. Across the river in Newport, Ky., where thousands of people live who work and find their amusement in Cincinnati, the disease has become more or less prevalent, and the authorities there are considering closing the Newport picture houses in order to prevent further spread of the trouble.

Cincinnati Film Men Pushing Loan.

The patriotic work of boosting the Fourth Liberty Loan over the top in the Cincinnati district has naturally engaged much of the attention of moving picture men, as well as of their audiences. Several representative exhibitors and film men are actively engaged in soliciting subscriptions to the loan and in otherwise assisting the teams actually in the drive; while all of the theatres, as usual, are freely giving the use of their screens to messages which have their effect on the public, urging full support of the loan, and setting forth the reasons why.

Hess Succeeds Serkowich.

The exhibitors and film men affiliated, respectively, with the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of the Chamber of Commerce and the Associated Film Exchanges of the Chamber of Commerce welcomed recently a new secretary who succeeds H. Serkowich, now a lieutenant in the navy, in his work as an officer of these organizations. The new man is Beecher E. Hess, formerly an assistant to Mr. Serkowich, and more lately engaged in similar work in Indianapolis and Lincoln, Ill., where he broadened his experience in conducting the affairs of business organizations. It is worth noting also, as an additional bit of evidence of the way the war is taking men in or connected with the industry, that Carl B. Adams, formerly an assistant to Secretary Serkowich, and more recently editor of a local photoplay journal, has given up his work to join the Students' Army Training Corps at the University of Cincinnati.

Close Theatres to Soldiers.

Chillicoth, Ohio.—In order to prevent the further spread of epidemics of bronchitis and coryza at Camp Sherman, and to stamp out these diseases, the medical authorities have forbidden soldiers to go into moving picture theatres in the town. The camp picture shows have also been closed on the recommendation of the medical officers, as well as other places where large numbers of men gather.

Portland News Letter

By I. Leesee Cohen, The Evening Telegram, Portland, Ore.

Boosts "Joan, the Woman," with a Parade.

CARL MARQUARD, the new manager of the Globe, put on "Joan, the Woman," for a second run. He boosted it on opening day with a parade. Thirty musicians of the Marine Band led the procession, followed by a number of the Marines. Then came a beautiful float, with Joan in armor as the central figure, and Red Cross nurses attending. Following came the Boy Scouts. They did a big business with it, really "turning 'em away."

Hill Made Film Division Manager.

C. M. Hill, local manager of the Paramount, has been appointed district manager of the Motion Picture Division of the Committee on Public Information, and is busy distributing and routing the Liberty Loan pictures.

Woman Exhibitor Visits Portland.

Mrs. H. B. Leiter, of Leiter & Meyers, owners of the Arcade and Star theatres of LaGrande, visited Portland to book the new productions. Mrs. Leiter has the entire burden of managership now, as Mr. Meyers has joined the colors. She says that owing to the big price for wheat that business in LaGrande is keeping up despite the fact that almost all the young men have joined the army or navy.

Exhibitor Notes.

A new house is being built in Klamath Falls, Ore., by L. Jacobs. It is to seat 600, and be equipped with everything modern.

Arnold and Schwartz have just opened a new theatre in Toledo, Ore.

Ed. Myrick, efficient manager of the Liberty Theatre, and who underwent an operation in a local hospital, is on the street again, but walking with crutches. He is not sufficiently recovered to be back at his desk.

John Hamrick, owner and manager of the Rex Theatre, of Seattle, is in town with Paul Smith's "Fall of the Barbary Coast," for which he bought the Seattle and Portland rights. It showed four weeks in Seattle to big business, and will run here at the Star for two weeks.

FRENCH FOREIGN LEGION AT THE ISIS

Famous Force of Fighting Foreigners Speak in Aid of Loan at Big Kansas City Picture House

By Kansas City News Service, 115 Railway Exchange, Kansas City, Mo.

THE French Foreign Legion, which arrived in Kansas City, September 27, were present at the matinee performance at the Isis Theatre, Thirty-fifth street and Troost avenue, for the purpose of making a talk on the Fourth Liberty Loan. The house was packed to its capacity. Prior to the public meeting at the Isis a parade was held in the downtown district. Mr. Curtis, manager of the Doric Theatre, incorporated the parade in his Doric News Weekly, which was shown at the close of the news reel Saturday night, September 28.

Exchangemen Combine on Loan Films.

Managers of the various local exchanges met the morning of September 28 for the purpose of devising the best method of exhibiting the Liberty Loan films. Seventy-five different subjects in all are being handled by Metro, Vitagraph, Paramount - Artcraft, Goldwyn, Select, Pathe, Mutual, Fox, General and the First National Exhibitors' Circuit. At the meeting arrangements were made to follow out the general program arranged by the distributors throughout this territory, to route the film so that each exhibitor will have only one Liberty Loan film a day, and every exhibitor will have one every day of the campaign, which ends October 19.

Will Invest Week's Proceeds in Bonds.

All exhibitors in this territory seem to be doing their utmost to co-operate in putting over the Liberty Loan drive. Frank Newman, proprietor of the Royal and Regent theatres, of this city, and also of the Butterfly Theatre, of Milwaukee, Wis., and the Fourth Street Theatre, Moberly, Mo., has offered to invest the gross proceeds from the four theatres for the first week of the campaign in Liberty Bonds.

George Mantzke Visits Kansas City.

George Mantzke, brother of I. F. Mantzke, manager of the Mutual Exchange in Kansas City, was in Kansas City this week. Mr. Mantzke is in the Aviation Corps, Ft. Sill, Okla., and is known among film men as one time manager of two of the leading theatres in the state of Minnesota.

Reduces Price for Censoring Scenics.

The Kansas State Board of Censorship has announced that the price for censoring films of educational value, including scenic and travelogue pictures, will be reduced from $2 to $1 per reel. However, it is not fully understood whether a reduction will be made in the charge for censoring news weeklies.

Kansas City Exchange Notes.

W. E. Truog, manager of the World Film Corporation, Kansas City office, has procured four prints of "America's Answer" and is making arrangements to secure an additional one. On pre-released bookings the programs are already scheduled to work practically without interruption.

Ensign Howard Jamison, formerly assistant manager of the Kansas City office of Pathe, expects to obtain a two weeks' furlough about the middle of October and spend it in Kansas City, according to word received by C. S. Edwards, Jr., manager of the Kleine-Edison office.

J. H. Way, cashier for the Kleine-Edison office, is being succeeded by Miss Horn, of the Federal Reserve Bank.

S. J. Baker, for some time past city censor, is taking over the management of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit for Missouri, with offices in St. Louis. Henry Goldman, formerly assistant manager, will take Mr. Baker's place. Assistant manager will be Eugene Flynn.

E. McAvoy, traveling for the Mutual Film Corporation out of Kansas City, reports good business throughout the territory of Kansas, Missouri and Northeastern Oklahoma. Mr. McAvoy is the proud and hapyy father of a baby boy; weight, 12 pounds. Earl, Jr., is expected to follow in his father's footsteps as a live film man.

J. P. Moore, Fox Kansas City representative, who was recently injured in an automobile accident between Deepwater and Clinton, Mo., returned to work Monday, September 23, and is now covering his old territory in Missouri.

J. E. Storey, manager of the Pathe Exchange, Kansas City, returned September 29 from a ten days' trip to the home office in New York City.

Sergeant Milton Feld, of the Quartermasters Department, Camp McArthur, Texas, and formerly manager of the Kansas City branch of the Universal Film Corporation, is in Kansas City on a ten days' furlough.

The Standard Film Corporation has secured the distributing rights on "How Stars Twinkle Away from the Studio" for Missouri and Kansas. Ben Shlyen, who has been with the Standard for some time in a number of different capacities, has taken charge of the advertising, formerly handled by R. E. Tannehill. The Standard is handling the distribution of the current issues of the Educational Film Corporation.

E. W. Green has resigned his position with the Triangle Film Corporation, Kansas City office, after almost two years' service with the company. Mr. Green expects to be called into service shortly.

W. B. Towne, president of the W. B. Towne Photoplay Company, with headquarters in St. Louis, was in Kansas City for about a week's time, leaving a few days ago for St. Louis, where he will stop en route and go on immediately to New York.

C. P. Anderson, well known to distributors in Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma, is now sales manager of the Kansas City Machine and Supply Company, Inc., and has been properly initiated into his new situation by very active business. Such a large number of films are to be used in connection with the Liberty Loan campaign, that it has been necessary for the company to install a large number of projection machines in the auditoriums of legitimate theatres.

The MARKS OF BETTER MOTION PICTURES

YOUR patrons will never count that hour wasted or a disappointment when you show them a Paramount or Artcraft Picture. Bringing to your city the greatest dramatic talent of screen and stage, Paramount and Artcraft pictures give you the photo-play at the apex of its development.

They are the better pictures of the motion picture art—supreme in their stars, great in their stories, and perfect in their mounting and direction. And they are marked Paramount or Artcraft to identify them to you—as your kind of picture.

Paramount and Artcraft pictures are shown in thousands of the better-class theatres all over the world. Because these theatres know that public patronage is quickly won and permanently maintained by showing pictures of quality and character.

Paramount and Artcraft Motion Pictures

Three Ways to Tell your patrons you show Paramount and Artcraft Motion Pictures one—by using these trade-marks or names in the advertisements of your local theatres.

two—by using these trade-marks or names on the front of the theatre or in the lobby.

three—by showing these trade-marks or names on the screen inside the theatre.

NEW DESMONDS FOR ROBERTSON-COLE

World Rights on Eight Pictures About to Be Made Secured by Big Export Firm

DEAL THRU JESSE D. HAMPTON

Kerrigan Pictures For Territory Outside United States Also Landed—Extensive Exploitation of Martin Johnson Cannibal Series

A close working alliance between the production interests represented by Jesse D. Hampton, who has been spectacularly active in the moving picture field for some time, and the Robertson-Cole Company is suggested in announcements emanating from the Robertson-Cole offices within the past few days. Contracts have been signed between Mr. Hampton and Robertson-Cole for the control by the latter company o fthe world rights to eight new William Desmond pictures, production of which is to be begun in Los Angeles within the next month. Mr. Hampton has also turned over to Robertson-Cole the sales rights on all the Warren Kerrigan pictures which he controls for all territory excepting the United States.

The Desmond deal is particularly interesting in view of the popularity which the star achieved for himself during his long engagement with the Triangle organization, and because the rights given the Robertson-Cole Company are for the entire world and not merely for the foreign markets. Mr. Desmond himself has been in the East some time in consultation with Mr. Hampton and others concerning the new plan under which he will make his own pictures. He will leave for the Coast soon, taking a number of people with him.

The Robertson-Cole activities in "selling the wide world" are likely to be well under way, however, before the first Desmond picture is ready because of the company's control of the world rights on the unusual pictures entitled "Martin Johnson's Cannibals of the South Seas." These pictures are the ones which were used at the Rivoli, New York City, some time ago, for a week's run. As planned for distribution by Robertson-Cole Company, the pictures will probably constitute a number of big features, each one of which will have fully as much interest as the one shown in the big New York playhouse.

"WIVES OF MEN" FOR INTER-OCEAN

Contract With Nathan Hirsch Just Signed for World Rights on Big Feature

SCORED SUCCESS AT CASINO

Interesting Gossip on Street Concerns Expected Arrival at Firm's New York Office of Unusual War Subject Recently Made Abroad.

An important deal announced in the New York export film colony within the past days is one between Nathan Hirsch, of the Pioneer Film Corporation, and the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, and places with the latter company the foreign sales rights of "Wives of Men," the big special production owned by Mr. Hirsch which recently played so successfully at the Casino Theater, New York City. With the final contracts signed, it develops that Mr. Cromelin, president of the Inter-Ocean, was so favorably impressed with the picture that the deal for it in the foreign field was practically closed twenty-four hours after Mr. Cromelin witnessed its presentation at the Casino.

Another big deal just closed by the Inter-Ocean takes in the Anita King, Kathleen Clifford and Jackie Saunders' five-reel productions; these pictures are successful in domestic markets as "Plaza Pictures."

The record Speer Carbon item since Inter-Ocean took over the foreign agency, comes in the announcement by Eugene H. Kaufman, office and accessory manager of Inter-Ocean, of the sale of 149,000 carbons this week to New Zealand and Australia.

The addition of the Burlingham Travel Series and the placement in Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay of a large list of American features, including "Not Guilty," "The Manx-Man," "The Question," "Whither Thou Goest," "The Struggle," "Man of Bronze" and the serial, "Perils of Our Girl Reporters," constitutes the balance of current Inter-Ocean news.

Another probability of the not far-distant future is that a great English war feature, of a novelty sort, will shortly be shipped by London Inter-Ocean to New York Inter-Ocean for intensive American exploitation. Last, but not least, is the report, corroborated, but lacking details, that the New York house will shortly change from the purchase of foreign rights to complete world rights.

SCREEN CLASSICS GET GOOD START

J. Frank Brockliss Foreign Offices Report Quick Sales That Show Great Promise

OTHER IMPORTANT TURNOVERS

Co-operative, of Sydney, Contract for Billy West Output for Australia, New Zealand, and Tasmania—Leah Baird Serial Moving.

Advices by cable and letter from the various foreign branches of the J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., organization during the past few days indicate that the Metro Screen Classics, recently added to the Brockliss product, are destined to establish new records in foreign rights sales.

Among the first allottment of features were "Blue Jeans," with Viola Dana; "Million Dollar Dollies," with the Dolly Sisters, and "Revelation," with Nazimova.

The following are other recent deals of importance:

The entire Billy West rights for Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania to the Co-operative Film Exchanges, of Sydney, Australia. The rights to the Rita Jolivet super-production, "Lest We Forget," were acquired by the North American Motion Pictures, Inc., of Buenos Aires, Argentina, for the territory of Porto Rico, Venezuela and Santo Domingo. "Wolves of Kultur," the new Leah Baird serial, to the Co-operative Film Corporation, of Sydney, for Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania, and to the African Film Trust, of Cape Town, for all the South African territory and the entire Far East, including Japan, China, India, Straight Settlements, Philippines, Java, Ceylon, Burma, Britain, all of South America, Egypt and Scandinavia.

The rights on the Griffith production, "Intolerance," for Egypt and Holland, and on the Wharton serial, "The Eagle's Eye," for France, Chile, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador.

Lillian Walker production, "A Grain of Dust," for Great Britain, and the following four special productions, "The Cast-Off," "Men," "The Finger of Justice" and "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman," for Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador.

"Those Who Pay" has been sold for India, Burma, Ceylon, Greece and Egypt; "The Accidental Honeymoon," for Great Britain, and "The Lust of the Ages," another Lillian Walker production, for Argentina, Paraguay and Uruguay.

More Specialized Help

Dedicated to the special purpose of exploiting motion pictures in every corner of the universe where the English language has been adopted as the preferred means of communication in trade, the first INTERNATIONAL EXPORT and IMPORT SECTION of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD this week makes its bow.

For years the MOVING PICTURE WORLD has been the most powerful medium at hand for the distribution of pictures in foreign countries where English is the commercial language. Its circulation, almost from the inception of the publication, has been remarkable in its scope, reaching practically the entire civilized world. Up until the present time, however, no determined efforts have been made by the MOVING PICTURE WORLD to weld into that very desirable close community the tremendous buying interests which are represented by this considerable foreign circulation and the film producing centers of the world.

Following the plan of what may be said to be a mere development of policy, which is inaugurated with this issue, the MOVING PICTURE WORLD will henceforth, at regular monthly intervals, print a special section devoted to the exploitation of moving pictures and moving picture accessories in every locality where English is used as the commercial language.

This monthly INTERNATIONAL EXPORT and IMPORT SECTION of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD will be published as a part of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD in the issue bearing date of the Saturday nearest the fifteenth of each month.

Up-to-the-Minute News from the Remote Corners of the Globe

This special section will carry up-to-the-minute news letters from the principal buying and producing centers—Paris, London, Turin, Barcelona, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Calcutta, Sydney, Johannesburg, etc.; special articles on matters of export and import; all the news of the New York market that may be of particular interest to the foreign buyers and exhibitors; a conscientious resume of the buying, selling and exhibiting activities of the various foreign countries obtained through our own sources of information and the local trade press; discussions of shipping problems, custom house duties, consular regulations, copyright laws and the peculiarities in business dealing prevailing in the different territories; and, in a word, its columns will be open to any movement having as its aim the curtailment of abuses or the betterment of conditions in the import and export field.

It will be conducted by men who have made, and will continue to make, a study of export and import—a special staff, headed by F. G. Ortega and Randall M. White.

Although entirely independent in its editorial and business dealings, the policy of fairness that has distinguished the MOVING PICTURE WORLD from its foundation will be strictly adhered to. It will be the mouthpiece and straightforward defender, here and abroad, of the industry in general, and not of particular interests or groups.

About three years ago—on the first of January, 1916, to be exact—we started the publication of CINE-MUNDIAL, a monthly magazine dedicated to the defense and advancement of moving pictures in the Spanish and Portuguese-speaking world. Its mainstays were two interlocked ideas: That the United States had left behind all competitors in the art of entertaining by means of the screen; and that the United States was rapidly becoming the natural buying and selling center for most of the countries speaking the languages of Cervantes and Camoens.

For over a year CINE-MUNDIAL was an academic proposition, insofar as the American dealers and the Latin buyers were concerned. Our manufacturers, importers and brokers refused to take us seriously. Looking back over the first three years of CINE-MUNDIAL, however, the success achieved by American cinematography in Spain and her possessions, Portugal and her colonies, and all th Latin-American republics, as well as th plans of the U. S. Shipping Board, alread bearing results, prove that we were righ in both our contentions.

Recording the Pulse of New York —Greatest World Mart for Film

Whether the war ends to-morrow o five years hence, New York's position wi not be challenged. It will be from no on the natural source of supply of a Latin-America; because there is no prob ability of our film output deterioratin and, because the United States will lea all nations as the principal buyer of a Latin-American products.

That venture, the launching of a publ cation in Spanish and Portuguese base on the assumption that the time was rip for closer intercourse between the cour tries of North, Central and South Americ was ahead of the times.

No such distinction can be claimed fc this new departure.

There will be no pioneering or missior ary work on our part in connection wit it.

When the first issue of CINE-MUNDIAL came off the press, the American manufacturers were represented by about 7% of the film shown in the markets our publication was intended to cover—and most of this 7% was old, second-hand stuff. To-day we have left the French, Italian, Spanish and Scandinavian producers far behind in Spain, Portugal and their possessions, and 90% of the film exhibited in Latin-America is shipped directly from New York.

The International Section of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD starts on a radically different basis.

We are supplying to-day over 80% of the film exhibited in the English-speaking world, the countries that have adopted English as their commercial language, and those where it may be used without much risk for business transactions.

Therefore, we cannot in justice claim that this International Section of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD represents, even in the most remote way, a pioneering effort.

We simply come to fill a want that has been felt for the past two years.

And the only excuse we have to offer for not having kept abreast of the times is the rapid changes in an embryonic and complicated industry that in most cases are difficult to follow, much less anticipate.

It can be stated, on a conservative estimate, that 80% of the film shown at the present time throughout the world (barring enemy countries, of course) bears an American trade mark.

We supply direct from New York an overwhelming proportion of the pictures exhibited in Great Britain, Spain, Holland, Switzerland, Russia, France, Egypt, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, China, Japan, India, Portugal, the twenty-one Latin-American republics; and a very substantial share of those exhibited in Italy and her possessions and the Scandinavian countries—the whole allied and neutral commercial world, in fact.

The commanding position of New York in the film world is unique. It has never been held by any other city. It cannot be seriously compared with that of Paris, London, Turin, Barcelona or Berlin before the war.

As a reminder that there is nothing exathedra in the statements we are making, it will not be amiss to mention the names of the producers and dealers handling the world markets from New York:

Fox Film Corporation; Goldwyn Pictures Corporation; Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc.; Metro Pictures Corporation; Triangle Pictures Corporation; World Film Corporation; Mutual Film Corporation; Select Pictures Corporation; William A. Brady; American Film Company; Selig Polyscope Company; Essanay Film Mfg. Co. (part); Pathe Exchange, Inc. (part); Vitagraph company; Epoch Film Company; Harper Film Company; W. H. Productions Co.; J. Frank Brockliss, Inc.; Inter-Ocean Film Corporation; Robertson-Cole Co.; Reginald Warde; Export & Import Film Co.; Bengar Pictures, Inc.; Windmill Motion Picture Corporation; William Vogel Productions, Inc.; Western Import Company; David P. Howells; Trans-Russian Film Corporation; Piedmont Pictures Corporation; Miles & Manheimer; Gillespie Bros. & Co.; L. H. Allen; Arrow Film Corporation; Popular Pictures Corporation; Rojas-Randall & Co.; Hiller & Wilk; David W. Russel; Chester Beecroft.

In the foregoing list are not included the manufacturers of projection machines and accessories and the numerous brokers and dealers, with headquarters in New York, supplying the needs of limited markets. The only names mentioned are those of exporters handling world rights.

To Promote a Friendly Interest Between Exhibitors and Manufacturers

The MOVING PICTURE WORLD, as the oldest, most reliable and broadest moving picture trade paper published in the United States, circulates at the present time, outside of North America, in the following countries:

India, Japan, China, Strait Settlements, Australia, Russia, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Switzerland, France and French Possessions, Italy, Great Britain, New Zealand, South Africa.

Although it may be stated without exaggeration that the MOVING PICTURE WORLD reaches every buyer, large or small, in the above-mentioned countries, our aim is to secure, through the medium of this International Section, as close a contact with the English-speaking exhibitor as we have already established with those of this country and, through CINE-MUNDIAL, those of the Spanish and Portuguese-speaking world. With this end in view, an intensive propaganda campaign has already been initiated.

Owing to our predominating circulation in the United States and Canada and to the fact that we are also covering in a very thorough fashion the trade of the English-speaking world in general, our International Section will offer to all foreign producers and dealers an effective vehicle for advertising purposes.

The shot of Sarajevo marked the official ending of the shop (the middleman) as the dominant element in business and inaugurated the preponderance of the factory.

The country that supplies the needs of America—both hemispheres—will be the leading commercial country of the future.

And our factories are bound to be supreme, not because of any superior ability, but on account of their enormous natural markets.

In Line with the Trend of the Times and Looking to the Future

Charles Pathe said: "Moving pictures are 10% art and 90% capital." This is the reason France, Italy, Spain, Great Britain and other countries, despite their deeper artistic traditions, cannot offer any serious competition to us in the realm of cinematography.

And the trend of the times being to eliminate waste and to bring producers and consumers into the closest possible relation, New York has logically become and will remain the hub of the film import and export activities of the world.

There is absolutely no other market that offers the quality and the quantity and facilities found in New York by all foreign film buyers; there is no other market that even approaches New York in film buying power.

The International Section of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD will strive to acquaint the American exhibitor and buyer with the doings of the foreign producers, and will exert all its influence to bring together the foreign English-speaking exhibitor and buyer and the American manufacturers and exporters.

SAYS GOVERNMENT MUST ASSIST

Wide and Desirable Distribution of American-Made Film in Foreign Field Is Being Hampered Needlessly by Involved Regulations That Delay Shipment and Make Product of Neglible Value When It Reaches Its Appointed Destination.

INDUSTRY'S GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY AT HAND

Well-Known Exporter Makes Constructive Criticism, Calling for Real Awakening to Importance of Genuine Co-operation.

By David P. Howells.

THE time has come when the closest co-operation from the Government is necessary if America is to hold her place in the world film market. American film manufacturers and exporters are working hand in hand to secure the universal popularity of American pictures and bring about a closer and more intelligent understanding between dealers in this country and those in foreign lands, but against the obstacles encountered at present they can do little to attain this object. The Government must come to their rescue.

The chief assistance needed from the Government at this time is in the matter of export regulations, and the rapid solving of censorship problems; both should be made as easy as is consistent with the times. There seems to be no reason why a rigid censorship should be maintained on films intended for the Allies and such neutrals as are not in direct communication with the enemy. For instance, the Dutch East Indies and countries of South America are so far removed from contact with Germany that probably the loss of time and money caused through the censoring of pictures intended for these countries have not been even partially compensated for by the good accomplished.

One simple solution of the whole matter would be the use of some such scheme as was employed in England during the early days of the war. There each exporter was carefully investigated, and, when found to be satisfactory, was licensed to ship film for a period of three months, at the conclusion of which time he was obliged to renew his license and was again submitted to an investigation. This system would probably secure more certain results than the one now in force. Certainly it would be less expensive and would result in fewer delays—delays are more disastrous to moving pictures than to any commodity of general commerce, for it is obvious that unless the supply reaches the consumer at regular intervals great hardships are worked on the circuits of theatres depending on them.

The delays in receiving licenses for shipments to neutrals are proving almost fatal to the business in those countries. After losing from two to four weeks in inspections by censors of the customs, the navy, the army, the Intelligence departments and the Public Information Committee, we are then subjected to a month's delay or more in receiving the licenses. Applications for picture licenses are treated in the same manner as those of all other articles for export, no recognition being given to the fact that often the entire value of the film depends upon its immediate presentation. The pictures are really a form of news dealing with the current subjects, and their value depends almost as much upon the time of presentation as upon the theme of the picture. At this particular time nearly all pictures deal with current questions, the greater part of them being propaganda subjects intended to encourage the Allies and to persuade neutrals of the righteousness of the Allied cause by showing up the enemy in his true light. This particularly applies to news-weeklies. We have instances of news-weeklies and other propaganda pictures for which licenses were solicited last June which are still being held up in this country.

A solution of this difficulty could be effected by giving film licenses preferential treatment on the ground of their importance in propaganda work. In addition some one with a sympathetic understanding of the peculiarities of the film business should be appointed to have this matter in hand instead of turning it over to those who have no knowledge of the business and no sympathy with the propaganda plans of the Government being worked out by the Public Information Committee.

The film business in practically all the foreign countries is in a healthy condition. People there want to deal in New York for American-made pictures, which are easily the most popular in the world. Maintaining New York as the film centre of the world is entirely up to Americans. Failure to avail ourselves of the great opportunities of the present can be blamed on no one but ourselves. An intelligent, broad-minded policy on the part of the Government, with a consideration and regard for the present problems and difficulties of film men at home, as well as foreign consumers, will turn the trick.

In this time of crisis, when we are trying to get a more secure footing in foreign markets, it is well for American picture men to remember that they cannot "Broadway-ize" people abroad with a few minutes' conversation between boats. The methods of conducting business in use in the various nations are probably a survival of those which have proved most practicable, and with such methods as a foundation a better system may gradually be built. A too frequent mistake of American business men abroad (especially on their first trip) is to minimize the virtues and accomplishments of the people they are visiting and to advertise the fact that in their opinion anything not done according to Broadway methods is not worthy of consideration. The time has come for us to use new discretion in these matters, as well as get together—Government, manufacturer and exporter—and with one big boost carry our pictures to the foreign markets, which are waiting with open arms to receive them.

FILM INDUSTRY GROWS RAPIDLY IN JAPAN

American-Made Pictures Most Popular of Imported Product, But Native Subjects Have Edge on the Market—One Company Big Producer.

The fact that Japan uses American-made motion pictures to the amount of between 40 to 45 per cent. of its total present consumption, conclusively proves that the United States has a distinct outlet for its film product in "The Land of the Rising Sun." Then(too, the proportion of American productions to other than native films is so overwhelming that the hold of the United States on the film trade of Japan only serves to confirm the oft-quoted truth that the motion picture art is distinctly of America. When we quote percentages and give details in this article, we have as authority U. Ono, American representative of the Nippon Katsudo-Shasin Kaisha, the largest film concern in Japan, not only as manufacturers and as exhibitors and theatre-owners, but also as distributors and buyers—at present the exclusive right-holders to the releases of Paramount, Metro, Triangle, World, Fox, Pathe, Vitagraph, Paralta, Selznick, Mutual, together with no small number of independently released features. It is Mr. Ono, therefore, that proportions about 50 per cent. of the Japanese bookings and exhibitions to native manufactures, about forty-five per cent. to American pictures and the remaining five per cent. to European brands, mostly French, Italian and Danish.

This, of course, has not long been the scale of proportions. Only a few years ago, the figures in the case of American and European films were exactly the reverse. In those days, such was the obtuseness of the American manufacturers, that foreign business was spurned and all Japan had any chance of seeing were "cowboy" films, even those being furnished through England. The war, however, weaved such complications that, quite as in the case of Latin-America, Japan was at first compelled, and having tasted, then eagerly welcomed American pictures. Though the war also stimulated the making of native pictures in Japan, this industry had already been given birth there before the coming of hostilities in Europe. Today, however, the Nippon Katsudo-Shasin Kaisha not only use over 300,000 feet of negative and positive raw stock per month, all from Eastman and bought in this country, but also operate three studios, equipped with electrical paraphernalia identical with our own, and regularly employ a studio force, including all hands, from actors down to scene-shifters, numbering over four hundred.

Home-made productions are, needless to state, popular with about eighty per cent. of the theatregoers. This is a considerable

That Worrisome Question of Pirating in London

Disregarding the "Personal" mark, and at the risk of incurring Mr. Tippett's displeasure, we are going to publish for the good of the industry a letter received from him at this office a few hours before going to press. The points brought out by the head of the Trans-Atlantic Film Co., Ltd., should be carefully studied by all manufacturers and exporters operating, or planning to operate, throughout the international markets.

London, Sept. 16, 1918.

Moving Picture World,
516 Fifth Avenue,
New York, U. S. A.

Dear Sirs:—A year or so ago we had some correspondence regarding the question of the legal exportation of film from this side, duping, etc., and I believe we had a difference of opinion, although in your last letter you were kind enough to defer to my decision in the matter.

I see now that according to your issue of August 24, page 1126, the Moving Picture World and myself see the question through the same glasses, as in the article headed "Warning to Exporters and Producers," referring to a Mr. Arch G. Kent's views in this connection, you state, among other things, as follows:—

We all know that this state of affairs cannot be eliminated by legislation. As a matter of fact, even in this country the laws are very lax in their application to the film business. The same thing occurs abroad with the added disadvantage that, for weighty reasons of our own, we refused to sign the international agreement on copyrights formulated by the Berne Convention, and find ourselves to-day entirely unprotected in most foreign countries.

I have always maintained, and ceratinly ought to know what I am talking about, that there is no law in England to cover the copyright of films. Why should there be? Laws are made for the benefit of a country's citizens. When an English manufacturer makes a film he usually sells the world rights here in London, and suffers but very little, if at all, from infringements.

I believe we were pioneers in opening foreign offices on the Continent, and we have only been in business getting on for six years. These abuses did not affect us until the Universal Film Mfg. Co. started to exploit the Far East and South America. The country was at war, and the only way relief could be obtained was through Parliament, but the British House of Lords and House of Commons were too busy with war questions to take up a matter which affected an American film firm, or all the American film firms put together, as far as that is concerned, so nothing could be done in that direction.

Under these conditions, the only way in which the Far East and South American markets can be operated in a satisfactory manner is by having the respective agents, when a film is sold on an exclusive basis, only guarantee that no copies of that particular subject will be sold from the home office, its agents or representatives.

For instance, how do we know that a customer who purchases one of our films through a branch office in Spain, Egypt, Russia, Scandinavia, etc., will not export same? We all know that it is only necessary to change the titles to suit a picture to any foreign country.

Another thing—if American manufacturers would supply their foreign offices with their productions simultaneously, the same as they make a release in America on a certain date, they could stop these abuses.

I trust you will pardon me for taking up so much of your time with a question of this character. Still, it is an important one, and one on which the Moving Picture World should be well and properly informed, and I feel you will believe I certainly should have some accurate knowledge of this matter.

With best wishes, I remain,
Sincerely yours,
J. V. TIPPETT.

Mr. Tippett is perfectly right in his statement of conditions as they exist at present in Great Britain, but, in our judgment, his proposed method for solving the problem is too one-sided: it offers no real relief to the foreign buyer, whose interests it should be our business to safeguard.

In the interview recently published in these columns and referred to by Mr. Tippett, Arch G. Kent, the Havana impresario, recommended the following solution:

This is the time for the Export Division of the N. A. M. P. I. and the Film Exporters of America to take the logical course, and the only practical one, to exterminate this evil, by entering into a hard and fast agreement not to deal with any national or foreign concern that makes a practice of going outside its territory or of knowingly trading with parties guilty of such infringements. In a word, what I advocate is a commercial blacklist in the film business.

We still think that Mr. Kent was on the right track.

Is New York Handicapped by a New York Company?

The problem of film printing will come to the front for solution as soon as normal conditions are restored. Exporters with headquarters in New York, and most of the manufacturers themselves who have been handling the bulk of the export business from here, must make a combined effort to eliminate this handicap under which they are laboring.

Printing on American-made raw stock is done cheaper in Europe than in the United States. With the ½c. tax, which the exporters have been paying right along, although its legality seems doubtful, the difference in the cost of film printing is, for instance, as high as 1¼c. in favor of Great Britain.

Even without the tax, printing on the other side remains ¾ of a cent per foot lower than here.

The reason?

At this moment we can only think of one. The firm controlling the output of raw stock is protected in this country by a high tariff against foreign competition, and, naturally, has things pretty much its own way; it enjoys no such protection in Great Britain—thence lower prices.

The war has counteracted the effects of this disadvantage, but how about the future?

No better time than the present, when the industry in general, and the exporters in particular, are giving daily proofs of their value to the cause, to take the matter in hand with the earnestness it deserves and have the evil corrected.

There was a time, not so many years ago, when the Nordisk brand of pictures was supreme in every Spanish and Portuguese-speaking country. Its almost complete elimination from those markets is another proof of the fickleness of the public and of the failure in store for any amusement enterprise that believes to have attained perfection.

The Italian producers have sent delegates to South America in an attempt to recover those lost markets. One of these experts is reported to have made in Buenos Aires the following statement:

"There is no secret or anything new to us in American methods. Their technique is an open book to most Italian directors. We believe that our artistic standards are higher, but, if you insist upon obtaining the kind of pictures I see in your theatres, why, we will gladly supply them to you."

This is significant.

Argentina is to-day on the same cinematographic level as the United States. A success in New York is always a success in Buenos Aires. A failure here is also a failure there.

Will the Italian manufacturers be able to re-introduce their brands in this country through the South American backdoor?

Public opinion, public tastes, public manners, even public morals, will be create dand led in this country by the two millions of Americans fighting today on the soil of France. The future reserves a sad awakening for the stay-at-home fondly believing that his provincial thoughts and views will again find the same sympathetic echo in the heart of his returning soldier-friend. Suffering, bleeding, swapping "cooties," struggling and conquering shoulder to shoulder with men of all colors and nationalities, how is it possible to retain the old prejudices, social dislikes and petty theories of superiority!

Will French, Italian or British-made films appear to these men as outlandish as before the war?

How will they take to the peculiar versions of European life turned out by our own studios?

KNITTING THE ENGLISH-SPEAKING WORLD

World War Has Not "Caused" But Only "Completed" the Job, Says Inter-Ocean President—Reciprocal Feeling Growing Rapidly.

By Paul H. Cromelin.

YOU will say that the war has done it! But I beg to differ with you. The war has completed it. The knitting has been in process for ten years through the motion picture film. The old antagonisms were speedily swept aside when the films stepped in with their stories of love, of idealism, of sacrifice. We began to revere the same standards, the same romances, the same tragedies, the same heroes and heroines.

England, for instance, early took Florence Turner and John Bunny, Americans, to its heart of hearts; we as eagerly adopted Mary Pickford, Canadian, and Charles Chaplin, Britisher, and bestowed on them all the honor and wealth that mortal could desire.

The films have broken down the "my country only" idea. If the other fellow is of the right stuff, we consider him as good as ourselves. The topical films have weekly brought us face to face with the British soldier. We know him in camp, on the march, in battle. We know he is "right stuff." When you see a stirring view of Britishers in the news reels you hear the same degree of applause that is accorded a similar scene depicting Americans.

The great ocean in truth becomes "the pond." We are all in the same English-speaking family; residing in different streets, that's all.

And America in England? Isn't it significant that Britain's principal patriotic films, official and otherwise, are such American-made productions as "Hearts of the World," "America's Answer," "My Four Years in Germany," "The Road to France" and "Inside the Lines"? When Griffith made the first of these in England and France he was accorded privileges that no other layman, American or British, had ever received before. And now Brenon, who is British born, but American bred, is making a new official film for and in England, whence he was summoned by a far-sighted Government.

It is true that when the war ends we will not see so much of England through the news films, and that British dramatic films do not find their way to this market in quantity.

But I think the situation with respect to the latter class of film will change. It is frankly admitted in England that American pictures took a lead on English films in the sales sense through sheer superior quality. The last year alone, however, has witnessed a great British quality stride. A number of pictures have been produced that stand up under any test. "A good picture" is always "a good picture," and is sure of entrance to every world market. That I know from my experience as film exporter.

GERARD PICTURE CREATES FURORE IN PORTO RICO

Raphael P. Martin, vice-president and secretary of the West Indies Films, Inc., has arrived in town after an extended trip through Porto Rico and Cuba.

Mr. Martin, who took "My Four Years in Germany" to Porto Rico, reports that the Gerard picture beat all previous box-office records in the Island and created a veritable whirlwind of patriotic enthusiasm. The fact that it was released just a few weeks after the sinking of the "Carolina," a New York-Porto Rico liner, by one of the German submarine prowlers off these shores, was another factor toward the success of the photoplay.

Mr. Martin will shortly leave again for Cuba and Porto Rico in the interests of his company. The West Indies Films, Inc., controls at present the rights on "My Four Years in Germany" for Cuba and Porto Rico, and on "Tarzan of the Apes" and all the Goldwyn productions for Cuba.

L. H. ALLEN PUSHING VITAGRAPHS ABROAD

L. H. Allen, the Vitagraph franchise holder for Spain, Portugal, all the Latin-American and other countries, has closed several deals during the past month. The New York Film Exchange, a renting organization operating in Argentina and Uruguay, has purchased the rights on 26 Blue Ribbon productions and 4 serials for its territory; M. de Miguel & Co., of Barcelona, have also acquired the rights on 26 Vitagraph features and 4 serials for Spain and Portugal; and the Insular Film Service, of San Juan, on 26 Vitagraph features, 2 serials and 26 comedies for Porto Rico.

FILM INDUSTRY GROWS RAPIDLY IN JAPAN

proportion, which reflects the extent of actual conquest of American film there in claiming forty-five per cent. of the distribution. What holds foreign film back in Japan are the peculiarities of presentation. Our subtitles are ofttimes not translated; instead, they remain right in, even if the translation is carried, with lecturers imitating the various roles and speaking the story from the darkened stage. Owing to the fact that Japanese men only go in for acting, even the women's roles are spoken by men, so versed at the simulation of the female voice, that detection is impossible. Even the Japanese films are so assisted, the music usually furnished by an orchestra of five or six instruments, being rendered softly and in keeping with the requirements.

One outrage, Mr. Ono points out, makes it difficult for our film to bring in more revenue to our manufacturer, and that is the practice of sneaking illicit film mysteriously into the island from other points of the Orient, particularly the Straits Settlements, China and the Philippines, after it has finished its exploitation in the countries for which it was originally secured. While Japan has laws protective against these practices, nevertheless the courts move slowly and the expense involved is just enough to make extended actions of this type unfeasible.

Japan is worthy of the most painstaking cultivation on the part of both manufacturer and exporter, and the presence of Mr. Ono in New York, instead of London, is a fact for which our film folk should be justly grateful.

Here on Export Business.

O. F. Spahr, vice-president and general manager of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company of Chicago, will shortly visit New York for the purpose of attending the convention and settling different matters connected with the export activities of his firm.

Buenos Aires Buyer Arrives.

Marcel Morhange, of the New York Film Exchange, a Buenos Aires organization handling Vitagraph pictures in Argentina and Uruguay, has just arrived in New York.

Vogel With Influenza.

William Vogel, of William Vogel Productions, Inc., is ill at his home in Brooklyn, with what is apparently the prevalent malady. It is thought, however, that he is only suffering from a mild attack of the new form of influenza, and it is hoped that he may be able to return to his office by the end of this week.

LAMY JOINS FOX EXPORT DEPARTMENT

Globe-Trotting Film Man Switches from Piedmont After Four Years of Service There—Made Enviable Reputation in Europe.

After a connection covering the past four years, Joseph Lamy has left the Piedmont Pictures Corporation to join the export department of the Fox Film Company.

Among the trained commercial moving picture men, Mr. Lamy was one of the first to recognize the growing importance of the foreign markets to the American producers.

Years ago, when the various manufacturers who formed the General Film Company were at the height of their success, Mr. Lamy and his affiliations in Spain and Portugal already controlled the output of the Essanay and Edison agencies, and later on of the Imp Film Corporation, predecessor of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and his former associates today still hold the Universal franchise for the above territories.

When he transferred his activities to Paris, at the time the film center of Europe and South America, he became intimate not only with the producing business but also with each and every European and South American market.

He completed in record time the distribution over the entire world of the first French series of features starring Suzanne Grandais, obtaining prices which at that time attracted a great deal of attention.

It was also owing to his efforts that Essanay pictures were shown all over France and Belgium to a much greater extent than those of any other producer with the exception of Vitagraph.

It is due to the foresight of Mr. Carlos, the general representative of the Fox Film Corporation, that arrangements between that concern and Mr. Lamy were concluded to secure his services as manager of the foreign sales department.

BLANCHE SWEET'S RETURN INTERESTS EXPORT TRADE

The return to the screen of Blanche Sweet, after an absence of a year and a half, will be of particular interest to operators in the American film export field. Tremendously popular a few years ago, when the personal successes of American screen stars were just in their beginning, Miss Sweet is still prominently identified with the things that are best in the American photoplay in the minds of countless exhibitors in foreign countries.

Miss Sweet's present activities are under the personal business direction of Harry I. Garson, with Marshal Nielan, the widely known director, supervising her productions equally as carefully as he does those of Clara Kimball Young, the other prominent American screen star to whose lustre Mr. Garson's business direction has added so much during the past couple of years.

Miss Young's rise to eminence in the foreign field has been a steady one without a break, beginning with the days when she was a popular figure in Vitagraph pictures, and the controlling heads of the Select Pictures Corporation, through which her current pictures are being released in all markets, including those in this country and abroad, have on their cash books abundant testimony of the fondness audiences in Europe, Asia, Africa and South America have for her particular style of work.

The Blanche Sweet pictures are being made for independnt distribution. The first one under the Garson management, "The Hushed Hour," was completed some time ago, and just now "The Unpardonable Sin," from Maj. Rupert Hughes' sensational book by the same title, is nearing completion in Los Angeles. It will soon be offered the trade, and gives every promise of creating a real sensation.

NEAR CATASTROPHE CAUGHT IN FILM

Frederick Burlingham Adventure Series Show Hair-Breadth Escape from Death and Combine Beauty with Excitement—Taken in Swiss Alps.

THE Frederick Burlingham Adventure films, from which the accompanying scenes are taken exclusively for publication in The Moving Picture World Export Edition, are among the most interesting subjects released during the year. They show an actual "slip" on the Blumlisalp, not made for the movies although caught by them. On another day, after arrival near the summit, the whole top was found to be a huge cornice overhanging several metres. Behind was the steep ice slope just ascended, while on the other three sides were frightful precipices. Mr. Burlingham, however, determined to cinematograph the actual arrival of his expedition at the summit, and after installing his camera and tripod he sent his guides, with infinite precaution, to reconnoitre the extent of the cornice. While Mr. Burlingham began taking pictures of this delicate operation, suddenly the whole top of the mountain caved in dropping over one thousand metres into the Kanderfirm mists below. The cornice broke away within a few inches of where the guides were climbing. Had they advanced two feet more on the cornice, which looked perfectly safe, the whole caravan would have been lost.

In spite of the extraordinary situation, with the guides hanging on the edge of an abyss, Mr. Burlingham had the sangfroid to continue taking pictures.

The photographs, now developed, show all the details of the cornice breaking, which is of a scientific interest, as well as the development of the avalanche thus started, constituting a complete and highly sensational record of an Alpine phenomenon never before recorded in photography, and which may not be repeated in two thousand years.

The Burlingham series will undoubtedly enjoy popularity no less through their thrill element than by reason of the International publicity the explorer-producer has received.

These pictures are handled by the Inter-Ocean company here and abroad.

HOUDINI SERIAL BIG PLUM FOR EXPORT

Export & Import Film Co., Inc., Secure Choice Contract for Pictures by Internationally Known "Escape Artist" and Sales Start Off Splendidly.

Once every so often there flashes across the horizon in the export field a contract which arouses the cupidity of all of those interested in the sale of American-made film in foreign countries. Pictures are made which are a sure-fire success in these particular markets in the judgment of all the experts who pay attention to the peculiar necessities of their many clients with as many twists of taste as are represented by their number, and the friendly race for the right to distribute such pictures becomes a matter of great interest.

The Houdini serial, the first episode of which is about to be released, provided pictures of this class, and the Export & Import Film Co., Inc., which secured the rights for the entire world, is being congratulated upon the achievement by even its competitors, who had hoped that the plum might come their way.

The Houdini serial is being made in two-reel episodes, fifteen in number, and the early chapters, which have been completed and screened for examination, have convinced all who have seen them that the serial is bound to excite tremendous interest and achieve great commercial success wherever shown. Of particular interest, however, to the export trade is the extraordinary box-office draft which it is likely to have abroad.

Houdini, the star of the production, is probably the best known cosmopolite in the show business. During the many years he has been following his profession as a public entertainer, he has appeared repeatedly in the leading theatres of every country in the civilized world. He is notable among show folks as a performer who has taken his work seriously and has bent every energy to the perfection of every detail calculated to enable him to achieve the greatest possible success. He has learned the language of the people in almost every country in which he has appeared—and his opportunities have been great, for his engagements abroad have been fully as extended as in the United States, where he has established himself as foremost of all "escape artists." More importantly, as bearing upon his initial moving picture venture of consequence, he has made a careful study of the things which appeal to the greatest number of people in the greatest number of localities, with the inevitable result that his pictures, though made in America, will be equally interesting in the most hidden corner of Siam.

Judging from the early episodes, the B. A. Rolfe Productions began the undertaking with complete confidence that they had something which would justify the maximum of trouble and expense, and nothing is being spared to make each episode come up to the standard that has been set, namely, that each and every chapter shall have all the qualifications of a first-class feature photoplay.

That the Export & Import Film Co., Inc., operating in the foreign field with only a couple of episodes to show or even talk about, has already sold the entire serial for India, China, Japan, and the Dutch East Indies, and are about to close for other important territory, would seem to indicate that the congratulations for having secured the export contract are very much in order.

HOLLANDERS INVESTING IN PICTURE ENTERPRISES

Holland financiers of late are beginning to invest, though hesitatingly, small amounts in the manufacture of moving pictures. Until now they had always avoided the film industry because they were unacquainted with the business. The financial world is still skeptical and doubtfull of everything connected with the moving picture industry. The reason for the distrust of the big investors is the failures and disillustions the film manufacturers had at the start. Many of these liquidated and others went bankrupt, and it is claimed that this was mainly due to the bad reputation of the men in charge. During the last few months we have heard of several new film enterprises with very good and tempting names, and good futures. We believe the film business in Holland has a future provided that the people running it are capable and honest.

FILM TRADE DIFFICULTIES IN THE ORIENT

Brief Resume of Conditions in Japan, China, Strait Settlements, India, and Dutch East Indies—Australasia Partial to American Product.

By Horace T. Clarke.

THE Orient is one of the most difficult markets of the world to serve owing to the fact that most of the pictures are made from the standpoint of Western peoples, setting forth their religious, sociological, ethical and political views, with which the East has so few points of contact. The most painstaking efforts and frequent visits are essential to successful marketing. It is encouraging, however, to note that in a very short time, largely through the medium of motion pictures, Western ideas are rapidly being assimilated by our Oriental brothers. It is not improbable that motion pictures will be the medium which will disprove the old saying that "East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet."

Of the various countries of the Orient, Japan has probably progressed further toward Western standards, and this is largely due to its close proximity to America. American pictures are becoming more and more popular throughout the Island Empire. Japan is also leading Eastern countries in the production of moving picture, an industry which has had a remarkable growth At present they are making two kinds of moving pictures, one presenting stories of ancient times in Japan, giving the history of the country and showing the valorous deeds of the Shoguns and their followers, and the other presenting modern stories of Japanese life, as well as dramas of Western life.

Picture conditions in Japan are flourishing, as the working people and the traders are receiving today more money than at any other time in the history of the country, and nearly everyone is profiting to some extent from the prosperous times brought about by the nation's increase in foreign trade and shipbuilding. At the same time, the fact that the cost of living is also higher must be taken into consideration. Japanese who have returned to their country after several years absence are astonished at the amusement developments.

Picture conditions in China are rather unsettled owing to the constant revolutionary difficulties and political disturbances. Chinese merchants and importers are also hard hit by the laws preventing them from shipping raw materials to the United States, which were formerly among their biggest sources of income. Naturally, these dull times in the market influence the demands for pictures. In addition to these difficulties there are comparatively few places in China where moving pictures are shown, so that the countless millions of population are not contributing to the growth of the business there. At the present time the chief centres of pictures are the treaty ports, as few Europeans venture inland owing to the dangers of transportation, bandits and pirates.

The Straits Settlements are a promising territory in spite of the fact that the population is made up of a number of races, which makes the selection of pictures the more difficult. The chief city is Singapore, the most important trading centre between Hong Kong and Calcutta. In the Federated Malay States one of the big drawbacks is that the population resides chiefly on the big rubber and tea plantations, tending to create small communities in which it does not pay to run amusement houses. Usually on each plantation there are 3,000 or 4,000 coolies, the owners doing everything in their power to keep them settled there permanently away from the cities.

In Java great difficulties are encountered at present in the picture business. Being a Dutch colony and a neutral country it is unable to take many of the timely subjects dealing with the war. General business conditions are also bad owing to the fact that practically all shipping from the country has been changed to other routes, and Javenese products, such as rice and sugar, so badly needed in other parts of the world, are going to waste through lack of ships. The picture men there who manage to survive the war will undoubtedly be able to increase heir business greatly when times are normal again, and will develop this market into one very much worth while.

Progress in India has been greatly hampered through inability to build new picture houses. Practically no new theatres have been opened since the outbreak of the war, and the local exhibitors have been unable to keep pace with the tremendous strides made in other countries despite the increased popularity of the screen. As soon as the war ends, however, new and suitable houses will be built, attracting by these means the wealthy class of patronage, and the business will flourish in India with a boom.

Australia and New Zealand have also been handicapped to some extent by the Government's ban on the building of amusement houses for the past three years. Australia, however, has suffered least in this respect, as, according to present standards, her picture theatres were the most advanced at the outbreak of this war, and still holds the unique position of paying more per capita for amusement than any other country in the world, as well as paying proportionately more for her film. American pictures are very popular, and undoubtedly owe this position to the great amount of American magazines and literature read by the Australian people. Subjects and themes which are popular in America are usually well-liked in the Antipodes. This rule has practically no exceptions. Still greater developments are to be expected in Australia, as the laboring classes receive very high wages for few hours' work, giving time, means and inclination for amusements and sports of all kinds.

In New Zealand the business has shown a steady growth during the past few years. In spite of the fact that she has contributed to the war more per capita in men and money than any other part of the British Empire she has kept abreast of the times in the cinematographic realm. When the restrictions on buildings are removed considerable capital will be put into amusement enterprises, and materially aid in increasing the popularity of pictures.

BARCELONA PAPER SURE JOHNSON WENT BROKE

Apropos of the picture featuring Jack Johnson, released a few months ago on the Spanish market, we remarked in the weekly foreign department of the Moving Picture World:

"The ex-prizefighter opened a physical culture studio in Barcelona. . . ."

"La Vida Grafica," a local trade paper, commenting upon the item states that:

"Jack Johnson does not run and has never run a physical culture studio in Spain."

"Arte y Cinematografia," another Barcelona moving picture paper, puts an end to the argument in the following terms:

"Despite the statement made by one of our colleagues, we know it to be a fact that Jack Johnson opened in Barcelona, besides a publicity agency in the Rambla del Centro, a physical culture and boxing establishment in No. 887 Gracia street, and we have been assured, moreover, that both ventures ended in complete disaster, costing the ex-pugilist upwards of 100,000 pesetas."

Embark in "Film Business."

Our Mexico City correspondent reports that several local stores are selling to the "fans," at high prices, large pieces of moving picture films. Among the productions marketed in this peculiar fashion he mentions "The Bull's Eye," meaning, we presume, the Universal serial of the same name.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT FILMS DESTROYED

Fire at London Film Laboratory Consumes Important Hall Caine Propaganda Negative and Does Other Damage—Lord Nelson Cinema Saved.

THE damage caused by the disastrous outbreak of fire at the laboratory of the London Film Company has unfortunately included the loss of many valuable lengths of negative film, in a few cases the only ones in existence. The propaganda departments of the Government are the heaviest losers, for the whole of the negative of a lengthy and costly subject, specially written and prepared by Hall Caine, has been completely destroyed. Certain sections of the historical spectacle, "The Life of Lord Nelson" (International Exclusives) were also damaged. Beyond delay, the fire will not interfere with the release of this subject in its original form.

A patriotic film drama has recently been completed of special interest to the historian of the New World. It is entitled "Foundations of Freedom," adapted from Arthur Branscombe's book on the English homes of two great residents of the U. S. A., Washington and Franklin, and identifies the national aims and ideals of Great Britain and America in a remarkable manner Mr. Branscombe himself superintended its production, a private enterprise, under the auspices of Earl Spencer. The cast includes Cecil York, Mrs. Hayden Coffin, and Miss Irene Selwyn.

The Kinematograph Exhibitors' Association is anxious to come to a clear understanding with film exchanges upon the vexed question of supplying exclusives of outstanding merit to stock theatres to the disadvantage of the regular exhibitors, and to obviate a recurrence of the awkward situation created a few weeks ago by the showing of the Gerard film at West End music halls. The general council of the Association is contemplating a definite form of agreement, at the request of its London branch, for regulating such abnormal conditions.

Despite the many objections to the title, the Evelyn Thaw film, "Shadows of My Life," is beginning an extensive booking program this week. The West End Kinema is making it a special attraction for re-opening after holiday vacation; at least one theatre in each suburb has an engagement to follow, and country exhibitors by the hundred are already announcing its appearance. There has been no alteration in the title so far.

Sir William Jury has become a director of Associated Provincial Picture Houses, Ltd. The company is affiliated with Provincial Kinematograph Theatres, Ltd., and operates fine halls at West Brounwich, Sunderland, Halifax and others of our smaller provincial cities.

Thos. H. Ince's sensational dramatic novelty, "Those Who Pay," is being handled here by the London Independent Film Trading Co., and promises to be the most successful Ince feature since "Civilization."

NEW ZEALAND SOLD UP ON MOVING PICTURE PRODUCT

According to U. S. Consul General Alfred A. Winslow, the film censor for the New Zealand Government has announced that there has been a great falling off of late in the importation of picture films.

The July importations amounted to only 255,980 feet, as compared with 446,370 feet for the corresponding month of last year, and 746,760 feet for the maximum month since the censorship was established some two years ago.

During the first 12 days of August there were but 89,000 feet of film put in the hands of the censor, and but little prospect for an increase during the next few months, since it is understood that there is a good supply of films in stock.

It is understood that the large picture supply houses in New Zealand have laid in a large stock of up-to-date films, fearing that the war might interfere with the production, so that now, it is stated, there are sufficient supplies of the standard films to last for two years, and it is supposed that only the newest and more attractive films will be imported during the near future.

New Power's Agency in Buenos Aires.

Moss & Co., of Buenos Aires, have secured the agency of the Nicholas Power Company for Argentina and Uruguay. The transaction was closed through A. J. Lang, export manager of the New York concern, who has been traveling throughout South America during the past five months, pushing the sale of Power's machines.

CALCUTTA THEATRES IN COMPETITION

Changes in Management Here and There Are Showing Results in Betterment of the Business —Wide Variety of Features Offered.

By S. B. Banerjea.

OUT of the ashes of the Presidency Theatre, Calcutta, has risen the Palladium Cinema. It has been placed under the management of Miss Gladys Sobral, who knows her business from A to Z. The management claims that it gets pictures from the best sources available. It never leaves others to select its pictures. So far it has screened "Liberty," "Million Dollar Mystery," "A Child of the Paris Streets," "The Gold Ship," and many American comics—to crowded houses. Every Sunday morning it holds a children's prize show. One day Zenana were admitted free of charge.

* * *

Mr. Ducasse has resigned his managing directorship of the Bijou Grand and is devoting himself to his film-renting business. His resignation will prove a distinct loss to the Bijou. Within a short time, he had succeeded in making the old Bijou a financial success. He possesses the knack of selecting good pictures. I am glad to report that his Dorjeeling show and his Bombay theatre are going strong. Crowded houses clearly prove how his efforts to provide excellent fare are being appreciated.

At the Bijou, which is now under the management of one Miss Bromley, we have seen the following: "Missing the Tide," "Dog-catcher's Love," "A Bird of Prey," "The Outsider," "Measure of a Man," "The Sign of the Poppy," "Murdered by Mistake," "The Labor Leader," "His Father's Son," "In Darkest Russia," "To the Death," "Fighting for Love," "Under Handicap," "The Question," "The Cold Deck," "Heroes," the Universal Screen Magazine, and many American comics. The above selections, I understand, were made by Mr. Ducasse himself, and I do not wonder that these were seen by crowded houses.

I regret to say that, of late, the Picture House of Calcutta has not screened very good films. However, amongst those exhibited favorable mention may be made of "The Oval Diamond," "In Treason's Grasp," and "Little Misspoll." The house has just been closed for a month for repairs and alterations, when it will reopen under the management of Mr. Ducasse. I have no doubt that under his management the Picture House will prove a greater financial success than it has been in the past. I would only suggest that additional seats should be provided for the 4a and 8a patrons, who are the mainstay of all theatres.

At the Albion Theatre we have seen "Marie Tudor," "Right to Live," "Chase Me, Charlie," and the serial, "The Neglected Wife." Such serials are badly needed in these days.

The authorities of the Calcutta Picture Palace have screened "The Girl Phillipa," "The Prey," "Pendleton's Round Up," "Mayflower," "Marise," "Prima Donna's Husband," "Resurrection," "Masks and Faces," "The Two Duchesses," "The Barrier," "Birds of a Feather," "Fireman," "A Dream or Two Ago," "Wife's Forgiveness," "The Common Law," "Toil and Tyranny," and "House of Glass."

* * *

At the New Cornwallis, the "Voice on the Wire" is being screened to overcrowded houses.

* * *

I am glad to report that the Government of India have just honored our Bioscope King, J. F. Madan, with the title of O. B. E. (Order of the British Empire). The honor is well deserved, and I congratulate old Madan for it. May his shadow never grow less!

* * *

At the Bioscope Theatre "Pauline Cushman," "The Lure of the Mask," "Million Dollar Mystery," "Lure of the Ladies," and "Graft of Greed" have been screened. Why doesn't Mr. Ardashir, its proprietor, screen new films, as Madan does? He can pick up many excellent serials if he will only consult the "Moving Picture World." Let him screen new films in his own theatre and arrange to exhibit them in the Palladium for the benefit of people who live in the northern quarter of the city. Indians love serials, and they will not hesitate to run distances to witness them.

* * *

At the Lahore Empire, "The Adopted Son" and several British films of no merit have been exhibited. Why do not its authorities arrange to screen serials?

* * *

At the Bombay Empire, "The Death of a Nation," "Temporal Power," "The Last of the Carabys," "Sylvin of the Secret Service," and the "Dancer's Peril" have been shown to good houses.

* * *

At the Theatre Royal we have seen "Lonesome Hearts," "God's Witness," "Diamonds are Trumps," "Taterley" and several other films of like merit. It being a purely European-owned theatre, I expect a better show.

The cinema Precious is the latest bioscope theatre in Bombay. It has been opened at Grant Road, and there is accommodation for over 1,000 persons.

"SATAN" CAUSES TROUBLE IN SYDNEY

First Output of Beaumont Smith Company, an Australian Concern, Gets Good Advertising at Censors' Hands—Other Antipodean Notes.

By Thomas S. Imbrie.

The Beaumont Smith Film Company has released its first film drama, which enjoys the melodramatic title of "Satan in Sydney." This subject had the good, or bad, luck to incur the disfavor of the Sydney police censor, and was withdrawn after its first screening. The censor board, however, subsequently passed the film without amendment, which fact, being duly advertised, caused great business wherever shown.

"The Woman Suffers," a seven-part Southern Cross production, made in Adelaide, S. A., has been unanimously acclaimed by the press to be one of the best of locally produced subjects. It began a record season at the Theatre Royal, Adelaide, by smashing all previous attendance records at that house, taking £900 in six days.

The producer, Raymond Longford, and photographer, Arthur Higgins, have done good work throughout the picture, which embraces both bush and city life. The leading players are Lottie Lyell, Boyd Irwin, Roland Conway and Connie Martyn.

* * *

This month Quality Pictures presented a seven-reel comedy-drama, "Just Peggy," produced in Sydney. Sara Allgood, who toured Australia and New Zealand with success recently in the play "Peg of My Heart," is the star. Unfortunately she is not suited to the story, and, in spite of an interesting personality, cannot be said to be the success in pictures that she was on the stage.

The story is an average one, and the director, J. A. Lipman, must be credited with considerable skill in handling it so well.

The success of the amateur film, "Cupid Camouflaged," mentioned by me some time ago, is proved by the fact that up to date over £1,100 ($5,500) net has been realized. For four nights and one matinee the picture was screened at the King's Cross Theatre, Darlinghurst, and the proceeds were entirely devoted to the Red Cross fund, so that altogether the fund has benefited considerably by the production of the society film. It is now being screened throughout the country districts for the same good cause.

Important developments in the producing activities of some Australian firms are expected to materialize next month, according to local rumors.

The saltpeter mining companies of Chile, which represent 75 or 80 per cent of the total wealth of the country, have devised and put in practice a novel method to keep their men away from the saloons and disreputable dance halls. It consists of deducting from each man's pay fifty cents a month, and this sum gives him the right to a seat in the local moving picture theatre when off duty. The theatres are owned and managed by the saltpeter works, and the business is not conducted for profit. The movement, which at present is limited to the Iquique and Antofagasta zones, gives signs of spreading throughout the whole northern part of the republic.

Goldwyn Girdles the World

GOLDWYN is proud of its record in the foreign field for the first releasing year of its existence. Its first twenty-six productions have proved strong box-office attractions for cinema theatres in every part of the world.

This year, its second in the producing and distributing field, Goldwyn offers even more popular and gifted stars; even better stories and even finer execution of the technical niceties of production.

This year Goldwyn will produce and distribute throughout the world the ablest works of the following stars and authors:—

GERALDINE FARRAR

The Strength of Goldwyn Stars and Productions

GERALDINE FARRAR needs no introduction. She is a world-famous star of the opera and the cinema. For Goldwyn Star Series release she is making the most powerful productions of her career. The first of these are "The Turn of the Wheel" and "The Hell Cat."

REX BEACH, whose name is known wherever books are read, will produce for Goldwyn six stories from his world-known novels. The first of these, "Laughing Bill Hyde" is to be followed soon by "The Crimson Gardenia," "Going Some," "The Silver Horde" and two others.

PAULINE FREDERICK will be seen in six modern, dramatic, human plays. She is easily the leading American emotional actress.

MABEL NORMAND returns to her internationally favored broad comedy in the first of her Goldwyn productions for the new year. This is "Peck's Bad Girl." In America she has been received with tremendous approval.

MADGE KENNEDY will continue the sort of comedy-dramas that made her in a few brief months one of the adored feminine idols of the cinema.

MAE MARSH, undeniably one of the cinema's most beloved young dramatic actresses, will be seen in eight stories of even greater box-office attraction power than her successsful first year releases.

TOM MOORE, Goldwyn's first male star, made such by the demand of America's theatre owners, is the most pleasingly romantic personality in pictures. His future is assured.

Goldwyn is now ready to place its second year's product in the hands of enterprising, responsible distributors in the following open territories:—

SOUTH AFRICA
INDIA, BURMA and CEYLON
DUTCH EAST INDIES
STRAITS SETTLEMENTS

"THE CAILLAUX CASE"

Spendidly Developed Story of Historic Treachery Produced Without Conspicuous Flaw by William Fox.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

STATISTICIANS may have never turned their pencil to the problem, but we hazard a guess that one in every hundred features produced for the screen presents a really exceptional opportunity for moneymaking. The remaining ninety-nine run the full gamut of commercial usefulness.

"The Cailluax Case," produced by William Fox, with Madaline Traverse playing the leading spirit in a bond of treason, is one of the hundredth pictures. By all the hazards that showmen may take this revelation of a great and still vibrant scandal should make money for exhibitors during months to come.

Events that now fill the mind with kaleidoscopic bewilderment will pass, in due process of Allied victory—but the Cailleux case(which Fox finishes with the execution of Bolo Pasha) will be subsequently kept in revival by the trial of Joseph Caillaux, Senator Humbert and other French traitors still headed for the bar of justice. So much for the celebrated case abroad—who can say that its tentacles of intrigue shall not reach again to the United States and sweep into the light of exposure notorious individuals whose names have been more than whispered in couplet with Bolo Pasha?

It is for this reason that the Caillaux case bears so directly upon the struggle that is arresting the attention of the world; because France so nearly fell beneath the undermining of Bolo Pashaism and Hunzollernism; because other famous figures are still to be brought to book—it is because of these things that the Fox presentation should be a live issue in the moving-picture market for an indeterminable time.

There is an immediate value in the picture as timely entertainment. The manner and method of the Fox production is entirely adequate and commendable. Miss Traverse is undeniably an aquisition to the Fox forces, and screen entertainment, while she is engaged in photoplaying, will vastly benefit. Richard Stanton has directed the featured player and her support without conspicuous fault and in the "mob scenes" where Parisiennes rebel at the verdict of the jury an inspiring effect has been attained.

The screened foreword referring to "types" to fit the characters lends benefit to the presentation, and in selecting actors who resembled the famous characters (as we are willing to believe they do) a great deal of offending "make up" has been obviated and the "types" pass current for their various representations. In this Director Stanton has accomplished an effect not always agreeable in filming living characters in historic scenes.

Borrowing from the "tout" who prints his "wisdom" on horse races, let us advise exhibitors to "get down on 'The Caillaux Case.'" Here is the "makings" of a "clean up" for those who press agent and advertise the vast and vital amount of material the picture affords. Every patron of moving picture theatres possessed of average intelligence and capacity for being really entertained by an unusually timely and forceful presentation will be thoroughly pleased and satisfied.

"WHOSE LITTLE WIFE ARE YOU?"

Mack Sennett-Paramount Comic Releases Floods of Joy and Water.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS two-reel Mack Sennett concoction is one that will bring plenty of laughter. It contains a generous number of scenes, all of the purely nonsensical type, and cleverly executed. The cast includes Charles Murray, Wayland Trask, Eva Thatcher, Mary Thurman, Alice Lake and Joseph Baldy Belmont. The latter appears to have found a beneficent hair restorative, for he now appears with a full crop of the genuine article, or if it is still camouflage it is very much like real hair.

The incident of first merit in this number is perhaps the one in which a big dog rescues two kittens floating on a raft in a flooded cellar. This scene is bound to prove effective with any audience. The chase after the mouse in the opening reel is also amusing.

Most of the scenes occur in a drug store adjoining a beach hotel. Baldy and his father, the druggist, both love a pretty manicurist, and Baldy leads in the race for her affections. But the climax comes when he is almost drowned in the ocean. During the efforts to resuscitate him the hotel becomes flooded with water, and some exciting incidents follow.

"ON THE JUMP"

George Walsh a Loose and Lively Star in Frail Plot Built Especially to Exploit the Athlete.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

THE person who wrote the titles for "On the Jump" is entitled to be congratulated by his boss; and if we were said boss we would raise his salary—for the titles have made this George Walsh feature a revelation. So good are the expressions that it is clearly impossible for the plot and action to meet the "brain children" of the title-writer any where near half way.

Built expressly to exploit the star's athletics the production has fulfilled so much of its mission that the action amply suits the title. Walsh is on the jump all the time—swimming, boxing, vaulting, fighting, wrestling, playing golf, jumping, diving, kicking, leaping, and sometimes stopping long enough to do just a bit of acting. Devotees of the screen who fancy George Walsh as a favorite will have him to their heart's content in this latest William Fox presentation of his agility.

In the six reels there is hardly one reel of plot—and in that there is little to engage special interest. Boosting the sale of Liberty Bonds seems to be the first and most laudable mission of the presentation. If it fails to get into circulation in time to do much good for the Fourth Loan it will help vastly in keeping the public mind on coming events of a like nature. There is a twist of Hun subtlety in the purchase of a newspaper and the establishment of a bank—and the villain, in the last two reels, comes out in the open as a disciple of Hunzollerism.

Walsh frustrates the schemes in daring fashion and is aided by Frances Burnham, who instills a very slight love interest, and Henry Clive, who looks too clean and decent to be a kulturist. This Clive individual has the ability to do better things in pictures, as his work in Walsh's support demonstrates. In communities where exhibitors have a Walsh following they may well go down heavy on the boost for "On the Jump"—it is mostly Walsh and Walsh at his liveliest.

"WOLVES OF KULTUR"

New Pathe Serial Concerns Work of German Spies in America.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THE first two installments of "Wolves of Kultur," made by Western Photoplays, Inc., and released by Pathe, introduces the observer to a pretty bunch of German spies operating in this country under the leadership of a man named Henry Hartman. The events are of a rapid-fire melodramatic order and once the story is started there is no let-up in the action; as a matter of fact even in these swift-running serials it rather pays to slow up a little occasionally in the succession of events in order to more fully impress the observer. But we have no doubt the public will take very kindly to this offering, for it moves along with breathless suspense and holders the interest well.

Sheldon Lewis, whose work in former serials will be remembered, is cast in the role of Roger Barclay, a criminologist who is always "on the job," sometimes in a fairly miraculous manner. He wears various disguises and plays the role of a detective much of the time. Leah Baird, the principal girl in the case, appears as Alice Grayson, the neice of a man who has invented a torpedo operated by wireless. It is the murder of the uncle by poisonous gas, and theft of the inventions, that brings on the principal events. The girl starts out to round up the spies herself and soon comes in contact both with Barclay and with Bob Moore, whose sister, Helen, is in the power of one of the spies.

There are a number of inconsistencies in these opening installments, and the long arm of coincidence is employed pretty freely in places. These lapses of logic have a tendency to weaken the dramatic effect somewhat.

Others in the cast are Charles Hutchison, Betty Howe, Mary Hull, Edmund Dalby, Austin Webb and William Cavanaugh. The serial was written, produced and directed by Joseph A. Golden.

"THE VELVET HAND"

Bluebird Offering Presents Fritzi Brunette in Tale of Italy.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

SOME striking atmospheric effects have been achieved in this five-reel subject, "The Velvet Hand," which was written by Edith Barnard Delano and directed by Douglas Gerrard. The plot, which is dramatic in character, tells a story of Southern Italy and some rarely beautiful scenic settings have been chosen in which to frame the story. The production as a whole is one that is very creditably assembled and is in every department true to type. The big dramatic moments are not handled with any great degree of intensity, but the presentation is adequate and pleasing.

Fritzi Brunette appears as Gianna, the daughter of an Italian violin maker, who sets out to avenge the death of her brother in true vendetta fashion. She believes the crime to have been committed by Count Paul Trovelli, when in fact her brother's death was at the hands of Trovelli's friend, Prince Viscomte. Gianna, after making a great success as a dancer at Milan, meets the Count, who falls in love with her. The girl thinks only of her revenge and plans to stab Trovelli, but the Countess Michetti, an adventuress with whom her brother had been in love, warns Gianna that Trovelli did not commit the crime. Gianna really loves Trovelli and readily forgoes her vengeance, and the Prince meets death on the battle front, thus giving the story a less tragic ending than might have been anticipated.

The cast is capable throughout and includes Fred Turner, Eugene Corey, William Nowell and Carmen Phillips.

"THE KINGDOM OF YOUTH"

Goldwyn Presents Madge Kennedy and Tom Moore in Attractive Comedy-Drama.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

ONE of the most attractive of the Goldwyn comedy-dramas in which pretty Madge Kennedy has been appearing is "The Kingdom of Youth," from a story by Charles Logue. In the production in which Tom Moore plays an excellent male lead, and which was released September 23, an amusing domestic tangle has been presented in a skillful manner under the direction of Clarence C. Badger. The comedy situations are consistent, and the construction of the picture is fashioned after a form to which, while it may not be faultless, we are becoming accustomed to and which, in this instance, is so cleverly managed that there is little room left for criticism. It is built on that stop system to which directors and scenario writers are much given of late, in which at a certain vantage point in the story one of the principal characters has a dream or vision which allows, in this instance, a fascinating visualization of the story of a bride and groom previous to the opening of the picture.

As the story runs a young college man falls in love with a pretty girl of the village and secretly marries her. Immediately after the marriage he is called away to fulfill the plans of his future, according to the ideas of a deceased male relative, whose widow, "just outside the pale of youth, looking in," exhibits more than a friendly interest in him much to his discomfiture.

The young wife suddenly comes upon the scene, after he has been made manager of the widow's estate, following which occur some amusing events which end in a near tragedy. Through the scheming of the widow the girl is thrown into the company of a count, while she tries in vain to estrange the young husband's affections. One of the most effective scenes in the picture occurs where the wife, in desperation, makes a smoke smudge which takes her supposed rival unawares, and causes her to rush forth in negligee, revealing the necessity of a careful makeup. The jealousy aroused in the young wife finally causes her to accept an invitation to dine alone with the count on his yacht, and, in trying to "paddle her own canoe," she meets with an accident in which she is nearly drowned. On her a akening she realizes her mistake, and a reconciliation takes place.

"TONY AMERICA"

Francis McDonald Gives Lifelike Impersonation in Capital Triangle Picture.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE acting of Francis McDonald as a young Italian emigrant in the Triangle picture, "Tony America," dominates the entire story. Evelyn Campbell, the author, has supplied an interesting plot and Thomas N. Heffron has directed the performance with good judgment. The human interest is strong, and most of the situations keep pace with the facts of life; but it is the skillful and sympathetic acting of the star as the eager, warm-hearted Tony, who comes to this country to make his fortune and finds at first only the hardest kind of work and the barest sort of living that gives the story its chief value. His marriage to a faithless wife and his love for his little daughter afford the actor opportunities for a display of emotional power, of which he takes full advantage.

The story opens in Italy. Tony is brought to this country by a wealthy fruit dealer and becomes one of the push-cart men that the merchant has working for him and keeps in practical slavery by cheating them out of their earnings. At the boarding house where Tony lives the daughter of the landlady, Mrs. Piciano, traps him into marrying her in order that she may escape from her mother's authority and carry on an affair with a German spy. Tony finds out how he is being deceived and it almost wrecks his life. Mamie Dean, a little factory girl, becomes his friend and helps him to care for his child when he takes her away from her mother. Freed from his wife by the divorce court, Tony finds happiness with Mamie and his child.

Rae Godfrey plays Mamie with real feeling and Mrs. Harry Davenport does a fine piece of character work as Mrs. Piciano. The other members of the cast are Yvonne Davis, Herald Holland, Ludwig Lowy, Dick Loreno and Dorothy Giraci. Photographed by B. H. Wales.

"TELL THAT TO THE MARINES"

James Montgomery Flagg Two-Part Comedy Good Entertainment and Good Propaganda.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THERE is a strong object lesson for Pacifists in the two-part Paramount-Flagg comedy, "Tell That to the Marines." The artist-author has not only furnished a good plot but has supplied a lot of sub-titles that have a kick in them like an army mule's. The kick is always directed straight at the woefully mistaken person who thinks the United States did wrong in going to war with Germany. Much of the story is told in a comedy vein, but its point is driven home firmly for all that. Eliot Brainard, the Pacifist person who gets his eyes opened to the truth at last, is fortunate enough to have a sweetheart who is all for war and her Uncle Sam. She joins the Secret Service and sets out to capture a German spy. The man is working a wireless in an unfrequented part of the country. When he finds that Nan is watching him the German attacks her. Brainard happens to be in the right place at the right time for once in his life. All the real man in him comes to the surface and he rushes at the enemy and disgraces the breed of Pacifists for ever.

After this, there is only one thing he can do to show his cure is complete—he joins the Marines.

Olin Howard as Eliot Brainard and Beatrice Tremaine as Nan are effective, and the production is satisfactory in all its details. The picture was produced by Town and County Films, Inc.

"THE MATING"

Gladys Leslie and Several Small Children Score In Vitagraph Juvenile Story.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

JUDGED by the well-worn nature of its material, "The Mating" should not possess any great amount of entertaining qualities. As a matter of fact, this five-part Vitagraph picture, written by Millicent Evison and directed by Fred Thomson, has many enjoyable moments. The story belongs to juvenile fiction, the best scenes being between Gladys Leslie and three clever children who have not been taught to "act." The familiar situations of the aged and impoverished inventor, whose wonderful machine brings him fortune at the finish, and the youthful author whose story wins the prize in the last reel, are among those present; also the rescue of the children by the hero when they drift away in a boat and manage to upset it. Several human touches and a certain youthful charm and simplicity about the whole story helps it to get by, if the spectator cares for this class of picture.

Nancy Fane, the daughter of the inventor, is a little small-town girl who lives next door to a big, unoccupied house. One day she hears a noise in the house, and, having just read of an escaped convict, starts an investigation. Dick Ives, the owner of the property, has come back to live in the old place. Nancy sends for the constable to arrest him and finds out her mistake. This is the beginning of the romance, which ends in the good old way. Most of the action is devoted to doings of the younger Fanes.

Gladys Leslie has the youth and the temperament for the part of Nancy, and Herbert Rawlinson is excellent as Dick. Forest Robertson gives one of his finished impersonations as Mr. Fane. Stephen Carr, John Thomson and Alda Horton are the trio of clever children.

"THE MAN FROM FUNERAL RANGE"

Famous Players-Lasky Production Tells Story of Dramatic Interest.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS new Paramount offering in five reels is enacted by a strong cast headed by Wallace Reid and Ann Little. Willis Marks does some very effective work as Budlong, and Tully Marshall is also excellent in the character role of Beekman, a shyster lawyer. Lottie Pickford, Phil Ainsworth and George McDaniel also have important parts.

The story itself contains many effective dramatic situations. It was adapted by Monte M. Katterjohn from a play entitled "Broken Threads," written by Ernest Wilkes, and the screen production has been capably directed by Walter Edwards. It contains several situations that are of a conventional type, the crime itself being one of these, but these features have been properly abbreviated and then surrounded by much that is new and unusual. The production is a good example of what can be done in the way of offsetting familiar, or stock, situations with new and pleasing incidents.

Wallace Reid and Ann Little make the most of their love scenes. He appears as a man just in from the desert and she as a cabaret singer. His rival is a young lawyer, for whose death the young prospector is held. The dead man's partner, Beekman, succeeds in convicting the hero, though he knows him to be innocent. But in the end the tables are turned and justice prevails. The legal end of this story rings true, and is one of its strongly entertaining features.

"SUCH A LITTLE PIRATE"

Second Lila Lee Paramount Picture Contains Light but Amusing Material.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

BY culling considerable of his plot from Stevenson's "Treasure Island" and Rider Haggard's "Mr. Meeson's Will," and supplying original material of a light but amusing quality, James Oliver Curwood built up a fairly good bit of fiction, which he christened "Peggy, the Pirate." Adapted to the screen by Monte M. Kitterjohn under the title of "Such a Little Pirate," and produced by Jesse L. Lasky for the Paramount, with Lila Lee as Patricia Wolf, the picture proves a better vehicle for the new star than her first screen story.

The types, while not essentially American, fit into the situations, and the whole affair is a pleasant enough specimen of fooling with fact and fiction. No serious note is struck or attempted, as a consequence the most skeptical spectator has no excuse for not smiling tolerantly when the treasure-seekers unearth a massive chest of pirate gold and jewels. The old charm of a hunt for buried treasure is as potent as ever.

Obadiah Wolf, the grandfather of Patricia, has a treasure map tattooed on his chest, and has been working hard to make the last payment on the schooner, "Laughing Lass," and sail for the Spanish Main, where his ancestors were famous buccaneers, and dig up his legacy. A rascally ship owner tries to cheat the old captain out of the boat and sell it to the Government at four times its value. The one-eyed seadog who did the tattooing on Obadiah also takes a hand in the villainy, and has him shanghied and landed on the treasure island. Patricia and her young man arrive in time to secure the chest. An educated chimpanzee assists in foiling the villains.

Lila Lee's screen impersonation shows her as a sweet and wholesome young person who takes a startling adventure in a matter-of-fact way, and is good to look at all through the picture. Theodore Roberts is a tower of humorous strength as Obadiah. Harrison Ford as Rory O'Malley and Guy Oliver as "Bad-Eye" are both excellent. Forest Seabury, J. Parks-Jones and Adele Farrington complete the cast. George Melford has caught the spirit of the story in his direction.

"JUST SYLVIA"

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

IN this five-reel subject, "Just Sylvia," Barbara Castleton has an attractive role which gives her plenty of opportunities for individual acting, and she uses these to the best advantage. The story itself, adapted by Hamilton Smith from the original by Harry O. Hoyt, and directed by Travers Vale, is one of the type of plays which appeared just after Channing Pollock's "Such a Little Queen" scored a notable success on the legitimate stage. It follows the career of a masquerading princess in America, and for seasoned theatregoers will have no great novelty. It is presented in an attractive style, however, in spite of certain weak dramatic moments, and will no doubt prove pleasing to less sophisticated audiences.

Miss Castleton first appears as Sylvia, a pretty girl living in a cheap rooming house without visible means of support. As the hardhearted landlady of "the spurious smile," as O. Henry described it, demands rent money at regular intervals she gets a job as model for a modiste. This brings her in touch with Zebulon Hicks, who has just come with his wife and son to the metropolis, where they hope to live in luxury on Fifth avenue. The contrasts are brought out in an interesting way, both Jack Drumier and Gertrude Berekley doing some quite interesting character work as Mr. and Mrs. Hicks. John Hines appears as the son, Henry, with whom Sylvia falls in love. His character is not so clearly brought out, for the reason that Henry has no great part to play in the story, and the girl's love for him seemed slightly incredible.

The dramatic features of the plot, which are handled with a fair degree of strength, have to do with Sylvia's appearance as the Countess Bonnenuit. While playing this part she exposes two others who are faking titles with a view to fleecing Mr. and Mrs. Hicks. Sylvia's own right to the title of princess is brought out later, but she gives up her claim to it to marry Henry.

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM.

Gloria Joy Featured in "Little Miss Grown-Up" and "Wanted a Brother."

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell.

THE two final offerings of the Oakdale series of five-reel features released by General Film Company will appeal primarily to children. The stories are slight, with hardly enough action to fill the necessary number of reels, and the action is not always consistent. However, they serve to show to advantage the clever work of little Gloria Joy, whose acting is pleasing to both young and old.

"Little Miss Grown-Up."

Nan has very advanced ideas for a little girl, and thinks she is a "grown-up." She takes a fancy to her young aunt's sweetheart, using all her wiles to ensnare him. Finally she proposes, and he laughingly accepts. When it comes to a show-down, he, of course, accepts the aunt, and Nan, very disconsolate, goes back to her home in the country and tells her little playmate she thinks she will wait until he grows up. The production was directed by Sherwood McDonald, and is interpreted by a capable cast, including Neil Hardin, Edward Saunders, Ethel Pepperell, Mary Northmore and Daniel Gilfether. Much of the action revolves around Nan's grown-up playmate, who still acts as if he were a little boy, and who scares her grandfather's household, who believe he is a ghost.

"Wanted a Brother."

There is more heart interest in this than in the preceding picture. Bab, the shoemaker's daughter, when her friend Tom, who is much older, is arrested on a trumped up charge of theft, sells his papers for him. Tom has been cast off by his wealthy father, and when he gets out of jail Bab induces her father to take him in. Tom's gang plan to rob his father's house. Bab follows, is discovered, and tied hand and foot. Tom's father finds her, after the gang are frightened away, and she finally succeeds in bringing about a reconciliation between father and son. There are several innocent childish pranks in this picture, in which the little star is assisted by a small, very black negro boy of about her own age. Others in the cast include Mignon LeBrun, H. E. Archer, Daniel Gilfether, Julian Dillon and Edward Jobson. Robert Ensminger directed the production.

"THE FORBIDDEN CITY"

Joseph M. Schenck Presents Norma Talmadge in a Beautiful Production.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE highest value in this beautiful production is a composite and so rare that it is seldom seen on the screen. The rare part is one of successful treatment—the illusion is so admirably preserved that an appearance of reality is given to pure romance—a plausibility so combined with beauty that it held a large Rivoli audience enthralled. This fascinating effect is produced by a logical and consistent development of the story, by distinct characterizations, each one a cameo of type; by backgrounds ingenious to the last degree, so far as giving the play atmosphere is concerned, and beautiful in both large effects and small details, and by acting, in which Norma Talmadge gives a wonderful exhibition of psychology supported by Thomas Meighan, Rogers Lytton, Michael Rayle and others in masterly style. A composite of these elements produces a whole effect that will remain with the spectator after leaving the theatre.

Norma Talmadge is forging to the foremost rank through her intelligent conception of each role she assumes. In delineating the childish woman her revelations of thought and feeling are a source of constant delight to the spectator. Not by pantomime, not by gesticulation and facial contortion, but by investing her own personality with that of the character she portrays she holds the eye enchanted. She will find her true place in a play of vital and powerful motive such as has not yet been accorded her. "The Forbidden City," poorly named and lacking in any big definite purpose, is made effective by marvelous treatment, spendid interpretation and romantic presentment, so that it will please almost any audience, and it may be regarded as a gem by some of them. It registered a distinct success at the Rivoli, and will count among the best of its kind yet shown.

"THE LURE OF LUXURY"

Bluebird Subject Features Ruth Clifford in Heart Interest Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-part subject, "The Lure of Luxury," is a very effective offering of the simple, sentimental type, and it may be safely said that it will make its way with any audience. It was adapted by Fred Myton from a story by Nalbro Bartley and directed by Elsie Jane Wilson. Its emotional quality is direct and appealing, without descending to sentimentality.

This begins with the childhood of two young neighbors, a little rich girl named Dale Aldis and a poor boy named John Coventry. The rich girl has no playmates and lives with her mother and the housekeeper in a fine country house. John lives on an adjoining farm and he sends her a valentine after their first meeting. Years later the girl, now eighteen, returns to the house, her mother having died and she has no one but the housekeeper and her servants. She again meets John Coventry, now a strapping young farmer who expects to make a fortune selling vegetables. They fall in love and then the girl's guardian, Philip Leswing, returns from abroad and he also falls in love with the girl. A rivalry develops between the young farmer and the middle-aged guardian, in which the youth finally wins after much tribulation. The story has a fine human quality, with mingled pathos and humor.

Elizabeth Janes and George Hupp do very well as the children and are good types, to be followed by Ruth Clifford and Edward Hearn in the same characters later. There is an actual resemblance, something that does not often happen.

"THE KAISER'S FINISH"

Eight-Part Propaganda Picture Produced by S. L. Warner Should Make Popular Hit.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

I WILL kill thee one hundred and fifty ways!" exclaims Touchstone to the shepherd in "As You Like It." It looks as if the moving picture will execute the same number of deaths on the German ruler. In "The Kaiser's Finish," an eight-part picture produced by S. L. Warner and released on a state rights basis, the author has the leader of the Huns killed by an illegitimate son. The boy is brought up in America that he may be the better able to serve his father when the United States becomes a part of the Kaiser's empire. The scheme backfires. Years of living under the Stars and Stripes so fills his soul with a love of liberty that he turns against the teaching of his father's agents and makes his way to Berlin as a secret agent for this Government.

His remarkable resemblance to the Crown Prince enables the young man to end his brother's earthly career and get into the presence of the All Highest. Once there he reads his father a lecture on the mistakes he has made and the horrible crimes he has committed and sends him to join the Crown Prince in the place where all good Americans are positive will be his future address. Soldiers rush into the room. The young chap hurls a powerful explosive at them and is destroyed with the others.

This story is emphasized and driven home by the addition of many scenes of actual warfare, taken from various news reels, and also by specially posed scenes of conflict. The result is a picture in which there is always something doing, and it should prove a popular hit. There is nothing subtle about its propaganda. It hits straight at the mark and hits home. John Joseph Harvey, who directed the production, has carried out the purpose of the picture without fear or favor, and the spirit of its eight reels guarantee it a warm reception.

Acting honors go to Earl Schenck in the dual role of Robert Busch and the Crown Prince. Claire Whitey, Percy Standing and Louis Dean have the other leading parts.

COMMENTS

General Film Company

THE MIDNIGHT BURGLAR.—The fourth of the series of Oakdale productions featuring little Gloria Joy tells a pleasing heart interest story which should appeal to both young and old. The diminutive star adds further to her laurels in the role of a "burglar" who, in order to help some poor friends, "robs" her own home of a basket of food at midnight.

TOBIN'S PALM (Broadway Star Feature).—An O. Henry story, but not up to the others shown by this company, not so popular because illogical details in the telling.

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

THE VELVET HAND (Bluebird).—A five-reel offering, adapted from a story by Edith Barnard Delano and directed by Douglas Gerrard. Fritzi Brunette appears as the heroine, an Italian dancing girl, supported by a good cast. The story has Southern Italy for its locale and is both pictorially attractive and dramatic.

THE LURE OF LUXURY (Bluebird).—A splendid five-reel offering of the simple, sentimental sort, with Ruth Clifford, Edward Hearn, Elizabeth Janes and George Hupp in the cast. It tells of a rich girl who fell in love with a country boy when a child and later marries him in spite of her guardian's opposition and rivalry. This contains a great deal of heart interest. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation

TELL THAT TO THE MARINES (Paramount-Flagg), Oct. 13.—A two-part comedy written by James Montgomery Flagg, this picture is good Liberty Loan material and good entertainment. Olin Howard and Beatrice Tremaine head the cast.

BATTLING JANE (Paramount), Oct. 6.—Dorothy Gish is a veritable hit in this comedy-melodrama, giving a characterization which ranks her among the best comediennes of to-day. The story is good for all kinds of audiences.

THE MAN FROM FUNERAL RANGE (Paramount), Oct. 6.—A strong five-reel subject, adapted by Monte M. Katterjohn from the play "Broken Threads," by Ernest Wilkes. Wallace Reid and Ann Little play the lovers and are assisted by George McDaniel, Willis Marks, Lottie Pickford and others. The story contains conventional elements, but also much that is new and enjoyable. It contains some excellent drama. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

WHOSE LITTLE WIFE ARE YOU? (Mack Sennett-Paramount), Oct. 20.—A two-reel comic with a lot of really mirthful situations. The cast includes Charles Murray, Eva Thatcher, Joseph Baldy Belmont and others. The incidents occur at a beach drug store and hotel and are very laughable. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Fox Film Corporation

THE CAILLAUX CASE (Fox Standard Picture), Sept. 15.—The notorious treason and intrigue that came close to tumbling France into the dust of cruel and unjust defeat has been filmed by William Fox in splendid fashion. Madlaine Traverse is brought forward as a new screen star and her work justifies the opinion that she will at once establish herself in deserved high favor. Richard Stanton has staged a fine big production, presenting skillful artists in the prime roles, and "The Caillaux Case" should make a lot of money for exhibitors in every class of community.

ON THE JUMP (Victory Pictures).—Oct. 6.—In this picture George Walsh is seen at his best—and utmost. He does everything an athletic individual may concoct in the line of demonstrating physical dexterity, and, in passing, stops here and there for a bit of comedy acting. The picture is a large boost for the sale of Liberty Bonds and will be just as good for the next "drive" as for this one. Henry Clive is conspicuously clever in the thankless role of a Hun spy. Frances Burnham has little to do save look pretty—and that comes natural. Where there is a strong following for George Walsh this picture will be immensely satisfying—for it is, practically, six reels of that athletic star.

Greater Vitagraph, Inc.

THE MATING, Oct. 7.—Gladys Leslie and several clever children are the stars of this five-part picture. The material is not at all new and belongs to juvenile fiction, but it will please some portions of the public. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Mutual Film Corporation

KEEP HER SMILING (Strand).—Elinor Field and Bobby Vernon are the featured members of the cast in this moderately entertaining comedy. The story follows the love story of a young girl whose father wants her to marry a man of his choice rather than her own. Her sweetheart, a young doctor, in a plot to win out, has had her carried home apparently injured from a fall from her horse. He is then sent for to attend her, and effecting a wonderful cure wins the sympathy of the father and the hand of the maiden.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 59 (Mutual).—This issue opens with some scenes from the front showing how a handful of marines captured 165 Germans. Other scenes of interest show the Legion of Honor here to take part in the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, the funeral of Cardinal Farley and a Californian duck farm.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 60 (Mutual).—Over Chicago by aeroplane is the first item in this issue. This encompasses a fine birdseye view of the city. Other events recorded are Brooklyn honoring its heroes, a bathing girl revue at Idor Park, California; a school for the instruction of shipbuilders at Hog Island Yard, Philadelphia, caterpillar wheat harvesters at work, soldiers of 1918 on a visit to Lookout Mountain, and deaf mutes rendering "The Star Spangled Banner" with their hands.

A JUNGLE JOY RIDE (Outing-Chester), Sept. 22.—A canoe ride on the Potaro river in British Guiana is what this film presents. Many interesting scenes among the Patamonian Indians are included, showing their homes and industries, including the making of cassava meal. The dangerous ride over the rapids is something to be remembered, and then the final wind-up in a quiet nook where the water vouchsafes scarcely a ripple.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 61 (Mutual), Sept. 28.—The opening item of this number shows President Wilson going to cast his ballot in Princeton. Other recorded events vary from the battlefields of Europe to a pilgrimage to the tomb of George Washington, headed by Mrs. George Dewey and Secretary Daniels. There is also the unveiling of the statue of Depew and the naming of a bridge in Lyon, France, after our President.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 62 (Mutual), Oct. 1.—In this issue President Wilson is seen opening the Loan drive in New York City; Theodore Roosevelt addresses a Baltimore audience; motor cycle soldiers ride to the hounds in Georgia, and the navy builds a great rifle range in New Jersey. The hunting of grizzly bears in the Canadian Rockies affords scenes of interest, and the burning coal mines in Ohio are none the less interesting.

THE GIRL IN THE BOX (Strand), Oct 8.—Elinor Field is the featured member of the cast in this number. The story presents a young lady looking for romance, which she finds in the theatre where she sits night after night gazing at the same man. When she advertises for a maid the man dresses in feminine attire and answers the ad, gains the position, and finally after discovery becomes the affianced lover of the girl. If taken seriously this film does not set a particularly good example to young girls.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

TOSSED IN THE TORRENT (Pathe), Sept. 29.—Episode No. 7 of "Hands Up." Fighting with the Inca Indians is a leading feature of this instalment. Echo makes a great dash in a stage coach to escape them, during which some fine riding scenes are pictured. But she is captured and once more taken to the temple. Plans are laid to sail to Peru, but Two-gun Carter and his men are already scheming to recover the girl.

OFFICIAL WAR REVIEW, NO. 14 (Pathe), Sept. 29.—This opens with scenes from the American trenches in France, then shows President Poincaire and officers of the French army decorating heroes. Other features deal with the Italian front, inspection of British troops by the Earl of Scarborough, and the number closes with a living flag photographed at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

NO PLACE LIKE JAIL (Rolin-Pathe), Oct. 6.—The first of some new comedies with Stan Laurel as chief comedian. He appears in this as a man just out of jail, with a companion crook. They invade a girl's school to kidnap one of the fair maidens, but get the principal by mistake. The scenes in the girls' school are the most amusing; the number as a whole is of average interest.

THE TRIUMPH OF TRANSPORTATION (Pathe), Oct. 6.—This gives a brief review of the various forms of transporting goods since the days when manpower itself was the only means. Ox carts, prairie schooners and other vehicles are shown, and the film then gives interesting glimpses of the way in which modern auto trucks are assembled. A short comic is added at the close.

WHY PICK ON ME? (Rolin-Pathe), Oct. 13.—One of the funniest of Harold Lloyd comedies, which is saying considerable. Most of the incidents occur at a beach resort, in which various concessions are brought into play, with some laughable results. Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels are also in the cast.

MONEY ISN'T EVERYTHING (American-Pathe).—A five-reel comedy-drama featuring Margarita Fisher. It is this star's first appearance on the Pathe program, and it is a pity that her opportunities have not been greater. The production falls short on the comedy line. A full review will be found in our issue of October 5.

THE MANTLE OF CHARITY (American-Pathe).—A five-reel number, with Margarita Fisher and Jack Mowrer in the leads. The hero and heroine conduct rival charity organizations, one run on the familiar red tape line and the other on an open plan for dispensing supplies to the needy poor. There is some good comedy running through this subject, which is enjoyable.

OFFICIAL WAR REVIEW, NO. 15 (Pathe), Oct. 6.—This opens with timely scenes on the allied front in the Balkans. Scenes from Italy's mountainous front follow. The use of camouflage suits by Americans in France makes an interesting feature. Scenes from Chateau Thierry and the building of a pontoon bridge close the issue.

RAINDROPS (Post-Pathe).—One of the best, if not the best of its kind yet shown on the screen, beautiful and evoking warm applause from a large audience at the Rivoli.

THE FATAL JEWELS (Pathe), Oct. 6.—Episode No. 8 of "Hands Up." This installment is very much alive with fresh developments of an exciting nature. The capture and escape of the Inca king-regent, the burning of the cabin, Echo's narrow escape from death after Killman has tied her to the horse and other incidents are pictured.

HOBBS IN A HURRY (American-Pathe).—A six-reel offering, featuring William Russell, assisted by a pleasing cast. This is a Western number, full of humorous stunts, and will no doubt please observers despite some weak places in construction. It is brilliantly photographed and contains much good humor. Reviewed at length in last week's issue.

THE TORTURE TRAP (Pathe), Oct. 13.—Episode No. 1 of "Wolves of Kultur," in three reels. This new serial, written, produced and directed by Joseph A. Golden, has in the cast Leah Baird and Sheldon Lewis, whose work in former offerings will be remembered. The plot centers about the murder of the girl's uncle and theft of his invention, a wireless torpedo, by a gang of German spies operating in this country. The number has plenty of suspense. There are some inconsistencies, but it is sure to please as a quick-action melodramatic serial.

THE IRON CHAIR (Pathe), Oct. 20.—Episode No. 2 of "Wolves of Kultur," in two reels. This number opens with the rescue of Alice from the gang of spies by Bob, who is fleeing from the pursuing officers. The two join forces at Alice's country home and plan to regain the stolen invention. Alice goes to Hartman's office under an assumed name and lures him to her home, where he is made captive. This number contains good action and holds the interest well.

AN ENEMY OF SOAP (Rolin-Pathe), Oct. 20.—A new Toto comic which will please his admirers very much, as it is one of the best of his subjects. Tota plays a hobo. He finds a pretty girl in bathing who has lost her garments, and robs a scarecrow to clothe her. The burro also helps along with some good humor.

Triangle Film Corporation

TONY AMERICA, Oct. 6.—There are many human touches in this five-part picture taken from a story by Evelyn Campbell. Francis McDonald has the title role and seems to actually live the character of the Italian fruit peddler. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Universal Film Company

DANGER AHEAD (Western), Sept. 14.—A two-reel railroad story by L. Caulfield, featuring Helen Gibson, Millard K. Wilson, O. C. Jackson and J. Johnson. The heroine performs a daring piece of business in capturing a wild tank and caboose by means of an automobile. If she had shown a little more natural excitement it would have helped the realism. But the number is a good one of the type.

THE HUMAN TIGER (Western), Sept. 21.—A two-reel jungle story by C. B. Hoadley, featuring Fred Church, Eileen Sedgwick, Noble Johnson, Frank Fanning and Dick La Reno. The plot concerns a young scientist and his bride who go to Africa, accompanied by the villain, a former admirer of the wife. Murder and adventurous episodes are included in the story. Wild animals also play a prominent and exciting part at times. The close is tragic, wherein the native chief saves the wife by permitting a lion to kill the villain. This is well constructed and full of picturesque scenic effects.

ALL FOR GOLD (Western), Oct. 5.—A two-reel number by T. Shelley Sutton, featuring T. D. Crittenden, Eileen Sedgwick, Fred Church, Leon D. Kent and Betty Schade. The story concerns a mining man and his daughter, who are victimized by a designing individual named Pete. The latter is in love with a dance hall girl. The hero is a young mining engineer named Bob, who saves the old miner's daughter from disaster after her father's death. This is loosely constructed in one or two places, but the story interest is quite pronounced and the situation is firmly held. There are some good human touches in this and the settings are pleasing.

PERILS OF THE PARLOR (Nestor), Oct. 14.—A two-reel number, featuring Carter De Haven and Nell Bennett. The wife rents the house, thinking the husband has gone on a trip. He returns and is discovered taking a bath by four girls in bathing suits, who have rented the house from the wife. The situation is decidedly risque, yet accomplished without any great offense. The mother and wife arrive, as well as a policeman, and in time everything is straightened out. The bathing costumes are very brief, but the action harmless.

SCARS AND BARS (L-KO), Oct. 16.—A two-reel comic with Jack Henderson, Helen Lynch, Dick Smith, Henry Gugenheim and Eddie Barry. The most amusing thing in this is a peculiar vehicle which travels on railroad tracks and which we suspect is a camouflaged Ford car. There are a number of stunts, including a prison vaudeville show. The offering makes a comic of moderate strength.

NAILED TO THE PLATE (Star Comedy), Oct. 19.—A breezy comedy, which will appeal to baseball fans in particular, though others will appreciate it also. Lee Moran appears as "Red" Hogan, baseball unpire, and Eddie Lyons as a rampant fan who throws a bottle at "Red." They meet subsequently at the latter's wedding, where fresh trouble starts. This will bring laughter.

THE LOVE CRAZE (Nestor), Oct. 21.—A two-reel subject, written and produced by Winthrop Kelley. Florence Lawrence plays the part of a romantic slavey who dreams of being a Juliet to some handsome young Romeo. The scenes occur in a boarding house and a number of the characters are pleasing. After her first disappointment in Mr. Mudge the girl finally finds her real hero, portrayed by Harry Benham. The number is a good example of the quietly amusing type of comedy.

THE BRASS BULLET, NO. 12 (Universal), Oct. 21.—This number continues the exciting incidents begun in the previous one. Jack rescues Rosalind from drowning, but is himself pursued under suspicion of having murdered Homer Joy. The events on board the steamer are full of swift, exciting movement. Jack finally escapes capture by diving into the sea.

PAINLESS LOVE (L-KO), Oct. 23.—A two-reel comic featuring Babe Hardy, Billy Armstrong and Peggy Prevost. This opens with some funny stunts in a dentist's shop. Later scenes occur in a wine room and in a big plunge, with a contingent of pretty girls. There is no very definite connecting idea in this, but it will bring at least two good laughs and possibly more.

WHY WORRY? (Star Comedy), Oct. 26.—One of the best of recent Lyons-Moran subjects, with plenty of laughs all through it. Lee appears as Eddie's friend and agrees to arrange matters for the latter's wedding. He plans an elopement, pretending the girl's father is willing, but the old gentleman is not and some surprising results follow. An excellent comedy.

THE SILENT SENTINEL (Western), Oct. 28.—Helen Gibson and L. C. Shumway appear in this two-reel Western story. The plot, which is rather weak, concerns the rivalry of two men over a girl. Several holdups and gun fights are pictured, the action being of a conventional, melodramatic order. The subject is of about average strength.

MAID WANTED (Star Comedy), Oct. 28.—Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran appear in this as two business partners who desire the same maid. Dorothy De Vere appears as the latter. The wives of both men become wildly jealous of the maid and she finally settles matters by eloping with a young soldier. This is an amusing domestic comedy of slight but enjoyable plot.

World Pictures Corporation

THE ROAD TO FRANCE (World Picture), Oct. 14.—A seven-reel subject, written by Harry O. Hoyt and directed by Dell Henderson, with Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley in the cast. The story has some excellent features, but suffers from a series of unconvincing melodramatic situations. These might be cut to advantage. Both the opening reels and the closing reel are full of patriotic appeal and otherwise pleasing. Reviewed at length in last week's issue.

Petrova's Life Story to Be Published.

Coincident with the release on October 15 through First National Exhibitors' Circuit of Madame Petrova's fifth independent picture, "The Panther Woman," arrangements have been made for the publication of the story of her life, which will be syndicated through a large number of prominent newspapers.

Madame Petrova has had a very interesting career both in this country and abroad, and it is believed by the officials of her organization that the syndication of this publicity matter will prove of material benefit to exhibitors throughout the country.

It is also planned to follow a similar procedure with the story of "The Panther Woman," which is a picturization of Gertrude Atherton's well known novel, "Patience Sparhawk and Her Times."

Perret's Second a "Studioless" Film.

An eight-reel motion picture drama produced without the use of a studio is the task Leonce Perret has set for himself in the filming of "Stars of Glory." Naturally there are interior scenes, but those which represent residential quarters will be picturized in real houses, and, as for the other inside views, special sets are being built at the Perret Productions field near Great Neck, L. I. Among them is a ruined French church, its lofty columns shattered by Boche shells, its tottering walls scarred and broken in the bombardment. The facade is a pile of debris, but the side and rear walls hang together, and the high altar stands unmarred. The non-studio feature is said to delight the co-stars, E. K. Lincoln and Dolores Cassinelli, both of whom revel in open-air work.

W. H. Using Patriotic Titles.

W. H. Productions Company advise that in future they will label each series of productions with some patriotic word or phrase in addition to the actual name of the series, and that the recently announced series of Keystones featuring Mabel Normand and Ford Sterling will be known as Liberty Keystones, while the series of two-reel westerns will be called Victory Kay-Bee Western Dramas.

"THE KING OF DIAMONDS"

Vitagraph Presents Harry Morey in an Intensely Dramatic Story of the Man Who Was Caused to Suppose Himself a Leper and the Terrible Revenge He Took.

Cast.

Oliver Bennett.....Harry Morey
Jewel.....Jean Paige
Lucille Bennett.....Betty Blythe
Dr. Emilio Toranno.....George Majeroni

Directed by Paul Scardon.

The Story: Oliver Bennett has been unsuccessful in holding the love of his young wife, Lucille, who has fallen a victim to the wiles of Dr. Toranno. Toranno, knowing that Bennett will not consent to a divorce, administers a mineral poison which causes Bennett to believe himself a leper. He attempts suicide by leaping into the ocean, but the desire for life is too strong, and he keeps afloat until rescued by a passing vessel, which takes him to Africa. There he is befriended by Dr. Sanderson, who is fabulously wealthy through his investments in diamond mines. Sanderson shows Bennett that he has been poisoned, and the latter decides to be revenged. Sanderson dies, leaving half his fortune to Bennett, and the latter returns to his former home, finding his wife married to Toranno. He wrecks the latter's fortune through stock manipulation, and then rouses his jealousy. Too late, he finds that Lucille is the daughter of his benefactor. She has killed herself, and Toranno has followed her into eternity.

Feature Harry Morey as Oliver Bennett and Betty Blythe as Lucille.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Gripping Story of Jealousy, Intrigue and Applied Vengeance.
How an Unfaithful Wife Was Brought to Abject Repentance.
Thirst for Vengeance Becomes Husband's Life Mission.
How a Crooked Doctor Wronged a Wealthy Patient.
Sensational Scenes and Episodes Abound in Photoplay of Vengeance.
Tensely Dramatic Incidents in Sensational Photoplay.

Advertising Angles: Perhaps you can hook up with jewelry stores on this title, using stills as the centre of a display of diamonds.. Have a half-tone made of a face card of the king of diamonds, and work it into your advertising displays, using cards with back printing if you wish a throwaway. Use the leper angle for your selling point in advertising.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Window cards. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Heralds. Slides. Plan book. Press sheet.

Released October 14.

Film Swearing Is Getting Awful.

The latest and most startling use of the expression, "The Beast of Berlin," is found in a telegraphic item from Syracuse, and the speaker on this occasion was no less personage than Chancellor James R. Day, of the Syracuse University. The item in part is as follows:

"If 'the beast of Berlin' should send a note to one of our generals similar to that received from a Turk by Dr. George Parker pleading for mercy, I hope our leader would utter a prayer for him similar to the one Dr. Parker uttered for the Turk. It would be short and sweet: "'Oh, God!——Damn the Kaiser'."

"MR. LOGAN, U. S. A."

William Fox Presents the Original Cowboy-Actor, Tom Mix, in the Story of What Happened When Jimmy Logan Came to Town.

Cast.

Jimmy Logan.....Tom Mix
Suzanne Morton.....Kathleen Connors
Uncle Billy Morton.....Dick La Reno
Jim Crosby .....Charles Le Moyne
Olsen.....Jack W. Dill
Meier, alias J. Alexander Gage...Val Paul
Dolly Dugan.....Maude Emery

Directed by Lynn Reynolds.

The Story: Uncle Billy Morton owns a tungsten mine, an important factor in Government work. Gage, whose real name is Meier, a German propagandist, comes to the mine to foment a strike. Jimmy Logan just blows in with the breeze, but after that he creates his own breeze, and makes life perfectly worthless to Gage by frustrating all his plans. In the end he lands Gage in jail, and leads Uncle Billy's niece to the altar.

Feature Tom Mix as Jimmy Logan and Kathleen Connors as Suzanne Morton.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Dashing Tom Mix in Daring Feats of Horsemanship and Straight Shooting.
Quick Action, Wild Riding, Straight Shooting—and Dashing Tom Mix.
Liveliest of Photoplaying Spiced with Dare-Devil Stunts.
Tingling Romance, Desperate Situations and Sensational Episodes.
Typical Tom Mix Drama with All the Tom Mix Dash and Daring.
There Are Tricks and Tricks with Wild-Riding Tom Mix.

Advertising Angles: Play more upon the reputation of the star than on the story. Tell them that this is a story with a German propagandist, and ask them to try and imagine what Tom Mix can do to such a cur. Tell them to think up all they can, and then come to the theatre and be shown the other half of what happened. And add that it is full of characteristic Tom Mix stunts. If you can swing it, work a teaser campaign with, "Meet Mr. Logan," followed by "Mr. Logan, U. S. A."

Advertising Aids: One, three and six sheets, two styles of each. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Announcement slide. Cuts, mats and press sheets (cuts are made on special order at rate of 20 cents per column; mats and press sheets are mailed gratis).

Released September 8.

"FOR THE FREEDOM OF THE EAST"

Goldwyn Presents Ira M. Lowry's Timely Production with Lady Tsen Mei and Her Hetzwood Company.

Cast.

The Girl.....Lady Tsen Mei
The Viceroy.....Lai Mon Kim
The Spider of Berlin,
Herbert Horton Pattee
The American.....Robert Elliott
The Prince.....Benj. Hendricks, Jr.
The American Anchor in China.Neil Moran

Directed by Ira M. Lowry.

The Story: Princess Tsu overhears her uncle, the Viceroy, plotting with German propagandists to form a Chinese army to support Germany in Russia. She informs the Americans, and Robert Kenyon is given charge of the matter. The princess falls in love with him, and when she learns that he is engaged to a girl back home her jealous rage leads her to tell the Germans. But love of country is greater than her own affair of the heart, and in the end the princess truly works for the freedom of the east from the crushing hand of the Hun.

Feature Lady Tsen Mei as the girl who saved civilization and Robert Elliott as the American.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Introducing to the Screen Pretty Lady Tsen Mei, the World's Only Chinese Star.
The Screen's First and Only Chinese Leading Woman.
Goldwyn Introduces to the Screen a Pretty Chinese Star.
East Is East and West Is West—Here the Twain Meet.
Chinese Girl Becomes World Heroine in Gripping Film Drama.
How a Beautiful Girl Resigned Love to Save China from the Hun.

Advertising Angles: Work this as a novelty propaganda story. In your lobby paste clippings of the Russian situation on a bulletin board headed with the title of the play. Try to hook up with the news in your newspaper space, keeping your headlines up to date. If you are in a small town you may get the editor to follow the cable news with a reader, "See 'For the Freedom of the East' at (house) for the reason why the Prussians are not more successful in Russia." If you cannot do it in the news columns, work it in your own space. Work hard on your display, for this will prove a welcome change from an excess of Western front stories.

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, two three sheets, one six and one 24-sheet. Rotogravure one-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Coming and current slides. Advertising and scene cuts. Photographic line-cut copy for ads. Press book.

"THE SHE DEVIL"

William Fox Presents Theda Bara in the Story of a Woman Who Loved Because She Loved to Be Loved, and with No Thought of What Would Follow.

Cast.

Lolette.....Theda Bara
Maurice Tabor.....Albert Roscoe
Apollo.....Frederick Bond
The Tiger.....George A. McDaniel

Directed by J. Gordon Edwards.

The Story: Lolette is so used to queening it over the men she knows that she becomes infuriated when a French artist, Maurice Tabor, who has painted her picture, refuses to take her back to Paris with him. She tricks a local brigand into stealing money for her wedding present, and then runs away without marrying him. She meets Tabor in Paris, and he shows greater interest in her, but the brigand appears upon the scene, and very nearly finds his revenge. Lolette outwits him, and, with her artist-sweetheart, goes again to Spain. The brigand captures them, and carries them off to his retreat, but Lolette's wit is more than a match for him, and again he loses.

Feature Theda Bara as Lolette and Albert Roscoe as Maurice Tabor.

Program and Advertising Phrases: How a Woman Makes Love, Unmakes It, Breaks It and Makes It All Over Again.
Theda Bara, Queen of Vampires, as a Female Mephistopheles.
The Story of a Love Intrigue with a Spanish Siren.
When the World Was Young and Loves Mated and Married for Love.
Proving That Nothing Is Sharper Than the Tongue of Woman.
Theda Bara, Shining Star of a Passionate, Powerful, Screen-Story.

Advertising Angles: Make the most of the Bara name, and tell that this is a typical Bara story. If you can find any statuettes of Mephisto dress them in fluffy, red paper skirts, and use them as the basis for window displays. You can hire a devil suit from a costumer and send out a street man wearing it, but with skirts over the suit. One of the handbills described in the press book might be used. For a teaser card try, "'The She Devil' will get you if you don't look out." Get them all over town.

Advertising Aids: One, three and six sheets, two styles of each. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Announcement slide. Cuts, mats and press sheets (cuts are made on special order at rate of 20 cents per column; mats and press sheets are mailed gratis).

Released November 10.

"THE PRETENDER"

Triangle Offers a Selected Cast with Bill Desmond in the Rollicking Story of a Discharged Cowboy Who Turned Schoolmaster and Became Sheriff.

Cast.

Bob Baldwin.....Bill Desmond
Dolly Longstreet.....Ethel Fleming
Otheloe Actwell.....Gene Burr
Percival Longstreet.....Jos. Franz
Harold Whiteside.....C. E. Thurston
Seth Higgins.....Graham Pettie
Rev. Harold Upright....Percy Challenger
Erza Hoskish.....Walter Perkins
Hi Newsome.....Joe Singleton

Directed by Cliff Smith.

The Story: Bob Baldwin is fired from the Diamond-K ranch because of his ability to raise several kinds of hell along with the cows. He falls in with Percival Longstreet, who is in despair because he has been thrown from his horse and will not be able to assume his duties as teacher of the Frelo Beanos School. When Bob learns that it means starvation for Percy's sister, Dolly, soon to join her brother, Bob takes the job as Percy's deputy. When she arrives, Dolly helps him. A stranded actor seeks to make trouble for him, but Bob gets him in jail for attempted robbery, and the town decides he will make an even better sheriff, and Bob passes the school along to Percy—but holds fast to Dolly.

Feature Bill Desmond as Bob Baldwin and Ethel Fleming as Dolly Longstreet.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Putting New Methods Into Teaching School Wins Cowboy Renown—and a Bride.

How the Stage and Society Mixed It Up in Lively Western Ways.
Exciting Scenes in Photoplay of Fast-Moving Plot Sequence.
One of the Most Original Themes Ever Introduced to the Screen.
Novel Entertainment Involved in Breezy Western Comedy-Drama.

Advertising Angles: This story is unfortunately titled in that it suggests a well-worn melodramatic theme rather than a fast-moving comedy. Work hard to offset this handicap by putting some of the vivacity of the story into your advertising. Tell how Bob comes to take the school. Poke fun at the stranded actor, and throw similar side lights on the advertising both in newspaper and throwaway work.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Special process art heralds. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Photographs. Slides. Electros and mats. Triangle magazines. Press sheets.

Hugh Maxwell.....Hugh Thompson
Richard De Giles.....John Daly Murphy
Mrs. De Giles.....Marie Wainwright
Ross.....Hugh Jeffrey
Williams.....Bert Tuey
Benjamin Moraud.....John A. Smiley
Katia.....Barbara Winthrop
Detective.....Edward Lawrence

Directed by John Ince.

The Story: Janet Newell leaves her husband, Raoul, whom she discovers to be a crook. Later, Raoul offers her a chance to earn a living honestly by doing detective work. She is to discover the secret hiding place of a certain paper belonging to his friend and held by the aged Richard De Giles in his home. In reality the whole scheme is a plot to acquire the De Giles jewels, and Raoul has another accomplice in the house in the person of Ross, the butler. Janet enters the De Giles home as a companion to Mrs. De Giles, and learns to love Hugh Maxwell, their nephew. She is unwilling to confess her marriage to a scamp. Raoul comes to direct the raid in person, but there is a surprise denouement that paves the way to Janet's happiness.

Feature Olive Tell as Janet Newell and Hugh Thompson as Hugh Maxwell.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Cleverest of "Crook" Dramas Filled with Thrills and Surprise.

Great Detective Story Unravels a Baffling Mystery Plot.
Kate Jordan's Popular Fiction Now Comes to the Screen.
Thrills and Exiting Encounters in Sensational Photoplay.
Ideal Entertainment Found in Gripping Detective Photoplot.

Advertising Angles: Work the star's popularity as usual. You might gain interest in the title by starting a contest for the best list of secret strings, such as corset laces, two strings to her bow, etc. Post the lists on a bulletin when the contest has been decided, which should be the morning of the playing date. Make some capital of the magazine origin of the story.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel. Slide. Heralds. Lobby displays, 8x10 sepia, 11x14 sepia, 22x28 colored. Cuts.

Released October 7.

"HIS BONDED WIFE"

Metro Presents Emmy Wehlen in the Fascinating Story of a Rich Wife and an Impecunious Husband and How Love Straightened All Things Out.

Cast.

Doris Morse.....Emmy Wehlen
Digby Morse.....Frank Currier
Philip Hazard.....Creighton Hale
Tom Lloyd.....John Terry
Kate.....Warda Howard

Directed by Charles J. Brabin.

The Story: Doris Morse wants to be loved for herself alone and not for her father's millions, but when she marries a poor man who insists that she come to him penniless then love started to climb the fire-escape, when, what was poverty to Doris, entered the door. Worse than that, "the other woman" came in with poverty, only she wasn't a rival at all, and Doris was supremely miserable until she became supremely happy, and lived happily ever after.

Feature Emmy Wehlen as Doris Morse and Creighton Hale as Philip Hazard.

Program and Advertising Phrases: How an Heiress, Escaping Fortune Hunters, Found Her Heart's Delight Under Unusual Circumstances.
Gripping Photoplot of Unusual Interest Interpreted by Finished Players.
Metro Presents Popular Fiction in Fascinating Screen Reflections.
How the Daughter of a Copper King Found Happiness Where She Little Expected.
Photoplot of Intense Interest Holds Attention in Gripping Appeal.
Splendid Screen Entertainment Devised in Fascinating Love Story.

Advertising Angles: In addition to playing up the star work the odd angles of this story with such catchphrases as, "How would you like to be poor?" "Would you marry a man your financial inferior?" etc. You can work up an interest in the story, as well as the star, and appeal to those who may not know the star. Use plenty of pictures, and try to get them in store windows.

Advertising Aids: Four styles one-sheet, three three-sheets, two six-sheets, one twenty-four-sheet. Photos. Slides. Music cue sheets. Special heralds. Special hand-colored lobby displays. One, two and three-column ready made advertisements. Scene cuts.

"THE HEART OF RACHAEL"

The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation Presents Bessie Barriscale and a Powerful Supporting Cast in a Screen Version of Kathleen Norris' Absorbing Novel.

Cast.

Rachael.....Bessie Barriscale
Clarence Breckenridge..Herschell Mayall
Billy.....Ella Hall
Warren Gregory.....Herbert Heyes
Magsie Clay.....Gloris Hope
Joe Pickering.....Edward Coxen
Jim.....Ben Alexander

Directed by Howard Hickman.

The Story: Rachel is married to Clarence Breckenridge, a drunkard. She comes to realize that she loves Dr. Gregory, and bravely faces the question. She divorces her husband, and marries Gregory. But Gregory soon seeks livelier companionship, and finds it in the company of Magsie. Rachael offers to divorce her husband, but he will not have it. She seems to be at an impasse, but an injury to her little son, which calls for the professional skill of the man she still loves, solves the question through bringing him to his home again.

Feature Bessie Barriscale as Rachael and Herbert Heyes as Warren Gregory.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Divorce, Its Uses and Abuse, Basis of Great Drama of Domestic Life.
Absorbing Romance Filmed in Skilful Photoplaying.

The Question of Divorce Reflected from Two Absorbing Angles.
Problems of Domestic Happiness Solved in the Divorce Courts.
Parental Love Shown to Be Overpowering When Put to the Test.
Bessie Barriscale Star of the Greatest Photoplay of the Times.

Advertising Angles: In addition to featuring Miss Barriscale, point to the unusual cast in her support. Most all of them have either been starred or featured. For a secondary angle tell of the success of the novel of the same title. Give a brief sketch of the situation, and let the reader guess at the outcome.

Advertising Aids: Two designs each one and three sheets. One six-sheet. Thumbnail and one to three column cuts in electro or mats. Press book.

Released September 30.

"THE DAREDEVIL"

Mutual Presents Gail Kane in the Story of a Girl Who Was Willing to Be a Boy in the Cause of Democracy and Played a Man's Part.

Cast.

Duncan McRae
Lieutenant Bourdon.....Henry Sedley
Patricia Whitworth.....Corinne Uzzell
Paul Von Hintze.....Walter Dowling
"Buzz" Clendenning.....Walter Hayers
Cue Tomlinson.....Mildred Marsh

Directed by Francis Grandon.

The Story: Roberta Carruthers, at her father's death, is left the ward of her uncle, Col. Carruthers. The latter is a woman hater, and is disappointed to find that "Bob" is a girl, for he had already promised his nephew's services to the governor as an interpreter. Roberta assumes her cousin's uniform as Bob defeats a German plot, and assumes a place as commander-in-chief over the willing Governor.

Feature Gail Kane as "Bob" Carruthers and Norman Trevor as Governor William Falkner.

Program and Advertising Phrases: When Nature Declined to Comply with Capricious Demands Brave Heroine Overcomes the Difficulty.
How a Brave Girl Served Her Country in Outwitting Hun Spies.
Dual Personality of Screen Queen Works Wonders in Photoplot.
Gail Kane, in Boy's Clothes, Rivals Her Charming Personality in Skirts.
Novel Method in Photoplaying Makes "The Daredevil" a Sensation.
Thrills and Sensations Abound in Exciting Photoplay.

Advertising Angles: Announce Miss Kane. Hinge most of the advertising appeal on women's services in the war. There is plenty of material here for a string of good advertisements. Win the women with your appeals, and the men must follow.

Advertising Aids: One each one, three and six sheets. Banner unmounted. One, two and three column cuts and mats. Program cover cut. Lobby display, 11x14 and 22x28. Press sheet.

"A PERFECT 36"

Goldwyn Presents the Winsome Star, Mabel Normand, in a Really and Truly Mabel Normand Story—the Sort You Used to Love.

Cast.

Mabel.....Mabel Normand
O. P. Dildock.....Rod La Rocque
Lena.....Flora Zabelle
The Landlady.....Leila Romer
The Constable.....Louis R. Grisel
Sol Manheimer.....Edward Bernard

Directed by Charles Giblyn.

The Story: Mabel is the slavey in a boarding house. Lena, one of the boarders, gives her a dress just before Mabel's fondness for pranks causes her dismissal. She obtains a position as suit saleswoman, but she buys more than she sells, and forgets business entirely when she spies her sweetheart: They go for a swim, and on her return Mabel finds her room robbed and her suit gone. Still in her bathing suit, she goes in search of the constable, but finds that he is in search of her. She is accused of being a hotel thief on the evidence of her gown, which Lena gave her, but Lena tells her it is all a mistake, and that she is the one to be arrested as part of a press agent scheme for a fashionable hotel, and Mabel vows to wear her own clothes in future.

Feature Mabel Normand as Mabel and Rod La Rocque as O. P. Dildock.

Program and Advertising Phrases: A Dive, A Dip and Her Bathing Suit Did the Rest.
All about the Trouble a Bathing Suit Caused.
Her Figure Was Her Fortune—And She Was Rich!
How a Bathing Suit Venus Nabbed a Mystery Lady.
Here's a Picture in Which Clothes Made the Woman.
Brilliant Comedy-Drama of a Girl, a Bathing Suit and a Fortune.

Advertising Angles: Miss Normand made her first real hit in a one-piece bathing suit. Spread the good news that she has gone back to the line of work in which she is most successful, and get so enthused that you rouse your readers to the same frame of mind. The press book offers some good special stunts, but you can get a lot of fun with a wall-paper contest in front of your theatre, contestants to wear overalls and paste three strips accurately.

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, two three sheets, one six and one 24 sheet. Rotogravure one-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Coming and current slides. Advertising and scene cuts. Photographic line-cut copy for ads. Press book. Music one-sheet.

Released October 21.

"SUCH A LITTLE PIRATE"

Jesse L. Lasky Presents Lila Lee in a Story of Dainty Daring Based Upon James Oliver Curwood's "Peggy, the Pirate."

Cast.

Patricia Wolf.....Lila Lee
Obadiah Wolf.....Theodore Roberts
Rory O'Malley.....Harrison Ford
"Bad-Eye," a Sea Dog.....Guy Oliver
Ellory Glendenning.....Forest Seabury
Harold Glendenning.....J. Parks-Jones
Mrs. Glendenning.....Adele Farrington
Sinbad, an Orang-Outang.....By Himself

Directed by George Melford.

The Story: Patricia is the granddaughter of an old salt whose proudest boast is that his ancestors flew the Jolly Roger on the Spanish Main. He has a map of the pirate's hiding place tattooed on his shoulder. They buy an old ship in which to hunt the horde, but the grandfather loses the receipt, and the owner takes the ship for a cruise to save his slacker son from the draft. Patricia and her sweetheart, Rory O'Malley, are aboard, however, and they quell a mutiny, arrest the owner and his son, and discover the treasure just as an opposition expedition, which has captured the grandfather, comes up just in time to be added to the captives.

Feature Lila Lee as Patricia Wolf and Harrison Ford as Rory O'Malley.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Pretty Lila Lee Makes Her Second Screen Appearance as Paramount Star.
Thrilling Story of Pirates Bold and Buried Treasures.
Following a Chart on a Man's Shoulder Leads to Buried Treasures.
Adventures of a Lass Born to the Blood of Buccaneers.
The Screen's Youngest, Prettiest and Most Talented Girl Star.
Lila Lee Star of a Regular Old-Time Pirate Yarn Brought Up to Date.

Advertising Angles: If you had Miss Lee in her first release advertise, "You have cruised with Lila Lee in the 'Make Believes.' Now sail on a treasure hunt on a real ship." Feature the star in your advertising that you may profit by her popularity, and give emphasis to the fact that the plot is taken from a story by James Oliver Curwood, who is more than favorably known to playgoers.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.

Released October 13.

"MY COUSIN"

Adolph Zukor Presents the Star Preeminent, Enrico Caruso, in an Original Story in Which He Assumes a Difficult Dual Role.

Cast.

Mario Nanni, an Artist } ..Enrico Caruso
Cesare Carulli, a Tenor }
Robert Bombardi.....Henry Leone
Rosa Ventura.....Caroline White
Pietro Ventura.....Joseph Ricciardi
Luigi Veddi.....A. G. Corbelle
Secretary.....Bruno Zirato
Ludovico.....Master William Bray

Directed by Edward Jose.

The Story: Mario Nanni, a poor sculptor, is proud of his relationship to Carulli, the famous tenor. He loves Rosa Ventura, the cashier in her father's restaurant, and she returns his love, though her father wishes her to marry Bombardi, who has more money. Relationship to Carulli decides Rosa and she promised to marry Mario. But Carulli comes to the restaurant incognito, and is not recognized by Mario, with whom he refuses to drink wine. It becomes known that he is no other than the famous tenor and Mario's stock drops. He visits the tenor to appeal to him and bungles his mission so badly that he is thrown out, but his talent wins. He has left behind him a bust of Carulli, and the latter comes to "his cousin" to order its completion. Bombardi is left in the cold while Mario and Rosa are betrothed.

Feature: Enrico Caruso in the dual role of Mario Nanni and Cesare Carulli, and Caroline White as Rosa Ventura.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Enrico Caruso, World's Greatest Tenor, Makes His Debut Upon the Screen.
Caruso the Million Dollar Tenor of World Renown.
The Screen Now Presents the World-Famed Italian Tenor.
Famous Italian Tenor Hero of Heart-Gripping Photoplay.
World-Famous Tenor Plays Two Dramatic Roles in Great Photodrama.
Artcraft Presents Enrico Caruso as Its Latest and Greatest Star.

Advertising Angles: As soon as you have contracted for this picture start in to boom it. Announce that you have it booked. Work in with the phonograph stores to boom the Caruso records and if possible borrow a phonograph and some records for the house. Play one record each night and while it is running throw slides on the screen for the picture, and give the phonograph dealer a slide or two. Begin your newspaper campaign at least a week in advance—ten days would be better, and get the name in not less than a ten-line letter. For the first, announce that Caruso will be seen and heard in "I Pagliacci" at your house on a certain date. Reserve the record of that opera for the showing nights and you will have both the opera and the music. Get out a street wagon for this and keep it going during the run. Also use throwaways. Use as many of the six sheets as you can afford or find room for. Have the nerve to cut into your profits a little for the sake of the advertising return this picture will bring you. You can clean up on the second release.

"THE BORDER WIRELESS"

Thomas H. Ince Presents the Virile Star, William S. Hart, in the Story of an Outlaw Whose Patriotism Cleared His Name of Stain.

Cast.

Steve Ransom.....William S. Hart
Elsa Miller.....Wanda Hawley
Herman Brandt.....Chas, Arling
Carl Miller.....James Mason
Frederick Schloss.....E. von Ritzen
Von Helm.....Berthold Sprotte
Esther Meier.....Marcia Manon

Directed by Himself.

The Story: Steve Ransom wars upon the railroad company which robbed his parents of their ranch. His depredations in reprisal bring him outside the pale of the law. He seeks refuge near the Mexican boundary, where he meets Elsa Miller, a telegraph operator, whom he rescues from a band of Mexican bandits. He falls afoul of two Hun spies, and when he goes to enlist the Commandant is warned that he is an outlaw. But Steve prevents the sending of a warning of Pershing's sailing, via Mexico, and for this service the ban is lifted and he is permitted to enlist.

Feature William S. Hart as Steve Ransom, a Bandit, and Wanda Hawley, as Elsa Miller, a Telegrapher.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Here Comes Bill Hart in His Latest and Best Screen Thriller.
Artcraft's Two-Gun Star in Thrilling Drama That Grips and Holds.
Big Bill Hart in Role of Patriotic Bandit Shoots Up Intrigue.
Peerless Star of Two-Gun Photoplaying Scores Greatest Success.
Big Bill Hart Handles Hun Spies the Way He Toys with Two Guns.
Artcraft's Famous Star Cleans Up a Bunch of Spies in Thrilling Style.

Advertising Angles: Use plenty of paper in announcing the new Hart picture, and in your newspaper space tell that he essays a new role, a patriot, who clears his name through services to his country. Hart pictures sell themselves, but, you have to tell where they can be bought, so advertise generously.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.
Released October 6.

"WHATEVER THE COST"

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation Presents Anita King in the Spirited Story of a Smuggler's Daughter and the Vengeance She Took Upon Her Father's Slayer.

Cast.

Jess Farley.....Anita King
John Farley.....Bruce Smith
Uncle Dud.....Charles Dudley
Steve Douglas.....Stanley Pemhroke
"Black Jack" Fanning..Gordon Sackville
Paul Otard.....Patrick Calhoun
Belle .....Corenne Grant

Directed by Robert Ensminger.

The Story: Jess Farley is the daughter of a smuggler, a boyish hoyden who dresses in knickerbockers and never saw herself in women's clothes until she unearths a dress belonging to her dead mother. She attracts the attention of Paul Otard, who seeks to force his unwelcome attentions upon her, but Jess is well able to care for herself. Her father is killed, and to discover his murderer Jess goes into Black Jack's saloon. There she again meets Paul and Steve Douglas, a detective who is searching for the smugglers. She is led to believe that Steve is her father's murderer, but events show Paul to be the guilty man.

Feature Anita King as Jess Farley and Stanley Pembroke as Steve Douglas.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Story of Rugged Life and Combat on Rock-bound New England Coast.
Exciting Details in Screen Story of Lawlessness and Love.
How a Brave Girl Avenged Great Wrongs and Frustrated Villainy.
Crime and Intrigue Pictured in Rugged Story of Whiskey Smuggling.
Baffling a Gang of Smugglers and Bringing Criminals to Justice.
Thrills and Excitement Give Sensational Twists to Photoplaying.

Advertising Angles: Play up Miss King and tell that this is a tense, dramatic story with plenty of action. For the advertising angle use the girl's dilemma when she has reason to believe that the man she loves is her father's slayer.

Advertising Aids: Two designs each one and three-sheets. One six-sheet. Thumbnail and one to three-column cuts in electro or mats. Press book.
Released October 7.

"EVERYBODY'S GIRL"

Vitagraph Presents Alice Joyce in a Charming Story of New York Life Based Upon O. Henry's "Brick Dust Row."

Cast.

Florence .....Alice Joyce
Blinker .....Walter McGrail
Ella .....May Hopkins
Bill .....Percy Standing
Oldport .....W. T. Carleton

Directed by Tom Terriss.

The Story: Florence is a little milliner who shares a room in "Brick Dust Row" with Ella, a fellow worker. It is all the home she has and the girls have to receive their company in the parks because there is no reception room, the millionaire owner of the Row having sublet the parlors. They see no harm in chance acquaintances. Then Florence meets Blinker, and real love comes into her life; but Blinker learns of what to him seems her promiscuous acquaintances and makes it plain that he cannot marry such a woman. There is a fire on the excursion boat on which they are traveling, and Bill, a gun-packing husky, who has constituted himself Florence's champion, saves them both. Then he learns Blinker's attitude, and a visit to the young millionaire owner of the Row shows Blinker that his own greed is basis for Florence's actions and a changed Row is Florence's wedding present.

Feature Alice Joyce as Florence and Walter McGrail as Blinker.

Program and Advertising Phrases: The Late O. Henry's Fascinating Story, "Brick Dust Row," Comes to the Screen.
Vitagraph Presents in Fascinating Screen Drama an O. Henry Story.
Famous American Author Leaves a Lustrous Legacy to the Screen.
Pleasantest of Screen Entertainment Based on O. Henry Story.
Thrills and Surprises Abound in Fascinating Screen Story.
Liveliest of Screen Entertainment in Cleverest O. Henry Story.

Advertising Angles: With a popular star in a story by a genius, this feature should be self-selling. In the country, tell that it is a vivid side light on life in the cities. In the larger places suggest that this might have happened to hundreds of girls in your own town. Work hard on one of these angles, emphasizing star and author.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Window cards. Lobby display, 11x14 and 22x28. Heralds. Slides. Plan book. Press sheet.
Released October 21.

"THE TEMPLE OF DUSK"

Mutual Presents Sessue Hayakawa in His Own Production of a Story of East and West by Frances Marion.

Cast.

Akira.....Sessue Hayakawa
Ruth Dale.....Jane Novak
Adrienne Chester.....Sylvia Bremer
Edward Markham.....Lewis Willoughby
Pembroke Wilson.....Henry Barrows
Blossom.....Mary Jane Irving

Directed by James Young.

The Story: Akira, a young poet of the Samurai clan, loves Ruth Dale, who is his father's ward. Her affections, however, turn to Edward Markham, a man of her own race. Markham soon turns to Adrienne Chester, and Ruth, on her deathbed, gains Akira's promise that he will watch over her motherless daughter, Blossom. Markham marries the Chester girl and returns to America. Akire follows to be near Blossom. Markham surprises his wife with Wilson, and kills the latter. Akira assumes the crime to protect Blossom. He breaks jail when she writes that she is lonesome and is fatally wounded, but faithful to his trust, he goes to the child and enters The Temple of Dusk to meet his great reward.

Feature Sessue Hayakawa as Akira and Jane Novak as Ruth Dale.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Story of Great Love and Final Sacrifice in Living True to an Ideal Devotion.
Greatest of Japanese Actors in Gripping Story of Sacrifice.
Shouldering the Crime of Another to Protect an Ideal.
Sensational Surprises in the Unfolding of Gripping Photoplot.
Photoplay of Deep Interest Typifying Oriental Ideals and Devotion.
Devotion to an Ideal Forms Basis of Sensational Photoplot.

Advertising Angles: Play the star's name and portrait for the chief appeal, but for a side angle announce the story is by the author of Miss Pickford's late plays. The story contains a real human appeal. Get the chief appeal into the newspaper work. Work hard on the story, which is stronger than his recent productions.

Advertising Aids: One each one, three and six sheets. Banner unmounted. One, two and three column cuts and mats. Program cover cut. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Press sheet.
Released October 20.

"MRS. LEFFINGWELL'S BOOTS"

Lewis J. Selznick Presents Constance Talmadge in the Sprightly Story of the Trouble Caused by Two Pairs of Slippers.

Mrs. Leffingwell.....Constance Talmadge
Mr. Leffingwell.....Harrison Ford
Walter Huntley.....George Fisher
Aleck Brown.....Fred Goodwins
Wilhelmina.....Mercedes Temple
Mrs. Tom Brown.....Vera Doria
Mr. Tom Brown.....Herbert Prior
Mabel Brown.....Julia Faye

Directed by Walter Edwards.

The Story: Mrs. Leffingwell owns a pair of slippers of a marked design. She does not know that Huntley has purchased a pair for his fiancee, Mabel, and has given them to the maid when Mabel breaks her engagement. Leffingwell sees a woman in Huntley's room trying on a pair of slippers that he thinks are his wife's. Huntley's reputation is none too good where women are concerned, and a divorce nearly results. Later his wife spends a night with friends. Leffingwell learns that Huntley is also there and makes his way thither through a storm. But it is worth the trip, for the mystery of the boots is explained.

Feature Constance Talmadge as Mrs. Leffingwell and Harrison Ford as Mr. Leffingwell.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Constance Talmadge Returns as Star of World-Famous Stage Story.
Constance Talmadge, Beautiful Screen Star of Famous Stage Comedy.

How a Pretty Pair of Slippers Brought Forth Comedy Situations.
Photoplay for Husbands Who Are Suspicious of Wifey's Footwear.

Advertising Angles: Work with the shoe stores for special displays of fancy slippers with a set of stills for an attractor. If you cannot wake them up, you should at least get a spaee for a eard. In your newspaper work tell that this is a play by Augustus Thomas which enjoyed success on the spoken stage. For a side angle announee it as a play for suspieious husbands. You might get out a throwaway with "For suspicious husbands only" as the only display lines, the rest running in a ten or twelve-point type.

Advertising Aids: Two one-sheets, two three-sheets, one six-sheet, one 24-sheet. Window cards, 14x21. Heralds. Lobby display. Photographs, 8x10, 11x14, 22x28. Remember Belgium

YOU can floor an Uhlan with lead, but only gold can floor Berlin—the gold of a world aroused.

You can hit the Hun the hardest by putting every possible dollar into this critical bond issue. Make it your business to see that every man and woman in your establishment understands the importance of buying bonds to the limit.

The enemy has developed a world-distribution on brutalities that bear the Berlin shipping-tag. How long shall this obscene commerce in brutality continue?

Your answer is required, now. Your money talks. You can crack Kultur on the head by volunteering more of your money than the Government asks for. You can overwhelm the mad Wolf of Wilhelmstrasse with the crushing wrath of billions.

How long do you want to receive news of U-boat sinkings, casualty lists, and maimed sons, marked F. O. B. Berlin?

Gentlemen, your answer?

Put your answer in writing—on a check. Now is the time to hurl Wilhelm II against the fence, and make him face a firing squad of 100,000,000 Americans—with dollars for bullets.

Sure Fire Helps to Success

The CHALMERS PUBLISHING CO., publishers of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD and CINE MUNDIAL, the leading trade papers devoted to the Motion Picture Industry, are also publishers of the only library of practical text books dealing with the cinema art adapted to the every-day needs of those already engaged in the business or about to engage in it.

These text books, six in number, have been written by men carefully selected for their proven knowledge of the subjects to be covered, being almost without exception veteran members of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD'S editorial staff; entirely without exception these men are at present actively engaged in the motion picture business—they are not dreamers or theorists.

Each text book has been written to provide real help to the individual who reads it—consistent with the unswerving policy of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD—a genuine "Dedication to Service."

Motion Picture Handbook

for Managers and Operators

By F. H. RICHARDSON

SILVERTIP

FOR DIRECT CURRENT PROJECTION
THE COLUMBIA-SILVERTIP COMBINATION

The Columbia-Silvertip combination gives a light source that fills the bill in every particular. The Silvertip is a quality product that has been tried and tested by the experts of the motion picture industry. It has received the stamp of approval of the best operators in the country and is standard.

The Columbia-Silvertip combination gives:

1. High current carrying capacity. The Silvertip is heavily plated, making it capable of carrying the heavy currents used in projection without harmful heating.

2. A strong, flexible light. The arc can be varied at the will of the operator, according to the density of the film, within a reasonable limit of the rated amperage of the combination used. No two films are of the same density, and, therefore, true artistic presentation of a picture requires a flexible light source.

Note: Silvertips are for direct current only.

FOR ALTERNATING CURRENT PROJECTION

WHITE A. C. SPECIAL CARBONS give a pure white light of high intensity and flickerless illumination. No change of apparatus.

B. D. MURPHY, booker in William Fox's Toronto branch, has compiled the following narrative embodying titles of George Walsh's pictures:

"Jack Spurlock, Prodigal," was full of "Blue Blood and Red," and was "Brave and Bold" as a "Book Agent." He went to "The Island of Desire" (Manhattan) to indulge in "High Finance," and they said that at "Melting Millions" he was "Some Boy."

But when Uncle Sam called upon him to act as "Mediator" in the great scrap, he said, "This Is the Life," and going into it "On the Jump" soon made himself "The Pride of New York" by "Chasing the Kaiser" "On to Berlin" in the "Yankee Way." "The Beast" was compelled to admit "The Kid Is Clever," and John Bull added "I'll Say So!"

HERE'S THE KIND OF TROUBLE YOU ARE LOOKING FOR

"Triple Trouble," Essanay's brand new Charlie Chaplin comedy, is causing all kinds of trouble.

Exhibitors everywhere have had trouble in finding even standing room for the immense crowds thronging to see it.

They have had to take the trouble to listen to their patrons telling them how much they enjoyed it.

They have had extra trouble in counting up their big box office receipts.

Essanay has had telegrams and letters from every part of the country telling of these troubles. Here's just another sample from Eugene Levy, of Levy's Orpheum Theatre, Seattle, Wash., who wired:

"'Triple Trouble' broke our house records. Doing tremendous business and giving satisfaction to our patrons. It's a sure-fire box-office winner."

IS THIS KIND OF TROUBLE WORTH WHILE?

A Love Story of Great Tenderness in

SELECT SP PICTURES

Great Special

In no screen drama yet presented has the beautiful theme of wifely devotion been so nobly presented as in Thomas Dixon's great photoplay, "The One Woman," made from his sensationally popular novel of the same name. Mother love, the love of husband, the love of home, of honor, of a fair name—these are threads interwoven with consummate skill by Reginald Barker in a dramatic fabric in which virile passions and selfish desires strike a harsh but compelling counter note.

"The ONE WOMAN"

by

THOMAS DIXON

Directed by Reginald Barker
Produced by MASTERCRAFT

On these two pages are shown bits from the great production—the "wedding by proclamation" scene in The Temple of Man, above, and, at right, the return of Frank Gordon to the wife who has kept her faith in him and the children who have waited him during his "long journey" to the shores of Free Love. On the page opposite are seen Adda Gleason as Ruth, the Mother; Clara Williams as the Other Woman; and a detail from the thrilling fight between the Banker (Herschel Mayall) and Frank Gordon (Lawson Butt). The children are Mary Jane Irving and Ben Alexander.

No private concern, however rich, however powerful, could get such war pictures as these Government Pictures!

The carefully trained, carefully organized forces of cameramen of United States, France, Great Britain and Italy secure these pictures. They go wherever the soldiers and sailors go, where no civilian is permitted and where the shock of battle is fiercest. Their pictures, authentic, thrilling and history recording, are assembled weekly in one notable and attendance-compelling reel—

"BEYOND THE LAW"

IN SIX PARTS

A beautiful, romantic love story, written by and featuring Emmett Dalton—last of the world's most noted outlaws. Published in the Wide World Magazine from May until September, 1918. The first historical picture ever produced with any of the original characters.

A REAL Western picture, full of appealing human interest, featuring a man who made history before moving pictures were known.

PRODUCERS DECIDE TO CLOSE UP SHOP

Shutting of Theatres in Districts Where Grip Is Spreading Leads National Association Members to Take Action—Reports from Affected Communities

BECAUSE of the deplorable epidemic of influenza that has gripped the entire country, even unto its most remote corners, the clock of the motion picture industry has been stopped as of October 14. This decision was reached at a series of meetings held by members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry in this city during the past week.

Friday it was finally decided to abandon production as far as possible, stop the release of all new feature subjects and confine exchange activities to the immediate circulation of serials and news weeklies. In territory where theatres are still open exchanges are depending upon features already in stock to keep the showmen supplied. This supply will make available pictures that are suitable for "repeats," and will afford theatre managers access to pictures they have never played.

In the business section of this week's issue of the World will be found a page bearing the authorized announcement, signed by the participating organizations. It will be observed that scores of firms who circulate features on state rights are not numbered among the signers of the N. A. M. P. I. announcement, and this supply of features will be ready for distributions where exhibitors cannot find their regular sources sufficiently productive.

In handling the situation among exchanges, in the main offices and where pictures are produced it is understood that each organization will deal with its own problems. Some of the main offices are reducing their forces either by immediate discharges or reductions in salaries. Other firms have made no move in the direction of curtailments in their headquarters staff. As each branch will presumably be left to handle its own situation there nothing authoritative can now be made known apart from the general determination to furl sail, drop anchor and ride out the storm.

In the Eastern studios and factories various conditions exist thus early in the first week of the shut-down. Some factories are tightly closed; others are not as yet affected. The same applies to studios. Our information from Los Angeles indicates almost an absolute shut-down save in the matter of productions actually under way.

It is believed that productions now being made will be finished, but nothing new will be started anywhere until November 9 unless the great, good fortune shall come before then, when the epidemic may be halted and conditions returned to normal. Certainly it is a fact that just as soon as the storm shall pass producers, distributors, exhibitors and every interested associated with the moving picture industry will jump into action with renewed vigor.

As for the exhibitor who has been forced to close here will be a good time to apply soap and water, fresh paint and "slick up a bit" in order that theatres may be fresh and clean to welcome the crowds who will surely flock back to the theatres, eager to be entertained. In the following paragraphs we present a general idea of the situation created throughout the country by the scourge of influenza.

Victory Dinner Postponed.

Because of the prevalence and spread of Spanish influenza the joint committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., heeded the suggestion that the Victory Banquet, arranged for Friday evening, Oct. 11, at the Hotel Astor, New York City, be postponed to a future date, to be announced at the earliest moment.

Hundreds of Texas Shows Closed.

With hundreds of motion picture shows closed in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas owing to Spanish influenza the motion picture business in this section of the country has received a serious setback both from the exhibition and the film exchange standpoint. Motion picture exhibitors and film men are optimistic that the condition will be merely temporary.

Spanish influenza spread pretty generally through the Southwest during early October. Liberty theatres at the various cantonments and army camps have been closed. Most of the army posts are under quarantine, and in a few instances where posts are not quarantined soldiers are forbidden to attend theatres and managers have been instructed not to admit men in uniform.

Camps under quarantine rules so far as motion pictures are concerned include Bowie, at Forth Worth; Camp Pike, at Little Rock, Ark.; Fort Bliss, El Paso; Camp Travis, San Antonio; Camp Logan, Houston; Fort Sill, Okla.; and many flying fields and smaller training camps.

In Dallas, where there are three military camps, two are under quarantine. Love Field and the great aviation repair depot are quarantined. At Camp Dick, the aviation officers concentration camp, no quarantine has been ordered, and cadets and officers may attend theatres at will. It is not likely that Dallas theatres will be closed since city authorities believe the situation to be well in hand.

Among cities at which theatres have been ordered closed are El Paso, Orange, Marfa, Rockport, Whitesboro, Denison, Lawton, Okla.; Hot Springs, Ark.; Prescott, Ark.; Medicine Park, Okla., and Wilburton. Okla.

Northern Ohio Closing.

Theatres in many northern Ohio towns are being closed to prevent the spread of Spanish influenza. Mansfield, Ashland, Tiffin, Alliance, Wooster and Cambridge are included.

Cincinnati Shuts Down October 5.

Adopting the wise policy of the ounce of prevention, and for the purpose of preventing an epidemic of Spanish influenza before the disease acquired a foothold in the vicinity of Cincinnati, local authorities have ordered the closing of all places where the public assembles in numbers. This step was taken on Saturday, Oct. 5, when a considerable number of cases of influenza were discovered; and while many cities have waited until the disease was epidemic before taking this step, it was considered in Cincinnati much better to do everything possible to stop the spread of the disease before it reached a stage virtually impossible to combat.

The action of practically every city and town in the vicinity of Cincinnati in taking steps similar to that of the larger city against the spread of influenza, by ordering the closing of all theatres, churches, schools, and other places where larger number of persons gather, was simultaneous with that of Cincinnati, and will undoubtedly aid materially in keeping down the ravages of the disease. All of the suburban cities on the Ohio side of the river around Cincinnati, including Norwood, Elmwood, Lockland, St. Bernard and Wyoming, ordered the churches, theatres and schools closed, and Covington and Newport, as well as the other Kentucky towns on the other side, took the same action immediately, ordering the city and county police authorities to enforce the measure.

At a meeting of the Hamilton (Ohio) Board of Health, with the mayor and other city officials present, a resolution was passed on the evening of October 5 directing the closing of the theatres, schools, churches and other places of public gathering, in order to prevent the spread of influenza.

Michigan Theatremen Aid Authorities.

Michigan city health officers in conference at Lansing, Oct. 8, which was attended by a number of theatre owners, decided to start an educational campaign to teach people how to avoid Spanish influenza. The theatre owners present assured the state authorities of their fullest co-operation, speaking not only for themselves but for the entire industry in the state. It was frankly admitted that for the present there was no need for drastic measures to close public meeting halls, as has happened in other states. Outside of Camp Custer, which is located at Battle Creek, there are only two cities in which the epidemic is at all serious—Jackson and Battle Creek, and it is possible—although not definitely decided at the time of writing—that the theatre there will be closed and other public gatherings prevented until the crisis has passed. In other places throughout the state the closing of theatres will be left to the local health authorities. Many cities have had no cases at all of the epidemic. In Detroit there have been few cases and the situation is not serious. Grand Rapids, the second largest city in the state, has few cases, while in Mt. Clemens, Flint, Pontiac, Bay City and Muskegon, no cases are reported.

Kentucky Houses Closed.

For the first time in many years the theatres and moving picture houses of Louisville are closed. It is a question as to just when they will open again, but the Spanish influenza has become so serious that all schools and churches have been closed, all public meetings postponed, and a quarantine established at Camp Taylor, under which visitors are not permitted to enter, and the soldiers are restricted to a point where only a few thousand are given leave of absence at any one time. The theatres, schools and churches were closed under orders of the State Board of Health, this order affecting the entire state, not only Louisville.

Fred Dolle, secretary of the Louisville Photoplay Association, stated that every house in the city was closed tightly, and that it would probably be a week or more before they would resume operations. The theatres were closed on Monday, Oct. 7, after having been open on Sunday. No effort of any kind is being made to start operations for the present, as the exhibitors are well aware of the seriousness of conditions, and feel certain that the State Board will allow them to renew operation at the earliest possible date. However, the overhead cost with the houses closed down runs into big figures, and is the source of considerable worry.

Lee Goldberg, of the Big Features Rights Corporation, reported that the theatres of Indiana and Tennessee were in the same fix exactly, and that he understood that similar conditions exist in several adjoining states. This will result in many theatres having more or less confusion with their bookings, from the houses showing first-run down.

Believes Philadelphia Situation Better.

Regarding the influenza epidemic which has crippled the amusement enterprises in Philadelphia during the past two weeks, the following statement was given out by Health Director Krusen, on Tuesday, Oct. 8: "We have the influenza epidemic situation under strong control. The number of new cases reported is still high and the death rate still continues heavy. If the clear, cool weather continues we can look for a gradual decline of the epidemic. At the same time persons must realize that such a decline can only come by observing every precaution and a realization that influenza germs may be carried by convalescent persons for eight or ten days.

Saloons were given permission to allow them to fill prescriptions for whiskey as the druggists had quite some difficulty in keeping a sufficient quantity on hand. Whiskey, it is claimed, was being prescribed by 90 per cent. of the doctors as a remedy and a preventative for influenza.

Authorities Close Theatres in Rochester.

In an effort to stem the tide of Spanish influenza which has slowly but surely been sweeping over Rochester, the city authorities have decreed that all theatres and schools must remain closed until Monday, Oct. 21, or so long thereafter as may appear necessary in the interest of public health. The order closing every theatre in the city went into effect at 11:30 p. m. on Wednesday, Oct. 9, being issued late the previous evening.

Atlanta Theatres Close.

Every motion picture theatre in Atlanta closed its doors without warning Monday afternoon, Oct. 7, at 2 o'clock, in compliance with an unexpected precautionary order, designed to forestall a local Spanish influenza epidemic, issued by the city board of health and later ratified by an emergency ordinance passed by council. The measure bans all public gatherings, including theatres, churches, schools, dances, etc., for a term of sixty days, or until further notice.

While this drastic action came in the nature of a complete surprise, inasmuch as the epidemic has not gained a foothold here, officials of the Atlanta Theatre Managers Association, when called into consultation by the city health authorities a few hours prior to the issuance of the order, gave assurance that every exhibitor in the city would cheerfully suspend operations if the public welfare so demanded.

The situation was foreshadowed by the flood of cancellations which early last week began to pour into local exchanges from all over the southeastern territory. South Carolina exhibitors were apparently the first to be hard hit by the influenza, and on Oct. 7 every theatre in the state was ordered closed by the state board of health. Many Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia exhibitors have closed their doors through action taken by local authorities.

Sam Denbow in Hospital.

Sam Denbow, manager of the Liberty Theatre, Camp Gordon, Georgia, and popular in film circles through his several years service as manager of the World and Fox Atlanta offices, is now a patient at the cantonment base hospital, a victim of the influenza epidemic.

Simultaneously with Monday's health order closing all local theatres a full-page advertisement in the interests of the Fourth Liberty Loan appeared in the daily newspapers, contributed by the Atlanta Theatre Managers' Association and representing every exhibitor in the city.

F. I. L. M. Club Postpones Dinner.

Acquiescing to the wishes of the Board of Health to defer as many public gatherings as possible and a contemplated move on their part to close all theatres and places of public gathering, the F. I. L. M. Club will postpone its dinner dance which was to be held at Reisenwebers, New York City, Saturday, Oct. 19, until a further date.

All Theatres in Indiana Closed.

Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the Indiana State Board of Health, on Wednesday, October 9, issued an order authorizing the closing of all theatres, schools, churches and public places in Indiana until at least midnight, October 20. The order was intended to replace a somewhat less stringent one issued two days before in Indianapolis and some of the other cities in which the influenza was spreading rapidly.

In some of the cities in Indiana outside of Indianapolis which have not yet reported many cases of influenza, exhibitors have petitioned the state health authorities to rescind the order, but their appeals have been in vain. However, the board has explained that it issued the order because of the grave danger of the disease spreading and expects the orders to be obeyed until the danger is passed.

About sixty motion picture theatres in Indianapolis are affected by the board's order. The majority of exhibitors are keeping all the employes they possibly can on the payroll until the order is raised. About fifteen theatres are affected in Evansville, and about twenty in Terre Haute, South Bend and Fort Wayne.

In a number of instances in Indianapolis, and in some of the other large cities in the state, the theatre owners have made the best of the closing order by using the period as a time to remodel, redecorate or improve their theatres.

Business at Standstill in Charlotte.

Business on Film Row in Charlotte, N. C., for the past three weeks has been almost at a standstill, the chief occupation of the exchanges being toward chasing down and calling in many films on circuit through the influenza scourged sections where all theatres have been closed. Films have arrived in towns which were closed, being held at the express offices many days before finally instructions were received as to their disposition.

There is not a single first-run account handled out of any Charlotte exchange but what has been closed by the epidemic, and only among the smallest villages and isolated places where the epidemic has not yet extended, is any amusement business being carried on. New releases come in with regularity, only to be shelved without even a single run, and the Government Liberty Loan films which the exchanges had pledged to work solid during the campaign remain on the shelves of the exchanges untouched.

More Canadian Theatres Close.

The inroads of Spanish influenza in the Maritime Provinces are increasing each day. Edmonton, St. Stephen, St. George, St. Andrews, Bridgetown, Bridgewater, Liverpool, and all of Cape Breton except Glace Bay are closed. Halifax, and now St. John, have been added to the list, as St. John theatres were ordered closed October 11. This means the closing of ten theatres in St. John and all the houses throughout the Province also.

Theatres Close in the Carolinas.

With the opening of the week of October 9 it was announced that every town in the States of North and South Carolina of ten thousand inhabitants or larger had closed their theatres account of the scourge of influenza. In North Carolina, the process of closing the theatres of the State was through individual orders of the various municipalities, Wilmington leading the way when the Board of Health ordered all theatres closed early in the afternoon of September 27. Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Durham, Greensboro, and other important theatres soon followed, later advices telling of the closing of theatres in almost every town in the State.

In South Carolina, the matter was made a State-wide move, with the State Board of Health taking the initiative, closing all theatres in the State on October 9 for an indefinite period. Over in Virginia, Norfolk, Petersburg, Richmond, Newport News, and other principal cities theatres have been closed since early in October with small likelihood of early opening.

Scourge Closes Maryland Theatres.

Due to the epidemic of influenza which is raging in Baltimore, Dr. John D. Blake, Commissioner of Health of Baltimore City, found it had become necessary on Tuesday afternoon, October 8, to issue an order closing all theatres, public assembly and dance halls, and of all public, private and parochial schools. In issuing this order, Dr. Blake acted on the request of Surgeon-General Rupert Blue, of the United States Public Health Service, and the local health officers throughout the State may take similar action.

The theatres, as well as other places of public assemblage, that have been ordered closed in the various cities, as follows: Cumberland, Md., October 4; Frostburg, Md.; Princess Anne, Md.; Salisbury, Md.; Laurel, Del., October 3; Seaford, Del., October 5; York, Pa.; Waynesboro, Pa., October 4; Federalsburg, Md.; Fredericksburg, Va.; Norfolk, Va.; Petersburg, Va.

Iowa in Grip of Influenza.

Spanish influenza has Iowa in its grip, and the result is the closing of more than one hundred of the larger picture theatres. All houses in Des Moines closed on six hours' notice. In the other larger Iowa towns, such as Sioux City, Cedar Rapids, Waterloo, Keokuk, Iowa City, Burlington, Fort Madison, Fort Dodge, Marshalltown, Mason City and Dubuque, the lid has been clamped on tight. The distribution of films is practically demoralized. Circuits are broken up, although individual shipments are being made where no order for discontinuance has been received. Managers Frisch of Universal, Sheridan of Pathe, Garland of Yale and LiBeau of Paramount are doing their utmost to keep things moving so as not to disappoint the smaller towns which have not come under the ban. The closing of the picture theatres has been accompanied with the discontinuance of all public assemblages. Churches, ten-cent stores, schools, dances and even football games and out-of-door sports have been tabooed. The local quarantine is for ten days at least.

Pennsylvania Men Co-operate.

At a meeting of the Central Managers' Association and allied motion picture and vaudeville interests from all over the state, held in Harrisburg, Pa., Wednesday, October 9, the matter of the present epidemic was discussed and action taken supporting the order of the state department of health in closing theatres and other public places as a matter of precaution and safety. Representatives from various sections of the state and local health departments have taken the situation in hand, and the consensus of opinion among the theatre managers was that as a result of this splendid work the epidemic will soon subside.

Minneapolis Closes.

The epidemic of Spanish influenza, spreading from the East, has invaded the Minneapolis territory and is temporarily paralyzing the moving picture industry of the Northwest. Under an order issued by the city health department forbidding public assemblages of all kinds and closing churches, schools, billiard halls and theatres, all moving picture houses in Minneapolis suspended performances Sunday, October 13. The ban will be effective indefinitely.

Moving picture theatres of Duluth and other Minnesota cities have also been indefinitely closed by similar orders. Cities of North Dakota closed their theatres a week ago on account of the epidemic.

At the present writing St. Paul was the only large city in Minnesota which had taken such drastic action to check the spread of the epidemic.

Toronto Business Light.

No attempt was made by Toronto exhibitors to cut down the quality of their attractions during the early stages of the epidemic of influenza in the Ontario capital when there was the prospect of an order from the medical officer of health to close all places of amusement in the city, and when patronage took a sudden drop in many of the theatres. The situation during the week of October 7 was highly interesting. It was announced by Lieutenant-Colonel J. W. S. McCullough, chief health officer for the Province of Ontario, that there was no intention to order the general closing of theatres in Ontario because the theatres alone were not causing the spread of disease. He blamed overcrowded street cars for the damage and he told the people that there was little or no danger through the theatres providing the theatres were kept well ventilated and no spitting was allowed.

Incidentally, the chief health officer for Ontario issued instructions to the authorities of all centres of the province to the effect that they were not to become panicky nor were they to issue orders right and left at the request of excitable persons. Immediately after this statement had been issued, the authorities of Ingersoll, Ontario, decided to rescind the order of October 1, which required local theatres to close. The Toronto Health Department did order the calling off of all public meetings and conventions on October 11 until further notice.

Los Angeles Closed October 11.

Los Angeles, October 14

All theatres in Los Angeles and neighboring towns were closed October 11 by the health department because of Spanish influenza. Local exhibitors think the shutdown will not last over two weeks. There is no indication that studios will stop productions unless the suspension extends for a long period.

The motion picture Liberty Loan campaign has been interrupted only so far as sales at public meetings are concerned. Chairman Charles Christie says redoubled efforts in behalf of the loan will be made and reports big subscriptions coming in from studios daily The drive has passed the $2,600,000 mark to date, exclusive of sales in theatres and exchanges. Albert Flintom Victim of Influenza Epidemic

ALBERT D. FLINTOM, district manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation at Kansas City, and one of the most successful and best known film men in the United States, died at Kansas City Thursday, October 10, of pneumonia following an attack of Spanish influenza. He was ill just a few days, having contracted influenza in St. Louis while on a business trip to that city.

The name of Albert D. Flintom has been one to conjure with among all men connected with the film industry in the Middle West for more than a decade. He was a wonderful organizer and a master salesman and executive, as well as a keen judge of box-office values, an expert in raw stock and in all the manifold details connected with the big district distributing organization of which he was the head.

Born in Lawrence, Kan., about forty-eight years ago, Mr. Flintom was a successful banker in that city and Kansas City until, about eleven years ago, discerning the tremendous possibilities which lay in motion pictures, he embarked in the business. Prior to 1912 he was at the head of the Yale Film Company and other film enterprises and was also connected with the General Film Company. With the inception of the Famous Players-Lasky Film Company in that year he started handling its product on a state rights basis. He later became a franchise holder of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, and with the organization of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation he became a stockholder, and was appointed district manager.

In the exchanges of his district—Kansas City, St. Louis, Des Moines and Omaha—he had the reputation of maintaining the highest efficiency.

Mr. Flintom is survived by his wife and a son, who is a lieutenant in the Marine Corps, and has been serving in France for the past year; also by an adopted daughter. Like so many men who have been markedly successful in business, he had a hobby, and that was the raising of pure-bred cattle, two fine farms in Kansas having been maintained by him for that purpose.

AMERICAN EVOLVES NEW SALES PLAN

Samuel S. Hutchinson Has Selected a Flying Squadron of Trained Expert Salesmen

By James S. McQuade.

LAST week, in an interesting interview with Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, Inc., it was learned that he has just effected a new plan of coordinating the sales system of his product with that which governs his producing forces. This plan, he believes, will result in a greater popularity of "Flying A" pictures than has heretofore been attained. He is impressed that plans which has been maturing for a number of years are now on the threshold of fruition, and that ideals long cherished are about to be realized.

Mr. Hutchinson dwelt on his new sales plan as follows:

"As you know, months ago we advertised that we were prepared to pay anywhere from $1,000 to $25,000 each for stories suitable for presentation in film form. That was but the cornerstone of the foundation for the structure which we have since erected. The stories were the first unit of our plan, but only one of many units. The stars and directors we had were known quantities of established reputation. When the question of the stories had been settled we knew we had made a good beginning.

"Many of the foremost writers in America—authors of books that are classed among the best sellers, magazine writers of note and professional scenario writers—all submitted manuscripts for our approval. We went over the material and chose only the best. We had ample opportunity to exercise discretion, for you would scarcely believe if I told you what a quantity of material was at hand to choose from. Already our plans called for a series of eight productions, featuring each of our three stars—Mary Miles Minter, William Russell and Margarita Fisher. With eight productions by Minter, eight by Russell and eight by Fisher we provided for the release of twenty-four subjects at least, which carry us along quite a way into the future.

Twelve Subjects Are Completed.

"Before I left Santa Barbara about three weeks ago I had personally seen twelve of these subjects completed and ready for distribution, while four or five more were in production and far enough along so that we could judge of their merit. All of these new American "Flying A" pictures are of superfeature quality.

"But the production end of our plan was but one factor in the big whole which we have long been looking forward to. The sales end is just as important. In the past American subjects have been marketed or distributed by some organization outside our own and we have been handicapped in the control of any specific sales policy. All that is changed now. As the chief executive of the American Film Company I now am able to control the sales plans just as I have control of the production work. The salesmen who are representing the American Film Company to exhibitors of Pathe exchanges all over the country are all in the direct employ of the American, and report direct to us every day. We thus have our hand on the exhibitor's pulse every day in the year and through him on the pulse of the public.

"Our new intensive selling plan is now in operation. It is controlled from our executive offices here in Chicago, and is in brief an organization of 100 per cent. salesmen, all experts in their line, a sort of flying squadron of specialists. They do not use a line of sales talk that at best can be called nothing but persiflage or buncombe. They do not attempt to "bunk" the exhibitor. They talk facts to him.

S. S. Hutchinson.

Will Advertise in Daily Press.

"We expect to spend considerable sums advertising these new features to the exhibitors and the public through the daily newspapers. We expect to sell the pictures to the public for the exhibitor—in co-operation with him I had better say, for our newspaper advertising will also carry the names of the theatres at which our productions can be found. Every exhibitor realizes the importance of advertising. This is proved by the fact that certain exhibitors right here in Chicago are spending $10,000 to $15,000 a year in a single paper to advertise their theatres.

"We have the facilities to make a full year's output of pictures," said Mr. Hutchinson at this point, "but to do so would be scarcely wise in several respects. Take, for instance, the item of costuming. Being mere men we may not ourselves appreciate this to the full, but any of our feminine patrons of the theatre will tell you it either makes or mars a picture if the frocks worn by the star are not in keeping with the times. By keeping only about three months in advance I believe we can avoid this error."

"What are the possibilities of your adding new stars to your organization?" was asked Mr. Hutchinson.

"We believe that to make super-pictures of known drawing power with our three stars, varying their productions sufficiently to keep interest alive, and to exploit properly these stars in accord with their merit, constitutes a better plan than endeavoring to make a large number of productions of a mediocre sort and then try to put this mediocre stuff over on the exhibitor. We are, however, watching for stars of real merit and drawing power who can fulfill the demands of the exhibitor and the public, but we shall not attempt to exploit any unknown stars or try any experiments at the expense of the exhibitor."

Stage Women's War Relief to Make Series of Pictures

SO great has the call of humanity in distress been made upon the Stage Women's War Relief since the war started that in order to meet these ever-growing demands it has added to the already extensive organization a division of films, with offices to handle this division in the Candler Building, New York.

Much has been written in the press of the activities of the Stage Women's War Relief and the wonderful work the organization has been doing. It ranks as third of the societies in usefulness to the Government, and enrolls nearly fifteen thousand members, who comprise the women identified with all branches of the theatrical world, and all are devoting every minute of their spare time toward war relief work.

The organization, by its ceaseless effort to be helpful in the war, has, by the work of the members' own hands, the gift of their talents and their instant readiness to supply with the entire absence of red tape any demand that is made upon them, whether it be from the despatching of a group of entertainers to a hospital or camp, or a case of dressings to Armenia. They send away weekly an average of 2,500 surgical dressings, 600 hospital supplies, 300 kits, 900 baby garments, 500 parcels of renovated clothes, 164 knitted articles, 50 wind-proof vests and 16,000 cigarettes. Twenty-five free entertainments are sent to camps and hospitals weekly. Through the service house in New York they offer sleeping accommodations for ninety men, and entertain an average of 300 boys in the service daily. At the present time there are six branches operating throughout the United States. Added to this checks go out weekly to the needy families of the boys now in service over there.

It is in order to enlarge the scope and to keep the exchequer full that the division of films was created.

The plans for this branch were formulated by John W. Semler. Upon the adoption of the plans the organization prevailed upon him to act as director for the division, which he has accepted. Mr. Semler will conduct the production and distribution of the pictures, which will be a series of two-reel subjects from the pens of authors of the highest standard, and enacted by players whose names are known throughout the entire country.

The first story of the series is nearing completion, and has as its stars Maclyn Arbuckle and Miss Percy Haswell.

This first story is from the pen of Charles Hopkins Adams.

The art titles for these pictures will be by James Montgomery Flagg. The first of the series is figured to be released on or about November first.

ERA OF SPECIAL PRODUCTIONS HERE

So Declare Independent Exchangemen Who Came to Town to See "The Kaiser's Finish"

NEGOTIATIONS with state rights buyers for territorial rights on "The Kaiser's Finish," the eight-part special production made by S. L. Warner, have brought to light many interesting points in connection with this branch of the industry, according to A. Warner, who is in charge of sales for the new "Kaiser" film.

Nearly a score of buyers were in New York last week to review the production, with the result that a number of additional territories were sold, and temporary options were taken on several more. These independent exchangemen, according to Mr. Warner, expressed themselves freely on general conditions in their respective territories, with special reference to the demand for pictures possessing a war atmosphere.

Summed up, they contend that the era of big, special productions is here; that extended runs are becoming commonplace today, where a year ago they were the exception; that the era of super-special features has done more to enliven the independent branch of the industry than anything else; that the big features are serving a splendid purpose in educating the smaller exhibitors, particularly in isolated sections, in the principles of retail merchandising of motion pictures, and that the present timely special war productions are the forerunners of a new type of screen attraction that will create a new booking policy.

"It was extremely interesting," declares Mr. Warner, "to listen to the comment the buyers made about conditions in their localities and the opinions they expressed as to why 'The Kaiser's Finish' would establish records in their respective territories. They all seemed to be agreed on the proposition that the outstanding feature of public demand for motion pictures today is for those that have a distinctly military theme.

"Every one is vitally, personally interested in the war. Thousands upon thousands have relatives and friends in the service. These and countless thousands more are investors in Liberty Bonds, and they all seem to feel a peculiarly personal interest in the conflict. Consequently war pictures appeal to them, according to the buyers with whom I have talked, for the same psychological reason that makes an individual extremely susceptible to flattery, praise or any kind of comment about himself or herself. It is something that has a profound personal flavoring; and, feeling that this war is now their war, they want to know everything about it that they can learn."

According to Mr. Warner's statement of the comments of the buyers with whom he has closed territory for "The Kaiser's Finish" these independent exchange operators are in a more prosperous condition today than they ever have been before, and the reason for this, he states, is the big special productions have paid handsome returns as compared with the net income to them from previous releases of lesser calibre, which was not sufficient to permit of any great expansion in activities.

"Another tribute to the special state rights production," he declared, "is the tendency it has had to impress the smaller exhibitors with its size and importance, which has resulted in much greater exhibitor activity in advertising it locally. Buyers told me they could recount innumerable instances where exhibitors in their territories have booked multiple reel specials and have proceeded to shatter their own precedents of ultra-conservative expenditures in advertising and publicity to help them get back the money they had paid in rental for it."

Former Cameraman Is Now Cleveland Exchange Head

THE appointment of George W. Erdmann as manager of the Cleveland branch of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation reveals the rise of a young man from cameraman to the head of one of the largest film exchanges in the country.

Mr. Erdmann was born into the amusement business at Albany, where he spent the earlier years of his life, during the days when he received his education in the public schools. His father and his uncle for years controlled the musical situation in Albany. They were known as Erdmann & Madden's Band and Orchestra.

Erdmann started in the motion picture business as a producer on a small scale. A Catholic priest brought back a large number of photographs of the Passion Play. These Mr. Erdmann transferred to slides, and for many months they were shown in churches, halls and theatres.

Mr. Erdmann joined the Universal Weekly as a cameraman, and while thus engaged scored many "scoops" and had many thrilling experiences. Among other things, he photographed the riding of the Niagara Falls whirlpool rapids, although washed off the rocks on which he was standing.

Later he joined the forces of the Harry Davis Enterprises at Rochester and Buffalo. Here he got a real insight into the amusement business, which prompted him to open the Elmwood Theatre at Buffalo, N. Y., which he managed for some time.

Mr. Erdmann left this position to join the Universal forces, this time as a special representative under A. A. Schmidt at Buffalo, which position he left to come to Cleveland as manager of the Cleveland Universal exchange.

After leaving Universal Mr. Erdmann became manager of the Cleveland office of the Fox Film Corporation, remaining until he opened an office for the Foursquare. He sold his interests in this to join the Paramount forces as a salesman in the Cleveland territory last July.

DILLARD BACK WITH GENERAL.

A well-known Southern film salesman, T. E. Dillard, has just been appointed manager of the Atlanta exchange of General Film Company. Mr. Dillard is remembered by the trade as a former member of the Atlanta office force of the company, and also as manager of its former Jacksonville exchange. His last connection before coming back to General was with the W. L. Sherry office in Atlanta.

KELLETTE'S LIBERTY LOAN SONG.

John Kellette, assistant to Kenean Buel, one of the William Fox directors, has written a Liberty Loan song which has been officially adopted by the New York Liberty Loan Committee. The name of the song is "If You Can't Go Across with the Doughboys, Oh! Boys Come Across with the Dough!" The words are by James S. Donahue.

FIRST NATIONAL OUTLINES CONDITIONS

Describes the Terms Under Which "Tarzan" Exhibitors May Compete for $1200 in Liberty Bonds

AN advertising and picture presentation competition for exhibitors, to be national in scope and with $1,200 in Liberty Bonds for prizes, is announced by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit as an evidence to the industry in its entirety of the relative efficiency of theatre owners as merchandisers of motion pictures. This offer is to exhibitors who have booked "The Romance of Tarzan" prior to date of the first announcement of contest or who hold contracts for regular First National releases.

The theatres of the country have been divided into four classes according to seating capacity, with the various forms and kinds of possible exhibitor advertising segregated into five sub-divisions, from which the scoring will be done on the basis of a certain number of points for each of these secondary classifications to determine the winners.

To insure absolute impartiality and fairness in the conduct of the competition, which begins immediately and continues until December 30 of this year, each of the leading trade journals has been asked to appoint a member of its staff, preferably some one who is associated with the exhibitor service department, to a position on the board of judges, who will pass upon all entries and score the work of contests in accordance with the rules and regulations prescribed for the competition and make the awards of prizes.

This board of judges will consist of five members, who will be the only individuals vested with any authority in the conduct of the competition. The First National Exhibitors' Circuit offers the prizes, assumes responsibility for the advertising and promotion of the competition itself to exhibitors, but will have no part in judging or passing upon the entries in any way.

"There has always been a great deal of discussion about the ability of exhibitors as advertisers and merchandisers of motion pictures," said an official of the First National. "Manufacturers and producers generally have contended that the tremendous amounts of money they were spending on exhibitor helps have been largely wasted because the theatre owners did not understand the first principles of proper advertising and retail promotion work. This opinion seems to exist more particularly for the smaller exhibitors who operate theatres in towns of from five thousand to twenty-five thousand population. Our own opinion of this allegation does not enter into the matter; but we are going to attempt to prove that exhibitors have as much—if not a great deal more—ability along those lines than they are given credit for.

"The form of the competition is such that it will offer conclusive evidence of the ability of exhibitors in every department of theatre advertising. The board of judges will have five styles of advertising to pass on for theatres of the first and second class and four kinds of advertising for theatres of the third and fourth class. In the first two divisions exhibitors will be credited with points for originality or novelty in the presentation of a production, whereas the last two classifications will not have this department. The reason for this is that the larger houses have facilities for stage decorations, special musical settings, unusual lighting effects and novel interpolations impossible to the smaller houses because of the lack of stage room.

"The basis for judging entries is such that there can be no question of discrimination in favor of the opportunities existing to the benefit of the owners of large theatres in big cities that do not prevail for the proprietors of the smaller houses in country towns. The showman in the small town will be credited with points on advantages peculiarly his own and which do not exist in the same ratio for the theatre man in the large town.

"The competition will afford an illuminating light on the use exhibitors make of the advertising matter, publicity material and general accessories prepared and supplied to them by the manufacturers and distributors. While the manufacturers have been complaining about lack of exhibitor interest in retail advertising for their productions, the exhibitors have been voicing opinions that question the practicability of these same accessories. They declare that the manufacturers do not understand their local advertising and publicity problems, and that for this reason so much of the material is waste. This competition will help to determine to just what extent exhibitors use the ready, prepared material and to what extent they are obliged to alter and change it or improve upon it for their local needs."

The rules governing the competition are few and easy to observe. Entry blanks containing complete information will be mailed out to exhibitors by all First National Exhibitors' Circuit exchanges. In addition they can be obtained from the Exhibitors' Service Department of the Moving Picture World.

According to the regulations for the competition the entries must be made on the form provided and must include a complete file of the copy used for all advertising purposes on "The Romance of Tarzan," whether in newspapers or house organs; copies of all publicity stories published, photographs of lobby displays, brief but accurate descriptions of stunt advertising, whether in publications, lobby arrangement or special outdoor efforts. Each newspaper page, house organ or photograph must have the name of the entrant, his theatre name and address written in the upper left-hand corner.

The entries, when completed and ready for mailing, should be addressed to the Tarzan Editor, First National Exhibitors' Circuit, 6 West Forty-eighth street, New York, from where they will be forwarded to the chairman of the board of judges, who will submit them to his associates for scoring.

To avoid the possibility of a rush of entries toward the close of the contest it is specifically provided, according to the copy of the rules issued by First National, that each competitor must submit his material within ten days after he has completed his season on "The Romance of Tarzan." In this manner the entries will be spaced out over the ninety days and enable the board of judges promptly to acknowledge the receipt of each entry.

Bairnsfather's Comedy To Be Released Shortly

THE Moving Picture World can state on the best of authority that the American exploitation rights on Captain Bruce Bairnsfather's famous play, "The Better 'Ole," have been obtained by a prominent New York motion picture man and that the feature will shortly be released in this country. The rights were secured after intensive bidding, due to the international note of Captain Bairnsfather and his "'Ole Bill" conception. "'Ole Bill" is said to be the one great comedy character produced by the world war. The play of his adventures, entitled "The Better 'Ole," was originally produced in London and developed into one of the big hits of the English stage. The Coburns, New York theatrical producers, have secured the stage rights for the United States.

The reason for the popularity of "The Better 'Ole" is that it is a war story which is nevertheless a cheer-up one. Therefore it becomes the first war feature film of other than a straight dramatic nature. The idea of an out-and-out war picture that creates smiles is admitted throughout the trade to be an oddity.

If the producer's message can be taken at face value "The Better 'Ole" will be excellent material for exhibitors who are anxious to send cheer to those in their communities who are given to gloom through the absence of relatives "Over There." There is no need for this, as 'Ole Bill shows.

Universal Builds Big Loan Theatre.

Men and young women from the headquarters of the Universal distinguished themselves the first week of the loan by doing most of the work of promoting and operating the biggest Liberty Loan Theatre in New York. The structure, the stage of which is an exact replica of the White House front, stands at the entrance of Central Park, at Broadway and Fifty-ninth street..

Funds for the enterprise were largely contributed by the Universal in cooperation with the Liberty Loan Committee of the twenty-sixth precinct.

H. M. Berman, sales manager of Jewel Productions, Inc., and M. Kashin, manager of the Broadway Theatre, shouldered most of the responsibility. Mr. Berman mobilized the working force and directed promotion of the theatre, while Mr. Kashin designed and directed the building work. Before the night was over a total of $30,000 in subscriptions was taken.

Powell Heads Fox in Cleveland.

Charles H. Powell has been made manager of the William Fox Cleveland exchange.

Mr. Powell succeeds Sidney Abel, who has been Cleveland manager for several months. Mr. Abel comes to the Fox home office in New York, to be head of the contract department, in place of Leon J. Bamberger, who recently joined the army.

ORGANIZE TO PRODUCE WAR IN THE AIR

Henry MacRae and S. H. Woodruff Principals in Airplane Propaganda Feature Company

A NEW film producing company known as The Photo Crafts Film Trust, with the Title and Trust Company of Los Angeles holding the trust, has been organized for the purpose of making a big propaganda feature that has a theme based on aerial warfare and the part that branch of the service plays on the battle field today.

Henry McRae and S. H. Woodruff have been placed in charge of the production, Mr. McRae as director-general of the Universal Film Company, one of the pioneers of the motion picture industry, in fact, and is today considered one of the most capable of film directors. Mr. Woodruff is a business man, and has had considerable experience in handling large business organizations.

High officials of the Army have given their approval of the making of the propaganda film. The idea of making a film showing the efficiency, training and development of the air service is credited to Col. H. B. S. Burwell, commanding officer at Rockwell Field, North Island. Other phases of warfare will also be represented, and entire divisions of men, batteries of artillery, sections of cavalry, as well as several squadrons of aviators will be seen in battle action. A very interesting story with a strong human appeal will be interwoven into the action of the film. Preparation for the making of the picture have begun at the Clune studio on Melrose avenue.

Walthall's Last Picture Cut.

Henry Walthall's last picture, "And a Still Small Voice," which he made just before returning to the stage in New York this fall, has been cut and edited by Director Bertram Bracken, of the National Film Corporation. Bracken believes it is the best thing Walthall has done in years.

True Boardman Dies.

True Boardman, who was stricken with nervous prostration several weeks ago, died at Norwalk, Cal., on Sept. 28, and was buried in Glendale on Oct. 1, according to the rites of the B. P. O. E., of which order he was a member.

Boardman, who became known to the motion picture public in his depiction of "Stingaree" in the pictures made by the Kalem company under that brand, has been featured in other productions since that time, his latest characterization being that of "K" in Mary Roberts Rinehart's story of the same name that was produced by Lois Weber under the title of "The Doctor and the Woman."

The actor was reported as recovering two weeks ago, but a relapse of his trouble caused his death. Boardman was 36 years old, and leaves a son and a wife known on the screen as Virginia Eames.

Screen Hermit Found Dead.

Harvey Walter Saddler, aged seventy years, known as John Johnson, screen player of character parts in various west coast studios, was found dead at his home, a lonely cabin on Clayton avenue in Hollywood, on the morning of Sept. 30. Saddler, who was called "the hermit of the screen," fainted at a studio in Hollywood the day before his death, and after having been sent to the Receiving Hospital for treatment, was taken to his home. Letters found in a tin dispatch box revealed the actor's real name and the fact that he has relatives in England.

Helps Returned Soldiers.

Mary Pickford has found another way in which to be patriotic. She has agreed to engage players from the newly organized Returned Soldier-Photoplayers' Association of Hollywood, which is made up of Canadian, French, Italian and American actors who have been fighting men in the present war. These men have been discharged from service because of wounds or other physical disabilities resulting from warfare. Lieut. John Kincaid Pitcairn is president of the association, and Donald Campbell is secretary.

Pacific Not So Mild.

Madlaine Traverse, who came to California just a few days ago from the eastern Fox studios to make pictures for the Fox program at the Hollywood plant, had a narrow escape from drowning at Ocean Park one day last week. Miss Traverse had heard that the waves of the Pacific were mild, and being a good swimmer, she went far out into the water. When the supposedly mild waves began to dash upon her without warning she quickly became submerged and failed to come up again. A man, whose name was not learned, swam to her and succeeded in getting her to shore before she was drowned, but it was two hours before she was able to be brought back to her home.

Jennings Brothers to Begin New Film.

Frank Jennings, one of the noted bandit brothers, has returned to Oklahoma to begin preparations for the production of a new feature in which he and his brother Al are to be starred. Al will follow in a few days, or as soon as the affair of launching the first Jennings feature, "The Lady of the Dugout," is wound up.

The Record Bond Seller.

Little Mary Miles Minter has proved to be the prize Liberty Bond seller so far in the big drive the west coast movie stars are making. In four hours on the very first day of the campaign her sales reached a total of $361,800, and in the evening she added another $155,000 worth of sales to the first figure, making a sum of over half a million dollars worth of bonds to her credit in one day. Miss Minter visited the coast cities and other small towns around Los Angeles.

First Girl Operator in L. A.

Nellie Bly Baker is the first girl to receive her license as a full-fledged motion picture operator in Los Angeles. Miss Baker was the first of a class of fifteen girls learning to operate moving picture projection machines at a school headed by Leo Ryan, member of the Southern California Theatre Owners' Association, to be given a license. Ryan, her instructor, is proud of her achievement.

"Miss Baker is only the start," he says. "There are fifteen more waiting to get their licenses. The girls know electricity and they are artistic. They get plenty of sleep and they don't smoke in the operating booths. They've got a great future before them."

Ryan has a class of twenty-five girls learning the art of running projection machines.

A-Hunting We Will Go.

Hunting seems to have taken the place of fishing during the past week with the movie moguls of Los Angeles. Cliff Smith, director of the Roy Stewart pictures, shot a deer in the mountains of Santa Monica, thereby affording a number of his friends the chance of having an early mess of venison; and T. L. Tally, of Tally's Broadway, bagged a wildcat on Pine Mountain during a Sunday's hunting trip. Mr. Tally saw a deer too, but he was struck with buck ague and let it get away from him.

Grauman's Now Has Tea Room.

Through the courtesy of Sid Grauman, the Stage Women's War Relief opened a tea room in one of the rest rooms of Grauman's Theatre last Saturday afternoon, with a committee of the members in charge, assisted by a number of popular film actresses. A beautiful tea set was donated by Mrs. Oliver Morosco, and tea will now be served both afternoon and evening.

Charles Rush, former assistant to Cliff Smith at Triangle, has gone to Canada, where he is in training for service in the British Army. Rush is an Australian, and intends to be transferred to an Australian contingent when he gets to France.

Bess Meredyth has come down with Spanish influenza—only it is called plain "grip" in California.

Florence Turner, one of the earliest of film stars, is at the Alexandria Hotel, and is in almost daily conference with heads of various studios on the West Coast.

Ora Carew will play with Tom Moore in a new picture for Goldwyn, which is to be filmed at the Triangle studios.

L. L. Lancaster, superintendent of the laboratories at Universal City, has gone to Columbia University to train for a commission in the photographic division of the Signal Corps. "Lannie" was given a farewell blowout by his studio associates before he left.

Lieutenant P. J. Hungate sends a greeting to his friends in Filmland through the Moving Picture World. The lieutenant says that though he is miles away from California he is still in the game. His address is A. P. O. No. 727, American Expeditionary Forces, via New York.

Stephen Fox, scenario writer, late of the William Russell Company, passed through Los Angeles on his way from Camp Bowie, Texas, to the Vancouver Barracks in Oregon last week. Mr. Fox will continue to write scenarios for Russell while in camp.

Cecil B. De Mille returned from Fort Sill, Okla., where he has been in conference with Government officials regarding the making of propaganda pictures.

Gee, but Olive Thomas was glad when the scenes in which she drives the oxen in "Blood Will Tell" were finished! Some contrast to her Ziegfeld Follies work.

Five days after she broke her arm in two places in a downtown store, Lois Weber was back at work in her studio, putting the finishing touches on "Home," the story of a girl who grew too stylish for her own family.

Katherine MacDonald has gone to New York to play in a picture starring Louis Bennison.

Seena Owen will be Harry Carey's leading woman in "Riders of Vengeance."

Walter Hiers, who has supported Madge Kennedy, Billie Burke and others in recent productions, arrived in L. A. a few days ago and will be seen in a coming Dorothy Dalton film.

Allen Forrest, of the American studios at Santa Barbara, has been a vistor in Los Angeles, after a serious illness in a Santa Barbara hospital. Although still an invalid, Forrest expects to be able to return to work in the next Mary Miles Minter picture, in which he is to play the hero's part.

Bobby Harron has been put in Class 2D instead of Class 1 by his district exemption board so long as he is engaged in the occupation of making war and propaganda films. Should he engage in any other occupation, he will be reclassified, he was told.

George E. Morris, former Triangle accountant, is now in the employ of the Universal Film Company.

Richard Gordon Matzene, president of the Matzene Pictures, starring Yorska, the French dramatic actress, returned from New York last week.

Priscilla Dean has received news that Eddie Rickenbacker, American Ace with eighteen enemy planes to his credit, is in a Paris hospital suffering from broken ear drums. Priscilla sympathized by cable upon receipt of his letter.

Ethel Lynn is living in anticipation of the two weeks' vacation she will have late in October.

Charlie Chaplin came back from Catalina Islands long enough to invest $50,000 in Liberty Bonds, then left for San Francisco, to be gone a few days.

Tom Moore has arrived in Los Angeles, and before the first week was out was working on the final scenes of his new Goldwyn picture, "Go West, Young Man," at the Triangle studios.

Charles Ray is working under a new director, Jerome Storm, in "The Dreamy Dub."

George Elwood Jenks, recently of the Triangle scenario staff, has been engaged to write scenarios for the Jesse D. Hampton productions, featuring J. Warren Kerrigan.

Billie Rhodes and her entire company spent several days at the Southern California Fair at Riverside, to make horse-racing scenes for "The Springtime of Youth."

J. H. McCloskey is back at Triangle after having been laid up for ten days, when he landed on his head as he was thrown out of a skidding automobile.

One of the first things Carl Laemmle did upon his arrival at Universal City was to sit through a show of thirty reels of pictures in the studio projection room.

Syn M. De Conde, the French actor who spent two years in the trenches in France and seven months in hospital on account of bayonet wounds, came from New York recently to take part in a May Allison picture called "Thirty Days."

Mary Pickford ate lunch with the Los Angeles Optimists last Thursday and made a speech in behalf of the Fourth Liberty Loan.

EXPLOITS "AMERICA'S ANSWER."

A special committee of the Portland Advertising Club, with W. S. Kirkpatrick as chairman, has had charge of the presentation of "America's Answer," the U. S. Official War Picture, at Portland, Ore. Arrangements were made for eight organization or industrial nights. The opening night, October 6, was called military night, and several thousand soldiers from Vancouver Barracks attended, at the Public Auditorium, through arrangement with Colonel Hill, the commandant. The Multnomah Guard Band and the Boy Scouts paraded, and Mayor George Baker made an address. Following Military Night, the following were given special nights: Fraternal Clubs, Rotary Club, Portland Advertising Club, Progressive Business Men's Club, Portland Realty Board, Industrial Concerns, Patriotic Night.

In keeping with the governmental plan to utilize the war pictures to stimulate the various war industries, a large number of shipworkers from the Willamette Iron & Steel Works, the Columbia River Shipbuilding Company, and the Standifer Construction Corporation have been given an opportunity to see the picture during the engagement.

RUBBERNECKING IN FILMLAND

Los Angeles Correspondent Personally Conducts Our Readers Through the West Coast Studios

By Giebler

THIS has been a busy week in Filmland on the West Coast. In addition to keeping the wheels turning in studio, theatre and exchange the picture people, big, little, old and young, have been helping to keep the home fires burning, and furthering the doctrines of decency and democracy by selling Liberty Bonds.

Every night since the big tank, headquarters for the West Coast players' six million-dollar bond selling campaign, was unveiled in Central Park that big square has been a blaze of lights, a medley of music, a shout of song, speech and oratory. And over all and around all, mingling with the spirit of patriotism and love of country that actuated everyone, was a friendly spirit of competition between the different organizations as to which one could do the most to "carry on" to Berlin and victory.

I went down to the tank early and often. I saw D. W. Griffith pull the unveiling cord; saw Mary Pickford break the bottle of water from Owens River over the side of the tank with the words, "I Christen thee Victory," and cut her hand on the ragged end of the broken bottle.

She did not faint or scream like many a girl would have done, but climbed up on top of the giant structure, grabbed a megaphone, and made a fiery little speech that set the bond buyers rolling up to the counters of the tank in a tide.

Frank Keenan then made his straight-from-the-shoulder talk, and started the bidding for the autographed receipt for the largest single subscription during the drive.

Little Mary sat there in the hot sun all afternoon signing receipts and photographs for bond buyers, except when the snapshot cameras stopped clicking long enough for Wellington Wales, her manager, to fend the fierce and freckling California sun with a big grocery wagon umbrella.

That night I saw fifty directors step along from the Alexandria Hotel to the top of the tank, get introduced to the crowd, and take their places in the booths set here and there in the park, each booth representing one of our Allies, and direct the crowds by arguments and precept into doing their bit by lending their dough to Uncle Sam.

Doug Introduces Bull.

Monday night was "Doug" night. That's what the kids called it. First the Fairbanks propaganda film, "Sic 'Em Sam," was shown, and then when the lights went on Doug was revealed standing on the ramparts—the bulwarks—or whatever it is they call the outer edges of a tank.

"Do you want to see Prussianism, the fellow I just licked in that film?" he yelled.

Most of the crowd said they did.

"Come on up here, Bull," he called, and Bull Montana climbed the tank and stood beside him.

After telling the crowd that Bull didn't like the part he played in the film, and only did it for patriotism's sake, Doug again addressed the crowd.

"Do you want to hear Bull sing?" he cried.

The crowd did, unanimously, this time. And poor Bull, game to the core, began to tune up and get ready to tear off a few chords, when Doug saved the day by saying:

"So do I want to hear Bull sing—but not now. I want to sell bonds now, and for every bond you buy I'll buy another one of the same amount."

That's the way Doug sold bonds, and, as he showed such great ability, I felt it safe to leave him and go out to the Sunset studios, where I made the acquaintance of a young chap named Garson, who I thought was Harry Garson's brother, and who turned out to be his father.

Garson Gets Pep from Pap.

If anybody asks you where Harry Garson gets his steam and pep answer them by taking them out there and showing them that young-old boy who takes care of the publicity and about half a dozen other things around the plant, and still has lots of time to entertain visitors.

Clara Kimball Young made a night scene that night which was very appropriate, because it belonged in a play called "The Road Through the Dark," a scene in a cafe with wonderful atmosphere and a stringed orchestra that kept everybody on their toes.

Jack Holt was playing opposite Miss Young, and Elinor Fair and Henry Woodward, and little Bobby Connelly, John Steppling and Eugenie Besserer, and Elmo Lincoln, of Tarzan fame, were in the cast. Edmund Mortimer was directing, Nat Deverich was assisting, and Arthur Edeson was cinematographing—why don't they call these birds cameramen like they used to and make it easier for poor spellers?

Tuesday night the Garson gang, with Harry in the lead, took charge of the tank. The fact that Miss Young had worked more than half the night before and all of Tuesday on the cafe scenes did not seem to make any difference. She was on hand bright and chipper as you please, and she and Blanche Sweet thrilled and entertained the immense crowd with addresses that elicited much applause and many signatures to the dotted lines of the bond applications.

Seventy thousand dollars all told those girls added to the war chest.

Goes Avisiting the Metroites.

Wednesday I went avisiting out to the Metro studios, which are on Lillian Way, near Santa Monica Boulevard, and just back of the lemon factory. No odious comparisons of a citrus nature should be drawn from the geographical location of this plant, however.

The Metroites were getting ready for their night at the tank, and making two movies, one called "The Spenders," with Bert Lytell and Mary Anderson in the lead, supported by Thomas Jefferson, William V. Mong, Rosemary Theby and Clarence Burton, the villain, and directed by Charles Swickard.

Everybody was working hard but Bert Lytell, and he was kidding two ancient native sons who have small parts in the film—that is, Bert thought he was kidding them, when in reality they were handing him a jolly about whiskers growing twice as fast in California than elsewhere because of the humidity of the atmosphere.

George Baker was just getting ready to make a wedding scene for a comedy-drama called "Thirty Days," when a most touching occurrence occurred.

May Allison was playing the lead, and she was wearing her first wedding gown on the movie or any stage. Can you imagine a girl being in the pictures as long as she has and never being in a wedding scene before? What are the movies coming to, anyway?

At any rate, the gown was a beautiful creation, but when May stepped under the wedding bell it was discovered all at once that it didn't fit.

Bert Lytell and Two Native Sons.

They called in the wardrobe woman She was a wise one, that wardrobe woman.

What Emotional Acting Means.

"I've made many wedding dresses," she said, "and no matter how carefully they are measured they are always too tight around the heart when the ceremony time comes. Surging emotions."

Then she let out a few stitches around May's heart, and all was well.

That night at the tank Vitagraph held sway. William Duncan made a speech that would have taken the roof off if the meeting hadn't been held in a park, and then played his big stunt by going out in the crowd and finding a man from each state in the Union and one for each of the Allies, and getting them all to buy bonds and then having them all lined up and taking moving pictures of them all, with himself representing Scotland.

Bessie Love led the sailor band, and got away with it in fine shape; and she danced around on the top of the tank like a little fairy, and folks out in the crowd said nice things about her and made predictions about her being one of the big comers of the screen.

Antonio Moreno registered big with everybody with his patriotic appeal, and Grace Darmond made a telling little address, but Nell Shipman brought down the park with her "Are you sitting on your hands?" speech.

Thursday saw the Metro and Hampton forces in charge of things, and Bert Lytell making what many people said was the prize talk of the week, and George D. Baker running him a close second, and every member of the studio with big wads of money buying bond for bond as the crowd bought.

Jesse D. Hampton was there with Jack Kerrigan, and someone put up a terrible job on Jack by announcing that he would kiss any one who bought a bond.

John B. Multitude Always Present.

The park was a wonderful place. Old John B. Multitude was there every night, and always at his best—always good-natured and always patriotic. Everybody connected with the tank worked willingly, and at top speed. J. C. Jessen and Charles Christie seemed to be here and there and everywhere, and busy as bees all the time.

Harry Leonhardt was grand Sergeant at Arms and Keeper of the Tank Gate. He never missed a night and he never missed a bet as a bureau of information and general all-around factotum. He took care of lost babies and fed them ice cream cones until their frantic mothers reclaimed them; he was grand little listener to people of the right sort who wanted advice, and had a terrible tin ear for the various cranks and others who tried to butt their way into the place.

There were so many things happened that I hope I didn't miss any of them. I got mixed in some things. For instance, I know it was the Garson night that a woman peeped into the doorway of the tank and took a long look, and then turned away with, "That's the most beautiful star I've ever seen," and all of us who stood around rubbered in, and there sat Clara Kimball Young and Blanche Sweet, and we never knew which of the two she meant. Another of the unsolved "mysteries of the movies."

But I can't for the life of me remember what night it was that Fritzi Brunette recited the verses written for her by Bob Daly called "18 to 45," that shook and thrilled the big crowd and made Bob so glad that he kissed Fritzi right out loud before everybody—but, of course, that is all right, because Bob is her husband, and he told us that she is going to cut out the Fritzi stuff, which was only a stage name, and call herself Dora Daly from now on.

Friday night Al Christie made a big splash with his twenty-five Liberty Blondes, but a detailed description of them will have to go over till next week, because Al and the blondes are almost a whole story in themselves.

Fivescore Machines Fly for Eltinge Production

FOR the first time in the history of aviation one hundred and two two-seated planes were sent away simultaneously at March Field, Riverside, Cal., for a scene in "Over the Rhine," Fred J. Balshofer's big production, which features Julian Eltinge.

The starting signal was given by Sergeant Stevens, who is probably the greatest flier in the United States, and with a cloud of dust the one hundred and two planes taxied off and then rose in the air and flew straight ahead. Several cameras were used, and they were so placed that every plane was caught in flight.

The usual procedure in making a flight with three or four planes is for each one to circle around after taking off, but with one hundred and two in the air at once this was impossible, so it was necessary for each plane to keep straight ahead, and the traffic was so heavy in the air that many of the aviators flew thirty miles before deeming it safe to turn.

Stunt flying for "Over the Rhine" was performed by Sergeant Stevens, who so impressed Mr. Balshofer that a part was written into the story just for the flier, marking the first time that an American army aviator has ever appeared in the cast of a motion picture.

Burdge Becomes Manager of Triangle's New York Branch

THE announcement has just been made that R. D. Burdge has been promoted to the management of the New York Triangle exchange, succeeding Dan Michalove, who has gone South to look after the interests of the S. A. Lynch enterprises. Mr. Brudge was formerly assistant manager of the branch of which he now assumes charge.

The appointment to this responsible position is a result of merit plus hard work which Mr. Burdge has demonstrated during his service for Triangle during the past two years. He started as a salesman in the New Jersey territory, and his first promotion was to the position of special representative attached to the New York exchange, handling the Loew, Fox, Moss, Proctor, Keith and Fiber & Shea circuits of vaudeville and picture theatres.

Mr. Burdge has created many friends among the local exhibitors through his policy of square dealing and his sincerity in their welfare. He is undertaking his new responsibilities with the enthusiasm that has marked his success since he joined the forces of the Triangle Distributing Corporation two years ago, and says that the exhibitors may expect greater activities and bigger things from that concern in the near future.

Frank Beal Now Fox Director.

Frank Beal, one of the veteran directors, has been engaged by William Fox to direct Madlaine Traverse, the new Excel Pictures star, in her first production, "The Danger Zone." By the engagement of Mr. Beal, Mr. Fox now has fifteen directors on his staff, which is said to be one of the largest, if not the largest, group of directors in one company.

Mr. Beal began Monday photographing "The Danger Zone" at Los Angeles.

For more than a score of years he has been prominent in film and stage circles. He began his screen career ten years ago as an actor and director with several of the old companies.

Baltimore's "Picture Sunday" Nets Big Sums for Loan

THE fourth Liberty Loan was given a big boost by the picture theatres of Baltimore on "Moving Picture Sunday," October 6, when, by special permission of Governor Harrington and the police department, many theatres in Baltimore City and the state of Maryland were allowed to open full blast for two performances. Of course, no admission was charged, and the managers and owners gave their services and the use of their houses.

The success with which the movement met is due to a great extent to the action taken by the Maryland Exhibitors' League, of which Frank A. Hornig is president and Louis A. DeHoff is secretary, and the publicity of the newspapers. Mr. DeHoff got out a form letter, which he personally signed and sent to each exhibitor in the league.

Some of the reports which have come in regarding the amount of subscriptions at the various theatres are as follows: Garden, George List, manager; New, L. A. DeHoff, combined, $22,500; Wilson, Guy L. Wonders, $4,500; Grand, Highlandtown, C. B. Councilman, $12,100; Rialto, Arthur B. Price, $5,600; Parkway, Bernard Depkin, Jr., $80,000; Strand, Peabody, Wizard, McHenry, Bernard Depkin, Jr., a good sum.

The reports for the first week of the drive at the theatres in Baltimore using moving pictures as part or all of their program by the Four-Minute Men relative to the amount subscribed at the various theatres are: Maryland, F. C. Schanberger, $381,600; Loew's Hippodrome, George A. McDermitt, $27,100; New, L. A. DeHoff, $23,000; Garden, George List, $14,050; Ford's, $8,000; Nixon's Victoria, $7,250; Grand, $622,150.

The amount of $211,300 was subscribed to the fourth Liberty Loan in a half an hour at a meeting which was held in front of the Maryland Theatre in Oakland under the auspices of the Garrett County Liberty Loan Committee on Tuesday night, October 8. The town has exceeded its quota.

War moving pictures greatly aided the Liberty Loan meeting which was held on Saturday night, October 5, in the hall at Sweetair, Md., under the auspices of the Neighborhood Improvement Association.

New York Greets Bill Hart.

William S. Hart, popular Artcraft star, took New York by storm on October 3 when he appeared in behalf of the fourth Liberty Loan. Mr. Hart opened his tour of eastern cities in connection with the Liberty Loan drive at the subtreasury building, where over 25,000 persons gathered to hear him speak.

On appearance Mr. Hart was greeted with applause lasting five minutes. "Big Bill" soon won the audience with his speech, in which he used such phrases as "Take the Teut out of 'Teuton'" and "It will not be what the Kaiser's 'Gott,' but what he's going to 'get.'" Upon conclusion the audience cheered until the popular Artcraft star appeared for repeated encores.

At the Rialto that evening, simultaneous with the showing of "The Border Wireless," "Big Bill" again made a personal appearance, and long before he arrived the theatre was jammed to capacity, with many disappointed fans waiting outside to catch at least a glimpse of him as he entered the theatre, his appearance having been advertised in advance.

$150,000 Liberty Bonds Sold During Exposition

THE National Motion Picture Exposition, which opened October 5, came to its advertised conclusion Sunday evening, October 13. As an exposition of the motion picture industry the displays, representing only a part of the institutions that are identified with the manufacture and distribution of pictures, served mainly as an adjunct to the Government's contribution. The exposition will be remembered more as a war demonstration than as an exhibition of moving picture interests.

The keynote of the whole affair was the urge of war and the appeal for subscriptions to the Liberty Loan. By every possible means that might be devised to center the attention of visitors upon the Government needs the necessity for bond subscriptions was presented. It is said that during the nine days in which the exposition was open to the public something like $150,000 was subscribed for bonds of the fourth loan.

The exposition started in the face of the influenza epidemic, and as the sessions wore along the danger became more acute. Finally in the latter days, when the captains of the motion picture industry decided to call a halt on all activities for a period of four weeks, this last blow eliminated all hope of a successful outcome.

Farrar Sells $1,200,000 Bonds.

One million two hundred thousand dollars is Geraldine Farrar's record for bond sales in one hour during the Fourth Liberty Loan drive now on. The Goldwyn star raised this amount at a concert Friday night, October 10, given at Carnegie Hall under the auspices of the Liberty Loan Committee of the Millinery, Couturiers, Dressmakers and Allied Trades.

Victory Loan Pictures To Be Shown Four Weeks

THE Victor Loan Committee of the Canadian motion picture industry has completed final plans for the release of the special Victory Loan pictures prepared by various stars during the four weeks starting Monday, October 21. With the completion of these plans it is realized that the presentation of the special pictures in moving picture theatres forms probably the greatest feature of the Fifth Victory Loan Drive. It is true that the Canadian Government attaches considerable importance to the presentation of these short subjects.

Announcement is made that the number of loan pictures to be shown in Canada will reach the total of seventeen and there will be thirty-three prints of each picture, making more than five hundred prints for the nine hundred theatres. Ontario will use almost half of the prints during the four weeks of the campaign and Toronto theatres will screen practically half of the prints allotted to Ontario. On account of the patriotic feature and the fact that the campaign is so short there will not be any exclusive first runs for any theatre and all exchanges and exhibitors have been warned not to permit a single print to remain idle for one day of the campaign. Original booking sheets used by the various exchanges and branches are to be forwarded to Victory Loan Committee to be held as a record of the co-operation extended by the exchanges and theatres and also to serve for reference purposes. The many prints are also Government property and are to be returned to the Government. No exhibitor is to be permitted a repeat booking of any particularly fine Victory Loan picture and the loan releases are to be changed with the regular programs.

The Victory Loan Committee consists of a representative of each Canadian film exchange and is distinct from the official Motion Picture Distribution Committee

HERE'S JOY FOR ILLINOIS SOLDIERS

Films of Relatives, Friends and Sweethearts To Be Shown "Over There" by Christmas Time

A HIGHLY praiseworthy, thoroughly up-to-date and really startling plan has been evolved by the Chicago Herald-Examiner which will enable the fathers and mothers, sweethearts, sisters and brothers of the Chicago boys at the front, at various points on the long battle line in France, to pay the fighting heroes a visit around Christmas time. Thirty years ago such an announcement as this would have led to an immediate investigation of the writer's sanity, but today it can be made without any other feelings than those of pleasure and commendation on the part of the reader. Moving pictures have surmounted the impossible of thirty years ago, and though the boys over there will only have the shadows instead of the real flesh, blood and spirits of their dear ones over here, they will be able to view them in action and in pose just as they have known them at home.

The relatives and friends of the fighters, who have been busy for some time past in selecting gifts which will reach them about Christmas time, are overjoyed at the additional and crowning pleasure which these pictures will bring to the absent ones. Smiles and kisses will be wafted over the broad tracts of land and sea, and the recollections and the joys they will bring to the boys in France are beyond imagination.

The Parents' Association of the 149th Field Artillery (Colonel Reilly's Bucks) arranged a lawn party at the home of Mrs. A. D. Murray, at Wheaton, Ill., Saturday afternoon, October 12, so that the cameramen of Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, who is making the films for the Herald-Examiner, will be able to show them in pictures, in real actions and poses that will make a strong appeal to the fighters, who are hungering for a look at their loved ones.

A meeting had also been called of the Parents' Association of the 122d Artillery (Colonel Foremen's men) for Sunday afternoon, October 13, at the Hotel LaSalle, and it is the intention of the Herald-Examiner not to miss, in any of the pictures taken, a single father, mother, brother, sister, daughter, relative or sweetheart of any of the soldier boys.

The films will be taken in different military units as far as possible so as to make it easier for the soldiers to pick out their relatives and friends. The greatest pains and care will be taken to have the relatives of every Illinois soldier shown in these pictures. They will be easily recognizable, as close-ups will be frequently used.

All arrangements for these pictures have been worked out with the approval of the Government, and great care has been bestowed on the plans so that the films will arrive in France on time. A transport has already been selected to convey the films across the ocean, and when they arrive at port it has been planned that they will be forwarded immediately to their respective destinations near the front.

Illinois Not Hard Hit by the Grip Epidemic

THE grip epidemic has been creating havoc with places of amusement in various sections of the country during the past week, but the only places in Illinois affected by theatre closing are Rockford (Camp Grant), Wilmette, Ottawa and LaSalle. The time of writing this is October 11. The prohibition of all public meetings took effect in Rockford and Wilmette on October 4 and in Ottawa and La Salle on October 10.

In Chicago the epidemic has been less serious, and although rumors were frequent during the week that theatres, churches, saloons and all public meeting places would be closed no official action has been taken, nor is it expected that any action of the kind will be taken unless the epidemic takes a more serious turn. The same course will apply to Illinois cities outside of Chicago with the exceptions already given.

Advice and instructions on how to combat the spread of the disease are being distributed throughout the city. One-sheet poster bulletins for picture theatres and other places of amusement are being placed in the lobbies, and slides and letters instructing people how to protect themselves are being used extensively.

United War Work Campaign Drive Committees Named

Joseph Hopp, president of Chicago Local, Illinois branch, M. P. E. L. of A., who is chairman of the moving picture film committee of the Chicago United War Work drive, has appointed the following exhibitors, owners of the leading picture theatres in the city, as members of that committee: Peter J. Schaefer, Nathan Ascher, Joseph Trinz, William E. Heaney, Sam Katz, H. E. Newell, Henry Von Meeteren, George Hopkinson, Andrew Karsas, Max Hyman, Sam Atkinson, E. B. Rice, Nathan Wolf, Roco Navigato and John Frundt.

The United War Work campaign is being conducted in the interests of the following organizations for the boys at the front: Y. M. C. A., K. of C., Y. W. C. A., Salvation Army, War Camp Community Service, Jewish Welfare Board and the American Library Association.

Some of the biggest sporting events of the country, especially those given at the military camps throughout the country, will be featured in "The Red Triangle," a military feature which the "Y" will put out in the near future to aid the United War Work campaign drive for funds, which will be started early in November. The directors in charge announce that many champions of the mat, the ring, the gridiron and the cinder path will be shown when "The Red Triangle" is screened. It is now being produced by Selig, and every big military camp in the country will be represented.

Slides are now being made under the direction of the film committee referred to, and will be used to advertise "The Red Triangle" in Chicago picture theatres.

North Dakota Exhibitors Move for Sunday Shows

AMUSEMENTS, of Minneapolis, in the issue of October 5, states that there is a strong movement under way in North Dakota at the present time among exhibitors to get permission from the authorities to show moving pictures on Sundays, for the duration of the war. The present state law prohibits public performances of any kind on Sundays.

C. M. Casey, one of the leading officials of the State Council of Defense of North Dakota, is strongly in favor of Sunday picture shows, and he has talked with many leading exhibitors in the State on the matter. As a result the exhibitors have appointed Joe Maitland, of Mandan, and W. R. Dean, of Fargo, to represent them.

It has been estimated that the Government is losing at least $25,000 per month by the enforced closing of picture theatres on Sundays, and, besides, many people are deprived of seeing patriotic productions, as Sunday is the only day on which they could see them. As the Government strongly desires that patriotic and propaganda pictures should be widely viewed, it is held by exhibitors in North Dakota that the North Dakota State Council of Defense can exercise strong influence in favor of Sunday shows. Amusements declares that the State Council of Defense leagues are empowered to permit Sunday shows. If so, it would appear that everything rests on the exhibitors of North Dakota as to whether they shall have Sunday shows or not. Let them arrange matters with the State Council of Defense leagues by visting Messrs.

Maitland and Dean with all powers to bring Sunday opening about.

Pathe Officials Visit Chicago.

Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager; Fred C. Quimby, general manager, and Frank Duffy, special representative of Pathe Exchange, Inc., came into the city from New York October 5, and spent most of the day in conference at the Chicago office in the Consumers Building. Mr. Brunet and Mr. Quimby left the same evening for Buffalo, and Mr. Duffy took the Santa Fe for Los Angeles, where he will remain for some time at the Pathe studios.

Paramount Now in New Offices.

The entire office force of Paramount's Chicago office was settled down in the new headquarters, in its own eight-story building, at 845 South Wabash avenue, Monday, October 14.

The executive offices are on the third and fourth floors; the inspection and shipping departments and also the film vaults on the top, or eighth floor; the postal department on the seventh floor; the sixth devoted to storage purposes, and on the fifth floor the publicity department is installed, and also the display room for posters and advertising. The exhibition room also is on this floor.

The Paramount's new offices will be of easy access for exhibitors. Those coming from the South Side can get off at the Twelfth street station and walk three blocks north, while those coming from the North Side can get off at Congress street station and walk three blocks South.

The Grip Favors George K. Spoor.

George K. Spoor, Essanay's president, was among the first of the Chicagoans attacked by the grip. He was confined to his home for over a week, but he has now recovered, although at the time of writing he has not yet been permitted by his physician to resume his office duties. Being myself one of the slightly affected favorites of the malignant germ I tender Mr. Spoor my congratulations.

Select Moves Chicago Office.

Fred C. Aiken, manager of the Chicago office of the Select Pictures Corporation, advises me that he will be in readiness to greet patrons of Select pictures on Monday, October 28, in the new quarters in the Consumers Building. The organization has secured the lease on the quarters vacated by Paramount on the nineteenth floor of the Consumers Building, and extensive renovations will be made. Select's present quarters are on the fourteenth floor of the Consumers Building.

The W. L. Sherry exchange will occupy the office on the fourteenth floor of the Consumers Building when vacated by Select.

Fourth Liberty Loan Soaring.

Peter J. Schaefer, chairman of the Fourth Liberty Loan Committee in Chicago for the department of amusements, advised me on October 9 that up to that time he had secured $800,000 and that the next week he will increase the amount by $1,000,000. This will mean a total of $1,800,000, or $300,000 over the allotment fixed for amusements.

Work in moving picture theatres, in selling bonds to patrons began on Saturday, October 12, and will continue until the close of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign. The postponement of this work until the date mentioned was made in accordance with the wishes of the men higher up in the conduct of the campaign.

"Shoulder Arms" Big Mirth Raiser.

Charles Chaplin's second comedy feature for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, "Shoulder Arms," was given its first trade exhibition in Chicago at Universal's show room in the Consumers' Building, Tuesday, October 9. The show room was jammed and the comedy was greeted with great enthusiasm. Charlie is a soldier in the trenches, fighting the Huns, and he climaxes his war experiences by capturing the Kaiser.

Phillips Commissioned Lieutenant.

Burt G. Phillips, for a long time staff photographer of the publicity department of the Fox Film Corporation, and formerly photographer for several New York newspapers, was notified this week that he has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the Signal Corps of the American Army. Lieutenant Phillips has been ordered to report at once to the commandant at Columbia University for a course of intensive training.

Senate Committee Alters House Theatre Tax Bill

A NUMBER of changes have been made in the revenue bill passed by the House of Representatives by the Senate Finance Committee. Several of these changes referred to the taxes on admission, theatres and films.

The committee has changed the admissions tax from two cents on each ten cents or fraction thereof of the amount paid for admission to one cent for each five cents so paid, and has removed the tax of one cent provided by the House for admissions of seven cents or less. Should this tax be adopted in the measure as finally passed it would mean a tax of one cent on five-cent admissions, two cents on ten-cent tickets, three cents on fifteen-cent tickets, etc., increasing with every five cents. This would result in a loss of considerable revenue to the Government, since a fifteen-cent ticket would pay only a three-cent tax, whereas under the tax provided by the House four cents would be collected.

The tax on tickets sold at places other than the box office of the theatre has also been amended by the committee. The House provided a tax of 15 per cent. of the amount charged for the ticket in excess of the price paid at the box office if less than 50 cents additional, and 30 per cent. of the excess if more than 50 cents. The committee has changed the taxes to 10 per cent. instead of 15 and to 50 per cent. instead of 30.

The tax of 25 per cent. provided by the House for holders of boxes or seats used regularly has been changed by the committee to 20 per cent. so as to make it more nearly conform to the tax on seats sold for individual performances.

The tax on seating capacity has not yet been reached, while that on films has been passed over to be returned to later.

FACTS AND COMMENTS

THE great bulk of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD'S production of papers goes directly to the individual exhibitor on annual subscription. Of the gross circulation of this issue a goodly proportion will go to exhibitors whose theatres are dark because of the epidemic of influenza that is sweeping the country and reaching into even the most remote communities. Every subscriber of THE WORLD will notice that in its number of pages our paper reflects in a temporary measure the conditions that for the moment obtain in the motion picture industry.

Producers and distributors have abandoned operations as of October 15. During the next four weeks no new productions will be started; and none of the newer prints will be circulated. The business pages of THE WORLD indicate the attitude of the captains of the motion picture industry, and, as a part of that industry, THE WORLD is conserving in text matter while giving our readers the full reflection of current news and distribution.

THE WORLD believes that every opportunity to conserve in these times should be taken advantage of, keeping the Government's wish always in mind that conservation must not be carried to an extreme. We feel that it would be unwise to flout the necessity of conservation, in a moment that gives us the chance of keeping pace with the rest of the industry. When the term of retrenchment is at an end THE WORLD will resume the issue of its normal number of pages and will continue as always most fully to represent the trade it was established to serve.

If your house is one of those closed by the influenza, grasp the opportunity to give it an overhauling such as could not have been effected during your busy season. Have the operator go over the projection apparatus, put it in thorough order and make notes of such repair parts and replacements as are necessary; then order those parts. Put a fresh coating on the screen if it needs the coat or will need it in the near future.

If you have been considering new wiring, new switches, transformers, rheostats, motors or a new ventilating system for next summer, get them now. So far as you can obtain labor and material secure them while the house is dark and there is no reason to rush the job.

*

When the epidemic is over your patrons will flock back in increased numbers and a wonderfully busy and profitable season will demand all your resources to meet it. Now is the time to prepare for it.

* * *

THE recent action of the Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information, in regard to the booking price for "America's Answer," would seem to meet any criticisms on the part of exhibitors who in the past have rented Government productions. In fact, the new basis appears to be as equitable as any that might be devised. The schedule was printed in our issue of two weeks ago. Briefly, given a sum representing the average business plus 25 per cent., the rental will be one-third of that amount.

Director Hart seemingly recognizes that the greatest value to the Government lies in the number of persons who see these official films; that in a war for the establishment of democracy throughout the world it is vital that the humblest among us shall be shown specifically what Uncle Sam is doing as his contribution toward the great end. The more fortunately situated have abundant means of attaining this information, but even these may learn much by following the work of the military and naval cameramen. As the situation stands now the clientele of exhibitors in the smallest communities may see these pictures. Director Hart gives the credit for the plan to Dennis J. Sullivan, manager of domestic distribution. We congratulate Mr. Sullivan for his foresight and his broadmindedness.

Film Exhibit at Chemical Exposition Points to Its Increased Use for Advertising Purposes

IT is interesting to note from year to year the films, new and otherwise, used at the various expositions as a means of advertising the product of the individual exhibitor as well as a means of enlightenment to the patrons of the exposition. At the Chemical Exposition held in the Grand Central Palace, New York City, during the last week of September, the following list of moving pictures were shown, which we find after consulting last year's program contain only a few reels of what was used at that time.

Post-Pathe at Rivoli Follows Raindrop.

A pleasing subject charmingly presented is the Pathe-Post number appearing at the Rivoli the week of Sept. 29. This picture entitled "Raindrops" was made in illustration of a poem in which one raindrop goes to see what has become of all the rest. This gives opportunity for many beautiful nature studies, such as waterfalls, rivers, rainstorm scenes, and finally dissolution into the ocean.

Pictograph Takes Poke at Hun Ingenuity.

L. M. Glackens of the Bray Studios, Inc., has succeeded in making a truly amusing, animated cartoon for the 140th release of Pictograph, in which the Kaiser takes an active part. The title of the cartoon is "Von Loon's Non-Capturable Airplane." The drawing shows Von Loon, the hero, putting the finishing touches to his newly designed airplane, which, in addition to being able to fly, has the added advantage of a pair of legs, with which, should it fall to the ground, it can hop out of danger after the manner of the frog.

The inventor invites his lord and master, "Kaiser Bill," to accompany him on the first flight, and with fear and trembling he accepts. Off goes the plane and all is well until the engine begins to miss. This, however, causes no fear in the heart of the brave Von Loon, for he assures his companion that even if they are forced to land, the trusty hind legs of the machine will quickly carry them out of danger.

The machine comes down with a bump right in the centre of "No man's land," and the shot and shell whizz about their heads. No sooner have they reached the ground, however, than the machine's legs come into action and they begin to bounce about in all directions, finally landing in an ammunition dump, which bounces them off the edge of the earth.

Wright Brings Shots of Mexican Politics.

George D. Wright returned to the "good old U. S. A." September 23, with 11,000 feet of "shots" at President Carranza, the Mexican Cabinet and Congress, the Mexican Army, the activities of Ambassador Fletcher, and the recent doings at the Tampico oil fields, all of which will be released by Educational after it has been censored and formally admitted by the American Federal Government.

Mr. Wright's headquarters in New York is the Educational Films Corporation, for which he made his first series of twelve one-reelers, "Mexico To-Day," now in course of distribution. After launching that series last Spring he went back to the Mexican capital and has been working there ever since, with the co-operation of the political authorities and the aid of his veteran cameraman, D. W. Gobbett.

Bruce's "Tale of the Tall Timbers."

There have been many pictures made depicting the details of the lumber industry—we have known before exactly how the thing was done—but never before has there been made a successful effort to visualize it from a dramatic or tragic angle until Robert C. Bruce, in his "Tale of the Tall Timbers" for the Educational Films Corporation of America, tried and was successful. In the felling of the great redwoods of California he saw something more than merely a few men cutting down some trees, and with his photographer, Jesse G. Cills, caught the pathos in the compulsory decease of the monarchs of the forest. The old-fashioned method and the more modern method of dealing with these centuries-old giants is shown in the picture. There are splendid close-ups of the felling of the trees, and a view of the sluice-way where the logs slide down the incline to a shipping point, such as we have never seen before. And on a winding railway through the forest on which we look from a point considerably elevated, train loads of logs are seen passing which later splash helplessly into the river and are carried by the current to the saw mill.

There may be many who will see nothing out of the ordinary in this picture; but there are others who, looking beneath the surface, will discover the tragic tale that the picture has set out to tell.

Official War Review No. 15 (Pathe).

Interesting scenes are pictured in this instalment from the Balkan and Italian fronts. Among the latter are views of tunnels cut through solid ice to permit the troops to march through. The American troops working in camouflage suits is a good feature; also the review of the first Czecho-Slovak troops, building of a pontoon bridge and the views from Chateau Thierry.

Official War Review No. 16 (Pathe).

A fine collection of lively scenes from the Western front. This leads off with pictures of the Italians firing great guns at the Boches; then American troops are shown operating machine guns, one of the best we have seen of this particular work. Comprehensive views of the Portuguese troops in and behind their trenches are included; also British soldiers operating tanks and French cavalrymen on a dash.

"The Far-Flung Battle Line"

This will answer a great many questions which have been asked in the minds of people who wondered about the life and customs of British troops from India. The men are seen mobolizing, being fitted out with new, disinfected clothing, and coming to France. Here they have done very valuable work in pressing the war, particularly behind the lines. Their dances and frolics on arrival are amusing.

"Taking the Terror Out of War."

In addition to the second of the series, "Our Newest Possessions," appearing in the Paramount-Bray Pictograph, the 141st issue of this splendid screen magazine, there has been visualized through scenarios made by the Committee on Public Information how Uncle Sam runs the big Life Insurance Bureau in which the great majority of our fighting men are insured. The picture, which is the third of the "Says Uncle Sam" series, is entitled "Taking the Terror Out of War." It gives a complete history of the bureau from the day Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo issued the first policy up to the present, when nearly every man of the millions now in our fighting forces has become a $10,000 man. It also teaches that Uncle Sam protects his soldiers and their families as no other nation in the world does theirs. "The best insurance at the lowest rate" is his slogan. It provides for the protection of the family in case of death, and a life-long income should the soldier be permanently disabled.

Universal's Offering for This Week.

The Screen Magazine No. 93 for release Oct. 18 contains a number of interesting subjects well presented. These are " Young America in Training," which consists of scenes at Camp Pershing, N. Y.; "Dog Days of the '400,'" which claims to be a page from the book of life of dogs born with a silver spoon in their mouths, and "Making Belgium War Crosses," which is an interesting illustration of what the title implies. "Making My Lady Fair" shows us a bit of fashion, and "Drawing Main Titles" reminds us again of Germany's attempt to preserve optimism in the minds of her people by covering defeat with victory titles. The last subject has an agricultural flavor and acquaints us with the growing and harvesting of apricots.

Dorchester's Strand Theatre a Picture House of Beauty

DORCHESTER, a suburb of Boston, now has a glittering Broadway all its own, agleam and aflare with electricity, reflected and enhanced from new architecture at Upham's Corner, which would grace the metropolis of New York City itself. In the new Strand Theatre, which opens Monday, October 21, Dorchester now has a motion picture house fully worthy of her size and her discriminating population. Upham's Corner is now the site of one of the largest suburban theatres in the country.

The Strand is under the management of the Gordon Circuit of Theatres. As an instance of what patrons may expect, the operating company had arranged for the first showings in Dorchester of Paramount, Artcraft, Fox and Select pictures.

Mr. Gordon states that the Strand is the finest of his affiliated country-wide chain of seventy-six theatres. The project was financed by Luke Mullen. The theatre is beautiful architecturally and very spacious. The orchestra and balcony seat 2,200, and each seat commands a perfect view of the screen. Artistic boxes adorn each side. Beautiful draperies and ornate but tasteful decorations make the theatre completely individual. An expensive organ aids in supplying the proper music.

Dorchester is to be congratulated on the new theatre, and the management feels that many of its steady patrons will come from neighboring Boston suburbs. Conclusive to this end, free parking has been provided for a large number of automobiles.

Recruit Man-Power with Film.

Besides the general entertainment value of the two-reel Official War Film, "Our Bridge of Ships," a specialized use has been found for it in the course of distribution over the country.

In Indianapolis Exchange Manager C. W. McDaniel, of the General Film Company, has secured an arrangement by which the United States Employment Bureau in that district has booked the film for showing in connection with man-power recruiting for shipyards and other industrial plants on Government work. The bureau has engaged the film for a definite period, and from the inspiring character of the subject it is expected it will concentrate attention upon the demand for skilled and patriotic labor in the shipyards and munition plants. Other United States Employment Bureaus are expected to follow this plan for stimulating the workers.

"Our Bridge of Ships" is considered one of the most interesting short-length films produced by the Division of Films.

Manfre, of Omaha, Sees Real Action in France

I EXPECT to go over the top very soon—in fact, almost any day. You remember what I used to tell you in a joking way about what I was going to do to the Germans if I ever got the opportunity. Now I am going to get that chance and, believe me, I feel much more determined in reality than I ever did when I just talked about it. We American boys over here realize that it is up to us to end this misery, and if they all feel like myself, it will be Hell, Heaven, or Home by Christmas."

Thus writes Charles Manfre, former Fox branch manager at Omaha, in a letter to Sidney Meyer, present Fox manager in that city. Manfre, who enlisted shortly after America's entry into the war, wrote the letter in the trenches.

"I have seen some real action," he states. "I am writing this while in the trenches, and just as I started this letter the Huns began firing at some of our aeroplanes that are flying over their lines. Everything can be seen just as plain as if you were standing on Sixteenth and Farnam streets, Omaha, and looking down to where the Burlington Freight Depot stands. Shells from both sides are whistling over my head. I can't express the feelings I had when I first head them. The first night we came here, the Germans gassed us twice and we were under their shell fire nearly all night. It sure was some thrill. Of course, it naturally makes a person feel as though his time had come; but I've got used to it now and I pay about as much attention to German aeroplanes flying over my head and Hun shell fire, as I would pay to an exhibitor when he says he is all booked solid the first time you call on him."

Chicago Manager Division of Films.

R. E. Rickson, who was in charge of the publicity for the War Exposition, recently presented in Chicago by the United States and Allied Governments, has been appointed manager of the Chicago office of the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, which has been opened at 39 La Salle street. The Chicago office will keep in close touch with all activities of the Division of Films in the Middle West.

Gives Morning Show in Kansas City.

A 10.30 matinee performance of "America's Answer," the Government War Film, was given at Convention Hall, Kansas City, Thursday, October 3, and the usual afternoon exhibition canceled, owing to the use of the big hall for a Liberty Loan mass meeting, which was addressed by Colonel Theodore Roosevelt.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Do What You Can.

BECAUSE you cannot do as much advertising as someone else, do not get the idea that you can do nothing at all. Do as much as you can and do it better because you do so little. Lately some exhibitor remarked that he could do all that Ralph Ruffner did if he had the money. We question that statement. Ruffner is not a good advertiser because he has the money. He gets the money because he proved in the past that he was an advertiser who could get returns for the money spent. There was a time he ran a house in a town so small it appears only on the larger maps. That is where he started and where he found himself. He learned there how to get results and get results from small investments of cash and large expenditures of brain. He made thought take the place of money. Now he has the money with which to back up the thought, but that is only because he showed that it paid to let him spend money because he brought back more than a dollar for every hundred cents he spent. If a dollar is spent for advertising and it brings in a dollar and one cent, the investment shows an immediate profit. Most advertisers want to spend a dollar and receive two in return. It can be done sometimes, but not often, and it will bring in nothing unless it is intelligently spent. Intelligent spending means planning to get the best results. It means extra care in making the layout. It means picking the best possible phrase rather than any old sentence. It means work and study. The actual money spent for advertising is but the lesser half of the investment. This money is spent merely to place your argument before the public. You must first have something to say, and you must say it attractively. The other day we were talking with a man who got $500 a week as advertising manager of a large commercial concern. He left the connection because of friction over the fact that he paid a man $100 a day to write copy for him. His employers thought he should be able to write his own copy at that salary, and could not understand that he was merely an expert at placing copy after it was written. That part of the job alone was worth the money he received, for he placed advertising nationally, and he could not be a good copy writer and a good manager at the same time. He could have written good copy, but he was paying so much to get his announcements before the public that it was worth an additional five or six hundred dollars a month to have the best copy possible. The exhibitor must be both writer and manager of his advertising department, as a rule, and he must watch both ends, but while he cannot write as well as the hundred dollar a day man, he can write well enough for the job if only he takes the time for study and thought. Too many figure that so many column inches, worth a certain sum, should bring in a certain amount over and above the investment. The proper line of thought is that a certain picture should be worth advertising ideas worth a certain space in the paper. The space in the paper is worth while only if the idea it offers is worth that expenditure. It is the idea that makes any advertising worth while. Don't think that space alone will help.

You can sell something only if you make people want to buy. You must offer argument and not merely matter set in type.

Scrap Books.

We are not reproducing Steve Farrar's letter just because we're proud of it—though we are—but because it goes to show that Steve realizes that this department means more to the live manager than something to be read and forgotten. The scheme he suggests would be impracticable with back numbers, but it could be gotten out in quarterly form if there should be a sufficient demand for it. But it would entail special printing and reserving the pages until a form was complete, since to bind would necessitate full forms and not pages cut from old issues. To judge from the comparatively small sales of Picture Theatre Advertising, which contains the essence of the first four years work in this department, there is no demand worthy the name for permanent advertising helps; at least not a sufficient demand to warrant the experiment being made, but there is a comparatively easy way to make your own book, if you want one. We have a set of bound volumes of this department running back to the first issue and ending with last week. It is simply done and not expensive. We have loose leaf covers for a page 9½ by 12 inches. Each week we paste up the department (using two numbers) and at the end of the year these pages are tied into a book and sent to the bindery, releasing the cover and giving us a bound volume of the department alone at less that the cost of the covers. Where only one copy is available, a cardboard form should be prepared the exact size of the type page plus a ⅛ inch margin. This is laid on the sheet and outlined in pencil. The oblong is then cut out and the page mounted so that both sides will show. In cloth the binding costs less than $2. In no time at all a collection can be built up that will give inspiration for almost any sort of a campaign, and it can be kept right up to date in book form. Try it for a while and you'll never stop, for in time you will have a most exhaustive treatise on advertising that will reflect the best minds in the country.

STEVE KNOWS.

Steve Farrar of the Casino, Eldorado and the Orpheum, Harrisburg, Ill., writes:

"Right now when every one in the business is doing (?) something for the exhibitor to help him make his show pay, why don't you get in the game? For the last four years I have been trying to find a satisfactory way of filing your department each week, so that I could lay my hands upon it at any moment, and I have never found a way that was entirely satisfactory. Now here is the big idea: have them take your department back as far as possible, and bind it in book form and sell it to us. If I had all your department from the time it started in the World up until now, I sure would be proud of it, and I could sit down at my desk and dig up enough ideas in an hour to do me a month. If this can be done, you will find a sale for it at any price you put on it, and I see no reason why it cannot be done."

Here's a Good Advertisement.

The Colonial Theatre, Cleveland, used many advertisements larger than this three sixes, but they had no more effective work than these eighteen inches of all-type display. The clipping got torn on the way in, but it shows a general idea of what was used. There is little that tells about the play, but the one big fact that it was a hit stands out as no arrangement of cuts could make it. It's plain, but it is a tremendously hard worker and it is worth clipping and preserving. It is one of the best pulling advertisements we have seen in a long time.

Last night 2,000 persons attended (hundreds were turned away) the Cleveland premier of D. W. Griffith's Supreme Triumph, "Hearts of the World," at the Colonial Theater.

A Canadian Record.

Here is a picture of the Allen Theatre, Toronto, Canada, during the run of "Hearts of the World" at that house. The fact that the people have turned their backs on the theatre and are crowding into a vacant store next door is explained by the special advance box office opened in the store to leave the house lobby free for the current sale. The film ran there for four weeks at $1.50 top, and practically every seat was sold (mostly in advance) for every performance; a record for Canada. Space up to solid pages was taken during the run, and for accessory work there were 400 street car fender advertisements, 30,000 heralds and 1,000 window cards. And after that run, an additional two weeks were had at Massey Hall during the Canadian National Exhibition. Pretty good for a war-time showing. It would be good at any time, but it only goes to show that the larger the attraction the more you must circus it to collect all that you can get.

Double faced.

The Peabody Theatre, a sister house to the Parkway, Baltimore, opened lately with success. The advertising is not unlike that for the Parkway, using the same idea of a colored border. The card shown is 3½ by 5½ inches, printed in black with the date and border in color. It is printed on both sides and on one side the border is in blue and the other in red. The extra printing costs money, but it certainly does improve the looks of the card. A brief form letter accompanies the opening announcement. It is well written, but the brevity is even better. It is a too common fault to overwrite in a form letter. Better a few facts, succinctly told, that will sink in than a lot of single spaced imitation typewriting that not one person in fifty will wade through. The Peabody found it could give its message in only 14 lines, but it is all there, house policy, times of showing, prices and the rest.

Envelope card with border and date in ink of a contrasting color.

With a Chinese Annex.

The Star Theatre, Modesto, Cal., uses a four page 6 by 9 for a program, and gets a two-color effect by using both colors on the same ink table, blending from red to blue on white and getting the effect of the national colors with a one-impression cost. Where this is done, the ink table is held rigid, if it is the revolving type, and one side is inked with red and the other with blue, the colors blending to a purple in the centre. It is effective where well done. The front page is merely display with the program on the second and text on the third. The back page is given to a Chinese herbalist concern curing 38 different ailments with a single compound. It would be better make up to get the program on page three with the chat on the second page. Two weeks are covered in one issue with four changes weekly, but by using small display faces the different features are well played up, but it would help a little to use six point for a body type on the program page. But the house advertises that it is going to throw out the tiresome five reel features and offer two of them, one cut to two reels and the other to three. It can be done in most instances, but it is taking chances with some of them to cut ten reels to five. We would like to hear how the experiment came out.

Two Languages.

There is an Italian language newspaper in Johnstown, Pa., and L. W. Barclay took four twelves to advertise "Italy's Flaming Front." He made a good job of it, too, so he had the type pulled out of the press run off on cheap colored stock for a throwaway. It is a nice looking display, and the Italian arms helps not a little. The strategy map is a bit too small to be of real use, but has an illustrative value. In English he used three eights, two sevens and four fives for his displays, making good use of the cuts he got from the exchange. He'll use cuts and to good advantage when he can get them, but he doesn't always get them. There seem to have been plenty of cuts for this display, and you'll note that he tucked them in very nicely. It is something of a trick to get cuts into the space just right. The best way is to lay out the size of the proposed ad and then experiment with the proofs before pasting them down. Sometimes a little work on this line will suggest decidedly better results.

A four twelves in Italian from Johnstown.

A three eights and two sevens for a war picture showing intelligent use of cut material.

Play Up the Signature.

Here is a four tens from the Dayton, Dayton, O., in which we think the house signature should have been played up more strongly. The art layout is good, but the artist was thinking more of art than advertising when he drew it up. In a small place the house signature may not matter much, but even in a small town the signature should be kept to the fore against the time the town grows, and to tick it into the border without proper display is to hurt one of the most valuable assets of the house. The film you have today will play elsewhere tomorrow, but your house is a permanent attraction and better worthy of being played up.

Hit It with Crusaders.

H. A. Wishard, Bloomfield, Ia., had only 2,000 to draw to, but he played "Pershing's Crusaders" for two days, and with little advertising he did double the second night over the first—and the first night paid the rental of the subject. He played it at 20-40 cents, too.

Picture Theatre Advertising

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be indorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

The angle of the cone decreases as the distance between the condenser and aperture is increased. We are not, however, so much concerned with the angle of the cones as with the direction of their axis, which follows a line drawn from the center of the condenser through a point of the film involved. Therefore, since the center ray of each cone comes from the center of the condenser, it follows that the cones, or pencils of light, passing through each portion of the film will approach the objective at an angle, the beam as a whole diverging, or spreading out, as it approaches the projection lens, and herein lies the difference between the problem involved in a photographic and a projection lens. In photography the cones, or pencils of light, from each portion of the object converge to a point in the center of the lens. In other words the photographic lens receives the pencil rays converging, whereas the projection lens receives them as diverging rays. (Um, brother Griffith, I cannot see that at all. Certainly from each pin-point of the object rays reach the photographic lens as diverging pencils of light. In my opinion you make the error of treating this particular phase of the matter in individual cones of light, instead of taking the ray as a whole. Certainly you are in error as to photographic lens receiving converging pencils of light. As a matter of fact, it is a subject tremendously difficult of handling. I would rather say that the main point of difference as betwen the projection and photographic lens duty is found in the fact that the latter receives its image-carrying rays direct from the object, usually at such long distance that the angle is but slight, thus imposing slight strain on the optical powers of the lens, whereas the projection lens receives rays carrying a broken-up image of an object—the crater—and the real image which it is to project to the screen, and receives its rays at a much wider angle than does the photographic lens. It seems to me that the whole duty, plus wide angle, imposes a far heavier, more difficult task on the projection lens. —Ed.)

It will be readily understood that if the light beam coming from the aperture diverges so that it does not all enter the projection lens, that portion falling outside is lost, and the screen will only receive partial illumination, as compared with what it should receive for the power expended. Further, if part of any pencil of rays coming from any point of the film falls outside the projection lens, then the portion of the screen corresponding to the point in the film from whence the cone emanated will only receive partial illumination. It therefore follows that if the projection lens be of too small diameter to receive the whole light beam, we shall not only lose, or waste light, but the lost light will for the most part be taken from the edges of the screen, leaving the screen center the more brilliantly illuminated.

Our next problem is: To what extent is the light beam obstructed within the projection lens itself? Insofar as concerns those rays which are not deflected, there will be little or no construction, provided a line drawn from the margin of the condenser to the opposite margin of the projection lens does not cross the axis of the beam nearer the projection lens than the focal length of its back factor. There are, however, other factors which operate to introduce obstruction within the lens and deflect the rays outside the actual condenser beam. These deflected rays may be observed in the form of a haze surrounding the condenser image in front of the projection lens. In order to determine the exact nature of this haze one has but to place a piece of ground glass in front of the aperture, whereupon we shall find that the light beam has changed form entirely, and there is no longer any haze, the area it occupied being entirely filled with the light beam, and that the beam spreads immediately on leaving the lens. The margin of the beam now represents the full capacity of the lens. The pencil of rays from each point of the film no longer follow a line from the center of the condenser, because the pencil of rays completely fill the aperture of the objective (Too deep for me. I'll have to wade back to shore, sit on a rock and watch you swim through this pool.—Ed.), so that the center ray of each pencil is directed from the film-point to the center of the lens, thus duplicating photographic conditions; also, it will be found that the film image is now reversed within the lens. Why? Because the cones from each point of the film has reached a common base at the back factor of the lens with the ground glass in place, whereas, without it, the individual cones, or pencils of light, do not come to a common base until they reach the aerial image of the condenser in front of the lens. Thus we find that the condition necessary for the reversal of the image is the focusing of the individual pencils of rays from all points of the object. The question now remains: Why do we get the haze before referred to? It is by reason of the fact that the film itself and the edges of the aperture plate opening deflect rays just as does the ground glass, though to a comparatively very slight extent. The question now arises: Should these deflected rays which form the haze surrounding the main beam be allowed to reach the screen? My answer is, No, unless the revolving shutter is able to cut them off entirely while the film is moving. (Cannot agree that they should reach the screen at all. You will have to prove to me that they are not detrimental to definition before I will believe it.—Ed.)

Before closing these remarks allow me to call your attention to the one most important factor in the whole optical train of the projector, viz., the arc. Many projectionists dismiss it from their mind, so long as they are able to get a light at all. The lamphouse should receive as much and as careful attention as the mechanism itself. The condenser lenses should be kept scupulously clean, with no carbon dust around their edges, all electric contact points kept clean and bright, all wire leads renewed often near the lamp lugs, and the mechanism of the lamp carefully lubricated with graphite. It requires considerable experience in building a crater so that it will be at all times efficient. This is especially true where A. C. is used. With A. C. the alm should be an open crater and a single spot. With the aid of spherical aberration it is not only possible to utilize both craters, but it is the better practice so to do, provided it be rightly done. Many will not agree with this, but no matter how you may try, it is impossible to keep the rays from the lower crater out of the optical system, hence it is best to build the two craters to form one source. In closing, let me say this: A correct optical system is of small avail if the light source itself be imperfect.

Editor's remarks: What Griffiths says concerning the importance of the light source, the crater, is entirely true, except that I cannot accept his dictum that the better practice is to use both craters with A. C. He may be able to so handle the alternating current arc that good results are secured by utilizing both craters, but I have never been able to; also I think the average projectionist who tries it will fail. I don't say that it cannot be done, but I do say that it is not generally practical. But, aside from that, there is entirely too little attention paid to the intelligent manipulation of the crater.

The spot is an inverted, somewhat out-of-focus photograph of the crater, hence, in order to secure the ideal spot necessary to high-class projection, one must have as nearly as possible a perfect crater to begin with.

The optical dope brother Griffiths favors us with is really an extension of that which has gone before, or, perhaps, I might say an explanation, and to some extent a correction of parts thereof. Careful study of the present article will give to the projectionist a much better understanding of what is taking place in his optical system; also it should be of some value to the motion picture machine operator, as differentiated from the projectionist, who is more than the mere operator of a machine.

In connection with this article, though not quite ready for publication, is a new and improved optical system diagram, by means of which the projectionists will be able to tell, at a glance, the following: Necessary focal length of condensers for the amperage he is using. Distance from condenser to film. Diameter of projection lens necessary in his case, and correct distance of shutter from lens. This chart has been purchased from brother Griffith outright, by the Moving Picture World, and will be published as soon as it can be prepared for the engraver. Watch for it in the department, as it is of great value and you will no doubt wish to have it framed for your projection room.

Unsigned Letter.

On a letterhead of Local Union 368, Hutchinson, Kan., comes the following:

> Please advise me as to projectionists. Are we essential or non-essential? Am making the inquiry of you because I feel assured you can advise me on this question better than can anyone else. Read, in I. A. Journal, what you did for us in Washington, but cannot feel satisfied until I know more of the matter. We have a small local here and are not flush with operators (What kind, brother? Moving picture, ladies' waist or telegraph?) just now. Have eight of our men with the colors, which does not leave many to keep the home fires burning. But we are all game and ready to do our part.

The brother neglected to sign his name, hence the department reply. Your record of eight with the colors does you proud, also I am sure your statement that you are all ready to do your share is made with all sincerity.

The projectionists, or "operator," as you call him, is declared to be essential, but don't misunderstand. That fact has nothing whatever to do with enlistment or the draft. The order was, briefly, that all men engaged in non-essential work must abandon such non-essential labor and engage in labor declared to be essential. If projection was declared non-essential it meant that all projectionists of military age would have to at once quit work as projectionists and seek other essential employment. However, the projection of motion pictures was finally declared to be essential. This, however, does not mean that such of the men as are liable to military duty will not be drafted, for they will be. Meanwhile, however, they can continue at work as projectionists. Next time, Hutchinson, don't be so careless. I cannot write to a man unless I know who he is, except through the medium of the department.

From Kansas.

Wesley Trout, now located at Arkansas City, Kan., writes:

> I have been studying up on lenses and shutter action, and have some dope of value on where to set the shutter to get the flicker out. Will send it in later, if you want it. Well, Brother Richardson, the army certainly has a lot of our best men. Guess we will have to put the women on the job next. Wish you would have friend Solar write me about lenses. Like to hear from high-class men with regard to projection. Am in charge of two late model Simplex projectors, taking current through Hallberg motor generator. Have my lenses matched up according to the late lens table, and it works fine. Will send photo of projection room.

Your desire for a letter from Solar with regard to lenses is a pretty large order, but the matter is, of course, up to friend Solar. Will be glad to have photo; also shutter "dope," though frankly I am very skeptical on the latter. Brother Trout is a member of Local Union No. 417..

Question Box.

An Indiana company, through its president, asks:

> Had an accident to the screen in one of our houses, resulting in tearing the same. We thought of trying the old-fashioned plaster screen. Would it be practicable? If so, kindly advise as to whether surface should be perfectly smooth and white, rough and white, or of a slightly darker shade.

A plaster screen will give excellent results, provided you use enough light. But there is the rub. It requires more current to produce an equally brilliant picture on a plaster screen than on a metallic surface, and this is no time to consume needless power, which means fuel. The surface should be smooth and white—the whiter the better. When it gets dirty it may be calcimined with one of the patent calcimines, such as muralite, alabastine, etc.—white, of course. But these are war times and you will do well to install another metallic surface screen. Wasted light means wasted current, and wasted current means wasted coal. Use a metal surface screen and reduce size of picture as much as is consistent with local conditions.

Correcting Optical Train.

Edward Rosen, Frankfort, Maine, sends order for handbook and says:

> Have Power's 6 projector, using 110 volt A. C. through Hallberg Economizer stamped 30—50 and 60 amperes. Distance of projection, 45 feet; 12-foot picture. Use ordinary cloth screen. Am about to stretch same on frame, size it, coat it with calcimine and border it with black. What is your opinion of this? The picture I project is so good that people coming from cities seem surprised at the screen result, saying it is as good as they have seen anywhere. In general I use "high" of economizer. When I have an exceptionally dense film there is no more light available. What I want to know is, if my optical system is correct (which I don't think it is) should I be obliged to use 60 amperes all the time to get just a decently lighted screen? Kindly advise as to what condenser lenses I should use, how far apart they should be and what distance from condenser to film should be in order that I may compare and remedy that which may be wrong.

Your proposal to size, calcimine and black-border the screen is excellent. A calcimined screen is better than cloth. But don't imagine you can calcimine a screen and use it indefinitely. It should be recoated say once every six months. Yet I would consider 60 amperes A. C. as none too much for projection on a cloth or calcimine screen. For sixty amperes you should have the following: Two 6½ condenser lenses, with 19 inches from center of condenser to film. Condenser lenses should ALWAYS be as close to each other as possible without actual contact—say not more than 1/16-inch apart. Your projection lens should be 1⅝, 1¾ or 2 inches diameter, according to whether it is working at 3, 4 or 5 inch back focus. By this I mean it should not have any less diameter than that given. Greater diameter will do no harm except that any superfluous diameter is detrimental to screen results. Too small diameter means waste of light, current and coal.

Screen Size.

I. A. Kafer, manager, Newbern, N. C., asks the following:

> What is standard size for a screen, or what size is used mostly in motion picture theatres?

There is no "standard size." The size of picture depends, within reasonable limits, on size and shape of the theatre. Broadly, anything less than a 12-foot picture (12 feet wide) or larger than 20 feet, is seldom used. I might add that few, if any, theatres are large enough to justify the use of a 20-foot picture. I think you will find a 16-foot picture ample, under no circumstances should you at this time exceed 18 feet. The larger the screen the more light required to properly illuminate it, thus: Suppose you have available the light produced by 40 amperes. A picture 9x12 has 108 square feet area, hence you have only to illuminate that much space. A picture 13½x18 has 243 square feet area, which must be illuminated with the same amount of light, unless you boost your amperage, and it will require more than twice the light to illuminate the 18-foot picture than will be required to illuminate the 12-footer, provided the screen is the same in both cases, and fuel should not be thus wasted.

In Trouble.

Russel Walling, Oneonta, desires information as follows:

> Am in trouble. Am running a Baird projector, using 2¾-inch projection lens, one 6.5 and one 7.5, latter in rear. Use 35-ampere mercury arc rectifier. In reading matter on right side of screen there is a blur and it does not show well. By moving the lens back the blur comes in the centre. Could you advise me at once as to cause?

Your description leaves much to the imagination. I am left to infer that the blur does not show in the picture, which can, I think, hardly be true. Also, I cannot understand what you mean by the blur coming in center when you "move the lens back." If you mean when you move the lens nearer the film, why you would then throw the whole picture out of focus and there would be nothing but blur. Examine your lens and see if there is not a bit of oil or a finger mark on it. A finger mark so faint that you cannot see it when looking straight through the lens would cause a blur on the screen; also the mark might be inside the lens. You should have the condenser lens of shortest focal length next the arc and have the two lenses so set that their apexes come within not more than 1/16-inch of each other. For 35 amperes D. C. you should have a 6.5 and an 8.5 condenser lens, the 6.5 next the arc, with 22 inches from center of condenser to film. But this applies to 35 amperes D. C. only. If your amperage is different, your lenses and distance will also be different. Send me more detailed information as to your trouble and perhaps I can help you; that is, if what I have suggested proves not to be its seat. By the way, why be a mere machine operator? Why not wake up and be a projectionist in all that term implies?

Music for the Picture

Conducted by GEORGE W. BEYNON

The Proper Presentation of Pictures Requires Careful Choice of Incidental Music

Part 1.

MANY orchestral leaders regard the theme as the chief factor in a musical setting. Their energies being directed toward making it so, and in the focusing upon one musical item, they foreshorten their vision, loosing the larger view of the general picture presentation. The theme then becomes a jagged rock projecting toward heaven from a drab and somewhat level ground composed of trivial and inconsequential melodies.

Many plays have failed, not because of the poor acting of the star, nor for lack of plot, but because the supporting cast did not support. The artistic acting of the principal role stood away from that of the "small parts" so unmistakably that there seemed no connection between them. Thus an auditor would be led to believe that he was viewing two plays upon the same stage all for the one price of admission. He might not regret the box office toll if the star occupied the stage the entire evening, but the weak cast spoiled the show.

There are four ways to open a feature: Some play the theme while the characters are introduced, and the main title with its accompanying sub-titles, recounts who is to blame for that which follows. A carefully selected number in which is embodied the general atmosphere or dominant emotion of the play sometimes ushers in the picture. Then again, there are those careless and lazy musicians who play anything neutral and new to save themselves trouble. The fourth, and perhaps the most inexcusable way of presenting the feature, is allowing it to be screened in silence. When we say silence—musical silence is meant, for when the music is tacet there is always the clicking of the operating machine to be heard, in addition to the whispered spelling out of names and titles.

The use of the theme at screening is frequently the best choice, especially if the picture lacks atmosphere of a characteristic nature, for it impresses itself upon the minds of the audience at once because of the paucity of action in the film. Nevertheless, owing to the frequency with which it is employed later, it is better to refrain from using it unless the necessity really arises.

The best choice of incidental music to start a musical setting is always one in which is found the general sentiment of the picture or the atmosphere in which the play is cloaked. This sometimes requires a marked degree of discretion. The leader must know his musical history and be an adept in picking out one school from the other.

An experience which illustrates this occurred in the presentation of one of these super features, for which a special score was arranged and an augmented orchestra engaged. The plot was highly dramatic in character, and the arranger, wishing to musically prepare the minds of the audience for what they might expect, opened with Espana Rhapsody. Immediately the patrons were imbued with the fact that the picture would be Spanish in atmosphere. Much to their surprise and disgust the first scene opened in Paris, while the orchestra still played the music of Spain. Not once during the entire eight reels was there a glimpse of any location that was not French. The plot was French, the acting was French, the costumes were French, and all typically so. Later the music became French also, but somewhat apologetic, as though feeling its guilt and fearing the censure of its auditors.

Never introduce a Japanese picture by playing an Egyptian serenade, for there will surely be a son of Nippon grinding his teeth somewhere in the audience. An excuse that there is but little Japanese music may have some good ground to stand on, but this does not make it valid, for there is certainly enough to fit one picture, and few exhibitors run two Japanese pictures in consecutive order. If the leader can fit one he can fit all by a simple arrangement of ballads, marches, intermezzos or serenades.

The fellow that uses the first portion of the picture to "try out" a new number deserves no consideration. He is throwing away a golden opportunity for a good beginning which might set the stamp of merit upon his work. He is deliberately insulting the intelligence of the audience, who, with half an eye, can see that he is "practising." He is remiss in his duty to his employer and is flagrantly unconscious of the interests of the producer, who made it possible that the musician might extend his field of endeavors.

Silence is unforgivable, as we have shown in a recent article dealing with that subject. No picture should start in silence under any conditions.

The time will come when the picture will be preceded by a musical overture, in which will be found the theme and the principal melodies of the score to follow, blended together in much the same form as a grand opera overture. The picture will be screened at a point in the music which will allow for the finish of the overture at the commencement of the first scene depicted. Then will the recognition of picture music be complete, and it will take its rightful place by the side of grand operas and symphonies.

"Salome" Score Sets a New Standard.

The score's the thing—for pictures. Cue sheets may be the first aid to the injured, but a musical score is the cure. It makes a picture speak in atmospheric terms that are readily and simply comprehensible.

William Fox is presenting his big biblical drama, "Salome," at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, accompanied by an orchestra of twenty-four musicians directed by George M. Rubenstein. Mr. Rubenstein arranged the score, and we can conscientiously say that it ranks with the best in all points, and sets a new standard in some.

Mr. Rubenstein's scores run to long selections, chosen with great care and an eye to detail of screen action. No difficulties are encountered in setting a feature with one hundred and four numbers, but there is a real art in properly portraying a picture with twenty-five. "Salome" has the usual number of short scenes, but the long selections have in them changes of tempi and rhythm that suit several short scenes without change. The idea of the dominant emotion prevails throughout the entire score, the climaxes are well worked up, the atmosphere is held completely and the music, though ably supporting the screen action, does not predominate at any point.

The high lights of the music was brought forth in the poisoning of Naomi, the homecoming of Herod and the storm scene in the palace culminating in the death of Salome. A love theme was used that conveyed the wilfulness and cunning of the heroine, while at the same time it breathed but passionate love. Herod was given a martial theme that fitted him well. Then there was a little original number signifying the plotting of evil. This number was most typical in its appeal.

The most hypocritical mind could find no flaws in the music, but we feel that the finale is not strictly in keeping with the spirit of the last scene, depicting the crushing to death of Salome. At the title "Kill her" the storm music should cease abruptly and a paraphrase of the theme of John the Baptist close the picture. This theme was a fine piece of original writing, symbolizing the imperishable faith in God, majestic in rhythm and fervently religious in character. By introducing dissonant and weird harmonies and playing it grandioso, the moral motive of the picture showing the triumph of John the Baptist even after death would have been wonderfully exemplified.

"Salome" music is another milestone on the road of scores, and we congratulate Mr. Rubenstein upon the effective manner by which he takes his auditors to Palestine and keeps them there for the entire evening.

The Servant of Solomon Visits Rialto.

"O King live forever! This day thy servant hath seen many new sights pleasing to the eye and sounds to the ear more pleasing.

"O King live forever!

"Thy poor servant didst journey to that far-famed house of mirth, called the Rialto, and ruled over by one, of the house of Rothapfel with his overseer, one Reisenfeld.

"Lo and behold, O mighty King, when thy lowly servant had entered therein, there stretched before his eyes a multitude of people, intently listening to music made by a great number of men playing upon strange instruments and directed by one, who waved a wand to and fro in rhythmic fashion.

"Wondrous was the music, in a manner Capricious, in atmosphere Spanish, and written by a man who comes of the barbarians upon the Russian steppes. Wierd was the movement of the sounds and seemingly divided into five parts. Some of the populace, kindly inclined, told us that the man Reisenfeld, a chief among men, directed and controlled the music. Never hath thy benighted servant heard the like; neither at Ephesus nor Tarsus, Athens nor Carthage.

"O King, live forever!

"Hardly had the last strain died away and the people's acclaim subsided, when, lo and behold; there arose before us a vision of far distant lands. Truly it was not a mirage nor was it the workings of our trick-playing brain for, verily, it moved, and other lands, other trees and lakes loomed up before us. And the birds were seen to fly; the lapping waves threw crested foam. And all the while, music of wildness and savagery permeated the air, like to that of the natives in the Carribbean Isles.

"All too soon did this pass and our ears were greeted by the flute-like tones of a beautiful damsel, who sang in a foreign tongue, a song called Jeanne D'Arc. From the house of Rosner came this maid, whose Christian name was Annie, and great was the applause that greeted the end of the song.

"O King, live forever!

"Long years hath thy servant ministered unto thee and never failed in speaking the truth. Credit his unworthy words when he tells thee another moving vision appeared like unto the first, but marked in difference. Men were seen marching, ships at sea, prominent speakers and the chief of the tribe of Roosevelt. All were animated and seemed to live, yet no sound came but the sharp and lively music, which ever changed in speed.

"Another singer came forth and we heard the strange tale about the paradise of the Etheopians from Africa, written by one Meyerbeer, he of the unworthy race called Hun. Well was it sung, and the music withal was good, save for a weakness which seemed to overcome the players when the singer took a very high note and seemed so lonely with his tone. 'Twas said the singer lacked support.

"Again there came the moving vision. It told a tale of pirates bold and bad, of hidden treasure, wicked men and wily thieves, of true devotion and brilliant bravery. We saw a fair damsel of the house of Lee, Lila by name, save the ship, rescue her father, unearth the treasure and promise betrothal to her lover. Creepy was the music and well-suited to the tale as it was unfolded before our eyes. As the scene changed, so changed the music, and verily the music portrayed the inaudible sounds of the actors.

"O King, live forever!

"The end is not yet. More music followed and then another tale, not so well told, but created for laughter. Light and frolicsome were the actors and many foolish things did they do for the enjoyment of the assembled people.

"Then, O King, thy servant fell from grace and dignity of mien. His laughter did well up within him and could not be restrained. Fearing that strange eyes might see the foolishness of the servant of Solomon and heap upon thee, O King, derision and contumely, he did run away and straightway hasten thither that thou mightest know of the wonders at the Rialto Theatre during this week commencing the sixth day of the tenth month of this year of thy noble reign."

The Strand Music Falls Far Below Par.

One swallow does not make a meal nor, two birds a summer and, by the same token, two bright spots in a musical program only mitigate its offensiveness, but cannot eradicate its faultiness.

The vocal rendition of the Berceuse from Jocelyn accompanied by cello—the program announced a violin obligato—and harp was delightful. Each artist showed to good advantage and the general ensemble was splendid. The trio made a pretty tableau and received a well merited curtain call.

Herbert Watrous, the well-known basso, is always good. He seemed to be suffering from a cold, but it did not seriously interfere with his singing of the "Bedouin Love Song." As a second number, he sang Van Alstyne's "Buy Bonds for Your Boy and Mine," This met with a spontaneous and patriotic reception.

Our pre-eminent desire is to close the review at this point, for, truly readers who quail at the sight of a mangled form and whom the sight of gore turns pale, should now turn to the next article.

A. Reiser held the helm of the good ship, Music for the Pictures, and tried to steer a course free from rocks and shoals. Either his eyesight failed him or some one had tampered with his chart and compass.

The conducting of the Overture, "Mignon," was without exception the most puerile attempt we have ever witnessed. In the first place, the orchestra is too small to adequately perform a work which calls into play every section of the orchestra in constant contrapuntal melodies. In the second place, Mr. Reiser seemed unfamiliar with the score and, lastly, there was a perceptible lack of unity in the attacks and endings.

The pictorial review was played to the beating of time in a circle while the director searched for some music that seemed to be missing from his stand. No attempt was made to keep the tempo of marching men and the "breaks" came in the middle of well defined musical phrases. After each, there was considerable silence and at times these waits became so long that wagers could be laid that the orchestra had finished its work for the evening.

A selection, with the unmistakable atmosphere of Spain in its introduction, was used for an Italian scene. Still in Italy, the orchestra suddely changed to an English march when Tommy Atkins was shown. Why change the musical atmosphere when the location remains the same?—Englishmen in Italy do not make it England. The introduction of the Belgian National Air, during a short scene dealing with Belgium, brought many patriotic and sympathetic patrons to their feet. At the sixteenth bar, a perfect cadence, the subtitle read, "Miss Farrar sells bonds," and we were brought back to America. The orchestra heeded not the title, but played La Brabanconne to its conclusion, while the audience bobbed up and down in a quandary.

But why proceed further? The musical program offered for the week of September 29 was without exception a disgrace to a reputable motion picture theatre charging an admission of sixty cents.

Popular War Song Chosen by B. S. Moss.

Charles K. Harris, the composer and music publisher, has signed over the picture rights of his popular Spanish-American war song, "Just Break the News to Mother," to B. S. Moss.

The song is to be made the nucleus of a seven-reel feature, upon which work will be begun as soon as possible.

"Ben Bolt" Not Regarded as American.

Surprisingly few people seem inclined to accept "Ben Bolt" as anything but English. This is doubtless due to the fact that the composer of the music chanced to be English by birth, and the writer of the lyrics was "English" by name. But the latter was a native of the United States, so the song rightly belongs among the Folk Songs of America.

Dr. Thomas Dunn English was born in Philadelphia in the summer of 1819. He received the degree of Doctor of Medicine from the University of Pennsylvania when he was only twenty years of age, studied law and was admitted to the bar four years later. In 1859, he removed to Fort Lee, N. J., where he devoted his life to literary pursuits, becoming editor and publisher as well.

While Dr. English was in New York, in 1842, N. P. Willis, editor of the New Mirror, asked him for a gratuitous contribution to the Mirror, intimating that he desired a sea song. Dr. English promised, went home and attempted to make good. Only one line of the sea would come to his mind and that one was embodied in the last verse of the poem as "Ben Bolt of the salt sea gale." From the first, the poem found favor and within the year was reprinted in England.

The poet thought it might be a greater success if set to music. Dominick May wrote an air for it, but it was never printed. Then Dr. English essayed one. This was printed, but it had no sale. A peculiarity of the composition was that it was written entirely for the black keys. Could "Ben Bolt" have been a pirate bold, one wonders?

In 1848, a play was brought out in Pittsburgh. This was called "The Battle of Buena Vista. In it the song of "Ben Bolt" was introduced. A. M. Hunt, an Englishman, had read the words in a newspaper and gave them from memory to Nelson Kneas, calling on his imagination when memory failed him. Kneas adapted a German melody to the lines, and they were sung in the play. The drama died, but the song which played only a minor part in it lived on. A music publisher from Cincinnati bought the copyright, and it was the business success of his life.

Nothing was heard but the song. "Sweet Alice" became the darling of the day. A steamboat in the West and a ship in the East were christened with her name. The one blew up and the other sank, but "Alice" floated on the sea of popular favor, and would not drown. The song was almost as popular in England as here, and was sung on the street and in the drawing-room with equal fervor.

The composer, Nelson Kneas, came of a good English family, but chose a nomadic life. He was at one time a teacher of music in New York; a singer in the Park Theatre; and, afterward, a member of a negro minstrel troupe. A jolly, companionable fellow, he was enemy to no one but himself, but ended a precarious existence in dire poverty. He always complained that he received but a trifle for his musical setting to "Ben Bolt." But the writer of the song received less, as he had nothing—not even a copy of the song published. To add insult to injury, his complaint that the words had been mutilated was met with the unflattering assurance that they were vastly improved thereby.

The song was practically forgotten when it received a new lease of life through Du Maurier's "Trilby" in 1895. A few years ago, the play was revived. At this revival, Miss Phyllis Nielson Terry acted the part of Trilby and sang the song in a delightfully pleasing manner. Again, for a few days, the music was in the air, but it was soon crowded out by more recent and less sentimental music of the popular variety. The last verse seems prophetic:

"There's change in the things I loved, Ben Bolt.
They have changed from the old to the new."

An Inspiring Patriotic March Song

There Is No Hyphen In My Heart

Words by JOSEPHINE M. FABRICANT Music by ARIADNE H. EDWARDS

CHORUS

There is no hyphen in my heart—
It can't be cut in two;
O flag of bars and silver stars,
I've given it all to you!

Notice to the Leaders.

The edict has gone forth that production of pictures shall cease for the period of four weeks. This means that new pictures will not be released and consequently no cue sheets will be issued. If you miss a few of them in this department don't blame us, for we aim to only print those which are in advance of release date.

Leader's Service Bureau.

Questions Answered—Suggestions Offerod.

Q. WILL you kindly and clearly state your opinion on the use of German music in the playing of pictures? Some people think Beethoven, Bach and Handel are permissible while Wagner, Strauss and the later composers should be shunned. Personally, I agree with this idea. What do you think?

A. In a case of this kind, personal opinion should play no part. We are living in America, citizens of a country fighting for democracy. The feeling against Germany is rightly intense, and we have a duty toward ourselves. Nothing coming from a German source should be played at this time. It is not a question as to whether Beethoven was a Hun; it is a question of patriotism. Every piece of music composed by Germans of any period is inherently propaganda, pleasing to the enemy. If it is pleasing, it gives comfort and thus is treasonable. Look to the noble Frenchman for music that will fit your needs. He is our ally and every piece of his music which you buy is helping him and our cause.

Q. Where can I procure a representative library cheap?

A. Many leaders are selling their libraries on account of the draft. We will be pleased to send you the addresses of such when we hear of their desire to sell. Why not try the "Music Service Exchange?" They might help you.

* * *

Q. What is the latest march by Sousa, and where can I get it?

A. We do not know the latest, but a very recent one is "Solid Men to the Front," published by G. Schirmer, Inc.

* * *

Q. I wish to compliment you upon the cue sheet service in the Moving Picture World. Would it be possible to induce all the producers to accept this uniform standardization? I am sure all leaders will welcome it.

A. Thanks. We will try to induce.

Q. The military bands have increased to proportions almost incredible, some being six hundred strong. Where is the advantage?

A. Personally, we see no advantages and many disadvantages. Band arrangements are usually made for thirty-three men and a band of six hundred would naturally require nineteen sets of orchestration for every one performed. This means much music weight and difficulty in procuring same. Besides a big band of that size is more or less unwieldy to direct and maneuver.

Q. Where can I procure all the orchestral numbers written by George Drumm?

A. At G. Schirmer's, Inc., New York.

Q. I can play a Wurlitzer pipe organ and am looked upon as a fine picture player. My experience has been long and varied. Where can I get a position?

A. Use the classified ads of the Moving Picture World as a medium. A position is now open and we are writing you full particulars.

George M. Cohan Writes for Olcott.

Geo. M. Cohan is writing all the songs in the new play he recently finished for Chauncey Olcott. These numbers will be published by M. Whitmark & Sons.

These music publishers put out Mr. Cohan's tremendous march song success, "When You Come Back, And You Will Come Back, There's the Whole World Waiting for You."

"I'm True to Them All, and They're Just as True to Me," is the title of a new song written by Mr. Cohan. It has been introduced into Klaw & Erlanger's "The Girl Behind the Gun," being specially written for this show, and forming one of the most conspicious singing successes of the piece. This song is written in the liveliest Cohanesque vein, and bids fair to attain the same measure of popularity that all this versatile writer's numbers invariably achieve.

Ballad Approved by Famous Producer.

A few days after D. W. Griffith launched his supreme masterpiece, "Hearts of the World," the great producer was besieged by composers and song-writers offering compositions bearing the name of the production.

At first, Mr. Griffith gave little heed to these manuscripts, because the music for the play had already been compiled and printed, and he did not feel that he was justified in making any interpolations. But the compositions became so numerous that he finally decided to give them his attention. After going over several of them, he called his general musical director, Mr. Elinor, and several co-workers and members of his company together, and asked them to form an opinion and make a selection. After a week's hard work, it was agreed that the song submitted by James W. Casey, of New York City, was best suited to "Hearts of the World," and, in compliment to Mr. Casey, a telegram of endorsement was sent to this composer.

"Hearts of the World," published by the Echo Publishing Co., was first introduced at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre in New York, and immediately became a favorite. In every city where the Griffith production is offered, the fame of the song seems to have reached.

HONOR ROLL

"ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA"

By

R. GRUNWALD

Published by Ditson & Co.

Boston—New York.

This is an Oriental Suite comprising

1. In the Arbor—Andante con moto.
2. Dance of the Nubians—Allo. Moderato.
3. Solo Dance—tempo di minuet.
4. Antony's Victory—tempo di Marcia.

These four movements speak for themselves and we heartily recommend this suite to every leader who desires a well stocked library.

Rialto Orchestra Features "Il Guarany."

"Il Guarany," by Gomez, was the overture opening the bill at the Rialto Theatre during the week of September 29. This overture for some time was regarded as a rather difficult piece of interpretation, but by constant repetition it has attained a traditional treatment that in a way appears difficult. The Rialto Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Mr. Finston, played well, but the last movement was too fast and there was a tendency toward choppiness in it that detracted.

Miss Josephine Forsythe was programed to sing an (a) and (b) number composed of "Loch Lomon" and "Coming Thro' the Rye." It is too bad that she did not sing these numbers for her rendition surely would have been better than the one she attempted. "Love Is Best of All," a light operatic solo, calls for range. Miss Forsythe did not show one, though it may have been hidden upon her person somewhere. "Love Is Best of All" requires a little warmth of feeling in portrayal, but the lady seemed cold.

Martin Brefel, a tenor, sang the aria from Flotow's "Martha," in fine voice. His top tones were most pleasing and the bridging of his register showed fine technical training.

The Scenic, dealing with the "Tales of the Tall Timbers," was fitted with an oriental opening. This was poor judgment for it confused the atmosphere. Why use oriental music when a pastorale of natural quality would be most appropriate?

We never fail to marvel at the beautiful settings so simply synchronized for the Animated Magazine. Short numbers are used and this is really the secret of their success. It might be added that well-known melodies play a large part in interpreting the pictorial. Mr. Rothapfel believes in the reinforcement of ideas as well as the association of them.

The feature music is always good and one review becomes so like another that we merely mention it in passing.

The comedy and entr' acts were well played and Marche Militaire, by Schubert, as an organ solo, closed the program.

Music for "Ruling Passions" Pleasing.

At the trade showing of "Ruling Passions," the musical setting proved one of the best we have listened to for a long while. Mr. Luz was responsible for the artistic score and also conducted the large orchestra.

The overture was a bit ragged and the solo instruments had difficulty in cadenzas, but from the commencement of the picture everything went smoothly and in perfect synchrony. The fact that the themes were chosen, not for the principal roles, but for specified emotions, such as Hate, Love, Revenge and Mercy is worthy of special mention and should be followed by all leaders playing this picture.

Another little touch that won comment was the introduction of Ciribiribim to typify the Italian organ grinders. The music always was held subservient to the action and proved pleasing throughout.

Producers should endeavor to show their pictures to the best advantage and that can only be done when the musical accompaniment is well selected and carefully played.

Music Aids in Registering Emotions.

There are two reasons why music bears an important relationship to the motion picture. In the first place, appropriate music helps a picture to "get over" to an audience with the emotion sought for by the players.

Music carries its own delicate appeal which is felt by the audience and sways it to the quick pulsating appreciating of the story unfolded on the screen. That is why many studios today have adopted music to assist emotional stars in putting over some great heart-throbbing scene, the strains of the music making the players feel their parts more deeply, thereby obtaining better results. Just as the music helps the artist attain more realistic expression while acting a role, so will it assist the audience in feeling the proper emotions when the same picture is shown on the screen if appropriate music is played.

Another important bearing music has upon the motion picture is in its appeal to the better classes which are being daily drawn to pictures. Music has done a great deal in elevating the standard of motion picture audiences, and I dare say that in a few years no picture theatre, however small, will be without its orchestra.

Rambles Round Filmtown

With WALTER K. HILL.

Filming the German Peace Drive.

WITH the whine from beyond the Rhine in mind, Bert Adler remarks that Philip Lonergan mentioned to him a Max Linder title of other days:

"Max Comes Across."

Prompted to turn to the file we discover that the French comedian has been played up, in times past, in titles to fit the present situation:

"Max's First Job"—and a tough one.

"Max and the Fuhr M. D."—the M. D. being Dr. Woodrow Wilson.

"Max Takes Tonics"—prescribed by Dr. Wilson.

"Max's Tragedy"—juggling the "buck" passed back to him by Woodrow.

"Max in a Difficult Position"—the surest thing you know.

"Max Hits the High Spots"—closely pursued by Behindeburg, Deludendorf, the Clown Quince, Papa, and the other five.

"Max the Lady Killer"—Miss Germania being the lady in questions.

"Max Gets the Reward"—in nails from Behindeburg's wooden effigy.

"Max's Money"—no good outside of Germany.

"Max's Vacation"—expected to begin at an early date.

"Max Is Forced to Work"—the logical consequences of following Dr. Wilson's orders.

We will now sit tight and listen to the Hunzollern family ode:

"The Watch on the Whine."

Violet Mersereau "Together" Apart.

During the past week Violet Mersereau was the star at both the Broadway and Symphony theatres.

She presented a screen drama titled "Together" in which she plays two separate roles.

This fact presumably made it possible for her to appear at two houses simultaneously, playing one role at the Broadway and the other at the Symphony.

Hanging It on a Nail.

AMONG other matters, Raymond L. Schrock has written a scenario referred to by Rose Shuisinger, his publicist, in a manner thus:

"A Stich in Time" is one of those spontaneous comedies where the situation develops from natural happenings—a beautiful young girl's hat is blown off her head and a young man's trousers come in contact with a nail on one of New York's busiest streets.

"That's perfectly natural, isn't it?" says she.

Then again it might be considered Schrock-ing.

An Editor with Nose for News Meets Filmtown's Born Avis

TOM NORTH, alert for news to fill Pathe's Sun, heard a caller in the Pathe publicity department remark to P. A. Parson something about the exposition at Madison Square Garden. It was the morning after the first Sunday night the movie show was open.

"I was down there last night," said the caller.

North jumped to his feet as though sprung from a catapult.

"So you are the one who was there," said the house-organ editor. "I've been looking for last night's attendance. Will you give me an interview?"

WHEN a Brooklyn exhibitor expressed his admiration for the World's most excellent music department as printed in last issue to this effect:

"I look for your musical column as I do for my breakfast after my bath in the morning.

A cynic signing himself "Fair Play" slammed back the following, with RAMBLES serving as a buffer:

"Is it possible that this poor guy breakfasts only once in seven days?"

Becoming Caption Captious.

NOT wishing to be captious, but just friendly like, with a brick in the other hand, I would like to call your otherwise distracted attention to a bone pulled in the Chalmers' Weekly, dated Oct. 12.

On Page 203 a story done with literary beauty and wise discrimination, contains the information that Geraldine Farrar sold the first f. l. l bond to Sec. Mac, the President's son-in-law. True talk.

But, a little to the East, for instance, on Page 202, there appears a picture, and its adjacent caption, that has more typographical charm than truth, according to the text on the other page. Here we see the daughter of Sid Farrar, the ball player, selling what the caption underneath says is the first bond, to the gentleman who committed political suicide by being elected vice-president of the War Winning and United States.

Knowing that you would be vitally interested, I am, consistently,

Fritz von Tidden.

P. S.—If the picture does refer to the first bond sold at the Central High School, it should be more clearly stated, as it is terribly misleading to us dullards and antiobscurists.

Goldwyn has now released both these:

"For Freedom of the East."

We are looking for "Freedom from the Sneeze?"

E. K. Lincoln naturally has constant offers for the use of his studio in conjunction with his own services as a star player. Business management, however, has thus far proved too irksome for his proclivities, and he has decided to remain for some time under Leonce Perret, whose direction he considers second to none in point of sheer artistry, originality and dramatic power.—Publicity.

An Unfailing Mark of True Genius.

HANFORD C. JUDSON, of the World family (now serving in the U. S. N.), is gifted with the art of misspelling to an acute degree—especially when the word kaleidoscopical was hauled out for parade.

"Called" once for muffing it he argued; the second misspell brought nothing but dense silence, but when he missed it a third time (each having been a different arrangement) Judson rose in justifiable wrath and declared:

"Any fool can misspell a word once; but it take a genius to misspell it in three different ways."

Betty Blythe's pet mouse is dead. It croaked in a desperate encounter with a cat that the janitor of Betty's apartment house smuggled into her home.

It is said on good authority that Mr. Mouse (you'll remember that it was a Mister) went the full ten rounds with the feline fighter only to receive the k. o. at the finish. Anyway he died game and The Rambler won't have to print any more stories about him.

This brief obituary finishes off Betty's pet in great style.

Our idea of the affair is that Eddie dreamed it, convinced his director that it was so and bunked the press agent into advertising it.

Possibly Eddie was "buying" at the Lambs Club and said press agent was "influenced" into believing the story.

THE RAMBLER.

Much Good Work Done by Ontario Exhibitors' Body

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario, Limited, showed its strength at the regular October meeting of the organization in the association headquarters, 143 Yonge street, Toronto, when fifty-nine members gathered to discuss matters of importance to film theatres of the province. This gathering consisted of more than one-third of the paid-up membership of the organization.

To emphasize the development of the association during the past three months Secretary Thomas Scott made a review of the organization's activities. During the months of July, August and September executive meetings had been held three times each month and there had been three general meetings. Five special meetings were held to consider grievances, and a deputation representing the association had waited upon officials of the Ontario Government three times during the period. The association had also received official recognition from various Government heads.

Seven thousand circular and other letters had been sent out from the office of the secretary and Mr. Scott had also published a sixty-four page souvenir album. The financial statement showed a balance on hand of $600. In this connection forty-nine members, twenty-four of whom have theatres outside of the city of Toronto, paid their dues for one year in advance.

During the three months a considerable number of concessions had been secured for members. No less than fifteen members of the organization had been able to secure relief in financial matters during the period, the relief consisting of rebates from contracts and reductions in rent. Nine of these members had been able to secure a reduction of $30 a week from contracts and three others had been able to secure rebates amounting to $20 a week each. Through the association one exhibitor had been able to secure $50 a month reduction in rent of his theatre.

The decision was reached at the October meeting to investigate the possibility of organizing a film exchange or circuit corporation to be affiliated with and controlled by the M. P. E. P. A. O. President Brady, who is the owner of the Madison Theatre, Toronto, was authorized to appoint a committee of five leading members to gather details. If necessary this committee will go to New York to interview officials of various distributing companies. It was felt that several good circuits could be organized among the 151 members of the association, about seventy of whom are located outside of Toronto.

Date Set for Kansas Convention.

The Kansas Exhibitors' Convention is to be held in Hutchinson, Kan., October 21 and 22, according to arrangements being perfected at the present time. Fred Savage and W. T. Robertson, exhibitors from Hutchinson, have been in Kansas City arranging details. A meeting of the local exchange managers was held in the grill room of the Baltimore Hotel Thursday, October 3, for the purpose of co-operating with the Hutchinson managers to make this one of the liveliest conventions ever held in Kansas. Entertainment features, including a theatrical performance at Convention Hall Monday night; the presence of a number of screen stars, with a big ball as the closing event, are being arranged for.

Every exhibitor in the state should attend this convention because matters of vital importance to the trade will be discussed in open meeting. Such problems as Sunday shows, standardizing of admission signs and new ideas of promoting interest will be brought up.

Hold Doorman for Admitting Minor.

Magistrate Mancuso has made the ruling that the individual at the door who actually admits a minor to a moving picture theatre is guilty of violating the law. Heretofore the seller of the ticket was considered equally guilty. The decision was rendered October 9 at the Essex Market Police Court when Max Spiro, manager of a moving picture house at 133 Sussex street, and Frances Semigrand, ticket seller, were arraigned by agents of the children's society for admitting a fourteen-year-old boy.

It was shown that the physical "admitting" was done by the manager, who was at the door. The court dismissed the case against the ticket seller and held the manager in bonds of $500 for trial in Special Sessions.

Madlaine Traverse in Los Angeles.

Having arrived in Los Angeles after a hurried trip from New York, Madlaine Traverse, the new William Fox star, began work Monday at Hollywood, on her first Excel Picture, "The Danger Zone." The picture is from an original story by Marshall Bruce Bennington. The scenario was written by Dennison Clift.

Miss Traverse is being directed in "The Damage Zone," by Frank Beal, one of the veteran directors of the profession. The cast, so far as chosen, includes Miss Traverse in the character of Lola Dupre; Thomas Holding, Fritzie Ridgeway and Edwin Cecil. The picture is being photographed by Harry Gersted.

October 13 Attractions at the New York Theatres

STRAND.—"The Romance of Tarzan," with Elmo Lincoln as the hero, was shown in the Strand the week of October 13. The screen version of the closing chapters of the Edgar Rice Burrough story also has Enid Markey in the cast of James Montgomery Flagg's "Tell It to the Marines," the Allied War Review, and the Topical Review, completed the picture program. Jane Holden and Herbert Waterous were the soloists.

RIVOLI.—The Paramount-Artcraft special production, "Private Peat," headed the list of screen attractions at the Rivoli. Private Peat appears in the picture and takes the leading part. Charles Whittaker wrote the scenario, and Edward Jose directed the production. An O. Henry entitled "A Ramble in Aphasia," a scenic called "Dame Nature's Love," the Allied War Review, and the Animated Pictorial were additional screen numbers. The soloists were Madeleine D'Espinoy and Greek Evans.

RIALTO.—Tom Moore in "Thirty a Week," a Goldwyn picture taken from Thompson Buchanan's successful stage play, had the place of honor on the Rialto program. Tallulah Bankhead plays opposite to the star. Harold Lloyd in "Why Pick On Me," interesting views of Porto Rico, and the Animated Magazine were included in the picture list. Carlo Mejia and Leeta Corder were the vocalists.

KNICKERBOCKER—Griffith's "Hearts of the World."

FORTY-FOURTH STREET.—"Salome" with Theda Bara.

Dinner Given by William L. Sherrill to Metro Executives and Salesmen.

Sherrill Gives Dinner to Competing Salesmen

W. L. SHERRILL invited a number of his friends to a victory dinner arranged for Saturday evening, October 12, at the Hotel Astor, to celebrate the successful outcome of a sales competition he had promoted in association with Metro to assure the widest possible distribution of the Arnold Daly patriotic propoganda feature, "My Own United States." Metro exchanges throughout the country entered the contest with vigor, spurred by an effort to win $1,000 in Fourth Liberty Loan Bonds.

It was Horace Greeley who said of the New York Tribune that "it circulated all over the United States and in New Jersey." The Frohman Amusement Company feature seems to have circulated in New Jersey better than anywhere else, for to Herman F. Jans, manager of Metro's territory in part of New Jersey, was awarded the prize. Jesse L. Goldberg was chosen by Mr. Sherrill to make the presentation speech, and the sheaf of Government bonds passed to Mr. Jans while everybody applauded.

After the dinner had been disposed of came the speechmaking, the climax of oratory marking the passing of the award. Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro; P. A. Powers, Samuel L. Rothapfel, Arnold Daly, Paul H. Cromelin, Joe Farnham and others were called upon by Mr. Sherrill to voice pleasant sentiments that the occasion made most fitting in expression.

Among those present were: Richard Rowland, Harry Cohen, S. MacIntyre, Minneapolis; Harry Cohen, Washington; H. F. James and Maurice Broskie, New Jersey; Arnold Daly, Joe Farnham, Edward Sanders, Lieutenant Arthur James, Jesse Goldberg, Harry Rapp, Pat Powers, I. E. Chadwick, Joe Lee, Captain Merritt Crawford, Samuel Rothapfel, T. Hayes Hunter, Paul H. Cromelin, Jack Sherrill, Walter K. Hill and Sam Spedon.

George Bowles Going to France.

George Bowles, who has been for several months general manager of feature films for the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, will sail for France at the earliest possible moment to act as European representative for the David W. Griffith pictures. These include "The Birth of a Nation," controlled by the Epoch Producing Corporation; "Intolerance," owned by the Wark Producing Corporation, and "Hearts of the World," in which Paramount as well as the British and French Governments are interested. Mr. Bowles will also represent the Division of Films in Paris.

The Griffith pictures have been seen in London and to a considerable extent throughout the English provinces, but France is still virgin soil, and the field for them there, as well as in the other allied and neutral countries, is considered promising. The interest of the French Government in "Hearts of the World," some scenes of which were taken by French photographers, is expected to be a big asset in the French cities.

"France's Dusky Warriors" (Pathe).

No. 8 of "The Far Flung Battle Line," released by Pathe Oct. 20, is called "France's Dusky Warriors." To those who have read Ouida's "Under Two Flags," these pictures will bring all of the atmosphere of the celebrated romance, for views are given of the fighting men of Algiers and Tunis, the two North African protectorates of France.

But the real thrill is in beholding the far-famed Spahis—the native horsemen from Tunis and Algiers—the Ouida fighting men of the Desert—preparing to take their part in the great struggle.

North Dakota May Have Sunday Shows During War

MOVING picture men of the Northwest are behind a strong movement to allow the showing of motion pictures in North Dakota on Sundays for the duration of the war. An effort will be made at the next session of the State Legislature to have amended the state law which prohibits public performances on Sunday in North Dakota.

C. M. Casey, a leading official of the State Council of Defense, is said to be strongly in favor of Sunday moving pictures. He has been in conference with many leading exhibitors discussing the matter.

North Dakota exhibitors have appointed W. R. Dean, of Fargo, and Joe Maitland, of Mandan, to represent them. Benjamin Friedman, president of the Friedman Film Corporation of Minneapolis, during a recent visit to North Dakota, assisted in the preparation of data for the North Dakota State Council of Defense.

Sunday shows, it is estimated, would enrich the coffers of the United States by $25,000 a month if allowed in the state. It is also pointed out that Sunday shows would permit many people to see patriotic productions who otherwise would not have an opportunity. The State Council of Defense is considering the matter from the Government's standpoint, and is expected to make recommendations of a favorable nature during the next session of the Legislature, if it does not act sooner.

The State Council of Defense Leagues are empowered with authority to allow Sunday shows, and the North Dakota council may probably take action without the sanction of the Legislature.

Harold P. Quicksall Dead.

Harold P. Quicksall, the dramatic and motion picture critic of the Philadelphia North American, died at his home in West Philadelphia on Tuesday last a victim of Spanish influenza. In addition to his work with the North American Quicksall was a regular contributor to many of the better class magazines, wrote weekly articles for the Christian Science Monitor and was managing editor of The Photoplay World. He was well known and well liked by theatrical people, a writer of ability and a man that both stage and screen could ill afford to lose.

Judge By Use of Screen Entertains Paroled Men

JUDGE E. J. FLEMING of the South Side Municipal Court, Kansas City, is putting into practice some interesting experiments in which moving pictures play a prominent part. It is a marked divergence from the time-honored precedents of our judicial system, having as it does a distinctly human aspect, but until time proves them impractical, Judge Fleming's ideas might well become more widespread. Thursday night, Oct. 3, the non-support parole list, or domestic difficulty cases, as they are often called, held a meeting at the courtroom at 8 o'clock, for what was merely an evening of entertainment. All men were requested to bring their families, and the city taxicab companies donated means of conveyance. The entertainment consisted of a five-reel feature and a comedy, with a three-piece colored orchestra accompaniment. There was also some singing and a reading. About 150 persons were present at this first meeting, including a large number of children. Judge Fleming is arranging to hold these evening meetings every two weeks for those of the class who wish to come. It is the purpose of the gatherings to foster a feeling that the court is a man's friend and not merely a machine to make good behavior compulsory. Deeper than that is the endeavor to foster good feeling in the home and help a man to get acquainted with his family. If the experiment works out to the advantage of the parolers, it is hoped that later this organization may in a measure take the place of weekly reports and salary division at the Welfare Board.

Judge Fleming plans to make the moving picture a permanent part of the program, using good features, comedies, and educational films. The films used for the first evening were donated by the Universal Film exchange, the equipment and machines by the Kansas City Machine and Supply Company, while the Operator's Union furnished the services of an operator.

Lieutenant Farren Killed in Airplane Accident

WITH startling suddenness the war was forcefully brought home to Rochester theatre men Saturday afternoon, October 5, when an airplane crashed to the ground at Dayton, Ohio, instantly killing Lieutenant Phillip Henry Farren, only brother of John J. Farren, secretary of the Rochester Theatre Company and manager of the Victoria Theatre. Young Farren, popularly known as "Harry," was graduated from the Government flying school at Princeton University, and was detailed to duty as a Government tester at the acceptance field of the Dayton-Wright Airplane Company, at Dayton, where the fatal accident occurred. Harry was for a long time intimately associated with his brother at the Victoria.

Young Farren was twenty-seven years of age. Before entering the aviation service he was for a time engaged in supervising the erection of big signs on Broadway. At the time of the Third Liberty Loan he was in a New York Theatre when an actor offered his hat to the purchaser of the biggest block of Liberty Bonds. Young Farren, not to be outdone, offered his "wings." The insignia went to the purchaser of $3,000 worth of bonds, and being returned was awarded to the purchaser of $5,000 worth.

Rochester Theatre men are a unit in extending their sympathy to their brother manager at the Victoria, and typified it by many beautiful offerings of flowers. The funeral, which was held in Rochester, was a military one. The band and training battalion of the Kodak Park School of Aerial Photography took part. As the cortege left the church and wended its way to the cemetery flyers from Baker Field, Rochester, hovered over the procession, dropping flowers and doing the "dip" with which the birdmen salute a brother who has made the supreme sacrifice

POMEROY KEEN FOR ATTRACTIVE LOBBY

Montreal Exhibitor Firm Believer in Letting the Front of His House Be Best Advertisement

HARRY POMEROY, of the Holman Theatre, Montreal, is a firm believer in letting the front of his house be one of his best advertisements, and he goes to some expense to assure the selling value of his houses. This, of course, does not mean the adoption of a set form of advertisement, but the adaptation of the display to the chief film being shown.

Where the story does not suggest some unique dressing, he frequently has recourse to the straight painted poster, covering the house front, an excellent example of which is shown in the first illustration. Here the sign painter, following Mr. Pomeroy's sketch, has produced a design which would be worthy of adoption by the manufacturers for a stock lithograph.

The title is prominently displayed, with a tasteful ornamentation, and the same idea is carried down into the two lobby frames as well as those built into the corners of the lobby. The effect is rich and harmonious, in keeping with the nature of the story. Mr. Pomeroy designs all of his house fronts as well as the drawn designs used for advertising, one of which was recently credited in the Advertising for Exhibitors' department to Al Nathan, his press man, whose name was signed to the letter accompanying the cut.

A Special Design for a House Front Originated by Harry Pomeroy for the Holman Theatre, Montreal.

A Poster Design Supplemented by a Special Dressing for the Lobby in Which a Trading Post Is Well Suggested.

A somewhat similar poster was prepared for "That Devil Bateese," but here the box offices, on either side of the main entrance, are built into representations of Hudson Bay trading posts with snow shoes, sledges, tools and various other wares. A trolley pole cuts into the display somewhat, but the idea is clearly shown. Here the lobby frame serves to advertise a comedy on the same bill. The signs over the box offices are roughly hand lettered to carry out the suggestion, and it will be noticed that the greenery is carried over to the permanent frames to include them in the display.

A somewhat similar display for another house has the same idea of a tree decorated lobby, but here the box office is encompassed by a wigwam to carry out the idea of the Western plains. The top of the tepee is surmounted by a bust cut-out of the star. This house is smaller and does not lend itself so well to the suggestion of space, but the idea is faithfully carried out and shows that even a small house can get a proper effect with a little effort intelligently applied.

Another Lobby Display Which Suggests the Outdoor Character of the Story, With the Box Office in a Tepee.

An oriental atmosphere is given another design by the painting above the booth and by masking the box office with a Sphinx head. This is merely a flat painting and not a modeled head, with a space cut for the window. The painting is carried down either side of the lobby on a pair of flats. At night the eyes are electrically illuminated. All of these paintings, it might be noted, are in two parts for convenience in handling, though the joining seldom shows as clearly as it does in this example.

A Lobby Decoration for "Sirens of the Sea" in Which the Title Is Exceptionally Well Displayed.

A more conventional painting is shown for "Sirens of the Sea." Here the design is carried right down to the sidewalk and is repeated in the painting around the box office, which shows mermaids on either side of the window to carry out the general idea. Small stills of the subject are affixed to the lower part of the upper painting to carry on the suggestion of the pretty scenes.

It will be noted that in all of the displays the title is always clearly shown. Nothing in the painting is permitted to obscure this. The title is the chief item of display and Mr. Pomeroy sees to it that nothing is permitted to interfere. He can lay out his own design and is not at the mercy of his artist. He shows him what to do instead of letting the painter tell him what can be done.

None of these displays is expensive in proportion to the results that are attained, and practically all of them can be duplicated in small towns where there is a sign painter. The results achieved may not be as artistic as those shown by Mr. Pomeroy, for he is successful above the average, and shows a nice sense of display that is due to inherent ability, but creditable results can be achieved by almost any exhibitor and the neighborhood house, in particular, can profit largely through the use of special lobby decoration.

"The Birth of a Nation" Is Again Out of Ohio

OUT of Ohio again is "The Birth of a Nation." At least the Governor, James M. Cox, says that the owners have agreed to withdraw it.

This picture was held up by the censors for two years and then finally passed. Immediately leaders of the colored race started agitation against it. They used their official paper, the Gazett. Appeal was made to the United States Government, but the War Department officials declined to do anything on the ground that it did not violate the espionage law, dealing with the relations of this country and the enemy nations, and therefore without the jurisdiction of the War Department.

Then appeal was made to Governor Cox. On September 30 he sent a letter to the Gazette announcing that the owners of "The Birth of a Nation" had voluntarily withdrawn the picture at the Governor's request.

"The Birth of a Nation" in the meantime had played all of the big cities and many small towns, except that it did not play in a thorough manner the neighborhood theatres of the large cities.

The final showing in Cleveland was September 29 and 30 and October 1 at the Savoy Theatre.

FATHER OF PEGGY HYLAND DEAD.

Peggy Hyland, the William Fox star, last week received a cable dispatch notifying her that her father, Dr. Cyril George Hutchinson, had died while traveling between an Atlantic port and England. Dr. Hutchinson was buried at sea. The cablegram did not state the cause of Dr. Hutchinson's death. When he left this country apparently he was enjoying normal health. Dr. Hutchinson had been connected with the United States transport service as a surgeon, administering to troops going to France, and in this capacity had just made two trips across the ocean.

Music At California Theatre Is Highly Praised by Critic

THE California Theatre, San Francisco, which opened its doors about a year ago, has not only become famous for the excellence of its screen attractions but has established a reputation for itself as the home of good music. Its latest venture along this line is winning the plaudits of patrons and critics alike. From the opening day it has maintained a large symphony orchestra and this has been improved from time to time until it is considered to stand second only to the magnificent San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, the premier musical organization of the Far West. The latest brilliant stroke of the management of this house has been to secure the services of Herman Heller as director of the orchestra. The excellence of its judgment is being reflected in increased box office receipts, indicating that after all people go to moving picture theatres for something other than the screen offering.

Walter Anthony, one of the most capable of the local musical and dramatic critics, recently devoted considerable space to the engagement of Director Heller and what this meant to the community at large. In the course of his article he said: "It is always from unexpected sources that the unexpected comes. We have been worrying about music for the masses. The public itself, I believe, has found its own way to music, and the opportunity to do a big thing is knocking at the doors of the California Theatre, or any other picture playhouse for that matter that has the enterprise and the willingness to hazard money on the accuracy of its judgments.

Herman Keller a Musician.

"I mention the California specifically because it has gone the furthest in the matter of music and seems destined to take still another step forward toward the big things which, I believe, can be done for itself and for the public. In the selection of Herman Heller as director of its orchestra the California Theatre management has taken to its bosom a musician who will be restrained with difficulty from following the bent of his energetic convictions about his art.

"Efforts to uplift the character of the public tastes in tone invariably proceed on the basis of economic attractions. Music must be offered cheap is the general conviction. Doubtless price has something to do with public response to invitations to entertainments, but I have not yet observed that any attraction is ever embarrassed for patronage when the entertainment happens to hit the public's fancy. Capacity, seating area—a place to put the multitude—is what bothers the promoters of popular entertainment. 'Do we want it?' is the first question which the public asks. 'What does it cost?' is the secondary consideration. Acoustically it is a pity that our San Francisco Symphony Orchestra is not as well placed as this California Theatre organization. In point of environment, comfort and elegance nothing more could be desired.

Aitkens Are Interested in "Mickey" Distribution

A STORY that recently appeared in the trade publications stated that "Mickey" has been taken over for distribution by the Birth of a Nation syndicate. In order to clear up any misunderstanding that may exist as a result of this announcement it was given out at the Birth of a Nation offices in New York that there is no connection between the two production other than that some officers of the Epoch Producing Corporation, which owns "The Birth of a Nation," are interested in a new organization, which is now planning a nation-wide distribution of "Mickey."

H. E. Aitken, president of the Epoch Producing Corporation, and Roy Aitken, secretary of that company, prominently identified with the success of "The Birth of a Nation," are now interested in the new organization which will handle the distribution of "Mickey." Elaborate plans for the new scheme have been outlined by these men, but according to an announcement made at their offices yesterday these plans are not sufficiently concrete to warrant any other announcement than the preliminary statement that they have taken over "Mickey" and are preparing to give it a widespread distribution and advertising.

Agricultural Department to Issue Film Weekly

PLANS of film production by the Department of Agriculture for the fall and winter months to stimulate food production and conservation provide for a weekly output of about 1,000 feet of negative. According to an announcement just made by Don Carlos Ellis, in charge of motion picture activities for the department, an average of about one reel a week is to be released during the next six months for use in next spring's agricultural campaigns.

These films will represent all parts of the country and will include the following subjects: Meeting farm labor problems in the Eastern, Middle and Far Western States; control of hog cholera, staged in Iowa; control of animal parasites, filmed in Texas and Washington; the story of wheat in the great wheat fields of the Pacific Northwest; exterminating the prairie dog in Arizona; harvesting California cantaloupes and potatoes; citrus fruit fumigation in southern California; big game on the Wichita game preserve in Oklahoma; the Red Cross pig club; national forests as the Nation's playgrounds; forest fire fighting; control and prevention of dust explosions caused by smut in wheat; drying fruits and vegetables in the home; logging timber for wooden ships and the construction of wooden ships; and the manufacture and use of cottage cheese—all of which already have been filmed.

Many Pictures to Aid Farmers.

Pictures on the handling of beef cattle, clean milk production, the "cootie" (taken in co-operation with the Army Surgeon General's office), cordwood production through improvement cuttings in farm woodlands, and prize dairy cattle throughout the United States, are now in process of filming. Pictures of hog raising, to be taken in Kansas and Iowa, of cattle on the national forests of the Pacific Coast, and the work of Uncle Sam's sheep clubs, are yet to be filmed.

The Department of Agriculture intends greatly to broaden its plan of educational distribution, through the medium of the extension departments of the State agricultural colleges, to all educational agencies throughout the States.

"The department recognizes in motion pictures," said Mr. Ellis, "a most potent vehicle for getting before the farmer, housewife and the general public the important lessons in agriculture, home economics and food conservation, which must be learned and practiced if our country is to perform its gigantic task of feeding ourselves, our armies and the people of the nations associated with us in the war against the Hun."

Eugene Walter to Write for Screen.

Eugene Walter, author of such stage successes as "Paid in Full," "The Easiest Way" and "Fine Feathers," is to associate himself with Norma Talmadge. He has contracted to write three original screen stories for her. Mr. Walter is now finishing the first of the trio, as yet unnamed, which will be produced immediately after "The Heart of Wetona." The association of Miss Talmadge and Eugene Walter should prove one of great interest to all who are interested in the silent drama.

Taking the Cussedness Out of the Film Splice.

THE mechanical department of the motion picture industry is of such vital importance to the industry as a whole that it is always interesting to take account of its progress or to study new developments in it. Progress in this department during the past ten years has been quite as marked as in other departments of the industry and necessarily so since these departments depend to a very considerable degree upon the mechanical department for the means with which to carry on their work.

Two things in particular mark the development of the mechanical department of the motion picture industry in recent years—improvement in the design and construction of the machines and instruments used, and the standardization of the most important of these machines and instruments. This work has been carried so far that standardized machines and instruments of improved design are now available for the carrying forward of the most important mechanical processes of the industry.

While the splicing of film may not be one of the most important mechanical processes of the industry it is a process which—if improperly carried out—may be a never-ending source of annoyance and loss. The Bell & Howell standard film splicing machine is offered as their solution of this problem.

To anyone connected with the motion picture industry, the type of film splice still in common use is about as familiar as is the motion picture. It has been made, or patched, or cussed at by pretty nearly every one, from studio and laboratory, to exchange and projecting room. The emulsion is scraped from two strips of film. Cement is applied and one piece is laid upon the other so that the cemented surfaces meet. When the job is done the result is as shown in Fig. No. 1, which is magnified forty diameters. This method of splicing very nearly doubles the thickness of the film and naturally makes it stiffer and less pliable at the splice than at other points in its length. Splices so made are not uniform in width, nor are they all made on the same frame line, that is, in the same relation to the perforations. As might be expected, they interfere with projection, pull apart, and in general, prove proper subjects for improvement.

What the Bell & Howell Company has done to improve upon the splice is perhaps best illustrated in Fig. No. 2, also magnified 40 diameters. They do not double the thickness of the film. In fact, they add but two and one-half thousandths of an inch to its thickness. Such a splice does not stiffen the film appreciably. Indeed, it is claimed that the film is as pliable at the splice as at any other point. The splice is standardized as to width and as to its relation to the frame line, and it is so narrow that it rarely exceeds the frame line in width. It is said that the film is so firmly joined by this splice, that it is as likely to give away at any other point as at the splice. The important element in the strength of the splice is to be found in the beveling of the surfaces. In this way, the surface to be cemented is increased without adding to the thickness of the film.

The new machine has already found its way into a large number of laboratories and appears to have amply justified the claims made for it

Blackton Making Second Special.

While many have been wondering when Commodore J. Stuart Blackton's super-feature, "The Common Cause," would be completed and scheduled, the producer has "stolen a march" by quietly making another big production, which, it is declared, will prove a distinct surprise. It is entitled "Safe for Democracy," and is founded on an original story and scenario by Anthony Paul Kelly, who also adapted the first named special.

This means that "The Common Cause," with Herbert Rawlinson and Sylvia Breamer heading an all-star cast, has been completed for about three weeks, and that instead of immediately beginning the production of "The Battle Cry of Liberty," announced as the next Blackton feature, the commodore changed his plans and decided to produce "Safe for Democracy" first.

Kaufman Promoted to Captain.

Captain Albert A. Kaufman, formerly general production manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's eastern studios, has left for overseas, where he has been intrusted with the duty of supervising the work of the cameramen of the Signal Corps.

Correcting an Obvious Error.

In last week's issue of The World an error, obvious upon the face of it, crept into a business announcement made by Joseph L. Plunkett and Frank Carroll concerning Julia Arthur's coming screen appearances in "The Woman the Germans Shot." The type made the assertion that the presentation of the feature would mark "the motion picture debut of Julia Arthur and Edith Cavell."

When the printer substituted "and" for "as" the palpable error appeared—for Edith Cavell is the martyred English nurse, murdered by Germans in Belgium, whom Miss Arthur will impersonate in the screenings of "The Woman the Germans Shot." "Hope springs eternal" that some day mistakes will not appear in the transition of "copy" into type, but the error noted above proves that the publisher's millennium has not yet arrived.

Young Simone Seriously Wounded.

Charles Simone, manager of the General Film Exchange in New Haven, learns that his son, Peter C. E. Simone, of Bayonne, N. J., film laboratory expert, and who was severely wounded while fighting in France, as was told in a recent issue of this journal, is at Base Hospital No. 6 at Bordeaux. Mr. Simone is hoping for the boy's ultimate recovery, although the injury is conceded to be serious. Young Simone has been in the hospital for two months.

"Pals First" a Hit at the Broadway.

Harold Lockwood's debut as a star under the banner of Screen Classics, Inc., which productions are distributed by Metro, was auspiciously made when "Pals First," a picturization of the stage success of the same name, prepared by Lee Wilson Dodd from the novel of the same name, opened at the Broadway Theatre, New York, for a week's engagement.

Film commentators for the daily press were unanimous in declaring the picture one of exceptional merit.

Censorship Threatens Cleveland.

There is a move on in Cleveland which will result in local censorship for moving picture theatres if the exhibitors do not combat it. About a year ago an ordinance was introduced in council to censor legitimate theatre performances. It was tabled, but lately it was resurrected, and some one introduced an amendment covering picture theatres. It is now in the hands of the judiciary committee.

Bring "Romanoffs" Up to Date.

George Edwardes-Hall last week added the condemnation of the Czar, his execution and the death of the Czarewitch to "The Fall of the Romanoffs." This was done at the urging of many exhibitors, and brings this picture right up to the minute.

Alfred Hickman, Cyril Brenon, Franklyn Murray, J. J. Tanner, Phillip Van Loane and many others were in the cast.

Producers' and Distributors' News

Frank Keenan in "The Bells" Leads Pathe Oct. 20.

THE Pathe Program for the week beginning October 20 is headed by Frank Keenan in the extra selected star photoplay, "The Bells." A pre-release at the Rialto of this story, which brought Henry Irving fame, resulted in high commendation for both the artistic work of the star and the deft direction and artistic lighting of the picture.

The second episode of "The Wolves of Kultur," released Oct. 20, is called, "The Iron Chair." Leah Baird, with Sheldon Lewis and Charles Hutchison, go through rapid and intensely dramatic action in the endeavor to recover the stolen plans of the murdered American inventor.

Toto, formerly of the New York Hippodrome, who is steadily slap sticking his way into popular appreciation, appears in a Rolin Comedy, entitled "An Enemy of Soap." It is clean all the way through and fairly froths with the suds of laughter.

Episode No. 10 of "Hands Up," featuring Ruth Roland, is called "The Sun Message," and she and George Larkin participate in a breathless adventure with the Incas and the bandits. Echo, the heroine, finds her long lost father.

No. 19 of the Post Travel Series, "On Caribbean-lapped Shores," takes us on a cruise around the West Indies amid beautiful tropical scenery and quaint and interesting natives. It is an education on the region of eternal sunshine which lies right at our doors.

The Official War Review No. 17 shows how Pershing's boys captured thousands of German prisoners, and gives views of the locations in which some of the most terrific fighting of the war has taken place.

The first of "Winning the War" series will be released by Pathe Oct. 20, and shows how here at home a vast army is aiding in the gigantic undertaking by work outdoors—thousands of eager, active boys and men laboring in the fields and doing, in various ways, the things that will aid the great war machine of the allies in achieving the triumph of democracy.

Walter to Write Script for "The Belle of New York"

JULIUS STEGER has started in in great shape to keep his promise of a production extraordinary in Marion Davis' third Select Picture, "The Belle of New York." Two steps looking to this end have been taken in securing the co-operation of Eugene Walter as scenario writer and of Flo Ziegfeld and his famous Ziegfeld beauty chorus.

The preparation of the scenario of so famous a stage production as "The Belle of New York," by such a master craftsman as Eugene Walter, should produce results. The transformation of the script of "The Belle of New York" into a working scenario for Marion Davies by Mr. Walter insures that everything possible will be done to display to advantage the beauty and charm of the Select star.

Quite as important is the assistance which Mr. Ziegfeld is giving Mr. Steger. Not only will one of the important scenes of the play be staged on the roof of the New Amsterdam Theatre, where the Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic is held each night, but Mr. Ziegfeld's co-operation even extends to the loaning of Mr. Steger for these scenes members of the Ziegfeld beauty chorus—an attraction in themselves.

"Twilight" Will Be Doris Kenyon's Next

DORIS KENYON'S next picture following "Wild Honey" will be entitled "Twilight." Theodore C. Deitrich, president of Doris Kenyon's company, De Luxe Pictures, Inc., has signed contracts for the motion picture rights of the story, which appeared in the October issue of the Metropolitan Magazine under the title of "The Alchemy of Love." Like "Wild Honey," the magazine story was written by Vingie E. Roe, who is rapidly coming to the front as a writer. Louis Joseph Vance, who made the screen adaptation of "Wild Honey," is also making the screen version of "The Alchemy of Love" under the title of "Twilight."

Like all of Mrs. Roe's writings, the story is laid in the great outdoors, with red-blooded men and women who accomplish great things. Miss Kenyon will assume the title role of Twilight, a lumber-camp girl, who temporarily loses her reason over the mistaken belief that she has committed a murder. The story is dramatic.

Work on "Twilight" will be started at the Biograph Studio immediately on completion of "Wild Honey."

Next Bushman-Bayne Is "Ancient Enemy."

"The Ancient Enemy," an original photo-drama by Archer McMackin, author of numerous stories for the screen, has been chosen as the next Metro production for Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne. Work on the picture will be begun at once. John Ince will direct and Bernard J. Durning will be his assistant director, with Frank Williams as the cameraman. Katharine Kavanaugh is providing the working script. It is a Southern story.

"Everybody's Girl" a Pretty Love Story.

"Everybody's Girl," the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature scheduled for release the week of October 21, is the first of eight productions in which Alice Joyce will be presented in the ensuing year. The story is adapted from O. Henry's "Brick Dust Row."

Miss Joyce has the role of Florence, who was obliged to meet her men friends in the park and on the street corners, because the owner of Brick Dust Row had sublet the parlor, and there was no other place to meet them. She is just a happy American girl in a little flat in a big city who has a protector in an ex-gang man, and a sweetheart in a man she met on a Coney Island boat. He is "different" to her and she to him, and so they come to love each other. And all the time he is the millionaire owner of Brick Dust Row, and she never dreams it.

World Pictures, quick to recognize and appreciate the good work of its actors, has seen fit to give to Jack Drumier a position of prominence in the billing of the new Madge Evans picture, which will be known under the title of "The Love Net," instead of "The Latch String."

Scene from "Reckoning Day" (Triangle).

Three Leading Trianglers Head "Reckoning Day" Cast

THREE of Triangle's leading players who by their work have established themselves in the hearts of photoplay enthusiasts are given exacting roles in "Reckoning Day," the Triangle release for October 20.

Belle Bennett is eminently fitted to be Jane, the woman whose keen intellect is the master mind that successfully conquers the growth of German intrigue which flourishes destructively in the name of charity.

J. Barney Sherry, known as the screen millionaire, lends all the force and dignity of his personality to the role of a Senator very much in love with the woman who is anxious to perform her patriotic duty in unearthing the alien propaganda before assuming the happy responsibilities of the wife of an honored official.

Jack Richardson as Kube, the head of a band of charity workers promoted to further the plans of the German intelligence department, should duplicate his success in "His Enemy the Law" and many other Triangle productions for which he received favorable comment.

A supporting cast of unusual length chosen with care by Harry Pollard is said to furnish this picture with players of exceptional ability.

Robert F. Hill, the author, has based the story on an actual experience of the secret service department during 1918 with a fake charity organization which was carrying on its crooked work in the nation's capitol. The action is framed largely in the home of the wealthy, calling for many beautiful interiors, which the Triangle technical department has supplied. R. E. Irish was the cameraman.

Americanism Theme of Cabanne Subject.

W. Christy Cabanne says that the principles of liberty and democracy for which this country stand are an unconscious education in the spirit of true Americanism. The foreign born citizen of the United States absorbs the atmosphere of freedom and democracy until, when it comes to protecting the land of his adoption, he is moved by the same spirit that moves a descendant of the Pilgrims to fight for the Stars and Stripes.

This is the theme Mr. Cabanne has made the subject of "The American Spirit." Mr. Cabanne wrote, directed and produced "The American Spirit," distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, and also directed such popular propaganda films as "Draft 258" and "The Slacker."

The hero of "The American Spirit" is an American, but his patriotic spirit is that of the South before the Civil War. He was brought up by his grandfather, a Confederate veteran who still firmly believes in the principles of the Lost Cause, the bitterness of what he considers an unjustifiable defeat still rankling in his heart. To the young Southerner the Stars and Bars is his flag—the Stars and Stripes the emblem of his enemy.

In the working out of the story Mr. Cabanne shows how racial prejudices and inherited tendencies become purely superficial and are swept away under the influence of great patriotic emergencies.

E. K. Lincoln, virile and energetic, is starred in "The American Spirit" in the role of the young man whose true American Spirit lay dormant.

"Tales of the Tall Timber."

One of the most important short pictures recently issued by the Educational Films Corporation is Robert C. Bruce's "Tales of the Tall Timber," which was prereleased to the New York Rialto the first week of October, and goes out to the regular Educational first-run houses the week of October 14. Not only are the entertainment values fully up to the Bruce average, but the picture has permanent worth. It records the old and the new ways of logging—the initial processes that condition the "bridge of ships" between France and America. It was photographed in the redwoods of Northern California and the pines of Northern Idaho.

Hampton Lines Up Kerrigan Stories.

Jesse D. Hampton seems to have no difficulty in finding suitable stories for J. Warren Kerrigan. He has just announced to the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, distributors of Hampton-Kerrigan pictures, that he has secured "Four Ace Baker," a picturesque melodrama of the days of '49, and "Uncharted Channels," a comedy-romance. These will follow "Three X Gordon," comedy-drama to be released Oct. 28; "Come Again, Smith," a comedy melodrama, and "The Unfinished Story," an Alaskan drama.

New Empire Installs Cameragraph.

Power's Cameragraph has been installed in the new Empire Theatre, Fall River, Mass. This is one of the finest theatres in New England, seating over 2,500. H. A. & E. S. Taylor made the installation.

Barker's Socialists Give Him Some Regular Realism

REGINALD BARKER gives an interesting account of his experience with a mob of real socialists while he was directing Thomas Dixon's "The One Woman," the special production distributed by Select Pictures Corporation.

There is a splendidly realistic mob scene toward the center of the picture, when the crowd collected in the Temple of the Brotherhood of Man insists on carrying a resolution against conscription despite the objections of their leader. The course of the story indicates that this wild collection of socialists, anarchists, I. W. W.'s, and members of various cults, fed upon a succession of fiery speeches, pass beyond the control of Gordon, who opposes them. A riot follows. Mr. Barker says that he was anxious to obtain a particularly good effect in this mob scene, and employed many means of working up the enthusiasm of his motley crew.

"And we succeeded almost too well," Mr. Barker explained. "After starting a riot which culminated in the ejection of their real leader, Gordon, from the hall when he opposed an anti-conscription resolution, the mob was supposed to continue the commotion for a few seconds while my cameraman made a fade-out. But instead of this, that riot continued and continued and continued, and the speaker kept up his ranting from the platform long after I had called 'cut' and the cameraman had ceased turning his crank.

"The explanation is simple, and it shows a great many things—the power of a strong speaker to inflame an audience, and the temper of a certain class of American today. We had to have about three or four hundred extras for that scene, and they were procured in Los Angeles upon very short notice, mostly from the unemployed who were attracted by the chance to work and appear in 'the movies.' In fact, some of them were procured at a sort of socialistic meeting the evening before, where my men had been scouting to find certain types we needed.

"One of the types was the speaker. He soon proved himself well capable of the part, and made a realistic speech in the rehearsal. So I instructed him to turn loose when the scene was to be filmed. He did; and I have seldom heard a more powerful, but at the same time more radical socialistic or perhaps I had better say anarchistic speech. In a few minutes, while my cameras were making the most of the scene, he had a large part of the audience entirely forgetful of the fact that they were working in a picture. He forgot it also.

"It was quite a task to quiet them down and get the rest of the scenes, but the extra work was well worth while in the added realism obtained. There is your explanation of the effectiveness of this part of the picture. For the time being, the crowd was not acting; in fact, they did not know how to act anyway, being not the regular types of studios extras. But they did far better. They lived the part, and forgot all about having to act, thanks to the intensity of their own feelings and to the power of the speaker."

Simplex Installations Reported.

Among the installations reported by Dwyer Brothers & Company, 26 West Naghten street, Columbus, with a branch at 631 Walnut street, Cincinnati, Simplex distributors in the states of Kentucky and Southern Ohio, are the following: Murphy Theatre, Wilmington, Ohio; Virginia Theatre, Wellston, Ohio; LeMax Theatre, Wilmington, Ohio; Capitol Theatre, Frankfort, Ky.; Lyceum Theatre, Cincinnati; C. H. Brown, Zanesville; M. C. Weisinger, Danville, Ky.; W. J. Romans, Lancaster, Ky.; J. B. Stout, Danville, Ky.; L. M. Luchs, Marietta, Ohio; Bert Fialo, Dayton; Longly & Steenrod, Nelsonville, Ohio; Frank Moyer, Georgetown, Ohio; Andy Sankers, Hamilton, Ohio, and Pastime Amusement Company, Columbus.

Scene from "Mongrels" (Fox).

Daschund Gets Licked by Three Allied Pups

ONE of the amusing features of the latest Fox-Lehrman Sunshine Comedy, "Mongrels," is an allegory of the war performed by dogs. All the big features of the war are revealed by four dogs, which, with an almost uncanny ability, portray the parts of the four leading nations at war.

In making the picture, Mr. Lehrman had printed a big sign reading, "Enemy aliens must not cross this line." On one side of the line is shown a French poodle gnawing a bone.

A dachshund, wearing a Hun helmet, comes along, crosses the line and attacks the poodle. The poodle puts up a valiant defense of his rights, but as he is fighting, a vapor bursts, from the dachshund's mouth, representing the Germans' poison gas.

The English bulldog comes to the aid of the poodle, and the two pursue the dachshund into a kennel, which rocks and rolls violently during the conflict.

Then, seeing that the dachshund is still full of fight, the poodle runs away and brings back an American terrier. The American terrier, the French poodle and the English bulldog pitch into the German dachshund and clean him up with neatness and dispatch.

In filming the picture, the fight closed with the band playing "The Star Spangled Banner" and everybody on the side-lines cheering for victory.

Stage Assassination Scene.

A startling representation of the assassination of the Grand Duke Franz Ferdinand at Sarajeco was recently staged at a handsome Long Island estate, in connection with the coming Screen Classics, Inc., super-feature, "Wilson or the Kaiser?" This now historical scene was reproduced in every detail under the guidance of Director Charles Miller. Associated with Director Miller are Leander de Cordova and Edward Lawrence. George K. Hollister, who photographed the Screen Classics production, "To Hell With the Kaiser," is chief cameraman.

Current Events Shows Whippets.

Pictures of the famous Whippet tank which has been largely responsible for the successes of General Foch against the Germans in France are being shown today in Universal Current Events. The film shows the remarkable mobility of this new type of land warships. The whippet is much smaller than the old style tank, gets about with remarkable speed, and at the same time is quite as destructive and heavily armed as its heavier brother, all of which the Current Events pictures clearly show.

Human Plays in Powell Production.

William Human, better known as plain Billy Human, creates the role of the weak brother in "The Forfeit," the Frank Powell production starring House Peters and Jane Miller that will be the first of a series distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

The Sun-Light Arc Invites a Test of Its Capabilities

FROM time to time we hear it said by directors and cameramen that, while the Sun-Light Arc is a beautiful light, with an immense volume and value of color, having all the wonderful effects of pure sunlight, it is good for exterior lighting only. Others say that they understand they cannot take close-ups, or that it cannot be used in small sets.

The Sun-Light Arc that illuminated the Madison Square Garden during the exposition can also be used in a small set and for close-ups with wonderfully artistic effects. It can be shaded or directed from one source into many directions on a set, giving beautiful gradations of light and definition.

It is not necessary to use other lights for diffusing this light in either small or large sets. The volume of light is so great that by placing a shutter hood over the face of the lens of the Sun-Light Arc it would cut out every particle of illumination. But having eight shutters on this hood working independently of each other these shutters can be opened at several different angles in order to direct a certain quantity of light on the subject desired, or on a number of subjects at the same time, thus giving the different gradations of light.

A brief resume of some of the illuminating successfully accomplished by the Sun-Light Arc with most pleasing photography is as follows:

Hotel Biltmore, M. P. D. C. Ball, 2 lights. Hotel Astor, 2 lights, Annual Pageantry Ball showing 300 couples dancing. Metropolitan Opera House, 2 lights, used by Famous Players in Caruso picture. Manhattan Opera House, 3 lights, full scene used by Famous Players, Caruso (Director Jose). Fort Lee, 1 light, exterior street scenes, Caruso. Fort Lee, 1 light, "Private Pete" (Director Jose) exterior, Here a scene was taken with the Sun-Light Arc fully one-quarter of a mile away with beautiful results. Famous Players, 1 light in "Out of a Clear Sky," Marguerite Clark (Director Marshall Neilan). Commodore Stuart Blackton, 1 light, "Common Enemies." Vitagraph Company, 2 lights in a set 60x100, and most of it by 1 light.

Remember the results at Madison Square Garden from Oct 5 to 13. The Sun-Light Arc is portable, weighs about 200 lbs., occupies a floor space of 3x3 feet, has interchangeable parts, parabolic mirrors, clear wire glass lenses, frosted lenses, iris shutters, Hood shutters, and can be made as a searchlight extending illumination many miles, or as a flood light or high lighting wherever desired.

The Woolworth Building was photographed at night with an out light and camera one and a half miles away with good results.

The Sun-Light Arc Company extends an invitation to all producers to visit the Sun-Light Arc Company's office at 218 West 48 street, New York, and have their cameraman and director direct a scene in this small studio, which is 12x38, and make a test of close-ups and the various gradations of light obtained through this method of illumination. Appointment for such demonstration may be made by telephone or mail.

Mutt and Jeff Go to Russia.

Russia, the land of forty revolutions a minute, is the scene of the latest activities of Mutt and Jeff, Captain Bud Fisher's famous comic characters. In "Bulling the Bolsheviki," which is announced by the Fox Film Corporation as a new Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoon, the well-known comic team tries to put a porous plaster of common sense on the back of aching Russia.

They reach the land of bomb inhalers, caviar and quick death in time to see an example of Bolsheviki administration. Meeting a down and out Bolshevist, they are surprised when they see that the bewiskered statesman is not scheduled to stay down very long, as there is a bomb under him, which is swelling so fast that it is only a question of seconds before it will come to a head.

Going right away from there they find themselves at the Bolsheviki headquarters in the midst of a 5 o'clock bomb party. After several hair-raising exploits and escapes from what the Russians think is a good time, Mutt and Jeff make their exit. Although they did not save Russia, they had a pleasant day out in the open air.

Naomi Childers in Lockwood Support.

Naomi Childers, well known film player, has been engaged to play the leading feminine role opposite Harold Lockwood in Metro's screen version of George Gibb's novel, "The Yellow Dove," production of which has been begun by Edwin Carewe, managing director of the Lockwood company. Miss Childers has achieved wide recognition for the work on the screen. She registered her first successes with the Vitagraph Company in whose productions she appeared for five years. For three of these years she was one of Vitagraph's featured players.

Vitagraph Will Soon Release "The Common Cause"

VITAGRAPH is laying plans for the early release of J. Stuart Blackton's production, "The Common Cause." Commodore Blackton is now putting the finishing touches on the completed production, and the picture will be ready for distribution within a short time.

It is the plan of the Vitagraph Company to give this production the same big treatment as was given Commodore Blackton's other big special productions. This means that a complete line of posters, advertising helps, star cuts, heralds, publicity stories, lobby displays, scene cuts, etc., will be provided for the exhibitors.

"The Common Cause" is expected to prove one of the greatest productions that has been brought to the screen in years. It was made under the auspices and with the co-operation of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission, and Commodore Blackton has had at his disposal every facility which the Allies possess for faithful presentation of the big theme. Battle tanks, including the famous "Britannia"; soldiers of the American, British, French and Italian armies; guns of every calibre; official battle scenes made by the British Government; battle-planes, and all the other implements of modern warfare have been at Commodore Blackton's command—the result being that he was able to give to his production a thorough and realistic historic atmosphere.

The picture, aside from its merit as a drama and a spectacle, is distinctive in that it will show to the audiences of the country more famous stage and screen stars than have ever been brought together in one production. Herbert Rawlinson and Sylvia Breamer are the featured stars, with a supporting company including Lieutenant Lawrence Grossmith, J. Huntley Gordon, Mlle. Marcel, Louis Dean, Philip Van Lorn and Commodore Blackton's children, Charles and Violet Blackton. The play, which was written by J. Hartley Manner and Major Ian Hay Beith, is a vivid drama, with a prologue and an epilogue. In these two phases the allegory of the war is told from the invasion of Belgium to the triumphant victory of the Allied arms, with the entry of each nation — France, England, Italy, America—pictured in graphic manner. The scenario was written by Anthony P. Kelly.

It is in the prologue and epilogue that a number of well-known women of the American stage are introduced—Marjorie Rambeau representing "Columbia"; Irene Castle, "France", Julia Arthur, "Italy"; Violet Heming, "Britannia"; Ellie Shannon, "Belgium."

Commodore Blackton has introduced some fine comedy, with Lieutenant Grossmith, Mme. Marcel and Philip Van Lorn, their scenes affording relief for the stronger, tenser drama portrayed by Mr. Rawlinson and Miss Breamer. There are numerous human touches, such as the recruiting scenes at the New York Public Library, the singing of Gitz-Rice, the famous Canadian fighter, and the rescue of the Blackton children, who portray two little war refugee waifs.

Nazimova's "'Ception Shoals" Is Strong Drama of the Sea

WORK before the camera on Mme. Nazimova's production de luxe, "'Ception Shoals," to be presented by Richard A. Rowland and Maxwell Karger, respectively president and director general of Metro Pictures Corporation, has been completed. There now remains the task of cutting and assembling and preparing the production for the public. Director Albert Capellani will finish this work before leaving for California to produce further Nazimova pictures, the first of which will be "The Red Lantern," adapted by himself and June Mathis from Edith Wherry's novel.

Final scenes on "'Ception Shoals" were those concerned with the great lamp of the lighthouse. The star, as Eve, the heroine, and Henry Harmon as Job Coffin, keeper of the light, do strong acting in these scenes. Mme. Nazimova is most enthusiastic about "'Ception Shoals." In fact it was she who suggested to the Metro officials that the play, in which she had appeared so successfully at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre, should be transferred to the screen.

"'Ception Shoals" is a drama of the sea and of the elemental human emotions and passions. Mme. Nazimova has two fine character studies in Faith, the mother, and Eve, the daughter. The play presents her genius in a new light.

Exhibitors Praise Pathe Serial.

An exhibitors' showing of "Wolves of Kultur" on the roof of a New York theatre drew a large attendance, among which were many representatives of patriotic societies who were present on special invitation. All were cordial in their comment on the big patriotic serial produced by Western Photoplays, distributed by Pathe, and featuring Leah Baird, supported by Sheldon Lewis and Charles Hutchison. The first three episodes, seven reels in all, were shown to the musical investiture of a full orchestra. The prologue showing President Wilson and quoting from his speech, which runs through the entire serial as an inspiration, was enthusiastically applauded. It gave the spectators a ringing note of what was to follow in melodramatic adventure fused with recorded fact. The first episode, "The Torture Trap," showed the murder of the inventor, the theft of his plans, which he was about to present to the Government, and the vow of his niece to avenge his death and bring the Huns to justice. Then followed episode No. 2, "The Iron Chair," and No. 3, "Trapping the Traitors." In plot, swift action and suspense these episodes gave promise of the others to follow.

"Woman the Germans Shot" to Have Broadway Run

IT has been definitely decided by the producers of "The Woman the Germans Shot," Joseph L. Plunkett and Frank J. Carroll, to give this picture a New York run at one of the Broadway theatres. Just which theatre will hold the picture has not yet been announced.

Inasmuch as the picture marks the motion picture debut of Julia Arthur, one of the celebrated legitimate stars, in the role of Edith Cavell, it is felt that a New York run will be highly successful, because of the interest which the public of the city has always shown towards Miss Arthur in her spoken productions. Her first motion picture appearance, in the role of such intensity as the one she enacts, will be, it is believed, one of the theatrical events of the season.

A private showing of the picture will be given before the public opening, it is expected, and to this officials of the American and Allied governments are to be invited, besides the critics of the daily papers and national magazines.

A special musical setting is being arranged in keeping with the greatness of the picture, and nothing will be lacking in the presentation, it is announced, to keep it up to the dignity the subject deserves.

The picture was completed only last week by director John G Adolfi. In the cast are Creighton Hale, William H. Tooker, Paul Panzer, George Majeroni, Sarah Alexander and Joyce Fair and others.

The story of the play was written by Anthony Paul Kelly.

Cosmo Hamilton Is Author of "Sins of the Children"

COSMO HAMILTON, the well-known novelist and dramatist, whose successful novel, "The Sins of the Children," is being picturized by Harry Rapf, was wont at one time to make scathing remarks about moving pictures. However, the successful screening of his "Blindness of Virtue" converted him, and he has recently prepared original stories for a number of famous screen artists. He is said to be looking forward with much interest to the release of "The Sins of the Children," which originally appeared as a novel, and regarding which the London Times said, "A most beautiful piece of work dealing with a difficult subject with the most dextrous blending of delicacy dramatic strength and wholesome candor."

The book had a very large sale, and in its screen form it is said to be a human story with a series of dramatic incidents that grip the attention and hold the interest from start to finish.

Pathe Describes Features Listed for November Issue

PAUL BRUNET, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, in announcing the line-up for November, says that the new Pearl White serial, the first episode of which will be released on the 24th, is full of novelty, and, while it follows the lines of melodrama, still in its treatment and the utilization of novel effects is really a new sort of serial. It moves quickly, and experts who have seen some of the early episodes declare it cannot be outguessed. It is the work of George Brackett Seitz, shaper of some of Pathe's greatest serial successes, and Bartram Milhauser, scenario writer of "House of Hate" and "Fatal Ring."

"The Narrow Path," featuring Fannie Ward, her second extra selected star photoplay, is based on the successful dramatic production of that name. It will be released November 17. It is one of the strongest and best of the Fannie Ward extra selected photoplays.

Baby Marie Osborne is dated for November 3 in "Milday o' the Beanstalk." The little star is steadily drawing to her an increasing number of friends.

Pathe one-reel comedies for the month are unusually attractive. They are vehicles for the talents of Harold Lloyd, Toto, the one time clown of the New York Hippodrome, and Stan Laurel, the English comedian, who trained in the Karno comedy school, from which the distinguished Mr. Chaplin graduated. Someone has called these three "the rollicking, rislble Rolin Roysterers." Lloyd will be seen in "Hear 'Em Rave," released on November 10; Toto in "Check Your Baggage," November 17; Stan Laurel in "Just Rambling Along," November 3, and Harold Lloyd comes back with an extra measure entitled "Take a Chance," released November 24.

Some of the most realistic war views yet shown will be given in the Official War Review Nos. 19, 20, 21 and 22, released November 3, 10, 17 and 24. "The Far-Flung Battle Line" series furnished by the British and French governments will show the last of the twelve instalments on November 3, 10 and 17. Next to the Official War Review, which is steadily nearing 100 per cent. distribution, this feature has widely held popular attention.

"Wolves of Kultur," the big patriotic serial, featuring Leah Baird, with Sheldon Lewis, swings into its crescendo of development of plot and swift action in episodes 4, 5, 6 and 7.

The stirring Western serial, "Hands Up," featuring Ruth Roland, will come to an end in the four episodes shown in November beginning November 3.

Theda Bara Again at Work.

With the plaudits which greeted the New York premiere of "Salome" still ringing in her ears, Theda Bara has begun work at one of the Fort Lee studios on a new Standard Picture for William Fox. The picture has the temporary title of "The Light," and is being directed by J. Gordon Edwards, this being the thirtieth picture Mr. Edwards has made for William Fox. "The Light" is an original story by Lieutenant Luther Reed and Brett Page, and the scenario was written by Charles Kenyon, one of the William Fox scenario staff.

Although the atmosphere of war runs all through the story there is only one scene in the picture which shows actual fighting. This is a trench scene, and is flashed on the screen only for a moment.

Work Started on "Dan La Roche."

Harry Morey has completed work in "Hoarded Assets," a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, and now is engaged on "Dan La Roche" under direction of Paul Scardon. The company, which was sent to Canada on location recently, now is in the wooded country around Milford, Pa.

Charlie Chaplin in "Shoulder Arms" (First National).

Mutual to Issue Ten One-Reel Government Subjects

THE Mutual Film Corporation announces the forthcoming release of "Our Nation Aroused," a series of ten one-reel pictures produced by C. L. Chester under the supervision of the Committee on Public Information.

The productions portray ten specific illustrations of the activities of the American Government in the development over here of the effective American war machine.

They were built upon scenarios prepared by the Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information, supervised personally by Mr. Chester. They contain the same snap, and the subjects have been given the same interesting treatment that has made the recently released series of Outing-Chester productions a distinctive place among short reel subjects of their type.

The titles were written by Katharine Hilliker, who wrote the titles for the Outing-Chester series, and established for herself a wide reputation as a title writer. W. O. Runcie, E. B. Steene and Arthur A. Porchest, Chester cameramen, photographed the pictures.

Negotiations for release of the series through the Mutual exchanges have been in progress for the last week between Mr. Chester, the Committee on Public Information and James M. Sheldon, president of the Mutual.

"I am glad to be able to offer the exhibitors of the United States a series of productions showing, so forcefully, the tremendous progress that is being made by our Government in the varied phases of war activity," said Mr. Sheldon in announcing the forthcoming releases.

"Mr. Chester has given us, with the cooperation of the Committee on Public Information, ten pictures which portray vividly and interestingly some most unusual things that are in progress on this side of the ocean.

"We may think we know a lot about the war, and maybe we do, but nobody has taken the trouble to show us in anywhere near such an interesting manner these things that are pictured in the new Chester series.

"We are all proud of the efficiency of the American Government in getting ready so quickly and thoroughly for the job we have undertaken to help finish abroad.

"The first release of the series will be 'Schooling Our Fighting Mechanics.'

"Another release is called 'There Shall Be No Cripples.' It pictures the things the Government is doing to teach useful trades to the boys who come home from France without legs and arms."

Stirring War Views in Official War Review

WHERE America fights in the great war many prisoners are taken, and the reports of General Pershing have done much to hearten America to still greater effort in the Fourth Liberty Loan drive. Thousands of the Huns have been captured since the great American movement started, and in No. 17 of the Official War Review released by Pathe the week of October 20 a view is given of the general inspecting the camp where the prisoners are guarded.

The Review shows M. Poincare the President of France, paying his respects to the stout-hearted citizens of Chateau Thierry who remained in the place. This was a great day for Chateau Thierry, but the good men who are right up against a tremendously grave proposition took their honors quite soberly. The scene nevertheless is impressive.

With a change of view the beholder sees rolling over Italy's roads endless streams of motors bearing everything from supplies to heavy guns. And up above the clouds on the steep mountain roads surefooted beasts of burden still carry the necessities of war. Keen eyes watch from these dizzy heights, and in France, where observation lacks mountain height, we are enabled to see flocks of French observation balloons—like monster beetles—led out from their hangars and fastened to motor windlasses, which guide them through the air.

Begin Production of "The Enchanted Barn"

Director David Smith has begun the direction of Bessie Love in the latter's second Vitagraph picture. It is a screen version of the novel, "The Enchanted Barn." It is a pretty story, and one in which Vitagraph's newest star will have every opportunity to twinkle

Spectacular Opera House Scenes in Caruso Picture

NOT the least interesting and novel feature of Caruso's first Artcraft picture, "My Cousin," which is released Oct. 20, is embodied in the series of scenes depicting a performanee at the Metropolitan Opera House. These scenes are said to be spectacular in the highest degree and will doubtless prove attractive among all classes of audienee in all sections of the country.

The performance is "I Pagliacci," the most tuneful and most popular of the works of the Italian master composer, Leoncavallo, which never fails to paek the huge auditorium from the front row of the Orchestra to the last seat in the Family Circle. Caruso is on the stage, singing the role of Canio as only he can sing it—and Caruso is sitting in the balcony, listening to Caruso sing! Rather, Tomaso Longo is listening to his cousin Casare Caroli, sing, for these are the dual roles which Caruso plays in the photoplay.

Five hundred extras are to be seen in the shots of the audience, at least half of them attired in evening dress and the other half in raiment as becomes a second balcony audience. As they intently watch the great artist's every move and hang on every note, one would be certain that Caruso himself were on the stage before them if he did not know that, although the audience scenes were filmed at the Metropolitan, those showing the great tenor, in clown costume, surrounded by a Metropolitan chorus of forty people, were of necessity taken in front of the stage of the Manhattan, on another day.

The cuts and flashes are declared to be perfectly synchronized resulting in one of the most remarkable general effects yet obtained in motion picture production and constituting another triumph for Edward Jose as a director. Morever, in the stage scenes the photography by Hal Young is said to be of such quality that throughout Caruso's singing of the familiar "Pagliacci" aria theatre orchestras may easily follow the movement of his lips, making possible a most effective accompaniment which will enhance the attractiveness of the presentation immeasurably.

Vitagraph's New Serial Is Now Ready for Release

THE latest Vitagraph serial, "The Iron Test," with Antonio Moreno and Carol Holloway as the featured players, will start on its fifteen-week course in thousands of theatres throughout the country on October 21. The serial was written by Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, and Cyrus Townsend Brady. The story is different from those of the other Vitagraph serials in that the stars have the roles of circus players, and a great deal of the action takes place under "the big top." Mr. Moreno and Miss Holloway are said to have the finest opportunities of their careers in this story.

The advance preparation which Vitagraph gives to its serials and features, and the exhibitor helps supplied to theatre owners, have been important factors in the successful exploitation of these subjects, and in the case of the latest serial the company mailed out a complete campaign book containing advertising, publicity and stunt suggestions. In addition twenty-four sheets has been posted in all of the key centres of the United States, and will follow shortly with a similar campaign in Canada. Vitagraph has also made arrangements to give to exhibitors free of charge as many twenty-four sheets as they will post in their territories. Advertising cuts, heralds, lobby displays for each episode, slides, and one sheets, three sheets, and six sheets on each of the fifteen episodes are included in the service.

Prints on the first five episodes have been shipped to all Vitagraph exchanges, and they are now available for screening in the company's offices all over the country.

"The Romance of Tarzan" Opens at New York Strand

THE first public presentation of "The Romance of Tarzan," sequel to "Tarzan of the Apes," was at the Strand Theatre, New York, on Sunday, October 13. The booking situation in the Eastern territory made it impossible for officials of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit as distributors and of the National Film Corporation of America as the producers of "The Romance of Tarzan" to consider the suggestion for a special prerelease showing in one of the large independent Broadway theatres. This was the introduction provided by the National Film Corporation for the first Tarzan production, by which it established new box office records at the Broadway Theatre during a run of several weeks. As a result of the phenomenal patronage it received the reputation of the picture grew by leaps and bounds, and it was released nationally to a big exhibitor demand.

The advance applications for bookings on "The Romance of Tarzan" have been extremely heavy, according to reports from exchanges of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, and the demand has been for a release date as early as could be arranged in keeping with the completion of work on posters, general advertising matter and accessories.

Harold Edel, manager of the Strand Theatre, will lead off the New York field by giving "The Romance of Tarzan" its Eastern premiere. At the conclusion of the week's run at the Strand the picture will be shown by several of the big circuits in the New York territory.

With these bookings arranged, it was practically impossible to entertain proposals for a special pre-release run. According to one of the exhibitor-directors of the First National another factor in the decision not to have an advance presentation at a specially engaged theatre was the overwhelming popularity of the central character of Tarzan, which could not be increased, in the estimation of the distributors, by placing another Broadway special run to its credit.

Pathe Cameraman Commended.

Sergeant Camille Legrand, the Pathe cameraman now en route from Paris to the Orient via the United States, bears a letter of which he is justly proud. This letter, written by the Chief of the Cinematographic Service of the French Army, Lieutenant J. L. Croze, reads in part as follows:

"I take pleasure in sending you herewith copy of a letter which General Humbert, Commander of the 3d Army, has just sent me regarding your brilliant conduct at the time of the attack on Avocourt.

"To these high proofs of satisfaction, I add those of the chief of the cinematographic service, which, in the film taken at Avocourt, possesses one of the most wonderful and striking documents of the war."

Baggot and Claire Whitney Head Strong Metro Cast

A BRILLIANT cast has been engaged to present "The Man Who Stayed at Home," Metro's screen version of the patriotic drama which has thrilled thousands both here and in England, in its stage form. June Mathis has adapted the story from the play by Lechmore Worrall and J. E. Harold Terry. Herbert Blache is director.

The engagement of King Baggot to visualize the character of Christopher Brent, the leading masculine part, played on the dramatic stage last season by Albert Brown, has already been announced. Mr. Baggot is expected to give a masterly representation of this important part.

Claire Whitney has been engaged to play the leading ingenue role of Molly Preston. Miss Whitney is considered ideal for the part.

Lilie Leslie will appear in the role of Mirlam Lee, played by Katharine Kaelred in the dramatic version of last season. Alexandre Herbert has been engaged to play the leading juvenile part of Norman Preston, son of Judge Preston and brother of Molly. Frank Fisher Bennett has been cast as Carl Sanderson. Robert Whittier will play the German spy, Fritz, who poses as a waiter.

Metro's favorite character actress, Ricea Allen, will play Miss Myrtle. The part of Judge John Preston, of the Supreme Court, will be played by Robert Paton Gibbs, known for superb work on both stage and screen. Fraulein Schroeder, the woman spy, will be played by Julia Calhoun, one of the eleverest character actresses in the theatrical profession.

Mary Miles Minter Plays the Wife.

"Wives and Other Wives" is the quaint title of the next picture featuring Mary Miles Minter, and released through Pathe by the American Film Company. And, for the first time in her screen career, Miss Minter plays the part of a married woman. In many pictures she has wound up with a wedding, but in "Wives and Other Wives" she starts out not only as a young matron, but also equipped with the regulation domestic troubles. It is a dramatic farce of an unusual surprising character and is full of dilemmas, perplexities and unexpected situations.

Colin Chase plays the male lead as Geoffrey Challoner, the newlywed husband, and William Garwood is taking the part of Norman Craig, a perfectly well-meaning married man from the apartment above, who gets into all sorts of fixes and tight places.

Shirley Mason Starred in "Deadly Sins" Reissues

McCLURE PICTURES, INC., announce that on account of the hearty response of exhibitors to the announcement that the "Seven Deadly Sins" would be reissued as "two-reelers" the order for prints has been increased, and that the various branches of General Film Company through which this series will be distributed is already in receipt of numerous bookings.

Not only is the star of this series, Shirley Mason, well known to motion picture audiences on account of her good work in numerous productions, but in this series also appear an imposing array of stage celebrities, including H. B. Warner, Holbrook Blinn, Nance O'Neill, Ann Murdock and Charlotte Walker.

A complete accessory and advertising service has been established to assist exhibitors in exploiting these reissues. Special lobby photographs, mats, cuts, and a complete campaign book have been prepared and forwarded to the branch offices of General Film Company, and is now at the disposal of motion picture theatre managers.

Warner Picture Delayed by Closing of Theatres

PURCHASERS of territory for "The Kaiser's Finish," the new eight part state rights production made by S. L. Warner, have announced, according to a statement from A. Warner, who is in charge of sales, that in the districts where theatres are closed by the epidemic of Spanish influenza, they will make no attempt to arrange bookings with exhibitors until the ban is lifted and theatre owners have had an opportunity to readjust their schedules to provide for the fulfillment of service contracts existing before the ban was placed.

Mr. Warner further states: "The buyers believe that by waiting until the exhibitors are again active they will obtain longer runs for 'The Kaiser's Finish' than would be the case if they endeavored now to determine booking dates. Many theatre owners will face a serious problem in rearranging their booking schedules when they again resume operations, and this has lead to the decision by owners of state rights franchises for "The Kaiser's Finish" to wait until conditions are normal and they can obtain the length of runs they feel are justified by the production."

Screencraft Completes Its First State Righter

THE first of a series of twelve "dramatic features of distinction," which are to be produced by Screencraft Pictures during the coming year, has been completed at the Screencraft's studios in New Rochelle (formerly the Thanhauser), and prints of the subject will be shipped to the independent exchanges which have arranged to release the Screencraft series, during the coming week.

The picture was made under the direction of Frank Reicher, for the past two years attached to the Lasky staff. The story is an adaptation by Eve Unsell of a novel by Edith Barnard Delano. The picture abounds in a heart appeal of the quality that is always certain to awaken the response of audiences. At the same time it is replete with tenseness and dramatic force. It is in six reels.

The cast is headed by Mary Boland and Lucy Cotton. Raymond Bloomer, Harris Gordon, Vincent Coleman and Mrs. Stuart Robson, wife of the famous stage celebrity of that name, are other members.

The picture will be marketed on a state rights basis, as will all the Screencraft series, the franchises for the entire country having already been sold. The foreign rights to the Screencraft productions have been acquired by the Robertson-Cole Company.

"Ashes of Love" Marks Hackett's Reappearance

AN event of interest in connection with Ivan Abramson's latest production, "Ashes of Love" released by the Graphic Film Corporation is the reappearance of James K. Hackett, the well-known actor of the spoken drama. Mr. Hackett's first appearance in motion pictures was made some time ago in "The Prisoner of Zenda," founded on the novel and stage play of the same title, by Anthony Hope, and it speaks well for Director Abramson's ability that Mr. Hackett should, for his second appearance, have chosen to appear in one of Mr. Abramson's productions.

Co-starring with Mr. Hackett in "Ashes of Love" is Effie Shannon, who for a number of years starred in the spoken drama with Herbert Kelcey, and she has also previously appeared in motion pictures, including the Metro drama, "Her Boy." In addition, the cast includes such favorites as Ruby De Remer, Paula Shay, Hugh Thompson, William B. Davidson, Dora Mills Adams, Thea Talbot and William Bechtel.

An unexpected twist developed in the story of this production, and one which is said to provide one of the big climaxes, is where a mother has to decide between protecting the reputation of a dead daughter or saving the reason of a man she looks upon almost as her own son. Director Abramson is said to have also introduced into this picture some clever comedy situations.

W. H. Announces Several New Series of Reissues

AFTER months of investigation and selection, W. H. Productions Company believe they have another "find" in four new series of short subjects to be released soon, viz.: Two series of twenty-eight each single reel comedies, Liberty Keystones and Eagle Keystones, and two series of fifteen each two-reel Western dramas, Columbia Kay Bees and U. S. Kay Bees.

With the ever increasing cost of production, the W. H. reissues are said to be proving a salvation for many exchanges and exhibitors, at the same time satisfying their patrons. The Keystones were produced by Mack Sennett, and when first exhibited were welcomed by the public. It was on the Keystone lot that many of the best comedy screen actors were developed. Among the stars of this series are Mack Swain, Mack Sennett, Mabel Normand, Roscoe Arbuckle, Sydney Chaplin, Fred Mace and Chester Conklin.

The Kay Bees are among the best productions of their kind. They were made by Thomas H. Ince. The stories were written by William Clifford, Thomas H. Ince and C. Gardner Sullivan. The settings were genuine. A tribe of Indians were maintained near the studio, and real cowboys from nearby ranches were used. These productions did much to make the cowboy pictures popular, and in them Mr. Ince discovered many well known stars of today. The casts contain Charles Ray, Clara Williams, Rhea Mitchell, Richard Stanton, Anna Little, Walter Edwards, Sessue Hayakawa and others.

It is claimed that these four series offer exceptional box office values. Exchange men who take two subjects a week will be enabled to book one of each brand to competitive houses without creating antagonistic competition.

W. H. Productions are now releasing through about fifty state rights exchanges, and are preparing a campaign to the exhibitors to help the exchanges through trade papers and other mediums. It is announced that every subject will be re-edited, reconstructed, retitled and new prints made. The advertising material, it is also stated, will surpass everything ever done in such productions before, while the usual co-operation will be extended to exchangemen and exhibitors.

Unique Publicity Campaign for Fifth Petrova Picture

IN connection with the published announcement that coincident with the release of "The Panther Woman" by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit the life story of Madame Petrova would be syndicated through numerous newspapers, it is announced that during the present month a prominent newspaper association will also syndicate a story of how this Polish star is aiding the Liberty Loan, together with a full-page newspaper article on "How Mrs. Average Woman May Be Beautiful." In addition, articles by Madame Petrova regarding her work are also appearing in several well-known magazines.

This special publicity drive has been timed in connection with the release of her fifth independent production, "The Panther Woman," and it is believed by the officials of Madame Petrova's organization that it will accrue to the benefit of exhibitors throughout the country who have arranged to present this picture.

"The Panther Woman," which will be released during the current month, is a picturization of "Patience Sparhawk and Her Times," a novel by Gertrude Atherton, one of the foremost woman authors of America, who has written twenty-four novels, among which are a number of "best sellers."

Territory Sales on "Kaiser's Finish."

A. Warner announces sale of the following territory on "The Kaiser's Finish": To F. Ferrandini, Richmond, for Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina; to Peter Sotus, Cleveland, for Ohio, and to First National Exchange, Indianopolis, for Indiana.

NO END YET FOR LIGHTLESS NIGHTS

Shortage of California's Hydro-Electric Power Still Serious—Business Good, However, Exhibitors Say

By T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO. — Lightless nights, which have been in effect in this territory for the past two months, on account of a shortage of hydro-electric power, are to continue indefinitely, according to Fuel Administrator Albert E. Schwabacher. According to the original ruling the lighting of signs, display windows and store fronts was to be resumed on the first of October, but the power situation is still serious, and it may be months before it is relieved to a marked extent. Theatre owners express the opinion that business is not being seriously interfered with through the dimming of the bright lights, but all would welcome a return to former conditions before clocks are set back an hour on October 27.

Loan Films in Big Demand.

The Liberty Loan films are receiving wide distribution on the Pacific Coast under the direction of Herman Wobber, the organization created by him having devised a system whereby practically every exhibitor will be able to show these. Not only are these productions being shown in theatres, but there is a demand for them by leading clubs. The San Francisco Ad Club is featuring these films at its weekly luncheons. The Rotary Club, Transportation Club, and similar organizations, are making requests for the loan of these films, and these are being complied with wherever possible. Edward T. Lowman, who recently resigned from the Famous Players-Lasky organization to take up Knights of Columbus work at Camp Fremont, is assisting in the booking of the Loan films, as is Vernon R. Moore, now with the Shipping Board. The local booking is in charge of Leon Netter, who returned to California from the East to enter the Navy, but who may enter another branch of the service.

Film Men Return from New York.

Most of the local film men who journeyed to New York last month have returned home, several of them making the return trip together. Herbert Rothschild, president of the company, which conducts the California Theatre; Eugene H. Roth, managing director of this house; E. O. Child, manager of the local Pathe branch; E. D. Tate, manager of the Los Angeles Pathe office, and W. A. Calkins, manager of the Salt Lake City Pathe branch, returned on the same train, which also bore Mr. and Mrs. Ignace Paderewski to their California home. Meyer J. Cohen, of the George Kleine System, has also returned to his San Francisco headquarters, and has since left for Los Angeles to install a manager to succeed Mr. Silicox, who has resigned. Upon his return he will make a trip to Seattle in connection with his duties as district manager.

J. S. Woody Visits San Francisco.

J. S. Woody, special representative of the Select Pictures Corporation, spent several days here recently with H. L. Knappen, the new branch manager. He is very enthusiastic over the outlook for Select pictures on the Pacific Coast and elsewhere. He visited the Pacific Northwest, and from here will go to Los Angeles.

Making Film for the Government.

While the energies of the Government are being directed largely toward the successful prosecution of the war, it is not losing sight of its resources and is having much film of an educational character made. The Tam Film Company, Sixth and Market streets, has completed five reels on the "Prevention of Fires in the National Forests," and a similar amount on the "Prevention of Fires in Grain Fields." Work is now being commenced on another forest picture. This concern is representing the Mutual Screen Telegram in this territory and has three cameramen at work.

Imperial After Matinee Business.

Business at the Imperial Theatre, San Francisco, has developed to such an extent that during the past five months there has not been a night without a waiting line. Manager J. A. Partington attributes this showing to the fact that every attempt is made to live up to the catch name adopted for the theatre, "The House of Personality." Each week something extra in the line of an added attraction is offered, either a tableau from some famous opera, a short act, or high class musical offering.

He states that the problem at the present time is to get the matinee crowds, a rather difficult task since this theatre is removed from the shopping district. As a special inducement he gives the same attractions that are presented in the evening and is giving wide publicity to the desirability of attending the afternoon shows through the medium of slides, the theatre program and intensified newspaper and poster advertising.

Theatres Change Hands.

Robert McNeill, who conducts the Panama and Lyceum theatres in this city, is expanding into the east-bay suburbs and has taken over the Claremont and Strand theatres in Oakland, two large residence district houses. The Franklin Theatre at Oakland has also changed hands and will be conducted by the Kehrlein interests.

Joe Huff Now with Vitagraph.

Joe Huff, for years manager of the Unique and Odeon theatres, but who has been in the stationery business for some time, has returned to the film field and is now with the Greater Vitagraph as salesman. He recently completed his initial trip through the San Joaquin Valley.

Smoked Glasses and Tin Ears.

Louis Beban and C. C. Westover, who make up the censorship bureau of the San Francisco Customs Service, have been called upon of late to inspect great quantities of films intended for export, and the strain of watching two subjects at the same time has become such that specially prepared glasses have become necessary. Now they are being called upon to listen to the phonograph records exported through this port and attend to this duty while inspecting the moving pictures. This task at times become irksome, and the censors are considering the purchase of tin ears to match the smoked glasses.

San Francisco Briefs.

Mike Zar, formerly with the Fox Film Corporation, has gone with the United Picture Theatres of America as assistant to branch manager William J. Citron.

Maurice Kuttner, formerly with Miles Bros., has joined the Fox organization as booker.

The Queen Theatre on Polk street has advanced its prices to seventeen cents. Formerly this price was charged a few days each week.

E. M. Asher, of the Turner & Dahnken Circuit, is making a business trip to Los Angeles.

The twenty-eighth star in the service flag of the Strand Theatre was added recently when J. W. Asher, director and treasurer, left for Pittsburgh to enter the Carnegie Institute of Technology for a course in military aeronautics.

Northern California Notes.

Colusa, Cal.—L. Holt has opened the Gem Theatre, recently closed by C. C. Kaufmann, using Mutual service.

Oroville, Cal.—The Red Theatre has been reopened by L. Slissman, after having been closed for the summer.

Gridley, Cal.—Fred Fink, Jr., who has been conducting the Fink Theatre, has joined the colors.

Pleasanton, Cal.—Frank M. Reep has purchased the Lincoln Theatre.

HIPPODROME DAMAGED BY EXPLOSION

Spokane Picture House Sustains Loss of $250 by Bursting of 200 Gas Balloons—One Usher Injured

By S. Clark Patchin, Spokesman-Review, Spokane, Wash.

THE explosion of 200 gas filled souvenir balloons in the Hippodrome Theatre, Spokane, caused the injury of Eugene Gilbert, an usher; blew out the plate glass window in the room in which they were kept, and caused a fire which did $250 damages September 28.

For some months the theatre has been making a specialty of special pictures for children to run with its Saturday program, and as an additional drawing card it has been giving the balloons to all children under 12 years who visit the place each Saturday.

The balloons were in the office ready to be given to the children, when the accident occurred just before the doors of the theatre were opened for the afternoon shows. Two of the office doors were wrenched from their hinges. The hair and eyebrows of Gilbert were badly singed, and he was taken to a hospital for treatment. Fire was caused by the motor operating the gas pump igniting one of the balloons, and the blaze exploded the others.

Trimble Films Liberty Loan Parade.

Under the direction of Larry Trimble, director of the Washington Motion Picture Company, which is now in the hands of a receiver, pictures of the big Liberty Loan parade were taken on the afternoon of Sunday, September 29, and were shown at the Liberty Theatre for several days.

All of the theatres are permitting the Four-Minute Men to speak in their places daily, and in additional to that they did not open their doors Sunday until after the parade, which was not over until after 4:30 p. m. This had been widely advertised in the newspapers, and as soon as the parade was over the entrances to all theatres were crowded.

Spokane Operators Get Wage Increase.

A new scale of wages presented by the Motion Picture Operators' Union, of Spokane, to the theatre managers has been accepted by practically all houses that are recognized as union theatres. The new scale calls for a weekly wage of $32.50, and was put into effect last Sunday. The former scale was $27.50, the new rate being a flat increase of $5 a week.

The operators work six-hour shifts, as previously. The scale has been accepted by the Clemmer, Liberty, Hippodrome, Majestic and Lyric theatres. Some others have the matter under consideration.

Payette Drops In.

ONE of the best known and best liked film men of the Baltimore territory, J. J. Payette, who for three and a half years was associated with various companies as their representative here, and who is now a member of Uncle Sam's fighting forces, came to Baltimore on Saturday, September 28, to visit his friends. Mr. Payette has gone through the non-commissioned officers' school at Camp Humphries and now has a Sergeant-Major's warrant. He was recently called before the board of examiners and passed for the Officers' Training School to go either to Camp Lee or Gordon. He is awaiting orders from Washington. He managed the General Film Exchange here for a time, was Vitagraph representative and was last associated with Goldwyn.

L. D. Lyon with Fox.

L. D. Lyon, who for six years has been associated with the film business, has now become associated with the Fox Film Company as its Baltimore representative, working from the Washington office. Since he has been in the business, Mr. Lyon has been connected with General, Mutual, Triangle, U. S. Exhibitors of N. J., and the Civilization Film Corporation.

Ford Has Birthday.

The birthday of Charles E. Ford, manager and co-proprietor of Ford's Opera House, was celebrated on Friday, September 27, at the home of his mother, Mrs. John T. Ford, widow of the founder of the theatre, by holding a family reunion and dinner. Congratulations were received by Mr. Ford from his many friends.

New Organ at Idle Hour.

The installing of a new fotoplayer in the Idle Hour Theatre, 223 North Howard street, which is managed by Mr. Waskey, has now been completed and was placed in use beginning Monday, September 30.

Loan Drive at Grand.

One hundred and fifty thousand dollars' worth of Fourth Liberty Loan bonds were subscribed to at the rousing meeting and entertainment held at the Grand Theatre in Highlandtown, through the courtesy of the owners and the hard work of Carville Councilman, the manager, on Sunday night, September 29. Held under the auspices of the Fourth Liberty Loan Committee of the Twelfth District, Justice T. Bayard Williams, of Canton, presided. Many fine patriotic speeches were made, and after a program of music, moving pictures of a patriotic theme, which were obtained through L. A. DeHoff, manager of the New Theatre, were shown for the occasion. About 2,000 attended.

Several thousand dollars were subscribed at a meeting held at the Broadway Theatre, 509 South Broadway, on the same night, through the courtesy of J. Louis Rome, the manager, in the interests of the Fourth Liberty Loan. This affair was conducted by Miss Margaret Antonie, chairman of the Second Ward Women's Council of Defense.

Sun's Liberty Loan Show.

The Baltimore Sun staged a Liberty Loan show in Sun Square on Saturday night, September 28, and more than $20,000 was collected, being subscription to the Fourth Liberty Loan. The steps of the Savings Bank of Baltimore were used as the grand stand, and a motor truck used as the stage. A moving picture screen was placed on the side of the bank, and pictures showing the Yanks at work and play and scenes from the front were shown. There were several enthusiastic patriotic speeches, vaudeville acts of merit and music by the band from St. Mary's Industrial School.

EXHIBITORS HOLD A "SHIRT WEEK"

Two Indianapolis Theatres Aid War Relief Association in Securing Cloth to Dress Europe's Orphans

By Indiana Trade News Service, 69 Layman Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

LAST week was "shirt week" at the Regent and Colonial theatres in Indianapolis. From 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. every day during the week, except Sunday, a clean discarded shirt, or two or three, were accepted as an admission "ticket." A big clothes hamper stationed at the entrance was used as a receptacle for the "tickets," a large number of which were received. The affair was arranged by E. H. Bingham and H. E. Cohen, managers of the Regent and Colonial, as a means of co-operating with the Stage Women's War Relief Association in the East, which is trying to obtain materials for making dresses for the orphan children of Europe. They are making a drive for discarded men's shirts, out of which the prettiest kind of "kiddies" dresses can be manufactured.

Rogers Books "America's Answer."

R. E. Rogers, manager of Crump's Theatre at Columbus, Ind., has booked the second Government war film, "America's Answer," for an exhibition in Columbus on October 24 and 25.

Jefferson Will Have 400 More Seats.

Improvements to the Jefferson Theatre at Fort Wayne, Ind., which will increase the seating capacity by at least 400, were begun last week. The change in the seating arrangements was brought about, according to the owners, W. C. Quimby and A. L. Randall, because of the theatre's constantly increasing patronage. November 1 has been set as the date for the completion of the work.

Weil to Conduct Grauman Theatre Orchestra.

Max Weil, who has conducted the orchestra at the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, from the time the theatre was opened two years ago, has accepted a position as conductor of an orchestra of forty musicians in the new Grauman Theatre, Los Angeles, and expects to leave in a few days for that city.

Mr. Weil, in the time that he has led the orchestra at the Circle, has built up an extensive clientele among musicians and music lovers of the city, and has made innumerable friends through the channel of his music. He has conducted orchestras in various large cities, including St. Paul and Minneapolis, and until he gave his time exclusively to conducting was a concert violinist. He has one son, Jerold, a student at Indiana University, and a daughter, Hortense, who is in school in Indianapolis.

His successor at the Circle has not been named.

Indiana Brevities.

A. G. Blacker, manager of the Manhattan Theatre in West Washington street, Indianapolis, has purchased the state rights on the "Are You Fit to Marry?" picture, which was exhibited to capacity crowds at English's Theatre a few weeks ago.

S. Barrett McCormick, managing director of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, is wearing the insignia of a "major" in the Fourth Liberty Loan drive in Indianapolis. The honor was conferred on the Circle's director as a result of his work in connection with the distribution of theatre advertising during the campaign.

The motion picture theatre operated by the Indiana Union, a student organization at Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind., was opened Tuesday, October 8, with D. W. Griffith's big production, "Hearts of the World." The picture was shown for three days.

G. C. Parish, formerly booker for the V. N. Hoddup, Inc., of Indianapolis, has joined the Universal Film Company's force of salesmen in the Indiana territory.

M. H. Sinnott, formerly asistant manager of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, is now attached to the War Camp Community Service in Indiana. His successor has not yet been named.

William D. Helmick, manager of the Sipe Theatre at Kokomo, Ind., for several years, is now engaged in the contracting business.

GORDON-MAYER FILM EXCHANGE MOVES

Boston's New Distributing Company Is Now Located in Larger Quarters at 35 Piedmont Street

By Robert N. Howe, 80 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

THE Gordon-Mayer Film Corporation of Boston has opened a new office at 35 Piedmont street. In the office space they formerly occupied it was impossible for them to handle the business that has been built up in New England under the management of Louis B. Mayer.

The old office at 20 Winchester street is now the headquarters of the publicity department, which is under the management of William Furber, formerly manager of publicity for the American Feature Film Corporation. Miss Idella Emery, who for the past few years has been editing the Motion Picture Query column in the Boston Post, has been appointed to assist Mr. Furber in the publicity work. The Gordon-Mayer Company started business eight weeks ago.

Louis B. Mayer

In addition to the two Boston offices, a branch exchange has been opened on Meadow street, New Haven, under the management of Miss Bertha Schwartz, formerly of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

The sales force of the Gordon-Mayer exchange is also being increased, three new men having been taken on in the past three weeks. They are John E. Dunn, who was previously connected with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Martin Kelleher and Harry Goldman, who were formerly connected with the American Feature Film Corporation. Kelleher has been assigned to Connecticut and Goldman is covering Western Massachusetts. George K. Robinson, who was formerly efficiency man for the Famous Players-Lasky, is now with Gordon-Mayer in the same capacity.

Aside from their own special features, Gordon-Mayer are handling state right productions, their first being "Crashing Through to Berlin." The state rights department will be under the supervision of Samuel Grant, who handled Gerard's production, "My Four Years in Germany." He will have a separate office on Pleasant street.

Sayer Managing Haverhill's Academy.

James A. Sayer, manager of the Colonial Theatre, Haverhill, Mass., for eight years, has just taken charge of the Academy of Music here. The policy of the theatre is stock during the week and motion pictures and vaudeville on Sunday. Frank Douray, former manager of the Franklin Park Theatre in Boston, has taken temporary charge of the Colonial.

Kimmerle to Succeed Roth.

Frank F. Kimmerle, former booker in the Boston Mutual exchange, has been appointed to succeed former Manager Roth as manager of the Boston office of the Mutual. He was booker for five years.

Four Pathe Salesmen Receive Bonus.

Four out of six salesmen of the Boston Pathe office received a large bonus for the period of business ending August 31, according to the statement of Manager Hand. The business in the exchange for the month of August was 76 per cent. over that of February. Manager Stanley Hand, Ben Shaperio and E. E. Weekly, both bookers, also received a large bonus.

Theatre Men Hold Annual "Play Night."

THE Toledo Amusement Managers' Association, composed of exhibitors and "legitimate" theatre managers of Toledo, held their first annual "play night" at the Boody House, October 3.

It was a huge success not only from the standpoint of quality and quantity, but from the point of attendance. There was an address by the president, Joe Perlstein, and several fine vaudeville acts, after which supper was served. At 11:15 a flashlight of the assemblage was made.

There are twenty-nine theatres represented in the association, and there were as many film exchange men on hand. The Toledo association is making fine progress.

Erdmann Named Manager of Paramount.

George Erdmann, formerly manager of the Universal and Foursquare exchanges, Cleveland, has been appointed manager of the Paramount-Artcraft Exchange, succeeding E. T. Gerrish, who resigned recently. Mr. Penn has been named assistant manager.

United Pictures Opens Cleveland Office.

The United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., has opened up headquarters in Cleveland to handle Northern Ohio territory. This office is in charge of Harry J. Bayley, a former Cleveland man, who has been manager of the Goldwyn Exchange in Chicago for some time past.

The office is located on the fourth floor of the Standard Theatre Building in connection with the General Film Company Exchange.

Manager E. T. Gerrish, of the Paramount-Artcraft Exchange in Cleveland, has resigned. His successor has not yet been appointed. Mr. Gerrish has not yet announced his future plans.

Commend Work of Operators.

The Fourth Liberty Loan Committee has commended the work of the Cleveland moving picture operators who have handled the campaign shows. From 10 to 20 shows were given each night. These were under the personal direction of Harry Holmden and Frank Masek, of the operators' union.

"The shows went over like clock-work, and the boys certainly deserve credit," said W. E. Lusk, in charge of the moving picture publicity.

Miller Reopens His Strand.

Carl Miller has reopened his Strand Theatre, Fremont, after having closed it for several weeks. Many improvements were made, including the installation of 200 more seats, a stage, new lighting, a Gardner Gold Fibre screen and others. The house was opened with a patriotic mass meeting at which Rev. G. H. Reiken made an address.

Success Film Doing Big Business.

Charlie Schwerin and Lou Gleger, two of the best known film men in the middle states, are doing wonderful business with their features throughout Ohio. Their new company, the Success Film Productions, Sloan Building, is handling the U. S. Exhibitors' Booking Service and the other Frank Hall productions, including "Her Mistake," with Evelyn Nesbit; "The Devil's Playground," with an all-star cast, and "The Crucible of Life," with Grace D'Armond.

Marcus in Ammunition Train Service.

Claude Marcus, son of the manager of the U. S. Theatre, Cleveland, has been accepted by the War Department as a private in the ammunition train service. He left for Florida.

Loan Films In 4,000 Theatres.

The Central Liberty Loan Committee for Ohio, Kentucky and Western Pennsylvania estimates that the Government Liberty Loan films will be shown in 4,000 theatres, and that more than 4,000,000 people will see them.

A practical schedule was worked out in Cleveland with the aid of a master booking sheet so that every theatre in Northern Ohio would have a film each day.

"America's Answer" In Gray's Armory.

"America's Answer" will play a week in Gray's Armory in Cleveland beginning October 6. The picture, presented by the Government, is handled by the World Exchange. It was given two screenings the week of September 29, at which many exhibitors attended.

Temple Theatre Pulls Effective Stunt.

THE Temple Theatre pulled off a very effective stunt in connection with the Liberty Loan. The service flag with seven stars is hung in plain view of the audience. A spot was thrown on the flag, and a Four-Minute Man appealed to the audience "not to let their slacker dollars turn those stars to gold." The crowds responded in good style.

Piccadilly's Service Flag Has Gold Star.

The Piccadilly Theatre has just placed a gold star on its service flag for Sergeant Frank F. King, who succumbed to Spanish influenza at Camp Dix on Sunday, October 5. Sergeant King was leader of the orchestra at the Piccadilly, but he preferred to get into the big game. His parents were with him when the end came. The last words he uttered were a request that an American flag be brought to the bedside. This was done, and then, unable to speak further, he saluted—saluted the colors and died.

Howard Representing United Pictures.

Homer Howard, well-known in this section of the state, is now with us again representing the United Picture Theatres of America in Western New York.

Sarr Will Continue to Do Big Advertising.

Fred J. Sarr, of Fay's, is one of the most progressive showmen in town. He has only been here a little while, but he has made a big noise. The other day a local newspaper asked Mr. Sarr to be a little more conservative in his advertising, but he said that he could not see it. He says that if he books the best show in town he is not afraid to let the public know about it. Rochester needs a few men of this type to get into the big-city stride.

Seattle News Letter

By S. J. Anderson, 807 Leary Building, Seattle, Wash.

Bertleson to Manage California Theatre.

BART BERTLESON, assistant manager for James Q. Clemmer since the opening of the Clemmer Theatre, Seattle, seven years ago, has accepted the position of manager of the California Theatre in Los Angeles, and left last week to take up his new duties. His former office at the Clemmer has been taken by James L. Tally, who left the position of manager of the Seattle Vitagraph office to become Mr. Clemmer's assistant.

Mr. Bertleson was known throughout the Northwest as a good showman. Mr. Clemmer says that if it had not been so that he could obtain the services of such an experienced and efficient man as Mr. Tally to take his place he would feel like one of a team of horses that had lost his pulling partner. Mr. Tally helped his uncle, J. L. Tally, to manage Tally's Theatre in Los Angeles for several years, then he entered the distributing end of the business, and has been manager of officers in various coast cities, as well as Denver. Most of this time he was with the Vitagraph Company.

His place as manager of the Seattle office was taken by L. M. Cobbs, formerly assistant manager.

Film Row Has $86,000 Bond Subscriptions.

Film row went "over the top" this week with subscriptions amounting to $86,000 for the Fourth Liberty Loan. A. W. Eden, Fox manager, was chairman of the committee that did the work of soliciting. $11,000 of the $86,000 was subscribed by W. A. Mead, manager of the Universal office.

United Pictures Opens Seattle Office.

Lee A. Ochs and William Alexander arrived in Seattle this week to organize a branch office of the United Picture Theatres of America, Inc. They obtained the services of R. Clinton Montgomery as manager, and he will handle their releases from the office of the General Film Company at 2023 Third avenue. Mr. Montgomery has had experience with several film companies as a salesman in the Northwest territory.

Pathe Manager Returns from New York.

L. O. Lukan, Pathe manager, returned from New York this week to find his wife seriously ill with pneumonia. She has past the danger point now, however, and Mr. Lukan is once more able to apply himself to business.

Code Says Business in Alaska Is Good.

W. H. Code, managing owner of the Code Theatre, Nome, Alaska, arrived in Seattle today, October 5, to spend the winter in the city. Mr. Code reports that in spite of the depopulation of Alaska by the war his business was better this summer than it has ever been. He accounts for this apparent paradox by explaining that the men who were generally out in the country working at various industries, such as mining, were loafing in town this summer. He says that he has forestalled any serious results from the new war tax of 20 per cent. by raising his admission price from 25 cents to 50 cents. He simply went out on the stage one night and told his patrons about the tax, and asked them whether they wanted a poor show at 25 cents or the best at 50 cents. They answered back, "Give us a good show. Don't worry about the price. We won't."

Out of Town Exhibitors in Seattle.

Among the visiting exhibitors on film row this week were O. Phelps, Liberty Theatre, Hillsboro, Ore.; J. W. Alexander, Majestic Theatre, Spokane; E. S. Smith, Acme, Lake Stephens; A. H. McDonald, Rex, Eugene, Ore.; F. L. Stannard, Wenatchee and Gem, Wenatchee; Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Glenn, Glenn Theatre, Issaquah, and D. M. Leonard, Rex, Puyallup.

MAKES FILMS OF HOME FOR BOYS ABROAD

National Defense Committee Takes Pictures of Minneapolis to Show Its Fighters in the Trenches

By William Edward Mulligan, Minneapolis Journal, Minneapolis, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS men in the trenches will have their longings for a sight of the "old home town" satisfied this coming winter. Motion pictures of the city, its people, and their activities, will be sent to the front and shown on the screen for the benefit of the Minneapolis fighters.

The first section of the film was taken by the Lochren Film Corporation when Theodore Roosevelt came to the city to speak in the interest of the Liberty Loan campaign on October 7. Pictures of the different churches of the city, showing mothers and fathers and other loved ones of the soldiers will be a feature of the film sent to France.

Other pictures will show scenes of the life of soldiers and sailors in training here. They will also show Red Cross, Y. M. C. A. and Army and Navy Club activities.

A special committee of the Minneapolis Women's Committee, Council of National Defense, is in charge of this project. The film will be completed before the end of October and will be taken to France by a Y. M. C. A. representative.

War News Increases Interest.

"Hearts of the World," now in its sixth week of its Minneapolis engagement at the Shubert, opened Sunday, October 6, at the Metropolitan Theatre in St. Paul for an indefinite run. Despite the fact that the Griffith pictured story of the war has been seen more than seventy times in Minneapolis, there is no decrease of interest, nor in the size of audiences at the Shubert, which is holding the attraction over for at least three additional weeks. News from the front appears to have increased the interest in the picture.

Big War Film Showing.

"America's Answer," the second official Government film, opened Sunday, October 6, for a week's showing at the St. Paul Auditorium, the largest theatre in the Northwest, with a seating capacity of 7,000. The initial showing, which was simultaneous with the launching of the German peace offensive, drew an enormous audience.

R. K. Evans Resigns.

R. K. Evans has resigned as manager of the Minneapolis Fox office. He has been replaced by D. Leo Dennison, former special representative of Paramount, with the Detroit, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Cincinnati branches under his supervision. Mr. Dennison was also formerly manager of General Film and George Kleine offices at Pittsburgh. He will be assisted at the Minneapolis Fox office by Max Weisfeldt, formerly connected with the Mutual organization in Minneapolis and more recently with the Mutual home office in Chicago.

Calvert in France.

Vice-President Hammons, of the Educational Film Corporation, and a party of friends recently visited one of the army camps near New York, and wished Godspeed and an early return to Sergeant L. V. Calvert, of the Signal Corps, former manager of the Minneapolis New Garrick Theatre. Sergeant Calvert left Minneapolis and civilian life on January 15. He is now "Somewhere in France."

"Crashing Through" Gets Ovation.

"Crashing Through to Berlin," the big Universal feature, has received a great reception at the Rex Theatre in Duluth. Manager Azine, of the Rex, employed some clever advertising ideas to bring the merits of the production before the public, and, despite the fact that numerous war pictures have been seen in this city recently, none has been more enthusiastically received by Duluthians than "Crashing Through," according to newspaper critics. Manager Azine used many one-line "readers" in his newspaper advertisement and also several one-column, four-inch small type ads in issues of the Duluth daily newspapers.

Italian Consuls to Boost.

Letters have been sent to every Italian consul in the United States and Canada by the Italo-North American Commercial Union, requesting them to co-operate to their fullest ability with the First National and exhibitors in the showings of "Italy's Flaming Front" and other Italian war pictures, according to advices received by Manager E. R. Pearson, of the Minneapolis First National Exhibitors' Circuit, from the home office.

Hansing Has a Good Business Getter.

C. E. Hansing, proprietor of the Nokomis Theatre, a suburban Minneapolis house, is putting on a stunt which he claims is the biggest business-getter he has ever attempted at his theatre. To each child in the neighborhood applying at the box office he gives a card for them to fill in the date of their birth. The cards must be signed by the parents, and upon the child's birthday he or she, as the case may be, is given a pass to the Nokomis Theatre good for "Self and One." It is a simple and inexpensive proposition, and might easily be put over by other exhibitors with success, according to Mr. Hansing.

Made a Success by Advertising.

J. L. Hasbrouck, owner of two moving picture theatres, one at Graceville and the other at Ortonville, Minn., both of which long considered "problems," told the story last week of how he "put them over the top" as successful houses. Other exhibitors had tried to solve the "problems," but did not succeed. Mr. Hasbrouck took hold of them a few months ago, and they have since been getting results. "It was all done by advertising," he said. "I always give my patrons the best that can be obtained. I use only the best programs, and always advertise them quite heavily. In addition, I give them on an average of one 'special' a week. You can't find a telephone post, barn, fence or any other vacant space around our towns suitable for a poster that hasn't got some kind of advertisement tacked on to it telling the people about what's coming. That's what draws them." Mr. Hasbrouck's slogan is, "Give the people the best there is and they will pay for it." And he has more than made good on it.

News Notes.

M. E. Montgomery, of the Minneapolis World Exchange, left last week for camp, taking with him a wrist watch presented by employes of the office.

Al Picker, managing director of the R. & R. theatres of Ironton, Mich., and Hurley, Wis., was in Minneapolis for a few days arranging late fall bookings for his string of houses, which includes the Rex and Rialto of Ironwood and the Garrick of Hurley.

S. T. Wamsley, the third member of the Minneapolis Vitagraph office to enter the service of Uncle Sam, was presented with a wrist watch by Vitagraph employes before leaving.

H. W. Bruen has sold his Iris Theatre at Miles City, Mont., to E. R. Disney, recent proprietor of the Princess Theatre at Kalispel, Mont. Mr. Bruen will engage in a war industry on the Pacific Coast.

W. H. Strauss has returned to the Minneapolis Westcott Film Corporation after spending three months on the road for the Elliott Film Corporation.

$5,400 IN ADMISSIONS TO BOND BUYERS

Texas Exhibitor Gives Away 900 Six-Dollar Books of Tickets to His Theatre to Spur Loan Purchasing

By Phil Fox, Times-Herald, Dallas, Texas.

ANDREW ZUCCARO, owner of the Queen Theatre at Fort Worth, Texas, is giving away $5,400 worth of admission tickets to his theatre to purchasers of the Fourth Liberty Loan.

Mr. Zuccaro has provided quarters for a committee of women selling Liberty Bonds in the foyer of his theatre. To every person purchasing a bond from them he gives a $6 book of tickets. He is distributing 900 books in this manner.

"This picture show business is a side issue. My real business is to help win the war. If we don't dispose of the Hun there will be no picture show business a few years from now," Zuccaro says.

Fix Price for Soldiers at Twenty Cents.

San Antonio exhibitors have recently differed with the military authorities in regard to the prices of admission to moton picture theatres as charge to soldiers.

San Antonio theatre owners have been charging thirty cents admission at high class houses. Late in September a major of infantry serving as officer of the day protested the matter, and declared that soldiers should be admitted to motion picture theatres for ten cents.

After some discussion the price for soldiers was fixed at twenty cents. The question as to whether soldiers should pay war tax has also been discussed recently in many cantonment cities in the Southwest. In the majority of places the soldiers pay the tax.

Paramount Has a Traveling Saleswoman.

Mrs. Edith Glenn Catlin is the first film saleswoman to travel in the Southwestern territory. Mrs. Catlin early in October was attached to the Paramount staff, and will travel through Texas and Oklahoma. The lady was formerly a successful stock and insurance saleswoman, and so impressed Manager Harry Owens that he broke all precedents for Dallas and employed her with his organization.

Before going on the road Mrs. Catlin studied the film business from the poster room to the bookkeeping department. Her early efforts have been most successful.

LeRoy Bickel's Mother Dies.

Manager LeRoy Bickel, of the Metro Dallas branch, has the sympathy of everybody on Dallas film row in the death of his mother, which occurred at McComb City, Miss., early in October. Mr. Bickel was summoned to her bedside, but did not reach the Mississippi city until after his mother's death. Mrs. Bickel was past seventy years of age, and had been ill for some time.

Polemanakos Opens Another Theatre.

Theodore Polemanakos opened his new theatre, the Greenville Opera House, Greenville, Texas, on October 4, and reports his initial audience an excellent one from every standpoint.

Newsboys See "Pershing's Crusaders."

Every newsboy in the city of Fort Worth saw "Pershing's Crusaders" at the Hippodrome Theatre early in October free of charge. The treat for the youngsters was arranged through the Hippodrome management and the Fort Worth Record.

Private Peat Will Speak in Dallas.

Private Peat's big war film and Private Harold Peat in person will be in Dallas November 20. The film will be shown at Hulsey's Hippodrome Theatre. The soldier will lecture here under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club, and during his visit here will appear at the theatre showing the war picture and make a brief talk. The arrangement was made by Manager Harry Owens, of Paramount.

Now Texas Has a Woman Operator.

"They're just the dearest things," she said, and the man to whom she was talking didn't exactly understand whether she meant the Power's 6-B machines she had charge of or the plumb good looking "unionalls" she was wearing.

The girl who made the remark was Miss Pauline Groome, operator in the Lyric Theatre at Burkburnett, Texas, and whatever she referred to the remark must have applied, because the machines and the unionalls both looked mighty spick and span.

Miss Groome, so far as is known, is the only real girl operator in Texas, and J. W. Ross, of the Lyric Theatre, declares she's just as good as any man he ever had in his booth.

United Theatres Has Dallas Branch.

The United Picture Theatres of America have established offices in Dallas, and are already canvassing the Southwestern territory.

Their quarters are in the offices of the General Film Company, 1926 Main street. The United sales force is headed by E. C. Leeves as manager. W. F. Yoder, William Byrd and Joe Gilligan.

Exhibitors Visiting Dallas.

Because motion picture exhibitors were generally busy in their home cities furthering the Fourth Liberty Loan visitors were not as numerous as usual along Dallas film row early in October. Among the exhibitors in town on business were the following: M. L. Levine, Gem Theatre, Corsicana; L. S. Larrabee, Alamo, Canton; Joe Martin, of Martin's Theatre, Mount Pleasant; B. Campbell, Arcade, Denison; T. J. Preston, Majestic, Teague; W. F. Sonneman, Rex, Waco; L. W. Phipps, of Phipps and Layton, Childress; T. J. Tittle, Liberty, Grandview.

Dallas Brevities.

Headquarters for the Liberty theatres in the Southwestern district have been established at Dallas, with J. K. Johnson in charge. Mr. Johnson succeeds Harry Schoenstadt, who handled Liberty bookings until early in October. The Liberty offices have been established with the Paramount organization on Commerce street, Manager Harry Owens having provided office space.

James Hill, Pathe manager, is back from New York, where he attended a convention of Pathe officials.

J. B. Dugger, Dallas Vitagraph manager, has purchased a new home in Highland Park, one of the choice residence districts of Dallas.

Iowa News Letter

By J. L. Shipley, 615 Locust Street, Des Moines, Iowa.

Blank Purchases Two Arrow Pictures.

A. H. Blank announces the purchase of the rights for "Today" and "The Mad Lover" from the Arrow Film Corporation for Iowa and Nebraska. Mr. Blank is planning an effective publicity campaign on these pictures, prints of which are expected daily.

Burgess Goes to Paramount, Minneapolis.

H. B. Burgess, who has been acting as salesman out of the local Paramount office, has accepted a similar berth with the Minneapolis office of the same organization, and has left for his new territory. Manager R. G. LiBeau, of the Paramount office, is spending two or three days out on the road each week and is offsetting the loss of Burgess, who has been in Iowa a long time.

Ten-Piece Orchestra at the Rialto.

The Rialto Theatre has a new ten-piece orchestra, under the direction of Sirignano, the Chicago band leader, who was a feature at Riverview Park this summer.

Boone Now Has Sunday Shows.

Brown and Anderson, proprietors of the Princess Theatre at Boone, Iowa, took the bull by the horns recently and opened their theatre for the first time on Sunday in the history of Boone amusements. Despite protests from the church element the mayor did not interfere. The picture was "Pershing's Crusaders," and a lockout was the rule all day long. Boone is a city of 15,000, and the people have demanded Sunday amusements for some months past. It is expected that the other theatres, of which there are three, will follow suit.

Temple Grand Now Shows Pictures Only.

Owing to lack of suitable road attractions, Manager Louis Rosenfield, of the Temple Grand, Creston, is playing a policy of straight pictures this season. In former years he has run two or three big shows a month, with pictures as a permanent policy.

Hills Universal Film Like a Circus.

The Palace Theatre management, aided by Manager M. J. Frisch, of the Universal office, put "Crashing Through to Berlin" over for a week like a circus. Several thousand half sheets bearing the words, "Buy Liberty Bonds—Send Our Boys Crashing Through to Berlin," were conspicuously posted—there not being a window in the business district that did not carry the posters. These were placed at the time the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign was launched. Universal carried a 5,000-line advertising campaign in the Register and Tribune, and the Palace management also used big ad space in the other papers. A reproduction of the Broadway Theatre lobby that was used in New York during the run of the picture there was made for the Palace.

Film Men Boosting Loan.

Local and state picture houses have been boosting the Fourth Liberty Loan effectively. In addition to Four-Minute Men several male quartettes have made the picture houses nightly, and, coupled with special slides and an appeal to buy bonds in all theatre advertising matter, a great deal of good has been accomplished for the cause. A. H. Blank, motion picture publicity chairman for Iowa, has left no stone unturned, and the results have been even greater than in any previous campaign.

Releases "The Whip" for Smaller Towns.

Manager Oarland, of the Yale Photoplay Corporation, has just released "The Whip" for use in the smaller towns, and has three prints on this subject well booked up. He also is lining up a nice lot of bookings on "The Public Defender."

New East Side Theatre Opens.

The Star, a new picture theatre of 200 seating capacity, has been opened on the east side, and is doing considerable business. In order to combat this new theatre the Ellman Brothers, who operate the A-Muse-U and the Grand, both on the east side, have opened up the old Elite, formerly an opera house, and which has had a varied career as a picture house. This makes opposition quite strenuous in that particular district.

Work Progressing on Big Picture House.

Work is progressing on the big new picture house at Sixth and Grand avenues. No publicity has been given the venture as yet, and, as all the first-class service is tied up in Des Moines for first and second run, there is considerable conjecture as to what the policy of the house will be. It will not open for some months yet.

Horn Goes Into the Auto Business.

Lee Horn, well known to Iowa exhibitors as former manager of the Supreme Feature Film Company and of the Select office in Minneapolis, is now manager of the Times Square Auto Accessories Company here. Mr. Horn says he is making a big success in his new undertaking.

Maritime Provinces News

By Alice Fairweather, The Standard, St. John, N. B.

C. F. STOWE, who has been for some time manager of F. G. Spencer's Theatre, the Gem at Fredericton, is to come to St. John to take charge of the two theatres, the Unique and Lyric. A. D. Callan, of St. John, will go to Fredericton, and Mr. Gaudett will take A. Fielding's place at Truro.

R. G. March, of the Specialty Film Import, has returned from a trip to Newfoundland, where he went for the purpose of circulating the Government Weekly. This was placed in all houses. Mr. March states that the general situation in Newfoundland is good, all five theatres in St. John playing to good business.

In St. John, N. B., at the Queen's Square Theatre, the "Yellow Ticket," a Pathe picture, was very much liked, and Manager Armstrong is going to repeat it this coming week. "Hands Up," the Pathe serial, is booked at this theatre.

J. Lieberman, of the Fox Film Corporation, has returned from Toronto, where he met the heads of the Fox Corporation. He says that the conference was most satisfactory. The Orpheus, at Halifax, is using Fox Standards and the fifty-two specials, while the Casino is featuring the Fox Mutt and Jeff comedies.

At the Famous Players news is heard that M. Bernstein is going to Halifax to take charge of the Empire Theatre there. He leaves for Toronto this week and then settles in Halifax. An orchestra will be arranged for in Toronto, but the picture policy is not yet decided upon.

G. J. B. Metzler, formerly manager of the Orpheus, goes to Toronto to live and is leaving the theatrical business entirely.

New Organ for the Photodrome.

A new organ, costing $6,500, is being installed in the Photodrome Theatre, City Hall square, Toronto, which is now under the management of Dave Siegal, formerly a well-known operator. Women ushers are also being introduced at this theatre, which is operated daily from 9 a. m. to 11 p. m., at 10-cent and 15-cent prices. Mr. Coulson, formerly manager of the Photodrome, is now in charge of the Coliseum Theatre, where a number of changes have been made. The Coliseum also now has women ushers. The Coliseum Theatre is being redecorated both inside and out.

New Rental Prices Bring Heavy Bookings.

There has been quite a rush on the part of Toronto exhibitors to secure bookings of "Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance," the Griffith pictures, on the new rental basis from the Monarch Film Company, Limited, which is releasing the features in Canada. The pictures have been booked by the Strand, Rialto, Cum-Bac and other local houses for early showing at 25-cent prices. Manager Bailie, of the Cum-Bac, is arranging to reserve all seats in his theatre for the three-day runs of both productions in his house, which is located in the Dovercourt section.

Pomeroy Has Novel Lobby Display.

Manager Pomeroy, of the Holman Theatre, Montreal, carried out a suggestion for a unique lobby display in connection with the Universal feature, "That Devil, Bateese," starring Monroe Salisbury. Pomeroy made his house into a Hudson Bay trading post for the time being, using scenic effects and many properties, including moccasins, toboggans, tan bark, tree trunks, snowshoes and other accessories. Pomeroy made a big drive with this picture for several reasons, including the fact that the location of the story is Montreal and the back-woods of Quebec. Even the doorman of the theatre was garbed as a French-Canadian trapper for the stunt, while many skins were used as mural decorations for the occasion.

ALLENS ENLARGE THEIR THEATRE CHAIN

With the New Additions the Canadian Exhibitors Now Own or Lease Twenty-five Houses in the Dominion

By W. M. Gladish, 33 Wineva Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

MESSRS. Jule and J. J. Allen, of Toronto, controlling a large number of moving picture theatres and several film franchises in the Dominion of Canada, have made several additions to their chain of houses during the past few weeks.

The Allens have acquired the Francais Theatre, Montreal, temporarily, for the presentation of "Hearts of the World," under the direct management of Thomas Connolly, formerly manager of the Gayety Burlesque Theatre, Montreal. "Hearts of the World" is to be presented during a period of four weeks in the Francais, which was formerly a vaudeville and photoplay theatre which catered to the French section of the city. The showing of "Hearts of the World" at the Francais is practically the second run of the Griffith special in Montreal, the first run having been at the new Allen Theatre in Westmount, starting September 16.

The Allens have acquired control of the Auditorium Theatre in the City of Quebec. The news comes from Windsor, Ontario, that the Allens have taken an option on the large local theatre owned by Alderman Simon Meretsky, of Windsor, the amount involved being $75,000.

It has also been definitely stated that the new large theatre on Danforth avenue, Toronto, is to be erected for the Allens. Considerable objection had been raised to the erection of this theatre by preachers and others of the community and the license was held up by the Provincial authorities pending an investigation. Still another new Allen theatre is nearing completion in Toronto, this house being located on Bloor street, near Bathurst street.

The new Allen theatre at Edmonton, Alberta, is scheduled to open on November 4, and the new Allen theatre in Regina, Sask., will be finished before November 23. "Hearts of the World" will probably be the opening attraction at both of these theatres. The Allens now own or lease well over twenty-five moving picture theatres from Quebec to Moose Jaw.

Ontario Increases War Tax on Tickets.

The amusement war tax on theatre and concert tickets has been revised by T. W. McGarry, Provincial Treasurer of Ontario, so that patrons of amusement houses buying tickets valued at more than 45 cents after November 1 will be required to pay a much higher tax. Tickets valued at from 5 cents to 45 cents are not affected by the new arrangement at all, which means that moving picture theatres in Ontario escape the increase almost entirely. Patrons buying the 50-cent box seats in several large picture theatres will now pay a 5-cent tax in place of 2 cents, and patrons buying 50-cent to $1.50 tickets will have to pay a tax varying from 5 cents to 15 cents. Roughly, the new scale provides a tax of approximately 10 per cent. on all admission tickets over 45 cents.

Another new rule, and one that will inconvenience reviewers and pass holders, is that an exhibitor will be prohibited from selling quantities of war tax tickets at one time to any patron. Tax tickets may only be sold at the theatre box office for current use. This change has been made to enable the Government to keep a close record of theatre patronage and the sale of war tax tickets.

Books Jewel Film for Indefinite Period.

J. P. Doughlin, owner of the Princess Theatre, Sault Ste Marie, Ontario, made an unusual booking when he secured the new Jewel production, "For Husbands Only," for an indefinite period early in October. R. Leo Crume, former owner of the theatre, and now service and publicity manager of the Canadian Universal, went to Sault Ste Marie from Toronto for the exploitation of the feature.

Mr. Willis, formerly manager of the Rialto Theatre, Toronto, and the Rex Theatre, Winnipeg, is now an exhibitor of Sault Ste Marie.

Will Hold Special Matinees for Children.

Manager Sexton of the Family Theatre, Kew Beach, Toronto, held a grand opening of a series of special children's matinees for the winter season on Saturday, October 5, by the presentation of several attractions booked especially for the one performance. One of these was the first episode of "The Railroad Raiders," and another was the first of a series of Judge Brown stories. Mr. Sexton announced that these pictures would be shown every Saturday afternoon for the children.

Toronto Sees New English War Picture.

A private showing of "The Better 'Ole," the new English war picture based on the famous cartoon of Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, was held at the Allen Theatre, Toronto, on October 3, and the feature received considerable comment of a favorable nature. It is a rough and ready sort of picture in which the comedy side of the trench life of the English Tommy is depicted. It is typically English in get-up and portrayals. The picture made a hit with the convalescent soldiers in Whitby Military Hospital when it was shown there a few days previous to the Toronto showing and it was also screened at the Parliament Buildings, Toronto, at the request of T. W. McGarry, the Provincial Treasurer. The picture is not without its thrills, as there is a spy story running through the piece.

Censors Condemn Fox Picture.

Fox's "The Soul of Buddha," starring Theda Bara, has been having a rough passage at the hands of moving picture censors in Canada. The feature was passed by the Ontario Board of Censors and was presented at Loew's Theatre, Toronto, during the week of September 30. The Manitoba Board of Censors condemned the picture, however, after it had been booked by the Bijou Theatre, Winnipeg, for showing during the same week. The Bijou management advertised the picture extensively right up to the opening date and then had to switch to two other features. "The Soul of Buddha" was also condemned by the Quebec Board of Censors.

Rialto Resembled a Fire Station.

The Rialto Theatre, Toronto, was almost converted into a fire station during the week of October 7, for the first Canadian run of the Drury Lane melodrama, "The Still Alarm." Manager W. J. Stewart interviewed officials of the Toronto Fire Department with the result that he was able to obtain several wagon loads of department equipment which he used for both interior and exterior display. He also used many twenty-four sheet stands throughout the city for the presentation and distributed 20,000 handbills of the circus type. These were printed on fiery red paper. Cutouts of the big posters were also used for the lobby display. Mechanical effects were used for the presentation of the feature during the week and the general price of admission was 25 cents instead of the usual 15 cents. "The Still Alarm" is released in Canada by the Exhibitors' Distributing Corporation, Limited, the new Canadian exchange.

KANSAS EXHIBITORS DOING BIG BUSINESS

C. W. Harden Back from Trip Through Sunflower State Reports Theatres Are Playing to Capacity.

By Kansas City News Service, 115 Railway Exchange, Kansas City, Mo.

C. W. HARDEN, manager of the Equitable Film Corporation, who has just returned from a two weeks' trip through the heart of Kansas, brings a highly optimistic report of business in the Sunflower state. Mr. Harden visited Lawrence, Topeka, Emporia, Newton, Hutchinson, Wichita, Wellington, Arkansas City, El Dorado, Augusta and a number of other smaller cities. Commenting on business conditions, Mr. Harden said. "In every town that I visited, I was surprised at the volume of business the picture houses are doing. Despite war times, trade conditions in Kansas are better in a general way than ever before. Everybody seems to have plenty of money and is spending it. The exhibitors are charging higher prices and are playing to larger crowds every day as the winter season advances. War pictures and comedies seem to have the popular favor. "Mothers of Liberty" is booked in practically every large town in the state and our Billy West comedies, Shorty Hamilton series and Jester comedies found a ready market. Considering the prevailing conditions business is nothing short of remarkable.

"Private Peat" Opens at the Liberty.

The Paramount-Artcraft special, "Private Peat," opens at the Liberty Theatre for a week's run beginning Oct. 13. P. B. Dana, publicity man, has arranged with book stores to give a good display of Private Peat's book, as an additional advertisement for the film.

Garden Theatre Reopened October 6.

The "Deemster," by Hall Caine, opened at the Liberty Theatre for a week's run Oct. 6. As a forrunner to the film, Mr. Caine appeared in person at the Orpheum the latter part of September.

The Garden reopened Oct. 6 with a week's run of "Tarzan of the Apes," and the additional feature of the Kilties Band. The entire theatre has been remodeled and redecorated, and under the new policy is planning to show the best in pictures and a high class musical attraction.

This combination of features is rather of a novelty as no vaudeville is to be booked. The prices range from fifteen cents to fifty cents, and continuous performances will run from 1:30 P. M. to 11 o'clock.

No Charge for Censoring Certain Patriotic Films.

The Kansas State Board of Censorship has agreed to pass on certain patriotic films without charge, instead of their usual amount of $2 per reel.

Garden to Extend Run on Griffith Film.

The Garden Theatre is arranging for a third week's run on "Hearts of the World." This production has met with such a hearty reception by the people of Kansas City that at the close of the second week's engagement theatre goers were still being turned away from the performances.

Equitable Buys Rights to Jester Comedies.

The Equitable Film Corporation, Kansas City, Mo., has purchased the state rights to the Jester Comedies, for Kansas and western Missouri. The pictures will be released at the rate of two a month, beginning Oct. 15. Charles W. Harden, the Equitable manager, after reviewing several releases, said, he considers these pictures to be the equal of any other two-reel comedies on the market.

Kansas City Briefs.

Stanley M. Elsea, of the office of the Kansas City Feature Film Company, has gone to Chicago to take an examination for regimental sergeant. Mr. Elsea plans to join the Students Army Training Corps.

Gerald Cloverdike, head shipper for the Kansas City Feature Film Company, left to join the Marines Oct. 10.

A. G. Irvine, who has been connected with the booking department of the Kansas City Feature Film Company, will go to Des Moines, Iowa, shortly to take charge of the booking department of the Paramount-Artcraft exchange.

P. B. Dana and Joe Gilday are planning to attend the Exhibitors' convention at Hutchinson, Oct. 22.

C. E. Shurtleff, general sales manager of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, will visit the Kansas City branch shortly.

The General Film Company has added a new salesman in the person of W. H. Wicks, who will cover western Missouri and northern Kansas.

G. T. Scoville, of the Idle Hour Theatre, leaves Oct. 7, for a two week's camping trip with the Seventh Regiment, at Nevada, Missouri. Upon his return, Mr. Scoville will enter the tank service.

Herman Lirch is handling the northern Kansas territory for Pathe, formerly covered by J. E. Foland, now manager of the General Film Company.

Richard Robertson, manager of the Kansas City Goldwyn exchange, is working as a lieutenant in the Fourth Liberty Loan drive.

Mrs. Metcalf, formerly assistant manager of Jewel Productions, and later with the General Film Company, is now connected with the William L. Sherry Service.

Exhibitor Notes.

St. Charles, Mo.—Robert Stempel, manager of the Natatorium Theatre, has changed to the Strand.

Webster Groves, Mo.—George Pliakos, of St. Louis, has plans for a picture theatre, to be one story, 43 by 114 feet, and will cost about $7,000.

Junction City, Kan.—The new Cozy Theatre is nearing completion and a new photo-player will be installed at once. Jack Howe is manager.

Oswego, Kan.—H. H. Daniels has arranged to install an up-to-date picture theatre in the Kiblinger Building. The new theatre will be known as the Liberty and will open about Oct. 15.

Garber, Okla.—L. A. Moran has erected a new theatre on South Main street, which is called the Pershing.

Hobart, Okla.—F. R. Burns, of Elk City, has purchased the Cozy Theatre here. It will be managed by Mrs. Burns while Mr. Burns is in military service.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—John Sinopoulo will remodel the Lyric Theatre at a cost of $1,500.

Ballinger, Texas.—The local picture show will be conducted by Miss Mae McElroy, in the absence of L. Cohen.

Humble, Texas.—The Dixie Theatre, under the management of I. S. Cash, is now open for business.

Sherman, Texas.—Miss Beatrice Fairchild sold the Lyric Theatre to C. M. Adams. The theatre will hereafter be called the Liberty Theatre. Homer Kyle will be manager, and the building will be remodeled and new equipment installed.

Grand Island, Neb.—The Majestic Theatre is now open for business.

FILM NEWS OF INTEREST FROM DETROIT

Michigan Theatres Aiding Smileage Campaign—Elliott Leaves to Manage the Regent at Toronto

By Jacob Smith, 719 Free Press Building, Detroit, Michigan.

Changes at Universal Office.

A CHANGE has been made in the management of the Detroit Universal office. Paul Bush has been appointed general manager, while W. D. Ward will give his entire time to the development of the Jewel special productions. This will greatly relieve Mr. Ward of office worries, and let him do the work of selling for which he is best suited. Mr. Bush comes from St. Louis, where he was recently in charge of the Goldwyn Exchange.

Goldwyn's Vice-President Visits Detroit.

Fred Warren, vice-president of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, was in Detroit Oct. 5 and 6, for the purpose of meeting some of the leading exhibitors and looking over the local situation. Mr. Warren reports that all over the United States exhibitors are writing the home office that Goldwyn pictures are taking better with each release, indicating that the Goldwyn policy of clean, wholesome pictures are certain to win in the long run. It so happened that the time Mr. Warren was in Detroit three first-run houses were showing Goldwyn features. With J. E. Flynn, Detroit Goldwyn manager, he stopped for a few minutes at the Madison Theatre, where "Laughing Bill Hyde" was being exhibited, but the crowds in the lobby were so dense that he could not get in. This picture proved one of the best attractions that the Madison has had since it opened—as far as box-office pull is concerned.

Elliott Goes to Toronto.

Will M. Elliott, considered one of the best all-around showmen in the theatrical business, and for the past year manager of the Washington Theatre, Detroit, has resigned to assume the management of the Regent Theatre, Toronto, which plays first-run features.

Mr. Elliott was former publicity manager at the Detroit office of Paramount, and has had twenty-two years experience in the amusement business. Under his administration the Washington proved a big success, and it was with reluctance that the Kunsky interests let him go from their organization.

Commends Loan Work of Gleichman.

Phil Gleichman, managing director of the Broadway Strand Theatre, Detroit, is in receipt of a letter from the chairman of the publicity committee of the Fourth Liberty Loan congratulating him for the splendid work he put forth during the campaign. The Broadway-Strand ran the Animated Song Stunt during the entire period of the drive, and started it a week before the drive opened.

Brooks Resigns from Fox Organization.

J. O. Brooks, for the past year special representative in Michigan for Fox, tendered his resignation to accept the appointment as manager of the Liberty Theatre, Camp Sherman cantonment, Chillicothe, Ohio. Mr. Brooks left for camp on Oct. 8 and was immediately inducted into the service of the Government.

This makes the fourth Detroit film man to become affiliated with war theatricals—the others being H. O. Pierce, at Washington, Dave Blythe, at Camp Sevier, and Harry S. Lorch as supervisor of stock shows.

Exhibitors Aid Smileage Campaign.

More than a hundred theatres in Michigan have already designated their willingness to give ten per cent. of the receipts from one day during each month to purchase smileage books for soldiers throughout the country. W. D. Ward, of the Universal, has been giving considerable attention of late to the work of signing up the exhibitors.

Brief Notes.

Harry Zapp, recently with the Universal Exchange, is now travelling for Goldwyn in Michigan, taking the place of Richard Wernick, who was promoted to the management of the Boston office.

Frank Stuart, manager of the General Exchange, has been elected to membership in the Detroit Board of Motion Picture Exchange managers.

John Sidney Applegate, former manager of Pathe's Denver office, has been appointed house manager of the Liberty Theatre, Detroit.

A. J. Moeller, recently manager of the Majestic Theatre, Ann Arbor, has resigned to manage the De Luxe Theatre, Detroit, now nearing completion. This house, situated at Kercheval and Parkview, seats 1,800, and will play features exclusively.

Ralph Tibbits, out of the Chicago office of the Butterfield circuit, has succeeded Mr. Moeller as manager of the Majestic Theatre.

Nat Lefkowitz, recently doing special work in Michigan for Select, has joined the selling organization of the Fox Exchange, and will cover that part of Michigan formerly handled by J. O. Brooks.

It is of local interest to know that Charles H. Powell, former Detroit salesman for Fox, has been appointed Cleveland manager of the Fox Exchange.

Courtland Marsden, recently of Philadelphia, has been appointed manager of the Regent Theatre, Detroit, succeeding C. A. Mead.

LATE BALTIMORE NEWS.

Film Shows How a Rookie Is Fitted Out.

A Government moving picture was made recently of a rookie as he enters the warehouse at Camp Meade to be fitted out with the equipment and wearing apparel of a soldier. Then after he has gone through the changing of garments and being fitted to his exact size in all things, the cameraman again "shot" him when he was leaving the warehouse. The reason for taking the picture is so that it can be shown throughout the country, giving an idea with what efficiency the Government equips its men.

Recognizes Nephew in "Crusaders" Film.

John Elmer Shaw, a member of the Fifty-third Machine Gun Company, son of Mr. and Mrs. Olin E. Shaw, 242 South Gilmor street, Baltimore, was seen and recognized in "Pershing's Crusaders" when it was shown at a local theatre recently due to the clear film and the good projection. Herbert M. Shaw, 1921 Whitmore street, Baltimore, recognized his nephew when seeing him with the American troops marching in the picture.

More Texas Brevities.

G. W. Thornton, of Vitagraph, has resigned his position as salesman, and has opened the St. George Drug store in Dallas. D. T. Johnson succeeds him.

J. L. Butterfield, manager of the Community Service in the Southwestern district, was in Dallas from San Antonio early in October arranging for army camp bookings.

"Her Mistake," starring Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw, produced by the Producers' Film Corporation, and released here through the General, is being pushed by Smiling Jimmy Kelly in this territory. An intensive advertising campaign is being carried out preparatory to the release November 1.

The First National has received many bookings on Petrova's "Panther Woman." Texas exhibitors are eagerly awaiting the release.

News has been received in Dallas of the serious illness of T. F. McTier, district manager of General, who has Spanish influenza.

P. C. Levy, owner of several theatres in Forth Worth, is visiting in New York.

ALAMO PULLS NOVEL STUNT TO AID LOAN

Louisville Picture House Converts Truck Into a "No Man's Land" to Give Impetus to Bond Buying

By Ohio Valley News Service, 1404 Starks Building, Louisville, Ky.

THE Alamo Theatre people did more in connection with boosting the Fourth Liberty Loan than any one house in the city of Louisville. The company secured a large truck, which was converted into a "No Man's Land," and placed in front of the theatre. A piano was furnished, and arrangements made, whereby local people kept the piano going steadily from 12 o'clock noon until 6 o'clock each evening. "Buy a Bond," was sung and resung hundreds of times each day, the crowds joining in on the chorus, while thousands of copies of the music were distributed and considerable other material to advertise the loan. A number of the best singers in Louisville were on the truck, and numerous patriotic and other songs sung, there being something going on all the time, while some of the performers sang Negro songs and melodies. Some amateur vaudeville helped out, while there were a few excellent quartets heard from.

This proved a great attraction, and a great advertisement for the Liberty Loan as well as the theatre. The workers mingled with the crowd, and took many subscriptions for bonds, while numerous patriotic speakers addressed the crowds from the truck.

Other theatres were busy showing slides and giving time to speakers, but with the exception of the Alamo Theatre the rest were put out of the running when the house closed on account of influenza. However the daily bond selling went right ahead at the Alamo without interruption.

The idea was suggested to Manager Dolle by Owen Blanchard, who books A. B. C. Comedies through the suburban houses handled by the Broadway Amusement Interests of Louisville.

Defer Plans on $100,000 Theatre.

A recent report from Nashville, Tenn., was to the effect that plans for a $100,000 theatre to be erected by the Crescent Amusement Company, Marr & Holman, architects, had been deferred indefinitely. It was planned to erect a building 85 by 180 feet, with orchestra floor, two balconies and a mezzanine. The building was to have been fireproof, of concrete and steel construction, composition roof, concrete floor, steam and blower system of heating and ventilating.

Who Was Recently Promoted to Manager of Pathe Exchange in New Orleans.

Camp Taylor to Have Another Theatre.

The War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities, Washington, has plans for erection of an additional Liberty Theatre, at Camp Taylor, Louisville, and one at Camp Knox, near Stithton, Ky.

Keith Interests Take $5,000 Subscription.

The B. F. Keith interests through Louisville subscribed the sum of $5,000 to the Fourth Liberty Loan, the company making individual subscriptions through its theatres in various cities, instead of lumping it all through headquarters.

Jay Mryon Goldberg Arrives.

Lee Goldberg, manager of the Louisville office of the Big Features Rights Corporation, former managing exhibitor, and prominent in theatrical lines, is the proud father of Jay Mryon Goldberg, a husky nine-pound son which recently arrived in the home as a playmate to his five-year old sister.

Washington Theatre Raises Prices.

At Maysville, Ky., the Washington Theatre has found it impracticable to continue operating on low admission prices, and has boosted the price of admission to fifteen cents, including the war tax.

Wilmington News Letter

By D. M. Bain, Wilmington, N. C.

Employes Paid While Theatre Is Closed.

THE theatres of Wilmington, N. C., have just closed their second dark week, with indications that the ban placed on them on September 27 will not be lifted for two weeks more. Wilmington was the first city in the South to put the closing order into effect, including theatres, and its steps were quickly followed by other cities throughout the South, where the influenza epidemic had spared.

The Howard-Wells Amusement Company, operators of the five local theatres, are maintaining their organization intact through the scourge, paying full salaries throughout the entire closed period, since the labor situation is such that they could not otherwise hope to recruit sufficient forces to operate when permitted to open again.

Drake Buys the La-Fayette Theatre.

H. T. Drake, owner of the Strand Theatre at Fayetteville, N. C., last week purchased from the receiver, John E. Elliott, the La-Fayette Theatre and building, corner Person and Dick streets, the consideration being in the neighborhood of $42,000.

The La-Fayette is the oldest theatre in Fayetteville, being one of the landmarks of the city. It was formerly used to house legitimate attractions.

Concerning Howard-Wells Officials.

P. W. Wells, president of the Howard-Wells Amusement Company, of Wilmington, has returned from an extended business trip to New York, Washington and Philadelphia. James Howard, secretary of the Howard-Wells Amusement Company, has gone to Baltimore on business. D. M. Bain, publicity and booking manager for the Howard-Wells theatres, has thoroughly recovered from a severe attack of influenza, having been confined to his home on Weightsville Beach for several weeks with the malady. H. T. Cooley, manager of the Grand Theatre, of the Howard-Wells interests, has returned from an extended trip to Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia. Miss Elizabeth Bullard, bookkeeper for the Howard-Wells interests, has recovered from a slight attack of influenza.

"THE KING OF DIAMONDS"

Harry Morey Gives Earnest Performance of Illogical Hero in Vitagraph Romance.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

SITUATIONS follow each other rapidly in "The King of Diamonds," a five-part Vitagraph picture written by Edward S. Ballou and directed by Paul Scardon. There are all sorts of adventures, and most of the incidents are dramatic, but want of logic in the hero's actions makes the story miss fire. Oliver Bennett, the part played by Harry Morey, is a strong, intelligent looking man who loves his wife devotedly and slaves at his business that he may gratify her every wish. The lady has formed an attachment for a Doctor Toranno, and treats her husband with such coldness that it is difficult to believe he has no suspicion of what is going on. As drawn by the author, Bennett is as emotional as a woman, and lacks the common sense to make his wife understand that she cannot treat him in such a manner.

When the doctor doses him with medicine that brings out eruptions on his skin and then tells him he has leprosy, Bennett does not consult any other doctor, but goes down to the seashore, leaves his coat on the sand, gets into a rowboat and rows out into the ocean supposedly with the intention of drowning himself. He is picked up by a freighter bound for Africa, makes his way to a diamond mine, is befriended by the owner, who turns out to be his wife's father; becomes as rich as Monte Cristo, and, like that famous hero of romance, goes back home to work his revenge on the doctor, who is now married to Bennet's wife. Jewel, a ward of his wife's father, accompanies him.

Having grown a beard, Bennett is able to hide his identity from his wife and Doctor Toranno. He tricks Toranno into believing that Mrs. Toranno is untrue to him, and wrecks the doctor financially. The false wife shoots herself, and Bennett consoles himself with the love of the other woman.

Harry Morey gives an earnest performance of his emotional role, and is excellently supported by Betty Blythe as Mrs. Bennett, George Majoroni as Doctor Toranno, Jean Paige as Jewel, and William Dennison as Doctor Sanderson.

"SECRET STRINGS"

Splendid Cast Supports Olive Tell in Metro Production Based on Kate Jordan Play.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

METRO'S October 7 release, "Secret Strings," is not only a well-made picture, but boasts a cast of unusual merits. Olive Tell, the featured member, plays well and looks well, and among the following list of names of the supporting players will be recognized some whose qualifications will not be questioned: Marie Wainwright, John Daly Murphy, William J. Kelly, Hugh Thompson, Hugh Jeffrey, Bert Tuey, John A. Smiley, Barbara Winthrop and Edward Lawrence. Marie Wainwright's handling of the role of the woman detective is a real joy. John Daly Kelly also comes in for honorable mention. The production was made by John Ince, and is artistic and well balanced. And in spite of the fact that one wonders why a male star had not been chosen for the play it must be admitted that it is one of the most perfect pieces of work in the matter of construction and action that the season offers.

The story, which, as presented in the picture, is that of the wife of a master crook, presents her as a struggling artist on the edge of the abyss of failure. Her husband, whom she has formerly denounced, comes to her, and succeeds through misrepresentation in entangling her in a scheme to rob a certain rich home. He, himself, enters this home in which he has succeeded in installing himself as the friend of the aged and dotted wife of the owner, and places his wife, who is supposed to learn the secret of the safe, in a compromising position, and gets caught in his own trap.

The truly professional manner in which the secret of the play is hidden from the spectator is an admirable feature of the picture. For not until the very last moments of the play are we apprised of the fact that the persons with whom the master crook has become so intimate form a party of detectives who impersonate the proprietors of the home, and who have laid a trap for the crook and his gang.

"ROSEMARY CLIMBS THE HEIGHTS"

Five-Part Americnn-Pathe Features Mary Miles Minter in a Strong Dramatic Story.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE story upon which the American-Pathe Mary Miles Minter feature, "Rosemary Climbs the Heights," is based contains much more merit than the production itself. Again the little star is made to lure the sympathies of her audience through her youthful beauty rather than in well contrived scenes in which the art of the drama could be made to count. As the production progresses situations of melodramatic magnificence reveal themselves. These finally succeed in gripping the imagination of the spectator to the extent of making the picture passably entertaining.

The story follows a short period in the career of a young country girl who has a talent for wood carving, and attracts the attention of a group of artists who summer near her home. The illness of her father aids her in taking advantage of an invitation to come to the city to find a market for her work. The jealousy of a woman of the studios is aroused because of attentions paid the girl by one of the artists. Finally a circumstance in which the woman is killed by her husband with a revolver stolen by her from the belongings of the country girl causes the latter to be arrested on a charge of murder. At the crucial moment in the trial the child of the dead man, a little boy who was on the scene at the time of the murder, reveals the truth.

"THE GODDESS OF LOST LAKE."

Louise Glaum in Five-Part Romance Gives Clever Impersonation.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

AFTER taking its own time in getting underway and letting the spectator know the reason for being "The Goddess of Lost Lake," a five-part picture, produced by the Louise Glaum Organization, and distributed by W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, develops an interesting romance in a picturesque setting among the mountains of the West. The story was written by M. Van de Water, and directed by Wallace Worsley. Jack Cunningham made the scenario. The action covers three generations.

The grandfather of the heroine is married to a full blooded Indian woman, in the early days, and a daughter is born to them. She in turn marries a white man, an English prospector, who is searching the region for gold and hears a legend about the treasures of Lost Lake. An Indian Prince was killed and robbed by white men who were anxious to find out where he procured the nuggets he brought to the settlement in payment for goods. Since that time an Indian has stood guard over the piece of shore in which the gold was found, the old chief having decreed that the blood of the first white man who tries to take any of the treasure away must pay for that of the murdered Indian.

Mary Thorne, the part played by Louise Glaum, is sent to college by her father, and returns home an accomplished woman. She meets a wealthy young Englishman while away. He comes to Mary's home on a hunting trip and the girl receives him disguised as an uncivilized Indian. Her object is only to play a trick on Hamilton, but a friend of his speaks so slightingly of her to him that Mary leaves the camp where her uncle and the two Englishmen are staying and returns home. Her father is killed when he discovers the gold of Lost Lake, and Mary and Hamilton become man and wife.

Louise Glaum acts the widely different phases of Mary's character cleverly, and is adequately supported by W. Lawson Butt as Hamilton, Hayward Mack as Chester Martin, Joseph J. Dowling as Marshall Thorne, and Frank Lanning as Eagle. The camera work of L. Guy Wilky is worthy of much praise.

"THE MAKE-BELIEVE WIFE."

Billie Burke Has Congenial Role in Smartly Written Paramount Picture.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

FRENCH comedy intrigue and a piece of imported lingerie are among the articles to be found in "The Make-Believe Wife," a five-part Paramount picture written by Edward Childs Carpenter and starring Billie Burke. It also contains sprightly situations, witty subtitle, is smartly written all through and is acted with the proper lightness of touch by the entire cast. John Stuart Robertson, the director, has utilized several beautiful and appropriate locations for the Adirondack scenes, and handled the production with excellent judgment. Adrian Gil-Spear made the scenario.

The story takes its title from an attempt on the part of Phillis Ashbrook to shield her reputation by marrying John Manning, after being lost in the Adirondacks with him, and spending the night in a deserted cabin in his company. To make matters worse, Phillis is engaged to marry Roger Mason, and Manning has asked Anita Webb to be his wife. It is all agreed between the three couples that Manning is to make Phillis his wife in name only and immediately after the ceremony leave for China.

On their arrival in New York Manning takes the wrong handbag and starts for San Francisco. Phillis determines to go to her husband's apartment, when she discovers she has his bag and the keys to his rooms. Once inside his living-room Phillis finds that the walls are lined with photographs of ladies her husband has known and loved. Being a Billie Burke story, the star knows just what to do when she finds her husband has taken her nightgown and left her his pajamas. She puts them on and goes to bed.

The next morning Manning turns up, having come back after his handbag. Anita and Roger also arrive at the apartment. Manning first thinks that one of his old flames is occupying his rooms. When Phillis walks in on him from the street, he is trying to conceal intimate articles of ladies' apparel. At the end of the comedy complications, Anita and Roger confess that they have been consoling each other for the loss of their sweethearts, so Phillis and Manning conclude to drop the make-believe part out of their wedding.

As usual, Billie Burke's frocks will fill the feminine heart with envy.

"HUGON, THE MIGHTY"

Five-Reel Bluebird Offering Features Monroe Salisbury in Fine Role.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

NO one appearing in the films can portray the rugged, out-door French Canadian better than Monroe Salisbury, even though he is occasionally guilty of conscious posing. After all it is a mere mannerism in his case, and seldom out of keeping with the character he is playing. In this number he appears once more as Hugon, a vigorous woodsman, respected for his physical strength and moral courage, but he glories more in the former than is good for him. He is humbled finally by a curious combination —a spider and a young girl.

The author, William E. Wing, has contrived a very interesting story, and the capable direction of Rollin S. Sturgeon brings it out to good advantage. The settings are clear-cut and picturesque, and give the production a splendid atmosphere.

Hugon, glorying in his physical prowess, finds the girl, Marie, in love with a boy named Gabriel. The latter is very young, and the attachment is scarcely a serious one. But Hugon offends the girl by ridiculing Gabriel. He also indicates to Roque, a surveyor, that he and his men must make no advances toward Marie. The latter does not love the surveyor or his men, but she resents Hugon's interference. She laughs at his physical strength, and tells him he cannot tear away a spider's web. Hugon breaks down the web, but the spider rebuilds it again and again.

In the end Hugon wins the girl, but it is only after much physical and mental suffering that he proves himself worthy of her.

Margery Bennet appears as Marie, Antrim Short as Gabriel, Mrs. Kernan as the latter's mother, and Thomas H. Pearse as the village priest.

A strong feature of the story is that it breaks away from the obvious and deals with affairs of real human interest.

"THE LAW THAT DIVIDES"

Unpleasant Theme Mars Five-Part Plaza Picture Featuring Kathleen Clifford.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

WHEN a moving picture starts off with a quotation from the bible the spectator has a right to expect a strong theme handled with dignity and skill. "The Law That Divides," a five-part picture, distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation and featuring Kathleen Clifford, uses the admonition, "Whom God hath joined together, let no man put asunder" as its theme, and then illustrates one of the consequences of divorce when a home is broken up and parents and children are separated. In attempting to make the lesson a strong one, the author has selected about as unpleasant a situation, to put it midly, as could be devised. Fortunately for humanity, this situation so rarely occurs in real life there is not the slightest excuse for using it.

Briefly stated, the story is this: John Douglas determines to secure a divorce from his wife after they have been married several years and have two children, a boy and a girl. The wife is against the separation, and warns her husband that he is sowing misery for them all. Douglas has his way and takes his son to live with him.

The wife dies in poverty, and the little girl falls into the hands of criminals who make a pickpocket of her. Later on, she is adopted by a wealthy woman and given a fashionable education. Her old friends, the criminals, get on her trail and force her to steal her foster mother's necklace. Her brother, who is now a guest at the house, does not recognize his sister. He recovers the necklace from the crook and uses it as a decoy to get his sister to his apartment at night. Once there he attempts to assault her, and she shoots him in self-defense. Her sweetheart takes the murder upon himself, but the girl goes to her father to confess she is guilty, and the wretched man learns the cause of the killing and that the girl is his own daughter. A strong story, truly!

Kathleen Clifford, as the heroine, is excellent in her opening scenes as the young pickpocket. She also plays the lighter scenes well as a member of good society, but the tragic finish is beyond her powers. Her support is satisfactory. Howard M. Mitchell directed the picture.

"MIRANDY SMILES."

Vivian Martin Is Quaint and Cute as Heroine of Paramount Picture.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THAT often mentioned union of church and stage takes place in "Mirandy Smiles," a five-part Paramount picture, adapted by Edith Kennedy from Belle K. Maniate's story, "The Littlest Scrub Lady." Anyone who cares for the odd types of character found in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" will enjoy this story. The author's stage atmosphere is more as the outside world imagine it than like the real thing, and several of her situations will not stand being considered too closely. The struggle of honest poverty for a little of the sunshine in life is the underlying theme, however, and that subject will always interest patrons of the screen. William C. De Mille, who directed the production, has filled the picture with as much comedy as possible, and Mirandy and her family are a light-hearted crew and bear their troubles bravely, even to the dog with a broken leg.

Mirandy Judkins' mother is a wash lady in a small western town, and Mirandy is one of three scrub ladies who keep the opera house clean. Teddy Lawrence, who plays the piano at the theatre, is also the organist at St. Mark's Church. He invites Mirandy to come to church. The girl is present the next Sunday. She meets Rose White, a Sunday School teacher who loves the minister, and Rose promises to give her the work of doing up the surplices, Mirandy having been impressed with the minister's sermon and his plea to all to give freely.

The Rector proposes to Rose and is told she will write her answer. This she does, then takes it to Mirandy's house and pins it to a surplice that Mrs. Judkins is about to send home. The note falls out, and the package goes without it. Rose is taken away by her mother, and the Rector never finds out that he has been accepted until the end of the story, when he comes to the Judkins house to marry the Judkins boarder to Annie May. By this time the organist and Mirandy have come to the right understanding. There are trials and tribulations before this for Mirandy and her five small brothers, but everyone contrives to keep smiling most of the time.

Vivian Martin plays Mirandy along the lines indicated by the author and is quaint and cute. The rest of the cast is capable. Frank E. Garbutt was the cameraman.

"THE VOW."

First Cinema Song Recital Proves a Decided Success.

Reviewed by George W. Beynon.

NO ONE seems to know how Hopp Hadley got his name, but there is one thing certain—he "hopped" up a few pegs in the estimation of the auditors who were privileged to listen to his picture, "The Vow."

It makes a new departure in the picture field and holds vast possibilities in the way of enhanced picture performances. The idea of dramatizing a song cycle has never been before brought forth, but it is perfectly feasible and lends a new charm to filmcraft.

Nelson Spreckling officiated at the organ consul and played the symphonic arrangement of the music from "Eliland," by Von Fielitz. Raymond Ellis, a baritone of known repute, sang the songs of this cycle, accompanied by a violin obligato by Miss Adi Duam (Mrs. Harry P. Diggs). All these acquitted themselves in a splendid manner and materially assisted in putting over the picture.

The story, told in verse, deals with the love of a priest for a beautiful girl who has decided to take the veil. Coming to the monastry she sees this holy man and at once the spark of love is kindled into flame. He, in turn, reciprocates the feeling, and many clandestine meetings are held. As he is about to confess his love for her they are discovered by the abbot, who imposes heavy penance upon them for their worldliness.

The story in itself is simple, but there is a human interest in the action that holds the attention throughout the two reels. The photography is pleasing, the camera angles are good and the direction all that could be desired. The action is a bit slow in keeping with the atmosphere of the picture and the tempi of the songs. Taken separately the picture and the music would never call forth eulogies, but together they become an innovation which is sure to be popular.

The success of the producers in combining so perfectly the voice, the orchestration and the action of the drama promises much for the future of this new and interesting development in the art of motion pictures, not only in the theatre, but in concert halls and Chautauquas.

"TOGETHER"

Five-Reel Bluebird Number Features Violet Mersereau in Triple Role.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

COINCIDENCE is not accident—it is logic on a spree." With this warning sentence the author, Lewis Wolheim, begins his story. The mind of the observer is prepared for startling coincidences, and he finds them in plenty before the tale is over. But they are all acceptable and handled with an ingenuity that keeps the interest alive.

Violet Mersereau has a triple role—mother, daughter and son, the later being twins. The mother role is a brief one, and only appears in a few scenes, but Miss Mersereau has her hands full with the twins, particularly in the latter part of the narrative. The climax is a very amusing and satisfying one, but perhaps the author did well to disarm criticism in advance as to his conception of coincidence.

Laura Standhope, the heroine, finds herself heiress to a valuable property left by her father, a provision of the will being that both she and her twin brother must be present at its reading. Otherwise the property will revert to the guardian, Andree Brean. Laura is of a sensitive nature, and the house fills her with fears, so she calls her friend, Jim Watson, on the telephone. This young man, who is in love with the girl, invites her to live with him and his mother.

Laura and Jim find an old diary telling the story of her mother's married life. These scenes are pictured cleverly, particularly those dealing with the infant twins. It is while the lovers are planning to find the brother, who has been missing for years, that a porch climber known as the Snail and his companion, Larry the Kid, appear. The twins see each other for the first time in years during an attempted robbery. It is their effort to form a permanent reunion, with the guardian in opposition, that forms the strongest part of the story. The double exposure work is very good in this.

The cast includes Chester Barnett, Barney Randel and Lindsay J. Hall. O. A. C. Lund directed.

"THE LIGHT OF WESTERN STARS."

United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., Presents Dustin Farnum in Zane Grey Story of Mexican Border.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

WHEN Charles Swickard undertook to screen the Zane Grey story, "The Light of Western Stars," he was blessed with a wealth of good material in the constitution of the story and also in the cast. Dustin Farnum, than whom there was never a finer hero, heads the cast, which includes also the following names. Winnifred Kingston, Burt Apling, Joseph Swickard, Virginia Eames, Charles Rogers, Jeanne Maddock, Frank Clark, Eddie Hearne, Ogden Crane, Lou Poff, George Cummings, Sam Appel and George Fields. The production is a masterly one, which displays correctness of development and gives a truthful portrayal of the Mexican border, where the scenes of the picture are laid. Dustin Farnum does a fascinating piece of work as the border cowboy, Gene Stewart; and Winnifred Kingston, playing opposite him, gives a neat delineation of the character of Majesty Hammond, who, on her arrival in the Western town, finds herself confronted with a peculiar situation.

As the story goes, Gene Stewart, somewhat the worse for liquor, wagers that he will marry the first woman that comes to town, whereupon he calls at the depot and finds Majesty Hammond, sister of the ranchman for whom he is foreman, who has just arrived on the scene to visit her brother. The drunken cowboy seizes her, calls a priest, who performs the marriage ceremony. After a series of events in which Gene is threatened with punishment for his pains, Don Carlos, a Mexican whose ranch has been purchased by Majesty for the purpose of ridding the district of him, has her kidnapped and taken into the hills. The closing scenes of the picture are thrilling and include the rescue of Majesty by Gene, who offers her kidnappers more money than the Mexican, and also the trapping of Gene by Don Carlos, who sentences him to be shot. A rescue party headed by Majesty arrives on the scene in time to prevent the crime.

The love story, in which the girl finally realizes that she has learned to love the rough cowboy, adds much pleasing color to a production that is characterized by breadth and beauty of treatment. The photographic work, which was done by Homer Scott, is exceptionally fine. The screen version of the story was made by Roy Clements, and the United Pictures Theatres of America, Inc., is handling the picture.

"BELGIUM, THE KINGDOM OF GRIEF"

Classic Films Distributing Company Has Historical Record of Stricken Nation.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

ONE of the most interesting set of pictures that has been exhibited in New York for some time was given a private showing at the Broadway Theatre on Friday morning, October 11, by the Classic Films Distributing Company of Chicago. "Belgium, the Kingdom of Grief," is the title of this ten-reel collection, which is an accurate record of the history of Belgium from 1830 to the present day. A portion of it was copied from a historical record which was filmed in Brussels in 1909 and which is preserved in the archives of that city. The remainder covers that period of misery and devastation which Belgium has undergone since the German army entered there, and includes certain interesting views of German troops on the march, scenes in Berlin when war was declared, and also views of Belgian cities previous to the war, including Bruges, Antwerp, Liege and Louvain. The piles of ruins which the Germans left behind them are also noted in comparison. Actual scenes from the early battles of the war illustrate how pitiful was Belgium's position facing the well-prepared German army. Refugees hurrying along her roads or being transported in freight cars into Holland, where they were cared for by the people of Holland, are shown. Augmenting these are animated pictures of the famous personages of the war and the soldiers of Belgium's allies. The record is as complete as anything of the kind could be, and the subtitles contain much interesting information. So intensely interesting are these pictures that we believe that they could be exhibited intact under present conditions without tiring an audience. Mrs. M. L. Fulton, secretary and treasurer of the company, had the pictures in charge.

"MARRIAGES ARE MADE"

Peggy Hyland Star of Light and Trifling William Fox Program Number.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

THERE is little to commend and nothing to object to in passing along the word on Peggy Hyland's latest starring vehicle, "Marriages Are Made." In perfect truth one might rejoice to find something in the five reels of film persiflage to which objection might be made. There would then be something to spice a flimsy portion of film entertainment.

German spying forms one factor in the story. The purpose of a father to marry his daughter to a young fop to whom she objects is another. A third element is the antics of a young man who springs into view, plunges into the situation and lays speedy and athletic siege to the heroine's heart. There is an attendant element of comedy dragged in to match some more or less witty titles.

The screen will never rise or fall in public favor because exhibitors show their public this latest Fox presentation. It is harmless, guileless and inoffensive; a medium to exploit Peggy Hyland in continued public attention. This much it will accomplish, without making any material difference in the life of the average "fan" or exhibitor. If an exhibitor has the confidence of his public he will fulfill his contract with Fox without promising the home-folks too much in the way of entertainment.

"THE RECKONING DAY"

Triangle Five-Part Picture Featuring Belle Bennett Chains the Attention.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

A MODEST author by the name of Bob Hill is credited with having written "The Reckoning Day," a five-part Triangle picture featuring Belle Bennett and J. Barney Sherry. The story chains the attention on account of the novelty of the material and the way it is put together. It illustrates how pro-Germans in this country have obtained money for fraudulent charities and used the funds to further the cause of the Kaiser.

Frederick Kube, head of the pro-German gang who are working the charity fraud, has a widow and her daughter among his agents. Lola Schram, the daughter, is forced by her mother to help the enemies of her country, and has planned to tell everything to her sweetheart, the son of Senator Wheeler. Jane Whiting, a social welfare worker, who is engaged to the Senator, learns about Kube's organization, and is given the task of bringing its members to justice. With the help of Jimmie Ware and his wife, two crooks, whom she has helped to reform, Jane finds out the headquarters of the gang and how their scheme is handled.

In the meantime Kube discovers that young Wheeler is devoting himself to Lola Schram, and warns her mother that the match must be broken off before the girl confesses everything to her lover. Frank Wheeler calls one night, and Mrs. Schram, who is listening at the door, hears him start to propose to Lola. The mother at once communicates with Kube. He comes to the house, sends the mother away, and shoots the girl dead. Wheeler is accused of the murder, but his stepmother-to-be finds the evidence to free him and to convict Kube.

Belle Bennett plays Jane with the vitality of mind and person required, and is capitally supported by Jack Richardson as Kube, J. Barney Sherry as the Senator, and Tom Buckingham as Frank Wheeler. Harry Pollard's direction and the photography by R. E. Irish are commendable.

"THE PRETENDER"

Rattling Good Yarn Produced by Triangle Features William Desmond as Cowpuncher.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

ANOTHER of those Western yarns that both amuse and interest, "The Pretender" has a cow-puncher hero, played by William Desmond, who befriends the heroine and beats up her enemies in that careless off-hand fashion that looks so easy and is the envy of us all in real life. The story was written by Alvin J. Neitz for Triangle, and directed by Cliff Smith. There is plenty of excitement, an equal amount of fun, and the romance of Bob Baldwin and Dolly Longstreet will be endorsed by every good movie fan. Cliff Smith hasn't forgotten how to put on a Western picture, and Steve Rounds is still his photographer.

A cowboy school teacher is a novelty. After being fired from the Diamond K ranch for making a wreck of the owner's Ford, Bob set off on the lookout for a new job. He picks up Percival Longstreet, who has been thrown from his horse while on his way to take charge of the school at Freloes Beanos. The cowboy takes him to the cabin of a friend. Percival has been badly hurt, and it will require a month's time for him to get well. He is afraid of losing his new position, so Bob offers to take his place for a month. The cow-puncher opens the school, and astonishes the pupils and the school committee by his method of imparting knowledge.

Dolly, the school teacher's sister, arrives in town, and Bob has to do some quick thinking. He has been given a house near the school, and, of course, his sister must live with him. Bob takes the girl out to see her brother, and tells him that Dolly must stay in town during the day, but that he will bring her back to the cabin every night. The leading man of a cheap show troupe starts to annoy Dolly. Bob gives him a good thrashing, wins Dolly, and ends by being made sheriff of the town.

William Desmond is delightfully natural as Bob, and seems to get a lot of fun out of playing the part. Ethel Fleming is attractive as Dolly. The rest of the cast are satisfactory.

"THE VANITY POOL"

Six-Reel Universal Special Features Mary MacLaren in Well-Built Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

A STRONG offering in every sense is this six-reel Universal subject, "The Vanity Pool." The story was adapted by Ida May Park from the original by Nalbro Bartley, and produced by the former. It moves with fresh appeal through a series of situations that have formed the basis for many previous offerings, but the familiarity is really a help to this production.

Good acting is a special feature of this number. Mary MacLaren has one of the best parts with which she has been provided, and her support is excellent in every way. She plays the part of Marna Royal, a slum girl who is befriended by Gerald Harper, candidate for governor. Harper invades the home of Marna and her parents, finding the father a drunken beast and the mother a shiftless, incapable woman. Willis Marks and Virginia Chester must be given credit for doing some excellent character work as the father and mother; they not only give us a true picture of these individuals, but manage to do it with humor.

The story is remarkable from the fact that it brings out the good side of most of the characters. Harper, tempted as he is by love for the girl he befriended, manages to pull up and save her name and his own reputation. Mrs. Harper and her friend, Drew Garrett, come to the rescue at an opportune time. There is excellent drama in the situation where Mrs. Harper welcomes the girl to her heart and home in the presence of Jarvis Flint, the newspaper man, who wishes to damage Harper's name for political reasons.

Marin Sais also gets some good effects in the role of the adventuress. Thomas Holding appears as Harper, Franklyn Farnum as Garrett, Anna Q. Nillson as Mrs. Harper, Frank Brownlee as Flint, and Winter Hall as Uncle Penny.

The story as a whole is one of rounded interest, and should appeal to any audience

"MOTHER, I NEED YOU"

Lloyd Carleton Production Features Enid Markey in Strong Sex Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS six-reel production made by Lloyd Carleton and distributed by Ernest Shipman is entitled "Mother, I Need You." It tells the story of an innocent girl who was victimized by a wealthy young man without the slightest blame on her part, who afterward suffered a criminal operation to rid herself of the expected child, and who narrowly escaped full publicity in a court of law. In the end her true lover, after learning the facts, stands by her, and she attains happiness.

The story, as can be seen, is one directed primarily to the adult audience. It is admirably acted, and, despite its rather repellant plot, has a certain message of value and interest. It would be a safe hazard that women will perhaps like it better than men.

Enid Markey appears as Eva Stanley, described as a modern Eve. She is in love with a young engineer, a boyhood friend. The latter goes West on an irrigation project. On the same train with him is Marie, a girl who has recently been living with a fast young fellow, Leo Spencer, on his yacht. As the story goes, the young engineer meets Marie, and Eva meets Leo Spencer, with a certain attraction in each instance. The original love affair is interrupted, and the young engineer returns to find that Eva has been victimized by Spencer.

The dramatic incidents of this story have been strongly presented. Enid Markey does some exceptional acting in the scenes on the yacht, and the court scenes are also good.

Prior to the modern story, there is an excellent symbolical interpretation of passages from the Book of Genesis, describing the creation. These scenes are very effective, though the nude figures of Adam and Eve are rather frankly revealed in several instances.

The story was written by Wycliff A. Hill. In the cast beside Miss Markey are Ed. Coxen, Jack Standing, Clarissa Selwynne, Eugenie Besserer, Marion Warner, Elsie Greeson, William Quinn, G. Raymond Nye and Arthur Allardt.

"HER GREAT CHANCE"

Alice Brady, in Select Picture Containing Strong Heart Interest. Acts with Fine Effect.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

FANNIE HURST'S novel, "Golden Fleece," was the original form of the Select picture, "Her Great Chance," scenario and direction by Charles Maigne. The story has strong heart interest, and the character of Lola Gray affords Alice Brady an opportunity for some of the most sincere acting of her screen career. The author has taken an unusual side of the poor - working - girl - rich - young - spendthrift entanglement, and brought happiness to two people through the character and unselfishness of the heroine.

Lola is a clerk in a department store, and her sister is the stenographer for a prominent lawyer. Lola loves Charlie Cox, who has done nothing all his life but spend money. The young fellow is anxious to marry Lola, but she will not listen to him. She feels that until he shows some sign of becoming a real man it would be folly to trust her future in his hands.

One night, while with a jolly party at a road house, Charlie gets intoxicated, and tells Lola and the others he is going to drown himself in the fountain. He invites all the men to follow his example. They accept the invitation, and throw the proprietor of the place in also. The affair ends in a riot, and the proprietor goes to the elder Cox for a setlement of the damages. Charlie's father pays the bill, and sends for his lawyer. A new will is drawn up, and Charlie is left to shift for himself.

Lola's sister copies the new will. She does not aprove of Lola's friendship for the spendthrift, and tells her how matters stand. The girl recognizes that this will be the making of Charlie. She goes to him and tells him she is ready to accept his proposal. They are married that night. The next morning Charlie receives word that his father died the night before. Lola then tells him about the will. He is greatly disappointed about the money. His wife explains that she only consented to marry him when she knew he must earn his own living in the future. Charlie realizes at last Lola's true worth, and the picture ends with them both happy and contented on a farm left by Charlie's grandfather.

The cast, photography by Leon Rossl, and direction by Charles Maigne, are all excellent. "Her Great Chance" should become a great popular success.

"THE LADY OF THE DUGOUT"

Six-Reel Al Jennings Outlaw Story Proves to Be a Blue Ribbon Border Drama.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS first of the "Al Jennings Outlaw Stories" distributed by Ernest Shipman is tremendously effective in its simple realism and heart appeal. Al Jennings and his brother, Frank, appear personally throughout; they rob two banks with scientific efficiency, and shoot up a Texas town in a manner that carries conviction. There is every reason to believe that these things are a faithful reproduction of the methods that were pursued by bandits in the early days.

But it is the heart interest in the number that grips the observer. Al Jennings and his brother, badly wanted by the law and pursued by its officers, pay a visit to the dugout in which the lady resides with her small son and drunken husband. The latter is in town at the time of the first visit, and Al Jennings rides twelve miles and back to get food from the nearest neighbor, as the woman and child are starving. They afterward assist her in many ways, and the drunken husband not only objects, but starts gossip in town. Later he brings out a posse, and himself leads the fire on the dugout, with his wife and child in it. The husband is killed, and the Jennings brothers take the lady and her son back to the old home in Arkansas at great personal risk. The parting between Frank and the lady makes a touching scene.

It will be remembered that Al Jennings was written up in a series of articles in the Saturday Evening Post by Will Irwin some time ago. He is now making a series of pictures based on actual experiences. Al Jennings relates this first yarn to an English peer at a Western hotel, and the story is pictured as he tells it. There is no effort to glorify the misdeeds of himself and his brother, for which they both received penitentiary sentences. But as an accurate picture of border life this first number has decided merit and a gripping story interest.

Corrine Grant is excellent as "The Lady," and Ben Alexander plays the boy. Others in the cast are Joe Singleton and Carl Stockdale.

"THE ROMANCE OF TARZAN."

Released Through the First National Exhibitors' Circuit. In Illustration of the Latter Part of "Tarzan of the Apes," a Novel by Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

DIRECTOR and star have worked very hard to illustrate the novel relating to a human being raised in "the jungle" by apes. Wilfred Lucas has taken infinite pains to make the jungle scenes realistic and he has succeeded in giving that part of the release a distinct value in the "atmosphere" so admirably preserved. There are also some dramatic moments in the jungle life of Tarzan, notably his struggle to free himself from the environment of his youth, but the release is merely an illustration for the most part, not a drama, not even a story to attract human sympathy or to hold interest, disregarding, as it does, nearly all that goes to make for logic, sustained interest, vitality of theme and definite purpose. The entire composition is far from being a drama, and, as it stands, its sole reason for existence is as an illustration of a book whose purpose is evidently misunderstood.

The author of the book had no idea of trying to prove that the low, degenerate and weak elements of humanity, those living in a savage or semi-savage state, are of finer quality than civilized beings, nor of trying to show that living "near nature" induces a superior morality, for that is manifestly impossible—nature knows no morality whatever. There is really nothing to prove, not even that great muscular strength is a conquering element over science, particularly at a moment when this is being effectually disproved. With no vitality of theme, the play failed to make an impression on a large Strand audience, though the sincerity of the producers was apparent in the elaborate and careful work done at every stage of the development. A visualized synopsis of the first part is given before the romance begins.

"THIRTY A WEEK."

Goldwyn Picture with Tom Moore Has Conventional Plot, But Is Well Acted.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

EXCELLENT acting on the part of Tom Moore and his leading woman, Tallulah Bankhead, gives "Thirty a Week" a value far above its merits as a story. Thompson Buchanan is responsible for the plot, and Harry Beaumont directed the production for the Goldwyn company. If the spectator is inclined to accept the author's conception of a serious love affair between a wealthy young woman and her father's chauffeur, he will find many amusingly human incidents in the picture. Either the director or the scenario writer has not always made the points of the story as clear as desirable but, taken on faith, its romance reflects the spirit of youth with enough success to win "Thirty a Week" a large following.

Dan Murray, the hero, possesses the pleasing qualities of manner and person that the stage has long endowed the romantic young Irishman. When Barbara Wright falls in love with him she lays a plan to make herself Mrs. Dan Murray that argues either great innocence or great strength of mind. She has Dan take her out in a car at night, miles from a telephone, steals a plug from the engine and calmly informs him they must stay in the car all night. Dan is willing.

The next day when Dan realizes he has compromised the girl, he is told that Barbara had planned just that embarrassing state of things, so the chauffeur marries her and takes her home to his mother. Mr. Wright is very angry and keeps his son-in-law hunting for new jobs. A chance to drive a car in a race puts three hundred dollars into Dan's hands. He immediately gives it to the wife of a friend who is ill and must go to Arizona. The villain hurries to the wife with the news, Dan's explanation does not explain, and Mrs. Dan Murray goes home to her parents. When the truth comes out the Wright family forgive Dan for everything he's done and all ends happily.

The support is adequate, Grace Henderson being particularly well suited to the character of Dan's mother.

"PRIVATE PEAT."

An Arteraft Special Based on a Book by Private Harold Peat In Which He Assumes the Leading Role.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

TIMELY of theme and fairly logical in its development, this story had large possibilities, especially with the interesting personality of Private Peat himself injected, but very little else of dramatic value has been given to it, and the addition of scenes of march, like those of the news reels proves destructive of story interest. It will be shown very forcibly and beautifully that there are dramatic possibilities in all these war stories when the "continuity writer" becomes a relic of the tyro days in motion picture production. The very simplicity of Peat's story proved attractive at the outset—it promised much in the way of contrasting American methods of warfare with those of the Hun—and this preparation arouses interest in what was plainly indicated to be the theme, but the purpose and the original line of action are entirely disregarded while the story takes one turn after another, depicting some flashes of action in the trenches and No-Man's Land, winding up with views of Peat in the hospital, writing his book and some philosophical comments on the war.

The patriotic material in "Private Peat" will get over with all audiences at this moment, as it did with the Rivoli audience to a moderate extent, but there is little else of value in the release than Mr. Peat and his timely sentiments neatly put. The splendid start, the effort to build up an impression of national contrast, is weakly abandoned at the very crucial moment when it should have been brought to a powerful dramatic crisis. Private Peat's personality is charming, and he is a good actor besides, but this and the screen illustrations of his personal adventures serve principally as fine publicity for his book. It is not drama.

"FRANCE'S DUSKY WARRIORS."

Pathe Releases Official French Film Picturing War Work of African Troops.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravey.

THIS one-reel subject, "France's Dusky Warriors," is one of the most picturesque and genuinely informing of recent official war films. It presents actual scenes from North African countries, including Tunis, Morocco and Algeria, showing the training, equipping and mobilizing of troops for the French front.

The scenes in this number contain a wealth of splendid local color. French and native officers are pictured moving among the dusky hordes, carrying on the work of turning these men into fighting material. Arab troops, mounted upon their far-famed steeds, are shown in cavalry maneuvers, which exhibit well the dash and quality of both men and their mounts. A special feature of interest are the scenes taken in Tunis, a center for grain shipment and the raising of cattle and hogs. Tunis, once a granary for ancient Rome, is now doing an important share of feeding soldiers on the West front.

General Gourard is shown in a final review of troops mobilized for the front. The arrival in France is also pictured.

"A DAUGHTER OF THE OLD SOUTH"

A Paramount Release Presenting Pauline Frederick in the Title Role.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE only values of importance discernible in this picture aside from those provided by the director are conferred by three women in the cast, Pauline Frederick, as a creole girl, Mrs. T. Randolph as the grandmother and Myra Brooks as the housekeeper. These three admirable types and the skilled directing of Monsieur Chautard come near making an interesting story out of one which was not very strong in the first place and was terribly enfeebled by the "continuity writer." The creole girl is a romantic creature engaged to a wealthy young Spaniard. She decides to marry a man of her own choice, selects one she knows nothing about and picks him up in the street, makes a secret appointment with him, goes to an old house he has rented and throws herself at him amorously on all occasions. The man acts like a cad, but he is announced to be a novelist in search of sensations. He throws the girl aside when the one to whom he was formerly engaged comes along.

The creole girl prepares an elaborate revenge. She induces the novelist's fiance, a perfect stranger, to play eavesdropper. The creole girl invites the novelist to drink with her, and, when he has done so, she announces that she poisoned his wine. He sinks on his knees and begs her to save him. The creole then releases the eavesdropping fiance and points the novelist as a coward. He has not been poisoned at all. Both girls turn their backs on the craven, and the creole goes to throw herself in the lake. She is prevented by the young Spaniard, who arrives opportunely, and she will probably marry him someday. Comment is hardly necessary. M. Chautard and the three women of the old Southern family provide romantic settings and atmosphere for a story that aims at nothing of interest and gets nowhere in particular.

FIVE CHRISTIE COMEDIES.

"Oh, Bobby, How Could You?" "Does Your Sweetheart Flirt?" "Know Your Neighbor," "Look Who's Here," and "Just Plain Folks."

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

BOBBY VERNON and Dorothy Dane are the leaders in the one-reel comedy, "Does Your Sweetheart Flirt?" It is the most entertaining of the lot and has a good plot as well as some nifty scenes on the beach. One young woman in a West Coast bathing suit will have many admirers. The efforts of the heroine to cure her young man of flirting creates a deal of fun.

Another of the one-reel Christies, "Know Your Neighbor," has Ethel Lynne, Leota Lorraine and Harry Edwards in the cast. It is well played and contains a number of amusing situations.

"Just Plain Folks" illustrates the happy life of a trusting young chap who marries a girl with a family who takes the new son and brother as a good thing and works him to the limit. The young husband finally is forced to rebel and sells the auto his wife's relations forced him to buy and then proceeded to use as their own. Bobby Vernon and Dorothy Dane are the featured players of the cast.

"Oh, Bobby, How Could You?" is another one-reeler with Bobby Vernon and Dorothy Dane as the principal funmakers. It has many amusing moments. Billy Mason and Ethel Lynne in "Look Who's Here," keep this comedy moving at a good rate of speed. The five pictures constitute an excellent lot of Christie releases.

COMMENTS

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

HUGON, THE MIGHTY (Bluebird).—A strong five-reel subject, written by William E. Wing and directed by Rollin S. Sturgeon, with Monroe Salisbury in the leading role. The story is one of the Canadian Northwest and proves very attractive and entertaining. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

TOGETHER (Bluebird).—A five-reel story, written by Lewis Wilhelm and directed by O. A. C. Lund, with Violet Mersereau in the lead. She plays three separate roles, mother, daughter and twin brother. The number is novel and interesting. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Classic Films Company

BELGIUM, THE KINGDOM OF GRIEF (Classic Films Distributing Company).—This comprises ten reels of film on the history of Belgium since 1830. The record, which is intensely interesting, was photographed by the Government of Belgium. The first part of the picture is a copy of a film which was made in Brussels and placed in the archives of that city as a historical record, and is an accurate story of Belgium's history between 1830 and 1914. The remainder covers scenes which have been photographed during the period of the present war. A full review will be found elsewhere.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation

SUCH A LITTLE PIRATE (Paramount), Oct. 13.—This five-part picture is Lila Lee's second release, and was written by James Curwood. It is a highly improbable, but equally entertaining, story, and the young star has a suitable role. It was reviewed in full in the issue of Oct. 19, page 445.

THE MAKE-BELIEVE WIFE (Paramount), Oct. 20.—Billie Burke is the lady of the title and Edward Childs Carpenter wrote the story, which is a bit spicy and always amusing. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

MIRANDY SMILES (Paramount), Oct. 27.—Founded on Belle K. Maniate's story

"The Littlest Scrub Lady," this five-part picture has Vivian Martin for a star. It is full of quaint characters and humor. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Fox Film Corporation

MARRIAGES ARE MADE, Oct. 13.—Peggy Hyland is starred in this rather trivial excuse for perpetuating the screen in public favor. It is filled with purposeless "stunts," has a plot that amounts to precious little, and ends without anything of very great value having been accomplished. To be sure there is nothing offensive in any developments of the gauzy story—it might add to the interest if something really naughty had developed. There is a German spy plot involved. That makes it an up to date subject—its fullest recommendation for some exhibitors.

SALOME (Fox).—A special eight-part production with Theda Bara in the title role, this William Fox picture has much to commend it. A full review was printed on page 369, Oct. 19 issue.

Greater Vitagraph, Inc.

THE KING OF DIAMONDS, Oct. 14.—Harry Morey and Betty Blythe have the leading parts in this five-part picture, written by Edward S. Ballou. The story is one of adventure and revenge. It is reviewed on another page of this issue.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation

THE KINGDOM OF YOUTH (Goldwyn), Sept. 23.—An attractive comedy-drama from a story by Charles Logue. Madge Kennedy and Matt Moore are the featured players. A full review will be found in our issue of Oct. 19.

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation

THE LAW THAT DIVIDES (Plaza), Oct. 21.—The subject of this five-part picture does not make it a desirable release for a family theatre. Kathleen Clifford is featured. A full review is printed on another page of this issue.

THE GODDESS OF LOST LAKE (Louise Glaum Company), Oct. 14.—M. Van de Water is the author of this five-part picture, and Louise Glaum acts the heroine. It is a western romance, filled with picturesque locations, and is well acted. A longer review appears on another page of this issue.

Metro Pictures Corporation

SECRET STRINGS (Metro), Oct. 7.—A five-part production founded on the play by Kate Jordan. Olive Tell is the featured member of a competent cast in a picture that is well made and interesting in all its details. The story centers about a master crook and his wife, and is fully reviewed in this issue.

Mutual Film Corporation

UNBLAZED TRAILS (Outing-Chester), Sept. 29.—The 14th number of the Outing-Chester series is a very beautiful one. Its scenes were photographed in the Canadian Rockies, principally in the vicinity of Mount Bryce. Dangerous climbs up the steep sides of the mountain add a thrilling touch to the picture.

A TROPIC MELTING POT (Outing-Chester), Oct. 6.—The 15th number of the Outing-Chester takes us to Trinidad, which is the largest of the British West Indies. Scenes in Port of Spain, the capital of Trinidad, include closeups of various types. There is also a native school, a village blacksmith and a shoemaker at work. Children having a bath adds a touch of comedy. Some splendid illustrations of the asphalt industry, the harvesting of the cacao bean and some native dances close the reel.

THE TALE OF A HAT (Strand), Oct. 15.—A moderately amusing comedy featuring Elinor Field. The story centers about the purchase of a hat which is forbidden by a young woman's husband. Finally when she has succeeded in getting her father and her husband arrested, the judge who is in the young woman's secret asks a fine sufficient to cover the price of the hat.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 63 (Mutual).—Interesting items of this issue are scenes on the battle front, soldiers training at Camp Jackson, Floyd Gibbons, of the New York Tribune, being decorated with the Croix de Guerre by the Consul General of France, harvesting the sisal crop and making home molasses in Iowa.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

WAR REVIEW NO. 16 (Pathe).—More absorbing pictures from the Western front, where the Allies are peppering the Hun. Italians shelling the Austrians, Americans operating machine guns, the Portuguese in and behind their trenches, the British operating tanks and French Cavalry in maneuvers—these are all splendid features.

NOTHING BUT TROUBLE (Rolin-Pathe).—A comic, featuring Harold Lloyd, Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels. Harold appears as an active young man who gets a job as waiter in a restaurant. Disaster overtakes him and he is hurried off to jail at the close. This is full of laughable knockabout stunts.

A LEAP THROUGH SPACE (Pathe).—Episode No. 9 of "Hands Up." This number concerns the efforts of Killman to regain the jewels and head-piece stolen from him by Judith. The leap of Killman and Two-Gun Carter from the cliff to a tall sapling, which bends nearly double, depositing each of them on the ground, in turn, is one of the best single stunts ever done in a serial. It is a real thriller.

THE FAR-FLUNG BATTLE LINE (Official British War Film-Pathe).—This number is devoted almost entirely to pictures of British Indian troops, showing their preparations to come to the French front. It gives an excellent idea of their part in the war, which has been no small one. The subject is very informing.

ROSEMARY CLIMBS THE HEIGHTS (Pathe-American).—A moderately interesting five-reel number featuring Mary Miles Minter. The story follows the career of a young country girl who comes to the city to sell her art goods.

Select Pictures Corporation

HER GREAT CHANCE (Select).—Fanny Hurst's story, "Golden Fleece," inspired this five-part picture. It is an excellent vehicle for Alice Brady, and the scenario and direction are the work of Charles Maigne. It is given a longer review in this issue.

THE FORBIDDEN CITY (Select).—A very beautiful production, a story of woman's love, with Norma Talmadge in one of the best of her characterizations.

Ernest Shipman

THE LADY OF THE DUGOUT (Al Jennings Outlaw Stories).—This first number, complete in itself, pictures a stirring episode in the life of Al Jennings and his brother, Frank, both of whom appear personally. The action is intensely realistic and the story of the gripping, heart interest type, very simple and effective. An unusual subject. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

MOTHER, I NEED YOU (Lloyd Carleton-Shipman).—A six-reel drama of sex, preceded by a fine series of views picturing the creation of man and the Garden of Eden. The story concerns an innocent girl who was victimized by a wealthy young man and afterward undergoes a criminal operation. She later finds happiness with her true lover. The story deals with sordid facts, but has been given a powerful and acceptable presentation.

Triangle Film Corporation

THE PRETENDER (Triangle), Oct. 13.—William Desmond has a congenial role in this Western story with a cow-puncher hero. It was written by Alvin J. Neitz and directed by Cliff Smith, and is amusing and entertaining.

THE RECKONING DAY (Triangle), Oct. 20.—Belle Bennett and J. Barney Sherry head the cast of this five-part picture. The story is novel and well made. A longer review is printed in this issue.

Universal Film Company

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 42 (Universal), Sept. 18.—New York celebration of anniversary of "The Star Spangled Banner"; how the Red Cross makes gas masks; new weapons for our boys at the front; what farm machinery has done to win the war. These and many other features are included in this interesting number.

CURRENT EVENTS, NO. 72 (Universal), Sept. 28.—Liberty Loan activities are pictured in this number, as well as many interesting side lights on the war in this and other countries. Scenes from the Bulgar front are included. The number closes with an animated cartoon by Arthur Lewis.

THE VANITY POOL (Universal).—A six-reel number, adapted and produced by Ida May Park from a story by Nalbro Bartley. This features Mary MacLaren, supported by an excellent cast. The story concerns a slum girl befriended by a candidate for governor. It is well built and splendidly acted and much above the average in every way. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

United Picture Theatres, Inc.

THE LIGHT OF WESTERN STARS (United Picture Theatres).—A splendid production featuring Dustin Farnum. The picture is an adaptation of a novel by Zane Grey, the scenes of which are laid on the Mexican border.

S. L. Warner

THE KAISER'S FINISH (S. L. Warner).—This state rights production in eight parts should make a popular hit. It is a clever blending of romance and fact, and is acted by nearly the same cast that was used in "My Four Years in Germany." A longer review was printed on page 445, October 19 issue.

World Pictures, Inc.

JUST SYLVIA (World-Picture), Oct. 21.—A five-reel subject adapted by Hamilton Smith from a story by Harry O. Hoyt, and directed by Travers Vale. Barbara Castleton appears as a princess in America, who masquerades as a countess and exposes two individuals who are trying to fleece a countryman named Hicks and his family. The story is not particularly new, but is quite attractive in presentation.

Novel Ad-Cuts for "Kaiser's Finish."

A SERIES of new style exhibitor ad-cuts for use by theatre owners who confine their advertising to limited space in the newspapers, has been designed as part of the accessory material for "The Kaiser's Finish," the new eight-part special state rights feature produced by S. L. Warner.

The series consists of eight cuts, obtainable either in electro or matrix form. The cuts are all of one column width, and running from one inch to two and one-half inches in height. They consist of small, thumb-nail illustrations and a few catch-words lettered in white on solid black backgrounds, so that the effect of a solid black will command attention no matter what position it is given on the page.

The illustrations carry out the suggestion of the main title of the picture, while the captions include such wording as: "When America declared war the world knew it meant the Kaiser's finish"; "The biggest news story of the twentieth century will be headed 'The Kaiser's Finish'"; "What the entire world is fighting for—'The Kaiser's Finish'"; "Bulgaria's surrender points a finger of defeat straight to 'The Kaiser's Finish'"; "Our local boys are going to be there at 'The Kaiser's Finish.'"

"THE PERFECT MODEL"

Thanhouser Presents Audrey Munson in an Absorbing Story of the Adventures of a Country Girl in a Great City.

Cast.

The Model.....Audrey Munson
The Artist.....Thomas A. Curran
The Artist's Friends.....{George Marlo, Bert Delaney}

The Story: A young artist vainly seeks a model who will realize his ideals. Friends send him models, but they fail to meet his demand. At last the automobile in which he is riding runs down a young girl. She has come to the city to make her way, and consents to pose for the artist. He is doubtful of her ability, but she proves to be the realization of his ideal. She leaves him when the statue is completed, thinking he loves one of the women of wealth who frequent his studio, and becomes lost to him, but at last he meets her, sick and faint, just out of the hospital, and tells his love at last.

Feature Audrey Munson as the model and Thomas Curran as the artist.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Audrey Munson, Famous Star of "Hypocrites," Returns in Equally Sensational Photoplay.
World Famed Art Model Appears as Star of Photoplay.
The Daring Romance of an Artist's Bohemian World.
"The Perfect Model" Reflected in Truthfully Typical Scenes.
Camera Daring Reaches Its Climax in This Sensational Photoplay.
Nature and Art Combined in Camera Reflections of Nature and Life.

Advertising Angles: The story is not offered as a reissue of "Inspiration," but if that picture has played your town it would be well to offer this as a new version instead of seeking to create the impression that it is new. Where it has not been played work on the fame of the model, and name some of the well-known statues for which she has posed. Use plenty of stills. They should prove your best selling argument.

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, one three-sheet, one six-sheet. 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28 photos for lobby displays. Heralds. Slides.

"THE WHITE LIE"

Paralta Plays Presents Bessie Barriscale in the Story of a Wife Whose Tortured Conscience Precipitated a Startling Climax.

Cast.

Dorothy Kingsley.....Bessie Barriscale
Gordon Kingsley.....Edward Coxen
Frank Mason.....Charles Gunn
Mary Jane.....Mary Jane Irving
"Bull" McDevitt.....James Farley
"Red Mike".....David Kirby

Directed by Howard Hickman.

The Story: Gordon Kingsley, on a visit to San Francisco, is put up at a club in the rooms of an absent member, Frank Mason, an architect. He is startled to find in the room a portrait of his own wife and child. On his return home he arranges to have Mason design their new house, and sees by his wife's agitation that he has grounds for suspicion. Dorothy slips Mason a note telling him that she will come to his hotel. Mason, who is a reformed crook, is killed by a pal. Dorothy thinks her husband committed the crime, and he supposes her to be the murderess. She confesses to the police that her supposed baby is Mason's child, adopted by her when Kingsley was absent in Belgium on war relief work. His assumption that it is her own child and his delight in that fact led her to keep the truth a secret. Kingsley, who has overheard the confession understands, and his planned revenge lifts the burden from Dorothy's heart.

Feature Bessie Barriscale as Dorothy Kingsley and Edward Coxen as Gordon Kingsley.

Program and Advertising Phrases: How a Wife to Serve a Friend Foisted Another's Child Upon Her Husband as His Own.
Husband's Love Centered in a Child Who Was Not His Own.
Surprising Outcome of an Apparently Sinful Deception.
Bessie Barriscale Star of Interest Impelling Photoplay.
Originality of Plot Marks Appealing Merit of Photoplay.
How a White Lie Brought Distress and Nearly Wrecked a Happy Home.

Advertising Angles: Advertise Miss Barriscale heavily and present the dramatic angles of the story in type talks. Do not tell the entire story, but pick up the high lights and tell of them singly, making no effort at continuity in the series. For a final run a space starting, "See the 'White Lie' and rid your own life of the white lie that hangs over you. You never can tell when it will lead to tragedy."

Advertising Aids: Two designs each one and three sheets. One six-sheet. Thumbnail and one to three column cuts in electro or mats. Press book.

Released September 2.

"PRIVATE PEAT"

Adolph Zukor Presents Harold R. Peat ("Private Peat") in His Own Story of the War on the Western Front Founded Upon His Book.

Cast.

Private Peat.....Harold R. Peat
Mrs. Peat (Mary).....Miriam Fouche
Old Bill, the Blacksmith.William T. Sorelle

Directed by Edward Jose.

The Story: Harold Peat, clerk in a small village store, seeks to enlist in the great war, but is rejected because of his slight physique. He is persistent, and finally gains his point and goes to the front. There he proves his bravery, is wounded, and, after two days in No Man's Land, is brought in by stretcher bearers. Mary finds him in the hospital, and, though a wreck of his former self, it looks as though there were happy days ahead.

Feature Private Peat in connection with his war book of the same title and Mirian Fouche as Mary.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Canadian Soldier-Hero "Two Years in Hell and Back With a Smile."
Authoritative and Realistic Visions of War on the Western Front.
Hero of Many Battles Comes to the Screen as International Star.
Photoplay Based on Private Peat's Famous Trench-History.
Authentic War Scenes Re-Lived for You to See in Comfort.

Advertising Angles: This is an attraction of the circus type, and must be played from all angles to give the best results. Use more than your usual quota of lithographs in windows and on the boards. Get the stores to get up windows for Peat's book, and lend them one sheets and stills for attractors. Your newspapers will probably give you extra space for this. Interest the local societies, and endeavor to have some of them announce their intention of attending in a body. Start well in advance, and keep it up until the last day of showing.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats Slides.

Mrs. Goodwin.....Harriet Ross
Ted Phelan.....Howard Truesdale
Wm. Glidersleeve.....John Costello
Leighton Craig.....Edward Roseman
Alma Goodwin.....Reeva Greenwood
Bobby Glidersleeve.....Edward Keenan
Miss Partridge.....Peggy Lundeen
"Mike".....Wm. Sloan
Jim Conners.....Jack Dillon

Directed by Edward Dillon.

The Story: Transformed by an unexpected legacy from a factory girl to a millionairess, Elizabeth Holt tires of the vapidness of social life and seeks refuge in settlement work, where she poses as Miss Phelps, her own secretary, disarming the antagonism of John Russel, who hates the rich. Russel starts in to close up Ted Phelan, ward boss and gambling house proprietor, and has the place raided while a "slumming party" is in the rooms. They escape through the settlement, and Elizabeth is exposed. Eventually, however, she persuades Russel that the pride of the poor and the pride of the rich are joint bars to happiness, and the wedding follows.

Feature Lillian Walker as Elizabeth Holt and Carl Brickert as John Russel.

Cast.

Jack Bartlett.....George Walsh
William Desmond.....James Marcus
Otto Crumley.....Henry Clive
Margaret Desmond.....Frances Burnham
President Wilson.....Ralph Faulkner

Directed by R. W. Walsh.

The Story: George Walsh, a reporter on a small town newspaper, gets an interview with President Wilson on the Fourth Liberty Loan. He returns to his home town to find the paper in the ownership of Crumley, head of the local bank, who tears the copy up. George resigns, and enters the tank corps, but is told that he can do more good at home. He sells $100,000,000 of the Fourth Loan, and then settles down in town, preventing a strike in a munitions plant, and identifying the banker as the secret agent of the German Government—the task assigned him when he was taken from the tanks to become a Secret Service Man.

Feature George Walsh as Jack Bartlett and Frances Burnham as Margaret Desmond.

"THE FORBIDDEN CITY"

Joseph M. Schenck Presents Norma Talmadge in a Colorful Story of a Chinese Girl and the Little Daughter That Was Half American.

Cast.

Mandarin.....Michael Rayle
Wong Li.....A. E. Warren
San San, his daughter...Norma Talmadge
John Worden, U. S. Consulate Secretary, Thomas Meighan
The Chinese Emperor....L. Rogers Lytton
Toy, daughter of John Worden and San San.....Norma Talmadge
Lieut. Philip Halbert, U. S. A., Reid Hamilton

Directed by Sidney A. Franklin.

The Story: A disgraced Mandarin, who earns a bare livelihood by teaching Chinese to foreign students, seeks to regain favor with his Emperor by offering his beautiful daughter, San San, as an addition to his harem. But San San has been secretly wedded to John Worden, an American officer, and Toy, her little daughter, is born in the palace. Her birth discloses the secret, and results in the death of San San and her father. Years later Toy, reared in the palace, escapes, and finds her way to Manila. Here she is loved by an army officer. His commander orders him away to break up the affair. Then he himself is nursed back to life by Toy, and discovers her to be his own daughter.

Feature Norma Talmadge in the dual role of San San and Toy, Thomas Meighan as John Worden, and Reid Hamilton as Lieut. Philip Halbert.

"HOBBS IN A HURRY"

American Presents William Russell in the Story of a Millionaire Who Sells a Salted Mine and Then Wishes He Hadn't, for Look at the Trouble It Caused Him.

Cast.

J. Warren Hobbs, Jr....William Russell
J. Warren Hobbs, Sr.....Henry Barrows
Helen Renshaw.....Winifred Westover
Rufus Renshaw.....Richard Morris
Lord Willoughby }
Louis Willoughby } .....Hayward Mack
Angus MacDonald.....Carl Stockdale

Directed by Henry King.

The Story: J. Warren Hobbs, Sr., a wealthy mine operator, sells to Louis Willoughby a mine he believes to be worthless. Later he learns there is a tungsten lode that should prove a bonanza. He steams a sample of ore from the dump and has it assayed. On the strength of the report he determines to buy back the mine. Rufus Renshaw also determines to buy the mine, and there is a race to the property, where Willoughby sells the mine to Hobbs and his twin brother sells it to Renshaw. There are innumerable complications, but eventually Hobbs, Sr., gets out from under, and Hobbs, Jr., gets a chance to get a little sleep.

Feature William Russell as J. Warren Hobbs, Jr., and Winifred Westover as Helen Renshaw.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Sensational Photodrama Filled with Thrills and Excitement Will Provide Gripping Entertainment.

How a Mad Dash to Capture Fame and Fortune Ended with Cupid in Command.

Gripping Heart Interest Mixed with Sensations in Screen Drama.

Photoplot Mystifies and Entertains with Force of Sensations.

True Love Wins Victory Over Forces of Vengeance and Intrigue.

Ideal Photoplaying Furnished in Gripping Story and Artistic Acting.

Advertising Angles: Boom the star, and give hints in the reading notices and advertising of the numerous things young Hobbs is called upon to perform. Take up an item a day, if you have time, and recapitulate on the today display. Among the stunts are, "Has a row on the stage of a New York theatre. Beats his way West on the trucks. Beats up a bad man hired by his father. Plays Pullman porter. Mixes up two brothers. Sells a worthless mine to his father-in-law to be." Tag all of these "How would you like to be Hobbs in a Hurry?"

Advertising Aids: One each one, three and six sheets. Banner unmounted. One, two and three column cuts and mats. Program cover cut. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Press sheet.

handicapped by the impoverishment of his family. Their wealth was buried during the Civil War, and has never been discovered. The Prussian agents seek to trade upon his poverty to buy his invention, but he refuses to sell, and an effort to bomb the inventor and his plane is frustrated by the action of a pet dog, which carries the bomb away from the workshop and drops it, killing the spy, and disclosing the long-buried treasure.

Feature Derwent Hall Caine as Arthur Morgan and Mlle Valda Valkyrien as Dorothy Waring.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Exposing Hunnish Methods Employed to Discover Secrets of the Allies.
How the Hun Tried to Undermine American and World Democracy.
How the Enemies of Liberty Intrigue and Spy.
Exposing the Intrigues of Dangerous Enemy Aliens.
Derwent Hall Caine Star in Mighty Exposure of the Hun.

Advertising Angles: Derwent Caine is the son of Hall Caine. His co-star is known through several pictures. Call them both to the minds of your patrons. For the rest hammer upon the spy danger. For a side angle use some press talk on the stimulus of the war upon invention.

Advertising Aids: Two one-sheets, two three-sheets, one six-sheet, one twenty-four-sheet, two slides, one herald, one press book, eight cuts various sizes. 8x10; 11x14 and 22x28 photos for lobby displays.

"THE APPEARANCE OF EVIL"

World Pictures Presents June Elvidge in the Story of a Promising Scandal Which Proved to Be No Scandal at All When the Facts Came Out.

Cast.

Maida Brown.....June Elvidge
Louis Letchworth.....Frank Mayo
Gordon Brown.....Douglas Redmond, Jr.
Charlie Royce.....Clay Clement, Jr.
Harold Brown.....George MacQuarrie

Directed by Lawrence C. Windom.

The Story: Maida Brown, a young widow with a little boy, settles in the quiet town of Bayport. Bayporters have plenty of time to give to the concerns of their neighbors, and Maida's visits from Louis Letchworth give them plenty to talk about. They get all wrought up about it. But more than the Bayporters are interested. Gordon Brown has hired a detective to watch her, and the reports are shocking. He charges her with being married to Letchworth, but she denies it, though she has been caught coming from his apartments at an unseemly hour, but in the end she confesses, though the confession involves the loss of two million dollars, which accounts for Brown's vital interest and the appearance of evil she has permitted.

Feature June Elvidge as Maida Brown and Frank Mayo as Louis Letchworth.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Beautiful June Elvidge Star of Entrancing Photoplay of Love and Surprise.
One of the Most Unique Photoplays Ever Filmed.
A Striking Story of the Way Gossip Spreads.
See What the Purity League Saw When Peeking in at a Window.
Snappy Photoplay That Will Keep You Guessing from Start to Finish.

Advertising Angles: Start this off with some liners reading, "Shun the appearance of Evil." Later change this to "DO NOT shun the appearance of Evil." Then come out with your first display ad starting with the same heading and running into "see it at the (house and date), and you will find that it was not evil at all." Work on these lines in your displays and press work, and, of course, play up the star.

Advertising Aids: Two styles each one, three and six sheets. Free advance poster. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Two-color heralds. One and two column cuts. Slides. Press sheet.

Released October 7.

HE'S gone across—
YOU "come across"!

Adopt a SOLDIER and Supply him with "SMOKES" for the Duration of the WAR!

YOU know that our fighting men are begging for tobacco. Tobacco cheers them. They need it. "Send more cigarettes." "We can't get half enough smokes over here." "A cigarette is the first thing a wounded man asks for." Almost every mail brings many thousands of such requests.

$1.00 a Month Keeps a Soldier Supplied — Will YOU Be a "BIG BROTHER" or a "BIG SISTER" to a Lonely Fighting Man?

Every dollar sends four 45c. packages of tobacco. Mail the money and coupon right now.

"OUR BOYS IN FRANCE TOBACCO FUND"
19 West 44th Street, New York

GENTLEMEN: I want to do my part to help the American soldiers who are fighting my battle in France. If tobacco will do it, I'm for tobacco. (Check below how you desire to contribute.)

I enclose $1.00. I will adopt a soldier and send you $1.00 a month to supply him with "smokes" for the duration of the war.

I send you herewith ....., my contribution towards the purchase of tobacco for American soldiers. This does not obligate me to contribute more.

PERFECTED PROJECTION

The mechanism of the DeVry Portable Motion Picture Projector is so wonderfully simple as to commend itself instantly to the amateur operator, while it combines all the necessary qualities of perfected projection to delight the appreciation of the professional.

Adopted by the United States Government in all Departments where motion pictures are used, and by the American Red Cross, at home and abroad. Used also in all Y. M. C. A. work, on transports, at home and "over there."

Projection Lenses

have long been considered standard equipment by the leading motion picture machine manufacturers. The product of America's greatest lens specialists, who have been producing high grade lenses of one type or another for 65 years, they are unexcelled in the clear-cut, evenly illuminated pictures they produce on the screen.

Because of the demand made upon our resources for some of the Government's most important military needs, we are unable to make projection lens deliveries for the present. While proud to be of such service in this world crisis, we shall expect to serve our other patrons even more efficiently than before, when the world is again at peace.

Come

Simplex

We ar sorry you couldn't all come but we'll do best to make up for this by show you a picture of our Exhibit at th otion Picture Exposition at Mad Square Garden.

Diamonds a ot displayed in burlap, and we kne hat you, who recognize the Simplex the Acme in Projection, would be ju little ashamed of it in unsuitable s oundings.

So we made the setting fit the quality of the Machine, although the picture gives but a faint idea of this. It was easily the finest Exhibit there.

And those who visited the "Garden" found plenty of intense interest in the Exhibit, besides, of course, the hearty Simplex welcome. Truly, we wish you could all have come.

We exhibit Simplex to you because it will exhibit better pictures for you
